We were amazed at our rapid progress in spite of the relative slow current in this section. All too soon we reached our destination and the end of an eleven mile trip at the single lane covered bridge at Salisbury Station.

AFTER A DECADE, IT'S FINE

By: T. Gulick

End-to-end recognition was extended in July to Killington Section member Ray Secor of Schenectady, N. Y. Hiking 9.8 miles of Long Trail from Middlebury Gap to Brandon Gap, the GMCer completed the 260-mile trail July 6, 1969.

On hand to greet Ray on Mt. Horrid were Ben and Dorothy Rolston, Sandy Stare of Cape Cod, Mass., and Terry Gulick. This reception committee accompanied the new end-to-ender to Brandon Gap where congratulations were extended.

Secor began his hiking ventures some 10 years ago with the encouragement of multi-end-to-ender Rolston.

GMC PLAQUE IS O.K.

By: T. Gulick

The James P. Taylor plaque is o.k! Though located on a rock just outside the Old Long Trail Lodge, destroyed by fire last November, it was not affected.

Originally, the plaque commemorating GMC's founder was on a ledge at the foot of Deer's Leap, but was relocated a few years ago when it became detached from the original site.

CHURCHILL MADE IT! SANDY DID TOO!

By: T. Gulick

After two attempts last year, K. S. Secretary-Treasurer, W. Churchill Scott assaulted and conquered the Long Trail between Route 15 in Johnson and Sterling Lodge, and became Killington Section's latest end-to-ender.

An impromptu celebration was held at the home of Doc & Kay Howard in Mendon, Aug. 10 in honor of the occasion.

Also receiving congratulations was Sandy Stare of Bass River, Mass., as he, too, completed hiking the L.T. in late July.

Churchill began his hiking career as a youngster in 1928 with a trip up Killington. He completed his trek on the trail sometime Saturday August 9. Hiking north from Smuggler's Notch last November in an attempt to finish the Trail, he was turned back at Sterling Lodge because of bad weather.

Churchill has served for several years as the Section's Secretary-Treasurer, has served as Trustee to the main Club, and tended to many tasks relating to the Section's affairs.

Sandy is spending this summer in Vermont and between hikes on the L.T. he has built the new Sunnyside Shelter and assisted the L.T. Patrol in constructing the new Johnson Shelter north of Tucker Lodge.

He states he hopes to visit Ascutney, Steamtown in Bellows Falls, the Northeast Kingdom, and other places of interest in Vermont before returning home about October 1.

This new end-to-ender is the donar of Lost Pond Shelter, located south of F S Road 10 in Danby.

COOPER LODGE HAS NEW LOOK

By: T. Gulick

The Killington Hotel has gone, the old stone shelter went into history, but it appears Cooper Lodge will be around a while. The reason: Forests & Parks Dept. personnel are replacing almost all the wooden portions of the structure, originally built in the 1930's. Featured in the new construction is a new roof, new plexiglass windows, a new door, and other improvements such as bunks.

With the cooperation of Sherburne Corporation, operators of the large ski area on Killington, The Vermont Dept. of Forests & Parks has been able to arrest the deteriorating condition of the 30 year old camp.

Ben Hoffman, coordinator of the project for F & P., inspected the camp earlier this summer and with other officials including GMC members, decided the repair job was in order rather than abandoning the camp. He stated that Sherburne Corporation officials expressed a desire to see Cooper Lodge retained. The renovation took place during August.

How valuable is Vermont land? A would-be Vermonter, upon visiting the state recently, was alleged to have been talking to a native about the possibilities of purchasing a piece of Vermont. The native agreed that this might be a nice idea. But when the prospective buyer stated he thought he would like to begin small by buying about $500.00 worth, the native suggested that he, the prospective buyer, locate a wheelbarrow, bring around and he, the native, would be happy to load it up!

INTERSECTIONAL 1969

Due to School meetings for John the first part of intersectional week the Martin's had a very short camping trip this year....a one night stand. Vera and Carrie Burchardt went along with the seven Martins so we had a car full! Somewhere Vera and Janet had read that the camp was in Randolph so we went from Randolph to Randolph looking for it....even went to see the floating bridge in Brookfield. Finally with the help of the Congregational Minister's wife in Randolph and a call to Killington Section Member Helen Frink we were sent further north to Northfield and found the camp site without further trouble!

What a beautiful stream and waterfall from the mill pond. We camped close by and were lulled to sleep by the soft music of the water. The evening program was slides of some of the 46ers in the Adirondacks and some of the Appalachian Trail south in Virginia. Afterward the Martin party sat around and listened to the girls sing and play their guitars and popped some corn.

In the morning we reluctantly took down the tent and left right after lunch. Tom tried his hand at fishing but was not very successful. After some more adventuring in the car...we succeeded in losing all the water out of the radiator and had to inch our way by coasting down the hills into Sharon-we managed to deliver Carrie home and got ourselves back to Rutland.

BALD MT. TRAIL By: Janet Martin

The State Dept. of Forests and Parks has completed the trail up Bald Mt. east of Rutland over both summits, by the bog and out onto the Red Rocks Ledges. Eventually they expect to complete a circle trail so that one can go along an easy grade following several old logging roads or ascent more quickly by the Girl Scout - Forest Service trail which is now completed and blazed with blue paint. It is .8 mile to the summit and 1.5 miles to Red Rocks. The views are lovely and this would be a lovely fall hike. Look for a write up on it in the Forest Festival Week edition of the Rutland Herald.

----- NOTES ON SOME OF OUR JUNIOR MEMBERS WHO ARE NOW IN COLLEGE By: Janet Martin

Judy Paul spent the summer working at Camp Betsy Cox for Jean Davies. She had charge of all tripping from the camp and from reports of GMC'ers who met her groups on the trail she was doing an excellent job. This is one camp which sends out small groups only... I understand they had to sleep out in the rain one night because there was such a large group in the shelter. Judy is now back at UVM for her Soph. year.

Sue Pfenning is studying nursing at UVM.

Sue Crighton is at Jackson College in Mass.

Carrie Burchardt is at Harpur in New York State. She spent her second summer on the staff of Silver Towers, the Vt. camp for Retarded children.

FIRE HILL

By: Ruth Fostman

On Sunday June 22nd about fifteen members and others drove to Ruth LaBrakes' camp in Florence. It was a beautiful June day.

Some of the real energetic ones started out to hike to the top of the mountain, but they didn't find it so came back.

We had our picnic lunch on the lawn in front of the camp beside the babbling brook.

A family of four from Sherburne were in the party for lunch. Mr. Frink had some small samples of fuchite stone and gave us each one.

Some of us explored the pasture looking for wild strawberries but found only a few. However we were rewarded by our walk down the road. On one side of it we found several wild orchids. We were not sure at first as they were in bud, but we found later at least Eleanor Walker and Ruth LaBrake said they were truly orchids.

Our President Wilbur Weston called a short meeting to discuss the changing of the by-laws by having the members vote on questions instead of by committees.

It is lovely country around the camp and we all enjoyed it and Ruths hospitality and hoping we will be invited again.

Please send the Articles for the next issue of Smoke & Blazes to Betty Gilman, 52 Chestnut Ave., Rutland, Vt. 05701 by November 17.

EAST MOUNTAIN

By: Kathy Hayes

On Sunday, October 12, G.M.C. ers Dorothy Kirk, Churchill Scott, "Doc" Howard, Louie Catozzi, Kathy Hayes, and Sherry, Andy and Chris Hayes ventured to East Mountain during what was termed "the most Brilliant weekend of the foliage season". The understatement of the day!! It was a perfect day, warm and sunny. We left our cars on the old road and walked up an old abandoned road across the swamp. Upon stopping for water and a short rest "Doc" decided he would return home and help his wife with the foliage crowd. The rest of us continued through what was once a large meadow, and on through considerable woodsy area where we stopped for lunch, then continued on to the summit, which gave us a beautiful view of Rutland and surrounding areas. We noted that the ferns and plant life were still very green for this time of year, due to lack of damaging frosts so far. We saw several clusters of huge shelf fungi and many, many varieties of lichens, mushrooms, fungi and what have you.

After a drink of mountain dew and a short rest we made our way back to the cars and by of the Wheelerville Road (stopped to look at an old family cemetery also) back to Route #4 and Rutland. TIRED but happy with our trip.

CLARENDON LODGE

By: Doris Newton

After two weeks of rain, forecast of mere snow-squalls promised almost a pleasant day, and so it proved. Churchill, Cathy Hayes, her two small-fry, their young guest and myself, went in to Clarendon. We found three deer hunters in residence, and the cabin warm in spite of the missing windows. (removed for repairs!).

Without them not much could be done about preparing the cabin for winter, so, with a clear conscience, we decided to climb the little hill with the interesting cliff, then to bushwhack around and down the other side. After this, lunch back at the cabin was very welcome.

As we left, the sun came out (why couldn't it have cleared while we were on the hill?) and on the way down we met a jeep bearing Terry Gulick and friends armed with shovels and rakes to clean up operations at the dump.

The day was still young so we decided to visit parts of the Mill River Gorge. With the fairly high water following the rains, this proved a good finale to a pleasant day.

GOVERNOR CLEMENT
By: Sue Pfenning

" Pray, people, to purchase this paper, partly to pay for the price of printing and publishing....."

After more than a week of perfect weather, previous picnics have proven a peculiar phenomenal predisposition of precipitation, a promise of a pernicious and piercing blizzard, or perhaps even a possible hurricane (who can tell what's next in Vermont?!). Particularly if you're planning on a hike Sunday, right? Well, that's what we expected, but when the sun was still shining and the air was still, even though Saturday, we all sort of held our breath and hoped it could hold out one more day. Yes, Nature is full of surprises, and Sunday turned out to be the most beautiful day you could ask for.

Twenty-one men, women, children, a jeep and a dog made their way up the road to Governor Clement Shelter on November 30th. It was slightly iced-over already, covered by a light coating of snow that was falling softly all around us, making the conditions ideal for slippery boots and a running start at the top of a steep hill, ending with a crash into the nearest snowbank (or tree), but not so ideal for the cars. The air was still, there was no wind at all, so we didn't really notice the temperature while we were hiking. But sit still in a damp shelter just long enough to catch your breath and sign the register, and you'll undoubtedly find yourself jumping around gathering fire-wood faster than you can say "Snodgrass Memorial Outhouse".

All in all, it was a beautiful day well spent, well worth remembering. The snow kept falling all through the day. It's too bad there weren't more of you there to enjoy it. Rachael Carlson once said, while reflecting on a quiet summer night spent looking at the sky and the stars through the clear darkness," It occurred to me that if this were a sight that could be seen only once in a century or even once in a human generation, this little headland would be thronged with spectators. But it can be seen many scores of nights in any year, and so the lights burned in the cottages and the inhabitants probably gave not a thought to the beauty overhead and because they could see it almost any night perhaps they will never see it."

SUNNYSIDE SHELTER
By: Virginia Day

Sunnyside Shelter was the setting for the Moonlight Hike on December 21st. Dick and Frances Roberts and Lloyd and Betty Weeks, early Springfield arrivals at the shelter, welcomed the Canes and Dags and dogs Nicky and Trierer with a toasty cabin and greeting. Following supper, another hike in the pale moonlight led to the spot overlooking the Christmas lights in Rutland. While retracing their steps back to the Shelter, the ladies paused in the white Christmasy stillness and sang "Silent Night". Rutland friends were missed but a warm cabin was left in case they came in later.

TRAIL CONFERENCE

Saturday, March 28, saw the Cahee's and Robert's of Springfield attend the annual Trail Conference held at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst, Massachusetts.

The afternoon session featured of several workshops running simultaneously on matters of trail use and maintenance. This turned out to be one of the most constructive sessions in recent years. An outstanding slide presentation on trail erosion and efforts to improve conditions sparked active discussion in one workshop.

The evening portion was a most interesting show of glass slides including many taken before the year 1900. Interesting views of trails and climbing in the White Mountains during that period held the attention of the near capacity audience. The efforts needed for people to get to the mountains and then to the trails in those days proves the enthusiasm of the early hikers.

We congratulate the Program Committee for the fine planning this year.

THANK YOU

A big "thank you" from the Killington Section goes to those Junior members and friends who helped so efficiently at our Sugar-on-Snow Party: Carol, Nancy, and Betsy Martin; Louise Coolidge; Candy Scott; Bonnie Bride; Johnny Allard; and Henry Carpenter.

Thanks should go also to our always dependable standbys, "T" Valiquette, Janet and Jack Martin, and Churchill Scott.

TINMOUTH MOUNTAIN

BY: Doris Newton

Have you ever noticed, as you studied the Taconic Range from some Green Mountain viewpoint, or from Route 7, on a winter day, that small white clearing on a summit south of Mt. Herrick? It has seemed to some of us that it would be a very sightly spot and would reward a trip up there some day. Well, we have now been up, and it met all our expectations, tho it proved to be "Mt. Susie" rather than Tinmouth.

Three of us from Rutland and two from Manchester met in Wallingford, proceeded to Tinmouth, then along the road to a farm which seemed a good take-off point. A very pleasant climb followed. The ridge was steep, but as the going was thru open hard woods, the traveling was not difficult. Because of the unusually warm weather all the spring flowers seemed to be coming out together, and, as always, this was one of the delights of the trip.

From the summit there is a fine view particularly to the south and east. We all enjoyed the trip so much we decided "Susie" must go on the list of places to be revisited, with perhaps a little exploration to find a route a bit less steep.

SUNNYSIDE SHELTER

BY: Betty Weeks

There were eight of us from Springfield on the Moonlight Hike to Sunnyside February 21. A young couple from Hartford, Connecticut, were there when we arrived. They planned to spend the night there with two small children. They had snowshoed up on the hill to the south of the camp with us and a group from Rutland in the afternoon.

OTTER CREEK CANOE TRIP

BY: Betty Weeks

On Saturday, July 25, ten canoes and twenty-five canoeists enjoyed the third annual canoe trip on the Otter Creek.

The canoes, loaded with children, dogs, and lunches, were launched at the city dock in Vergennes. The day was hot but beautiful. The cool shade of tremendous willows along the shore and a gentle breeze kept the paddlers comfortably cool on their way downstream. The creek was very wide and fully banked, backed up by the waters of Lake Champlain. Fields and pastures rolled down to the creek in many places. There were camps and cottages with boat houses along the banks. We met several boats and visited with an occasional fisherman. It was down this waterway, in the War of 1812, that Gen. Thomas MacDonough took his fleet of warships to meet and defeat the British in Lake Champlain.

At noon we stopped for lunch on the bank where the Dead Creek enters Otter Creek, 4 1/2 miles below Vergennes. It was too hot for coffee, so again the coffee pot went along only for the ride.

As we paddled under the bridge and into Dead Creek, we went into a very different area. The trees gave way to tall reeds and water grasses with swamp land and fields on either side. This is part of a wild life preserve maintained by the State of Vermont. The water was pondlike as the name suggests. Water flowers, including quantities of white water lilies and beds of blue pickerelweed, blossomed everywhere. Killdeer, tern, and swallows swooped overhead. We could hear the scolding of the swamp wren and the raucous cackling of the gallinule in the reeds. Occasionally a gull or kingfisher dipped to the water to catch a fish. We passed several nesting boxes but saw only a few ducks that flew off in the distance.

In spite of the heat, the three miles up Dead Creek went very quickly, and all too soon we had beached our canoes at the Vergennes-Panton road crossing. The congenial company and the beautiful surroundings made this a most successful outing.

ACCOMPLISHMENTS

The Pilot Project, suggested by Herb Ogden at the last Section meeting on June 27, 1970, and endorsed by those present, has progressed to completion. The idea of eliminating dumps, the first of its kind in the annals of GMC history (I think), began with a bang on Saturday, July 11, when 22 members converged on the Clement shelter eyesore and obliterated it in short order, using Herb Ogden's truck to convey the contents to a legitimate site. Also standing by to assist in the mobile part of the action was Lloyd Weeks and Jim Frink with their vehicles. Once begun, the idea of cleaning out the debris at shelter locations became a Section obsession, and on Saturday, July 18, while Irving White labored to build us a chimney at Sunnyside, others of the assembled group cleaned out the unsightly rubbish and we were two down and four to go. Came yet another Saturday, and the "unsinkable" Herb Ogden with the help only of a backhoe and its operator did away with the contents of the trash heap at Clarendon Shelter. This action was the result of a sudden decision, and, due to a previously planned canoe trip, it was not possible to get the assistance of other members of the Section.

In the following weeks, the remaining three dumps were systematically divested of their smelly contents by various members of the Section.

As part of the overall plan of the Pilot Project, barrels were placed at road crossings by the Highway Department, Churchill Scott, and Herb Ogden. As far as possible, these barrels were so located as to be seen by hikers on the trail but obscured from view of traffic on the highways. The President of the GMC, Shirley Strong, has taken special notice of this particular action, and our work will no doubt be the example that other Sections will follow.

It is hoped that in due course, all shelters on the Long Trail will be scraped clean of all unsightly refuse in the non-too-distant future. Signs such as Herb Ogden provided us will be in evidence to remind the users of the shelters as to what has been done and to suggest to them that they do the same.

8-DAY HIKER COUNT

Our Section will conduct an 8-day hiker count at Cooper Lodge again this year. Help is needed to keep the records of recreational activities on the Long Trail at this popular spot. For more information please contact W. C. Scott.

SCHEDULES

Thanks to a great deal of time and effort on the part of Pres. Ed Trzesniowski, a new list of outings has been drawn up.

They range from easy to hard, short to long, White Mountains to the Adirondacks, plus many for those working on their End to End Award.

A copy of the schedule was mailed to each member on March 11-12. More are available from Ed or Churchill.

BY-LAWS

After a number of interesting and lively meetings, a set of by-laws were drawn up and approved. This is a fledgling operation for our Section, and we hope that everyone will look these over and let the Board of Directors know if there are any questions.

Each member should have received a copy with the schedule of outings for the coming year.

We are grateful to Mr. Herb Ogden for this printing.

GREEN-UP DAY

Our Section will clear up the litter along Routes 4, 103, and 140 again this year. In 1970 we had a very small group assisted by Mr. Granget Kammerer and pursued by Mr. Weston, who even though he did not catch up, did a fine job of checking the areas already cleaned. The group will meet at the Fire Station area on Saturday, May 1, at 9 a.m. with old clothes, gloves, and a hearty lunch.

G.M.C. DAY

Let us hope for much better weather this year to enjoy on this day when every able-bodied member of the G.M.C. is asked to give a day to working on the Trail and the shelters that we maintain.

Last year two days of rain and wind hampered our activities, but Mr. and Mrs. G. Kammerer of the Main Club stayed at Pico Camp and Ed stayed at Cooper Lodge and then hiked in the rain to Route 103.

In 1971 we hope to have more than 10 members out of a list of more and 120 names.

On Saturday, May 15, we will meet at the Fire Station area in work clothes, sturdy gloves, and with a hearty lunch, ready to do a good day's work for our Section.

MT. ASCUTNEY DAY

On Saturday, May 22, the Ascutney Trails Association will sponsor their annual Mt. Ascutney Day.

In the number of years it has been held, our Section has had a representation; but, we should try to do better this year.

The Association plans to feed everyone who goes up the Mountain under his or her own power, and those who have gone before can tell many stories of the numerous goodies served.

We will meet at 9 a.m. on Saturday May 22, at the Fire Station area.

SMOKE AND BLAZES

We didn't receive any articles or reports on hikes for Smoke and Blazes since the last issue in September. If you don't feel up to sitting down and writing an article or a report, just call me and tell me about it--I'll be glad to write it up (773-8862). Or, send your articles to me at 45 Piedmont Parkway, Rutland, VT 05701. M. S. Clemenson.

ADOPT A SHELTER ???

About the best way to keep our Section shelters in good condition is for someone to visit them regularly throughout the hiking season (and even once or twice during the off-season) to check on general conditions and especially to pack out any trash that has been left around. So far, Clarendon Shelter and Johnson Shelter (although not rightly in the Section) have been "adopted". If some member of the Section wishes to take on one of the other shelters, please let me know.

SMALL STOVE NEEDED

The stove at Pico Camp is about all used up. This camp will be put in good shape during the next few weeks with a new metal roof, new window panes where needed, front window replace, and privy completed. The stove should be replaced, too. Does any member of the Section have a small cook stove he would care to donate or sell for this purpose? Or know of someone else who does? Or even know of one in a secondhand store somewhere?

TRAIL FOODS AND SUPPLIES

by Harold Howard

For those of you who are interested in obtaining freeze-dried, lightweight and well-packaged trail foods, you may do so right now here in the Rutland area. The place is LEISURE LINES on Route 4, east of Rutland and just before you get to Town Line Road. You'll recognize the place by all the camp trailers on display.

In addition to this well-displayed and complete stock of trail foods, they have many trail items of interest. To name a few, you'll find some excellent packs, Primus-type stoves, light-weight one-man tents, sleeping bags, folding cups, and many more items.

even if you don't buy anything, it is a real pleasure to look this stock over.

HOW DO WE PLAN OUR HIKEs?

By Herbert G. Ogden, Jr.

Maybe if I picked my hikes better, I wouldn't be left with the thoughts which follow. Unfortunately, of the three Killington Section hikes for which I've been present, one was cancelled, one drew only four people --with no leader--and avoided serious accident more or less by chance, and one involved only three people. None of the hikes introduced any non-members to the Trail; one nearly left a pair of eager young hikers without a way to reach the mountains.

All this leads me to ask why we plan hikes and whether we should be satisfied with the status quo in our efforts to "make the Mountains play a larger part in the life of the people." Do we plan hikes so that K.S. members may meet socially? Do we plan them so that adults will be introduced to the Trail and to our Section? Do we plan them so that youngsters who couldn't otherwise reach the Trail can go along? Do we plan them so that the party can be assured of a car spotted at their destination to avoid backtracking? Or do we plan hikes just to show that we as a Section are still alive?

Which of these possibilities is a real reason? How valid is it? If it is valid, are we keeping it properly in mind when we plan our outings? Just what should our hikes be, if they should be at all?

TUCKER LODGE

by Harold (Doc) Howard

On August 5 at 10:30 a.m., a group of about 60 campers and counselors met at Robinwood opposite Pico Ski area for the purpose of cleaning up the area about old Tucker Camp.

This group was made up of members of the following camps:

Camp Killooleet, Hancock, Vermont
Leader, John Seegar

Betsy Cox Camp, Pittsford, Vermont
Leader, Jean Davies

Camp Keewaydin, Lake Dunmore, Vt.
Leader Tim Ritter

Camp Sangamon, Pittsford, Vermont
Leader, James Lee

Indian Brook Camp, Plymouth Union, Vermont, Leaders: Prue Merton and Janet Bailey

We went in the lower end of the old loop trail which was overgrown and untrodden when we started but well trodden upon when we finished. Trash of all sorts which had accumulated over several years was put into plastic and burlap bags and carted out. There was a lot of it!

The enthusiasm and diligence of this group was remarkable. Their attitude and behavior was heartwarming. The Killington Section owes them a vote of thanks.

BEATING A SHOWER IN FIVE HOURS

by Herb Ogden, Jr.

July 24 was not a promising day for a ten-mile hike: The weatherman announced heat, humidity, and scattered showers. Leader Herb Ogden, Jr., at first had visions of being the only hiker, but then discovered that "Koltonski Fire Station" didn't mean what he thought and located Bob Herrmann and Danny Weine quite a ways down a side street.

With a car spotted at Brandon Gap, we drove on to Middlebury Gap. Soon after starting in, we met a couple from Iowa out for a day hike. Farther on and farther up, the haze prevented any distant views, but we had good lookouts over Lake Pleiad and Brandon Gap with its beaver ponds. Other lookouts were appreciated not for the view but for the breezes which kept off the ravenous mosquitos that swarmed about us after lunch at Sucker Brook.

While the Middlebury Mountain Club trail crew seemed not to have ventured south of Worth Mountain in recent years, the rest of the stretch was in good shape. Between the Mt. Horrid Cliff and Brandon Gap foresighted workers had even built large number of waterbars! The fifteen hikers whom we met had complaints about the terrain, but few about the Trail.

Our leader had been predicting rain since the morning, and thunder-showers had threatened since White Rocks Mountain, but scarcely a drop touched us before we reached the car mid-afternoon. Fifteen minutes later, rain fell with a vengeance, but the satisfied hikers were out of its reach.

K. S. HIKERS DIVIDE, CONQUER MTNS.

by Herbert Ogden, Jr.

The beautiful weather on July 10 must not have inspired many K.S. members to set foot on the Long Trail as only four people showed up at Brandon Gap to head south. Louis Catozzi and Matt Eastman were going all the way to Sherburne Pass, while Jim Frink and Herb Ogden, Jr., (and measuring wheel) made a day hike to New Boston where a car had been spotted.

Soon after lunch at Sunrise Shelter, we had a chance to admire the USFS's fine bridges and the newly-created views of Mt. Horrid--one of them complete with bench! The bridges were doubly admirable--they seemed to have been constructed just narrow enough, with handrails in the right places, to make them impassable for snowmobiles. In the lead farther up, Jim Frink pointed out a yellow birch so old that one had to look about thirty feet up to see that it was a birch at all. Meanwhile, Farr Peak resounded to the sound of woodpeckers.

All too quickly, our wonder at the Forest Service's work turned to disenchantment as the footway began to disappear beneath the underbrush and branches invaded the headroom. At this point, the day hikers decided to help out the overnighers by a little pack-swapping-- but were not so blindly generous as to continue this arrangement past the bottom of Wetmore Gap.

Now ascending the steep slope of Mt. Carmel, we overtook a pair of girls by the side of the trail, just plain out of steam. Help was on the way, however, we soon met the rest of their party backtracking from Carmel Camp with water to restore the stragglers.

Waiting at Carmel, Jim and Herb observed the depressingly large garbage dump, which had oozed to within a few feet of the camp. That had better be hunters' garbage, not hikers! Or the GMC may soon lose the use of the place!

After concluding that the overnights had gone up for the fine view from the peak, the day hikers took the trail down to New Boston, ending a pleasant day's walk.

The overnights, meanwhile, had enjoyed the view from Mt. Carmel. After descending to Carmel Camp and seeing what a mess it was and how full it was (about half a dozen hikers planned to stay there), they decided to push on south. They spent the night by the side of the Trail.

Some excitement resulted the next day, when Louis Catozzi walked out of the woods at Sherburne Pass alone--to tell a surprised "Wes" Weston that he's left Matt repacking at Johnson Shelter. Fortunately, Matt turned out to be visiting relatives in the area and the Killington Section, while scarcely covered with glory, at least managed to get the rest of its divided group out of the mountains.

CLARENDON LODGE

On May 15-16, about 35 members of the GMC and friends helped to conclude 19 years of trying to make Clarendon Lodge a closed shelter. Consent was finally given by the main club to remove the stove and front, making Clarendon once again an open-front shelter. Hopefully, this will help to cut down on the amount of misuse and increased visits should do much to improve the problem.

Nevertheless, many people will have pleasant memories of below-zero mid-winter overnight hikes, pancake breakfasts, and chilly spaghetti suppers by a warm and cheerful fire.

Our thanks to all who helped to make this GMC Day a success.

MT. MARCY TRIP CALLED OFF

On Monday May 25 at the 4200-foot level of Mt. Mansfield, there was 50 inches of snow so the outing committee regretfully called off the scheduled trip to Mt. Marcy on the weekend of May 29-30. In view of the widespread interest in our first trip to the Adirondacks, it will be rescheduled at the earliest date possible. Members will be notified either by Smoke and Blazes or by mail.

TUCKER LODGE

Beginning in 1938, Tucker Lodge, built by the Long Trail Patrol, had many ups and downs.

Memories of moonlight hikes (mostly minus the moon), coffee and doughnuts, and winter overnight hikes are enjoyed by many people.

Finally Prof. Buchanan's prophecy came true--the beech tree fell on the shelter and from then on it went downhill.

With the approach of the Robinson's Housing Development, it was decided to eliminate this shelter, and so, on Saturday March 27, the torch was applied.

Soon only a pile of ashes was left, but many enjoyable stories will always remain of the good times had by so many people.

MOUNT HANDLEY

by R. Herrmann

Twelve hiked to (what we called) the top of Mount Handley on April 3. The day was mostly sunny, but windy enough to make it uncomfortable to stand still when exposed to it. Two young boy scouts built a small fire in the lee of a ledge near the top of the mountain to prepare their lunches. Most of the hike was over bare ground, although at the top the snow got to be knee-deep or hip-deep.

depending on the owner's height. Several of the group were lucky enough to see six deer on the return trip.

PINE HILL HIKE

By R. Herrmann

The Pine Hill Circle Hike on March 20 turned out to be a pleasurable duet. The snow was just right, the weather was overcast but comfortable and the difficulty of the climb was well within the ability of both hikers. We saw a snowmobile--and smelled its exhaust--tracks of a man and his dog, and little else.

On the following Saturday morning, under ideal weather conditions, a spectacle was witnessed by the skiers at Pico when eleven of us put the torch to Tucker Lodge.

CONGRATULATIONS

Congratulations are in order for George Pearlstein who was elected president of the main club at the recent annual meeting. Our section will do all we can to help George have a successful term in office.

ROBERT FROST TRAIL

by Dorothy Kirk

Anyone knowing the location of the Robert Frost Trail is hereby invited to lead the next hike to it! Our new hike chairman who inherited the schedule without particulars for his hike made a valiant effort to locate it, even fording a stream in his jeep in the Robert Frost National Forest only to land in a pile of chips. He Procured much information and maps at Bread Loaf Inn, but none of it led to the trail. Finally one old timer replied right from his chair: "Born and lived here all my life; guess if there'd been a Robert Frost Trail I'd have know about it." The trimming the news item got in the Rutland Herald hadn't helped matters much to begin with.

The five who went on the hike, Jim Frink, Herbert Ogden Jr., "Wes" Weston, Holly Louise Weston aged nine and a half of Raleigh, North Carolina, (and, of course, Rascal) and your reporter, admitted that the several abortive sorties were to be preferred to a perpendicular climb on Mt. Mansfield. But what does a frustrated hike chairman do who has a rock pick in his knapsack? Hammer rocks, of course. So we proceeded to Birch Hill, southeast of Brandon to visit the vein of iron prospected and worked by the late Harold Bishop. This type of mining was not, however, economically practical, and the vein was abandoned. The iron sulphide (pyrrhotite) here has a silver sheen which darkens upon exposure, and what we broke was somewhat weathered. If one likes to see and learn something new on a hike, our day was not by any means without interest.

SAFARI ON THE SACO

by Bill Day

About a hundred years ago, a gentleman by the name of Thoreau wrote of the idyllic and pastoral pleasures of boating on the Merrimac River. He also told of exploring the Indian villages and the upper Penobscot together with a description of the spirit-shrouded Kahtadin under the ever watchful and suspicious eye of the great Indian Chief "Pomola."

On the weekend of August 14, and with somewhat of an equivalent amount of philosophical and adventuresome anticipation, Lloyd and Betty Weeks, Dick and Frances Roberts, Don and Betty Mitchell, and Bill and Ginny Day lowered their aluminum and fibreglass canoes into the Saco River at Swan's Falls, some five miles above Fryeburg, Maine, for a weekend of pure and unadulterated 20 miles of canoeing pleasure.

The actual trip, under the guidance of our peerless leader, Lloyd, who was most ably assisted with much unsolicited advice from the others, might be described as uneventful, relaxing, and rewarding. The participants, being experienced campers, were prepared for either fair or foul weather; however, as the weather was perfect, the rain gear was used mostly for pillows. And why should we risk our reputation for hardiness by mentioning bug-proof tents, air mattresses, ice chests, gasoline stoves, steaks, blueberry muffins, and home-made brownies?

The one short portage at Walker's Rip gave us no difficulty, and had we not had expensive camera equipment aboard, and had not some of us borrowed canoes, we could have been persuaded to try the rapids. Putting in at Swan's Falls in the early mid-morning gave us plenty of time to take pictures, swim, explore, or just loll before disembarking at the Route 160 bridge in East Brownfield the next day.

How does one adequately describe the beauties of such a voyage or the soul-filling benefits of such an interlude? To tell of the clear unpolluted and tranquil waters; the countless fine golden sandy beaches from which one has difficulties in choosing among so many ideal places to camp; the bowers of overhanging branches; the profusion of cardinal and other wildflowers along the banks; (not even Hollywood can boast of a swimming pool 20 miles long) the startled and yet tolerant waterfowl as we quietly came upon their feeding grounds, not to mention our first peek into Pleasant Pond or picnicing on the sandy shores of Lovewell's Lake where Indian and white battled long ago--is to tax one's powers of description far beyond normal limits.

The answer to the question is, of course, that full justice to such scenery cannot be given--one has to make such a trip before he can appreciate what nature, adjacent towns, the Appalachian Mountain Club, and others have done to preserve this bit of yesterday. In these days of environmental and ecological consciousness, full credit must be given for their efforts.

Those who are interested in learning more about the deep satisfactions of canoeing on our rivers can learn much by studying the Appalachian Canoe Guide or by reading the excellent article in the Lewiston, Maine, paper done by Bob Cummings in which he mentions canoeing on the Little Ossepee, Messalonski Stream, Sabasticoek, Royal and Stroudwater rivers.

New England is indeed fortunate that it has many potentially beautiful rivers for canoeing, and one hopes that in the not too distant future they will receive the same T.L.C. that has been rendered unto the Saco.

SHELTER REPORT - July 27

by Herb Ogden, Shelter Chairman

By the first part of July, Section members had put all shelters in good condition. While Tamarack, Sunny-side, and Gov. Clement needed but little attention, Clarendon and Pico needed a lot. After considerable discussion, the Directors voted to remodel Clarendon in an effort to discourage squatters and casual picnickers. The entire front was removed, along with some of the floor and all the windows, thus making it an open shelter. Some creosoting was done. Scrap from the front was used for a new privy and a cattle barrier was put up in front of the shelter. A truckload of trash was packed out to the main road.

Pico Camp has been given a new steel roof with eaves trough--so bright it can be easily spotted from Killington these days. The old stove, much abused, was scrapped and packed out to the ski run, along with several bags of rubbish from a dump which had been overlooked during the 1970 NO DUMP drive. The Pico ski people then most kindly trucked the rubbish down the mountain along their service road. A brand new stove was installed. The table has a new metal "tablecloth". The accumulated dirt was shovelled away from behind the camp to prevent rotting out of the sill. A large, anti-porky metal patch was put on the lower corner of the door. The entire outside was creosoted, the center window was replaced along with broken panes in the other windows. Remains of the re-located dumps at both Pico and Cooper have been covered with dirt.

The Directors have voted to try out the caretaker system for a combination of Tamarack, Cooper, and Pico. Robert Jeffers, Wilbraham, Massachusetts, has been engaged for the balance of the season, with KS and GMC each paying $50 in compensation. In addition, he may charge overnight fees of 75¢ per person, 50¢ for a GMC member (who can show a paid-up membership card), 35¢ for scouts, campers, etc., under adult supervision. He will bunk mostly at Pico and make regular trips to the other two shelters. Posters down below will advise hikers of the new arrangement. The purpose of the caretaker is to cut down on vandalism, abet the NO DUMP program, check on the exact nature of trail traffic, keep shelters in repair.

COMING OUTINGS

WHEN - Sat.-Sun., Oct. 16-17

WHERE - Annual Merck Forest overnight
LEADERS - "Wes" Weston and Rascal

Those leaving from Rutland will depart at 9:00 A.M. from east side of Koltonski Fire Station (side street), Rutland.

Those leaving Manchester Center will meet the Rutland group on Bonnet St., Manchester Center, at 10:00 A.M.

Others knowing the way may meet at the Forest.

Overnighters bring warm sleeping bags as we are not sure at this publication that we may use the cottage facilities as heretofore.

Merck Forest is located off Route 30, Rupert, in the Taconic Mts. On the 2600 acres of field and woodland donated in 1950 by Vermont Conservationist, George Merck, are 26 miles of hiking trails, a half dozen shelters and fireplaces, and the cottage referred to above. Two of the shelters are large, holding from 12 to 20 people.

This multiple use land is used for recreation and for education in conservation and land management practice.

WHEN - Sat., Oct. 30

WHERE - Mt. Ascutney (Halloween Party)

LEADER - ? ? ?

Meet at firestation in Rutland at 9:00 A.M. or at foot of Windsor Trail on Mt. Ascutney at 10:00 A.M. A note of interest: Windsor Trail was the first hiking trail to be built in America, the success of which was responsible for the founding of GMC.

Hikers may go down the mountain by the Brownsville Trail which passes an old granite quarry.

Guide books for the mountain are on sale at a house near the foot of the Windsor Trail. Also, it is possible that the hike leader will have a few copies with him for sale.

Special invitation: Herbert Ogden suggests that we stop at the Ogden Cider and Grist Mill near Hartland Four Corners for bit of cider after the hike. This mill boasts of an over-shot water wheel, the only one in operation in Vermont. Another attraction is Mr. Ogden's wild apple cider jelly.

 LEADERS NEEDED ***
for hikes scheduled on Oct. 30 and Nov. 14.

When the next outing schedule is distributed, it is hoped that all members of the Killington Section will volunteer to lead one or more hikes. Any particular outing will be assigned to the first person who calls in to volunteer for same.

The Killington Section of the Green Mountain Club mourns the passing of the late Lincoln Isham of Dorset, Vermont. Mr. Isham, great grandson of Abraham Lincoln, will be remembered for his loyal and generous support of The Green Mountain Club's Killington Section. A life member of our section, Mr. Isham has been a long time contributor, first to the Buffam Shelter Fund and more recently to the Trails and Shelters maintenance program. Mr. Isham died on September 1, 1971.

DIRECTORS' MEETING

The latest Board of Directors' meeting was held on Wed., Aug. 18, at the home of Mr. Weston. Present were Mrs. Hayes, Roberts, Weeks, and Messrs. Ogden, Scott and Weston.

Mr. James Frink was appointed Hike Chairman. It was suggested that inquiries be made about liability insurance to protect our section and hike leaders from responsibility in case of mishaps on our section or at the shelters.

"Smoke and Blazes" was discussed. Mis. Richard Roberts and Mrs. Lloyd Weeks of Springfield offered to be editors this year. Issue dates will be Oct. 1, Jan. 1, Apr. 1, and July 1. Deadline for articles is two weeks earlier. The paper should include previews of coming hikes and work parties.

Mr. Ogden discussed having section patches to correspond with the GMC sleeve emblems, and also was asked to order 200.

Mr. Ogden and his son have completed preliminary work on Juggerhaut relocation and now are awaiting approval by the main Club and Board of Environmental Control to cut and blaze the trail.

Mr. Robert Jeffers, caretaker of Pico, Cooper and Tamarack, has done a very good job according to many reports Mr. Ogden has received.

THE GREAT CHASE, SORT OF, FROM MT. TABOR TO MAD TOM

By Herbert G. Ogden, Jr.

The writer of this article is unusually fortunate in possessing three original documents relative to the hike of August 21, 1971. Moreover, he was also fortunate to be the Leader of that hike. But why -- if he was the Leader -- does he need documents? Thereby hangs at least part of the tale.

Let us begin with a note appended to the second of our documents by Wilbur Weston: "8 of us left Rut. by 9:10 or so, and drove to where the trail crosses #10, arriving about 9:45? Herb, Jr., Jim and I drove, in 3 cars, to where the trail crosses #21, over the bumpiest dirt roads. Jim and Herb drove back to #10, leaving about 10:45 A.M." Thus the cars were spotted. What of Wes, left at the south end all alone? More later. I should add that Jim Frink and I returned via smooth Route 7, but that there is still some controversy about the merits or demerits of USFS #10. bumps and all.

Now to the first document, appropriately written on the back of a pink Outing Schedule found on Peru Peak: "Jim Frink: Waited here until about 3:20 PM and then started back to cars. Bill and Stan with me. Wes." Subscribed, we find "Received and noted 4:25 PM Jim F, Herb O," and at the side, "up to 2850, down to 2384, up to 3584, down to ----." Aha. So Bill Simonds and Stan Penetowski, newcomers to our hikes, outdistanced the rest, met Wes, who had advanced north to Peru Peak, and headed south with him. The Outing Chairman and the Hike Leader arrived an hour later, noted the bumpiness of the terrain, and followed in at least lukewarm pursuit. But what of Phyllis Benton, Dave Mason, and young Matt Eastman? What else do the documents reveal?

"Have taken Bill and Stan to FR #10. Will wait there a spell to see if you come along. Wes. 5:00 P.M." This was found at Mad Tom Notch, our destination. Alas, the writer has mislaid the third document. (He had to: a historian with all the right papers is about as rare as a winged porcupine.)

Now to fill in the gaps. This the Leader can do; tell the whole story, he couldn't. Why? Because he and the Outing Chairman didn't lay eyes on the rest of the party until just north of Styles Peak, at the end of the day. Why? Because the aforesaid grandly told their "followers" to go on south from USFS #10; the aforesaid would catch up soon enough, after spotting the cars. What they didn't know was that car spotting would put them at a 1 1/2 hour disadvantage.

We did catch up to Phyllis, Dave and Matt. Shortly after we passed Peru Peak, reports came that they were just ahead. The pace quickened. Markedly. Incidentally, if anyone doubts that any hiker -- let alone a septuagenarian -- can break into a run after hiking ten miles, let him follow our Outing Chairman, and he will change his mind! He can do this while catching his breath. Nevertheless, as the evidence indicates, we never did catch our two speedy guests. Everyone finished happy, and more or less at his own pace. There could well be a connection there Trip highlights were the water mill remains and suspension bridge on Big Branch, the Burma-Shave sign near Griffith Lake (after which Jim Frink composed "I see ahead a bridge of wood/ I hope to gosh they built it good" -- and lo! a magnificent wooden bridge appeared around the next bend), and two special highlights. The first of these was actually lowlying: the hundreds of feet of corduroy laid by the USFS, the countless waterbars dug, the many pounds of flagstones laid. This is a splendid job of making decent hiking from mudwallow country. The other highlight was the view from Baker Peak, complete with soaring hawks. The writer, an End-to-End, pronounces it one of the three or four best views on the Long Trail. Many thanks, Ben Rolston, for opening up this outstanding view of the Great Valley of Vermont.

Consider joining the party next time we take a longer hike. Hike the whole thing at your own pace (we had several paces), or make an in-and-out trip at one end. There's a lot to see out there, and some pretty good company, too.

by Betty Weeks

The weather couldn't have been worse to welcome the GMC Intersectional held at Camp Ondowa, in Sunderland, August 29-September 6.

We arrived early Saturday morning with camping gear and two small grandsons, hoping we would find an empty leanto. The only available shelter was a large cattle display shed. So, undaunted, we set up our two small tents on the dirt floor. Soon the cattle barn was bursting at the seams as more GMCers arrived and moved in, too. It proved to be a dry and comfortable campsite, and a favorite playground for the children who enjoyed swinging like monkeys from the rafters!

Since Lloyd was on the Intersectional committee there was plenty to do, sweeping another large barn for the evening square dance while Betty registered incoming campers. In spite of the weather, nearly one hundred were registered by nightfall. Tents mushroomed all through the pine woods and fields.

Killington Section members who arrived the first day included Terry Gulick, George Pearlstein, Bob Rothenmeyer, Keith and Kevin Abbott, and Doc and Kay Howard who set up their beautiful new tent in a lovely birch grove.

The Saturday evening program included short speeches by six of our shelter caretakers, who stressed the present overuse of trails at higher elevations and the need for all of us to act to preserve our wilderness trails. Campers retired early after a gala square dance to be ready to hike in the morning.

The Sunday hike featured the dedication of the new Kid Gore Shelter near the old Caughnawaga Shelter. This new shelter was built by the Connecticut Section and the Gore family on a very inaccessible section of our Long Trail on the north side of Glastonbury Mt. In spite of a very wet and rough trail more than eighty people hiked in for the ceremony, including one GMCer over eighty years old.

Sunday evening's program, arranged by Terry Gulick, included an excellent slide and music presentation on "Man and His World" by Gary Hall, Eagle Scout from Charlotte.

The weekend over, we reluctantly stowed dry tents, camping gear and two weary children in the Scout and returned to Springfield.

LABOR DAY WEEKEND HIKE

by Bettina Roulier

Apparently the scheduling of a hike to Mt. Washington on Labor Day weekend scared off most members and friends of GMC. Jim Frink and I waited until 9:30 at the fire station Saturday morning and when no other hikers showed up decided to conquer a summit closer to home, namely, that of Blue Ridge mountain to which the lovely wooded Cauty trail leads.

Some of us had snowshoed up the trail part way during the winter. The steep sections had seemed steeper then, but with rocks and tree stumps and branches buried under several feet of snow, the going was considerably smoother.

Starting from the Perkins' campsite, we invited some young campers to join us -- a young girl from Danbury, Conn., and a man from near West Point, New York, along with his twelve year old sister who bounded ahead of us on the trail. I had been afraid that these "city folks" would slow us up considerably but it was I who brought up the rear. The young man, a cemetery worker, enjoyed his climb up the mountain as a pleasant change from digging graves.

We made the top in one and a quarter hours, and after a quick look at the surrounding fog our young companions started back down. We had a leisurely lunch (Jim's pack was considerably lighter after he ate an enormous tomato fresh from his garden) which apparently millions of flying insects would have liked to share.

After deciding the fog had no intention of lifting and that Jim's binoculars had been carried in vain we started down, stopping briefly at the cascades which lie a few yards off the trail. Perhaps the next hikers up the trail should tack up a sign pointing the way to these cascades because it would be too bad to bypass them. A lovely brook parallels the trail at least half way up the mountain.

MT. MARCY- NEW YORK'S HIGHEST PEAK

by Hedrick Cahee

After the Killington section's hike to Marcy, May 29-31, was called off because of deep snow, a Springfield group decided they would like to make this hike Labor Day weekend.

It was decided to go in by Sanford Lake near the National Lead Co. Mine to where the trail starts at the parking area called Upper Works. Arriving at Upper Works at about 9:30 we found about 25 cars already parked, and knew for sure that all leantos would be full and plastic tarps would have to be used.

We hiked the Calamity Brook Trail, stopping at a brook crossing at noon for rest and lunch. We made many brook crossings on log bridges, plank bridges, swinging bridges, and by jumping from stone to stone. The trails seem much wetter and muddier than most in Vermont and New Hampshire, and show signs of a lot of usage.

Arriving at the Lake Colden area we found a nice place to camp for the night, along with about one hundred other hikers! After tarps and sleeping bags were set up we had a welcome swim in a lovely lake. We had dinner and a campfire and hit the sack early.

The next day we started out to climb Marcy, carrying day packs with lunches and rain gear. At lunch time we looked up into the clouds where Marcy should be, and were happily surprised to see the sun break through and the mountain begin to clear. As we climbed the steep smooth rocks of Marcy, visibility got better, and when we reached the top we could look off for 10 or 15 miles to many other peaks in the area, which many of the group expressed a desire to climb.

Back at camp we had another refreshing swim, a hearty dinner, and another campfire. Breaking camp next morning the weather stayed warm and dry, and we retraced our steps across the many brooks to our waiting cars.

Our first New York trip was a pleasant one which we will never forget. The hiking party included Bill and Ginny Day, Hedrick Cahee, Lloyd and Betty Weeks, and Dick and Frances Roberts.

LINCOLN GAP TO APPALACIAN GAP

Jim Frink

"Wes" Weston and I were the only members to show up at the Fire Station. As the hike leader, Bob Herrmann, was disabled by a bad back, I decided to lead it myself. But when only Wes showed up, I was about to "forget it". Then Mrs. Todd, of Northeast Drive, arrived with her 14 year old daughter Marie and asked if Marie could accompany us, saying that she was a good hiker. I guess we silently decided that we couldn't let the Todds down after announcing in the paper that non-members were welcome.

We drove 56 miles, both cars, to Appalachian Gap via Routes 7-116-73. Then, after Wes parked his car there, we drove 15 1/2 miles to Route 100, south to Warren, and up to Lincoln Gap, parking my car there.

We found the trail rocky, rooty, and with patches of black, gooey mud. In several places the trail vanished, with no places in sight. Other places, where the trail was well defined, had bolzes every 10 feet. We had no difficulties passing all the Lincoln Mt. locations but when we passed General Start Mt. our troubles began. There were places on the trail so steep that we had to carry the dog, Rascal, down. When we got to Theron Dean Shelter, a sign said two ways to go for the Long Trail north. One of these ways said "direct." Since it was getting toward dusk, we were all for the direct route. This route turned out to be a paratroopers' obstacle course rather than a trail. It was a regular chamber of horrors. But we made it!

We arrived home at 9:30 PM and found that Churchill, Mrs. Weston, Mrs. Frink, and Mrs. Todd were all worried about the possibility of our being lost in the woods! Marie was an indefatigable hiker and she deserves a medal!

In retrospect, we enjoyed every minute of it - even the "hairy" parts -- except, maybe, when it was so dark we couldn't see blazes or where to put our feet with the path so vertical with no hand holds and us still in the woods!

All's well that ends well.

Vol. 23, No. 4 - KILLINGTON SECTION, GREEN MOUNTAIN CLUB - Jan.-Mar., 1972

COMING OUTINGS

WHEN - Sat., Jan. 8, 1972

WHERE - MYSTERY HIKE!!!

LEADER - W. Churchill Scott

Meet at Koltonski Fire Station at 10:00 A.M. and see where Churchill leads us. (Does he know??? See P. 3)

WHEN - Sun., Jan. 23

WHERE - Gov. Clement Lodge

LEADER - Ray Secor

Meet at the fire station at 9:00 in the morning for a hike in to one of the most picturesque shelters on the Long Trail. Of course, we may have to tunnel our way into it--but that would make it really cozy, especially after we've built a fire in that enormous fireplace.

WHEN - Sat., Feb. 5

WHERE - Clarendon Lodge to Foxlot Farm

LEADERS - Betty and Lloyd Weeks

Meet at 9:00 A.M. at the fire station, visit the remodelled Clarendon Lodge, and hike on up to the old, abandoned farm to see the view.

WHEN - Fri., Jan. 21, at 7:30 P.M.

WHAT - Annual Meeting of our Section

WHERE - Universalist-Unitarian Vestry

Come to the Annual Meeting--watch for the announcement. The new hike schedule is going to be an all-club project. We want you to go where you want to go. Therefore, please come to the Annual Meeting with at least one hike to one place that you personally want to go to. If all attendees will do this, we will vote on each one and by this means arrive at a schedule that will be pleasing and satisfactory to all. The schedule will be printed and distributed shortly after the meeting.

The partial schedule presented in this issue of "Smoke and Blazes" was voted upon by your Directors to keep us going until the remainder of the winter's hikes has been decided.

The next thing for you to do is to plan to attend these outings. How come you have been passing them all up? Maybe you'll like them better after you have had a part in selecting them. Anyway, COME ON OUT!

The rest of the hikes for the first quarter will probably be scheduled for the following dates: Sun., Feb 13; Sat., Feb. 26; Sun., Mar. 5; Sat., Mar. 18; and Sun., Mar. 26.

(Cont'd)

Plan now to be the Leader for one of these hikes, no matter where it goes! Come to the Annual Meeting ready to find out where it goes and then sign up to lead it! Better still, plan a hike to your own favorite destination and volunteer it, either to fill one of the above dates, or for later in the year. That's the way to get it on the schedule (provided the rest of us like the spot you picked!)

Jim Frink
Outing Chairman

CHILDREN UNDER 16 YEARS OLD ARE WELCOME ON OUR HIKEs, BUT.

We want the youngsters with us on our hikes, and when parents bring their children and watch out for them, a good time is had by all.

Practically all our adult members are experienced woodsmen and hikers. They can take care of themselves and furnish assistance to any fellow hiker who may need it. The parent Club does not insure its Sections. The Sections do not insure their members. We accept the responsibility of taking care of ourselves and each other.

It will help the Club if each member will make sure in the future that any non-member who shows up for a hike understands that he is welcome, but that the Club accepts no responsibility for his welfare, nor for that of his children.

We will endeavor to have the following sentence incorporated in each of our newspaper hike notices in the future: "Parents who desire that their children enjoy this hike will please either accompany them and accept responsibility for them, or arrange in advance with some adult friend to do so."

If, in spite of this notice and these precautions, children show up for a hike without parental or other guardianship, all of us have the responsibility of explaining carefully to them that they must:

1. Remain with or near the group at all times.
2. Never pass a break or fork in the trail until the hike leader points out the correct path.
3. Carry their own packs and keep the reasonable pace set by the leader.

4. Obey these rules or be forbidden to join any future Club hikes.

This attitude with respect to children is taken because of the following past experiences:

An unaccompanied child undertook to go on a long hike. He became tired and could not proceed without too frequent rests which delayed the hike and decreased the amount of planned safe time in the woods. His pack finally had to be carried by others who, of course, took responsibility which they should not have been required to do.

A child appeared alone for one of our hikes. He was carefully and fully instructed in the above requirements designed for his safety. He ignored them completely, and was out of sight and of reach of the hike leader for the entire distance.

Two unaccompanied children disappeared from sight or hearing of a group of our hikers and after the members of this group, and the children's worried parents, had spent much worried time in trying to find out where they had gone, it was learned that they had decided to stay overnight in one of the shelters without having informed anyone of their intention.

The need for this article was decided upon at a Director's meeting on November 21, 1971.

Outing Chairman

DEADLINE FOR NEXT ISSUE

The Killington Section of the Green Mountain Club mourns the passing of Harold D. Valiquette.

Mr. Valiquette, a former president of the Section, since the mid-40's was an active member and for many years almost single-handedly kept our shelters and the suspension-bridge in useable condition.

Perhaps more he will be remembered for the many hikes he led up his favorite mountain, East Mt., both in winter and summer, from the east and west.

A contribution to the Cancer Society has been made in the memory of Mr. Valiquette.

Our most heartfelt sympathy is extended to Mrs. Valiquette and their son Joseph and his family at this time.

M*Y*S*T*E*R*Y HIKE

After a lapse of a number of years, a mystery hike will be held on Sat. Jan. 8, 1972, leaving at 10:00 A.M. from the usual spot by the new fire station.

This will be an easy snowshoe walk of about 2 1/2 to 3 miles with a shelter where a hot meal and drinks may be enjoyed.

The destination will be known to the trip leader only, and at the beginning of the hike sketches of the route will be given to the cars showing the route to follow.

It is suggested that snowshoes and warm clothes be taken, and a good hearty meal and cup carried.

Ah, yes, came upon an open spot on left side comin' South with fern and rocks, quite mystical, good for thinkin' things out and in. It was just before the power line.

Therefore, by the powers invested in me by the Universal Life Church of Calif., I, as a minister of said Church, do declare this spot sanctuary and wish upon those who visit and feel the still beauty of said sanctuary the blessing and peace of Mother Earth, from whom we all came and to whom we all shall return.

Love and quiet strength upon you all.

Probably the thousands of southward bound geese had difficulty distinguishing the GMC'ers from the mountain-to-mountain carpeting of brilliant foliage in Merck Forest. Ed Trzesniowski scheduled our now annual trip for a perfect weekend for both scenery and weather.

The weekend of Oct. 16 and 17 found the color at its most brilliant peak seen in years, decorating the spruce and hemlock with a leafy tinsel reminiscent of the coming Christmas season.

Twenty-six hundred acres of unspoiled and controlled wilderness allows ample space for hiking, hunting, fishing, or in winter, cross country skiing. Twenty-six miles of roads and trails reach all corners of the wilderness tract from Mt. Antone to the nature trails. A weekend is hardly time enough to explore it.

Vermont should be thankful for the thoughtfulness of the Merck family in establishing such an area, and to the Foundation for maintaining it in such an excellent manner.

It is regrettable that so few could take advantage of our opportunity. It is certain that the Rutland group of Wes Weston with Rascal, Doc and Kay Howard with Rusty and Joe, Jim Frink and Ed Trzesniowski, and the Springfield group which included Bill and Ginny Day, Lloyd and Betty Weeks, and Dick and Frances Roberts are already planning to return next fall.

MT. ASCUTNEY CLIMB - HALLOWEEN PARTY

By Jim Frink

Some party, folks! Your Hike Leader, Paul Magoon, and your Outing Chairman were the only ones to take advantage of a beautiful day, gorgeous scenery, an easy climb up the Windsor Trail, a pleasant lunch sitting on Brownsville Rock and looking at Okemo, Saltash, Killington, Little Killington, Mendon, and Pico peaks, and an interesting downhill jaunt on the Brownsville trail.

The most interesting part of the day, by far, was our visit to Herb Cgden's Cider and Grist Mill at Hartland, Vermont. The road up from Brownsville joins the Hartland Four Corners-South Woodstock road at a point practically in Herb's front yard.

There were a lot of people there selling apples and buying cider. Paul and I immediately started an inspection of the very efficient power plant. We started with the overshot wheel and then followed all the pulleys and belts to see what they were doing. After we had solved all those problems, we went out to see where the water was coming from. We saw a stand-pipe feeding water to the top of the wheel; a penstock under the brook bringing water to the stand-pipe; a pond on the high side of a meadow feeding water to the penstock; and a long mill-race bringing water to the pond from a higher elevation of the brook. So the pipe was a siphon taking water from one elevation and delivering it to one slightly lower. Upon our return from the pond, we climbed the stairs and watched the stand-pipe feed water to the wheel. V-e-r-y interesting! Then we found that Herb had hung a free leaflet on the door near the wheel describing all the things we had learned the hard way! But--it's fun to study things out for one's self.

We watched the apples being fed to the pulping machine. Then the pulp was enclosed in a series of cloth covered layers and squeezed dry by a hydraulic press. We were given samples of the cider just made, and believe me, it was and is delicious. I brought home two gallons and I'm about to go on a sweet cider jag.

The rest of you folks certainly missed the boat. Maybe the next, and the next, and the next, etc. time you will come out and do like a Green Mountain Clubber should--enjoy the good times that are planned for you.

BEECHWOOD PARTY

By Vera Perkins

"Pot Luck Supper"--"Covered Dish Party"--call it what you will, a pleasant social get-together was enjoyed by about twenty members of the Killington Section on Saturday, November 6. Although our date was a bit late this year, the weather was most cooperative and provided an ideal day--sunny and not too cold.

The usual excellent supper consisting of a variety of hot dishes alads, rolls, and desserts was enjoyed.

Just to set the record straight, however, it wasn't entirely an eating party. Some of the group came early enough in the afternoon to hike to the caves on Bald Mountain while several others took short walks.

Shortly before supper we enjoyed a preview of the number the "Martin Family" were presenting in the S.E. Variety Show that evening--a song, "Silent Spring" sung by Nancy, Betsy, Tom, David and Jack, and a Donald Duck impersonation by Tom assisted by Jack.

All except the performers, who had to leave early, enjoyed a leisurely and sociable meal grouped around small tables, and lingered to chat in front of the fire.

This is a party for all ages. Our "old timers" who are always on hand to help on such occasions were there as well as some of our very Junior members. We enjoy these get-togethers and feel that an occasional one is very much worthwhile. It gives all of us a chance to get better acquainted and exchange ideas with members we see infrequently. Also, it affords an opportunity for those of us who are less actively involved in GMC, but still interested, to keep in touch with the plans and the work our more active members are doing. Why not come next time and see for yourself?

TUCKER-JOHNSON HIKE

By Harold (Doc) Howard

December 5, 1971. On this beautiful, cold, sunny and windless day, nineteen hikers snowshoed in to this shelter. The snow was about 18" deep. Feeling somewhat like hosts, since we had adopted this shelter, Wes Weston and I went ahead to start a fire. We went in via Robinwood, a shortcut, and were accompanied by Vera Perkins, Doris Newton and David Martin. Our leaders, Lloyd and Betty Weeks, and nine hearty hikers went in at Sherburne Pass, and trudged the two miles north along the Long Trail. According to reports, the first half mile was ROUGH!

At the shelter all had a pleasant lunch including the delicious hot soup supplied by the Weeks. Springfield was very well represented on this trip.

With the clothing and equipment we have today, winter outings can be just as pleasant as summer ones. This trip well illustrated this point.

DIRECTORS' MEETING

The latest Board of Directors' meeting was held on Mon., Nov. 29 at the home of Mr. Weston.

Present were Herb Ogden, Ray Secor, Jim Frink, W. Weston, C. Scott, Betty Weeks and Frances Roberts. Mr. Lloyd Weeks was a guest.

Discussion of hikes and hike participation took up quite a bit of time and all phases were examined. Many suggestions were offered to boost attendance at our various outings. It has been asked that with so many mountains in the state of Vermont that our section have not climbed, that the Outing Committee plan future hikes in the Green Mountains.

Betty and Wes reported on the Trustees' meeting. The main club wants to increase the amount each section shall pay for junior members ($1.00) and adult members ($2.00) as compared to 35¢ and 50¢ respectively at the present time.

In memory of Harold Valiquette and Lincoln Isham, contributions of $25 each to their favorite charity were voted.

It was suggested that any member having a question or problem of GMC or Section business contact a member of the Board of Directors so that arrangements may be made to attend a meeting.

The next meeting is planned for Fri., Jan. 7, 1972.

MOKE & BLAZES

Vol. 24, No. 2 - KILLINGTON SECTION, GREEN MOUNTAIN CLUB - Apr.-June, 1972

COMING OUTINGS

Saturday, Apr. 1, 9 a.m. Meet at Koltonski Fire Station, drive to White Rocks. From there our hike leader, Kathy Hayes, knows the way to Green-wall shelter. On the guide book map it looks like a steep climb to the Long Trail and then East to the shelter. Estimated total distance is 3 mi.

Saturday, Apr. 15, 9 a.m. Meet Lloyd and Betty Weeks at the firestation for a climb up Snake Mt. in Addison.

Snake Mt. is located about 1 1/2 mi. from Rt. 22A in the town of Addison, Vt. Hikers will follow an old carriage road by easy grades up the south west side of the mountain about 2 mi. to the site of an old hotel. From the bare ledges at the summit there is a spectacular view of the flat Champlain Valley with Lake Champlain and the Adirondacks in the distance.

Two small ponds may be visited on the mountain top. Interesting plant life may be seen here including a profusion of Trailing Arbutus.

This mountain is near the flyway of the Canadian Geese. These birds may be observed at the Dead Creek Waterfowl Area immediately below the mountain.

Sunday, Apr. 30, 1 p.m. Meet at the fire station, drive out the Cold River Road to the East side of Round Hill. From there we hike up the hill to the Fuchsite location near the summit. This mineral is a form of fine grained muscovite, or mica, solidified in rock form and stained a lovely green by chrome. Slices of this rock are translucent and light showing through it is a beautiful emerald green. Jim Frink will lead this hike.

Saturday, May 13, 9 a.m. Meet at the firestation. Ben Rolston will lead this hike and take us to Vermont's highest waterfall, in the Manchester area. We will also explore further downstream.

Saturday, Sunday, Monday, May 27, 28, and 29. We have been invited by the College Alumni Hiking Club of New York City to join them on their Memorial Day Weekend backpacking trip on the Long Trail from Arlington Westwardsboro Road to Vermont 9, Section II in the Long Trail guide book. For further information, see page 2. We certainly feel honored to have received this kind invitation.

NOTE: DEADLINE FOR NEXT SMOKE AND

Sunday, May 28, 1 p.m. Meet at the fire station and drive to McLaughlin Falls on the Wheelerville Road. Betty Roulrier will lead this hike. She knows the owners of the property and will secure permission for us to climb down to the foot of the falls and walk down the gorge as far as possible. No more than a two-mile total hike, but beautiful scenery.

Dear Mr. & Mrs. Roberts:

Sunday, June 11, 9 a.m. Meet at the fire station. Churchill Scott will lead this climb to the summit of Mendon Peak. Total distance about 5 mi. This will be one of the most adventurous hikes of the season.

Perhaps it would be best to first ask Craig Perkins if he thinks the snow is all gone, for he surely must have many stories to tell of the last hike planned there for a May 2nd.

It is suggested that sturdy footwear, heavy clothing, extra sweater or jacket, and two hearty meals be carried, for this will cover a fairly long distance and much bushwhacking.

A number of routes have been offered. Hike from Gov. Clement to Tamarack Shelter, then cross-country over Little Killington to the summit of Mendon Peak. Or ride the lift, then hike past Cooper to Tamarack. Or ride up the Rooney Mill trail from Brewer's Corners as far as possible past "Stove Pipe" city, up the log slide to the ridge between Little Killington and Mendon where rumor has it there are lumber jack shelters that were never uncrated. Also, this area is historically more interesting.

Saturday, June 24, 9 a.m. Meet at the fire station. George Perlstein will lead this climb to the summit of Shrewsbury Peak. Total distance about four miles. I do not know the approach to this peak. Many of us have long wanted to get to the top of both Mendon and Shrewsbury, and here's our chance!

DIRECTORS' MEETING

Churchill Scott, Sec.-Treas.

The latest Board of Directors' meeting was held at Mr. Jim Frink's home on Feb. 11, 1972, with 10 present. Mr. Roberts and Mr. Weeks were guests.

Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. President Secor said the main club will look into the suspension bridge over Mill River and report to the section later.

Betty Weeks reported on the Trustees' meeting and said there were many favorable reports on the well kept trails and shelters of the Killington Section for which we can thank the many workers we have. She also reported that section dues to the main club were set at $1.50 for adults and $.75 for juniors.

We do not need the Long Trail Patrol to work in our section this season. Herb Ogden moved and Betty Weeks seconded that the Killington Section can take care of its own trails and shelters this season.

The following list of officers was approved:

Pres. - Ray Secor

V. Pres. - Jim Frink

Sec.-Treas. - W. Churchill Scott

Committee Chairmen:

Trails - Wilbur Weston

Shelters - Herb Ogden

Outings - Jim Frink

Social Director - Kathy Hayes

LTN Reporter - Kathy Hayes

Smoke & Blazes - Frances Roberts

Mr. Weston spoke of the slow and time consuming job of preparing Long Trail News for mailing. A number of questions were raised about the duties of Gardner Lane.

Herb Ogden discussed the duties of Robert Jeffors, caretaker, and it was voted to hire a caretaker for the 1972 season. He also spoke of the work on Clarendon Shelter, and its success in keeping the area clean.

The outing schedule was completed and ready to be printed.

The Board of Directors want to thank Mr. and Mrs. Frink for their hospitality in making this meeting very enjoyable, and our thanks go to them.

ANNUAL MEETING - KILLINGTON SECTION

The annual meeting of the Killington section of the Green Mountain Club was held on Friday, Jan. 21, at the Universalist-Unitarian Church rooms.

There were 36 in attendance as compared to 18 last year and about 12 in 1970 when it was held in conjunction with a sugar on snow party.

Among the out of state members were Miss Helen Bailey, Charlestown, N.H., Ben Rolston, Schenectady, and Mr. and Mrs. Peter Palen, Hurley, N.Y., who stayed at Sunnyside over the weekend.

After the meeting was called to order at 7:45 p.m. by Ray Secor, and the Secretary and Treasurer's reports read and approved, Herb Ogden began the committee reports. As chairman of the Shelter Committee, he spent a very busy summer. Pico was completely renovated. A new metal roof; new stove, carried by Ray Secor from Pico Junction; one window entirely replaced; foundations dug out and creosoted. During the season, Mr. Robert Jeffors was employed as a caretaker there with very favorable results. Occasionally he visited Cooper and Tamarack.

The dumps at Pico and Killington were smoothed over and obliterated again to implement our Carry In-Carry Out program which seems to be working well.

During May a big work party visited Clarendon and made an open-front shelter out of it. They removed the front wall, stove and windows, and creosoted it. For many of the old timers who have spent a lot of cold but enjoyable activities there, it was a hard thing to do, but the results have made it well worth while.

Ray Secor reported for Mr. Weston on Trails. The entire section was worked on this year, plus a day's work at the Swinging Bridge, where next year even more work must be done. Also, after many long months of discussion the trail was moved from Mr. Pluss's land, and now as we go north from Rt. 103 we follow the old Town Road past the Crown Point Road marker to Clarendon Shelter.

There were no reports from the Smoke and Blazes editors, or from the Long Trail News reporter.

Betty Weeks discussed the past four Trustees' meetings. These have been mainly taken up with the increased cost of running the main club and why they must ask for more money from the sections. Many members offered a number of different suggestions. After it was noted that the dues increase to the main club would not begin until 1973, it was voted to keep our dues the same this year and ask for contributions. Herb Ogden moved to endorse the Board of Directors' proposal of $2.00 for adult dues, $1.00 for dues of spouse, $1.00 for single junior, $1.00 for senior members of 65 or over, and no charge for family junior members. Betty Weeks was instructed to convey this recommendation to the Trustees' meeting on Feb. 5.

Jim Frink led a very lively session on the new hike schedule. Many new places were suggested and leaders were obtained. The schedule will be drawn up completely at the next Board of Directors' meeting. At the request of many members we hope to keep within the boundaries of Vermont for there are many new mountain trails to climb.

Herb Ogden spoke about snowmobile legislation and a motion was passed for the Board of Directors to endorse the proposal of Ben Hoffman's ad hoc report on snowmobiles.

The new members of the Board of Directors voted upon at this meeting are Bob Rothenmeyer and Janet Martin, replacing Bob Herrmann and Vera Perkins.

Following the business meeting, George Pearlstein showed his slides on the outlying trails of Vermont, and after seeing such beautiful sights as these, it is easy to see why everyone says, "Let's hike in Vermont!"

As every year, the evening was concluded with a wonderful buffet of cakes, cookies, pies and other goodies. Our thanks are again given to the ladies for an enjoyable treat.

Respectfully submitted,
W. Churchill Scott

SUNNYSIDE HIKE - Dec. 19, 1971
By Ann Reynolds

Hoping to see some of our old Rutland hiking buddies, my husband, two sons and I set out for the Sunnyside hike on the last Sunday before Christmas. Imagine our surprise upon arriving at Sunnyside to find that four of the 11 people there were also from Springfield, thus accounting for more than half the group! In addition to our family there were Lloyd and Betty Weeks and Dick and Fran Roberts of Springfield, plus Doc and Kay Howard, Ray Secor, Jim Frink, Mauri Winturi, Frederica Welch and Bob Rothenmeyer.

Although snow was on the ground, there was hardly enough to warrant the use of snowshoes, and most of us left ours behind in our cars. The hike into the shelter is such a short one that we scarcely needed the hour or more of relaxation and eating that we enjoyed, but the cozy warmth of the cabin was not conducive to moving back outdoors.

Eventually we stirred ourselves and trod quietly through the snow to the clearing overlooking the city of Rutland. We were assured that on a clear moonlit night the lights of the city could be seen distinctly, but this night was overcast and not moonlit, so we just had to use our imaginations. After singing one or two Christmas carols (after all, the writeup said we would), we hurried back to the shelter, as the wind was becoming sharp. There were no unusual occurrences on this outing -- it was just the pleasant, easy, companionable sort of hike that made us wonder why we (and you) don't do it more often!

TRIP TO GOVERNOR CLEMENT

By Doris Newton

The date was January 23, but it seemed as though we had moved up two months and reached the end of March. Brooks were running, snow melting, and sun dodging in and out. Everything was all the more enjoyable after the dark and unpromising skies of early morning.

After going around to North Shrewsbury to avoid the icy hill, Cathy Hayes, Sherry, Chris and Andy, Doc and Kay Howard, Jim Frink, Ray Secor⁵ and Doris Newton walked in from the usual parking place. The road was packed hard enough by snowmobiles to make snowshoes unnecessary. A fire was soon going, the coffeepot steaming, and the usual pleasant social time in progress. Halfway through lunch along came Mauri Winturi from Fitchburg, Mass. Before the hike was over he had been signed up as a Killington Section member rather than a member at large. Wouldn't it be great if we could add a new member on every outing?

We shouldn't neglect to mention "Abigail" Hayes and her side-kick "Cindy" as also among those present. I think I heard a murmured suggestion that a beautiful St. Bernard like "Abby" might be trained to carry that little barrel when she came along. Now, that would be an idea, wouldn't it? The only regret of the day was that even more folks weren't along to enjoy it.

Well, I guess the Green Mountain Club is going to the dogs! That was what I thought when I saw five dogs jump out of cars ready to go hiking up to Little Rocky Pond on Feb. 19. Fourteen people showed up at the corner store in East Wallingford accompanied by five dogs.

In spite of a raging bizzard we had a pretty good turnout. Everybody, including the dogs got into two scouts and a jeep and headed up the Wallingford Pond road. Pretty soon we realized we were on a road that hadn't been plowed. The jeep had a hard time backing out so Grampa Weeks thought he would get out the easy way. He gave it the gas and ended out worse off than the jeep. After much digging and pushing we finally got the scout out.

Since we couldn't drive to our destination, we started snowshoeing up the road. The wind and the snow hit us in the face as the storm got wilder. After about two miles we found a place to eat lunch by a brook. Even with a good fire, our sandwiches froze to our hands.

Since the storm was so bad, we decided not to go any further. We fought the wind back to the cars.

Everyone made it back on his own except one dog. Rusty gave out and Grandma had to carry her in her pack.
We all had a "barking" good time!

ASCUTNEY MOUNTAIN HIKE-WINDSOR TRAIL
SNOWSHOE HIKE
SATURDAY, MARCH 4, 1972

By Jane E. Denman

We assembled at the base of the Windsor Trail on Mt. Ascutney Saturday morning, March 4, under sunny skies. With a hard packed snow base, we decided snowshoes weren't necessary. We carried them over our shoulders just in case the snow was deeper further on.

The ascent was a steady steep climb up the side of a ravine through which tumbled a mountain stream covered with snow and ice. We paused to view the valley and distant mountains behind us at Gerry Falls, the half way point of our hike.

A short distance beyond the falls we left the rim of the ravine and crossed a smaller stream where there was open cold water for drinking. The trail doglegged to the right and into small soft woods in which we arrived at the shelter where hot soup, tea, coffee, and cocoa awaited all who came up the trail. The cozy fire welcomed and warmed us while we ate and rested. Eight members and two dogs of the Killington Section made the hike. The three children in the party received a free chance on a pair of snowshoes to be given away at the end of the season by the ATA. Approximately thirty-five hikers made the trip during the day. A few ventured beyond the shelter to the top of the mountain.

The hike down the mountain was un-

MYSTERY HIKE - Jan. 8

By Churchill Scott

After a number of years' lapse, a mystery hike was held. We must have lost our touch for everyone seemed to complain that by the time we reached the parking area the destination was no secret.

The day was cold but clear and sunny, and a deep blue sky prevailed. We drove to a snowmobile parking area south of Woodard Res. on Rt. 100. After walking up a winding unplowed road toward Northam about one mile, we turned left and followed a lumber road to Tinker Brook Shelter.

This camp is located in an evergreen grove overlooking Tinker Brook, and in warmer weather would be a very enjoyable spot.

After a quick lunch and a losing effort to keep warm, we started for home making plans for another mystery hike which will remain a mystery until the destination has been reached.

Dr. Howard and his grandson, Rusty Nickerson, met the group as they were returning, and hiked back to the cars together. It was good to see so many young folks along--Sherry, Andy and Chris Hayes, Betsy, Nancy and Tommy Martin, and Rusty.

CLARENDON LODGE TO FOXLOT FARM

By Dorothy Kirk

Some of the dozen hikers who walked into Clarendon Shelter on Saturday, February 5, had nostalgic thoughts for the old Lodge. The transition from Lodge to Open Shelter was beautifully executed, but the temperatures were low, and no one appeared enthusiastic about the change! After the gathering and sawing of wood, building a fire, and heating the water fetched by our hike chairman through a hole in the ice, and pretending to heat ourselves, we ate a rather quick lunch and drank hot coffee (the only hot thing about the day). Several of the party started a short distance toward Foxlot Farm, but soon returned. Later in the week Jim Frink started out alone for the Farm, went some distance but did not reach it. Betty and Lloyd Weeks were the leaders, though Betty had to attend a directors' meeting. A solitary out-of-state hiker who appeared at the shelter was eventually persuaded not to continue on a very obscure

This is the last issue of Smoke and Blazes that will be sent to the 1971 membership list. We would like to remind people of the financial notice included in the hike schedule for 1972, this being, "The Section has incurred a Financial Deficit of several hundred dollars for each of the past three years. We have a deficit budget for this year. Dues will have to be increased in 1973 but they will NOT go up this year. Dues are now Two Dollars ($2.00) for each adult member and Fifty Cents (50¢) for each Junior member under 18.

Dues are now payable and should be mailed or given to W. Churchill Scott, Treasurer, 132 Maple Street, Rutland, Vermont 05701.

To avoid a Deficit this year, contributions in excess of dues are badly needed. Many members have already sent in contributions of from three to ten dollars ($3.00 to $10.00). Any financial help you can give to your Section will enable it to continue its reputation for the best overall maintenance on the Long Trail.

ODE TO THE COUNTRY ROAD

By Ralph W. Seager

My old roads now are blacktop and concrete;
 I cannot feel the country through my feet,
 Or know its shadowed breeze upon my skin,
 Remembering where woods once crowded in
 To watch with green eyes what was going by;
 Now all that's left is road--and open sky.
 I miss the quiet, cool, receptive clay
 That caught my print, springing me on the way;
 The dust beams walking up the slanting stair
 As leaves slid down the banisters of air.
 Bulldozers gouge and steel blades cut straight through;
 No sudden turns--no unexpected view
 Of doe and fawn, or paisley pheasant's brood
 To grace and color rural solitude.
 I see my hills knocked down, my valleys spanned
 Where roads once fitted kindly to the land.

COMING OUTINGS

Saturday, June 24, 9 a.m. Meet at Koltonski Fire Station, Rutland. To Shrewsbury Peak. We drive to Northam Park in North Shrewsbury and take the 1.8 mile trail to the peak, returning the same way. G. Perlstein, Leader.

TRIP REPORTS

Pine Hill Park - On Saturday, March 18, Churchill Scott, Kathy Hayes with her sons, Andy and Chris, Doris Newton, "Wes" Weston, and I met at the fire station and drove to the Rutland Country Club. We did not need snow shoes, and we hiked over to the sixteenth fairway where the trail begins alongside a brook. It was a short but pleasant walk thru the woods to Muddy Pond and then to Rocky Pond. We decided not to return the same way so we walked down the road toward Evergreen Avenue for about half a mile, and then cut into the woods on one of the nature trails that the City Recreation Dept. has blazed thru the woods on the way down to Oak St. in Rutland where the Nature Trail begins. From there we walked north along East Creek to the fifth fairway of the golf club and from there across the fairways to the club house where we had parked our cars. In all we hiked about four miles and enjoyed every bit of it. I even found a Boy Scout knife down by East Creek!
Jim Frink

Snake Mountain - "Rain, probably changing to snow, with the possibility of thunder showers this afternoon"--- such was the less than encouraging weather forecast on the day of the Snake Mt. trip. Even so, seven of us turned up at the fire station figuring that all this might hold off till afternoon at least.

At the starting place in Addison we met Mr. Kennedy and son, Michael, waiting, and under the leadership of Lloyd and Betty Weeks, started up the old Mountain Road. This is an interesting survival from the era of "summit houses." As we went up we found considerable snow depth. The woods looked and felt like winter. The cold wind-driven fog on the summit made the noon campfire welcome; in fact, we were all as close as we could get!

There are still remnants of the old summit house standing, and many other people must have thrilled as we did to the nearly sheer drop of 1200 or so feet to the valley floor, the view across Lake Champlain, which we could faintly see thru the fog, and the Adirondacks, which we couldn't. We were fascinated, too, by the little pond nearly on the brink of the cliff, probably a spring somewhat improved to provide a water supply for the summit house. We hear there is another boggy pond, interesting from a botanical standpoint (when it isn't covered with a couple of feet of ice and snow!)

How many times we said, "We must come again on a clear day!" and, "We must come later when the plants are out." A little detour to the Water Fowl Refuge to see if there were any geese (there were a few) finished the trip. Thank you, Lloyd and Betty, for introducing us to such a new and beautiful spot. Incidentally, those thundershowers never did materialize!
Doris Newton

Round Hill - This was the weekend (April 30) when spring finally came. Twelve of us had a warm and cloudless afternoon for a short but interesting climb up Round Hill. This is the hill with the beacon, just southeast of Rutland.

Jim Frink, hike leader and geologist, showed us a rare deposit of fuchsite, and, thanks to his hammer and chisel, most of us now have a small souvenir specimen of this attractive green stone formed, according to Jim, of mica and colored with chrome. (I think I have that right!) The summit provides a good view of the valley and city, and that intrigued some of our photographers.

It was good to have several hikers along who have not been out with us before, and we hope they will come again.
Doris Newton

White Rocks Picnic Area to Greenwall Shelter - On April 1 several GMC's and friends led by Kathy Hayes (the circle starting at the White Rocks Picnic Area. We followed the Blue Blazes up the Keewaydin Trail to the junction of the Long Trail, and then northeasterly to the Greenwall Shelter. Hence we followed the LT to the USFS road and then returned by this road to White Rocks Picnic area access road, completing the circle. Sounds simple, doesn't it? Try it, you'll like it!

But if you're going to try it in the spring, bring your snowshoes. April Fools that we were, not a one of us had thought we would need them (With snow gone for some time in the lowlands who would have thought?). For some of us it was really tough! Take 2 steps and sink 4 feet into the snow. Take a couple more and repeat. We're calling it the April Fool Foxtrot. Some of the lighter people had less difficulty of course. And trying to follow those blue blazes was something else; in several places we lost the trail completely.

We saw what we identified as bear tracks, and all sorts of coon and porky tracks, too. But there were other things in our favor; it was a gorgeous day with lots of sun to set the blue skies off against the white birches and snow, and we enjoyed lunching with our congenial friends at the shelter. (Abby says Matt Eastman's sandwich was just delicious.) Kathy Hayes

Vermont's Highest Waterfall(?) - How to schedule a successful May 13th hike:

1. Schedule it in the dead of winter, at the January Annual Meeting;
2. Ask the weatherman to furnish a warm day; and
3. Ask the sun to shine brightly.

We did, he did, and it did.

A near-record crowd (about 25) assembled at Emerald Lake State Park to pick up the leader (and interrupt him from his fishing). From there, our convoy proceeded to Manchester Depot and the beginning of the Lye Brook Trail.

Up that trail we went--a nice woodland walk over an old road, with reasonably dry footing and a not-too-steep grade. Of course those in the lead occasionally waited for those in the rear to catch up--then started again without giving the latter a chance to catch their breaths.

After about two miles, we turned off the trail and onto the switchback of the old Rich Lumber Company logging railroad. Even tho we often saw rows of rotting ties, it was hard to believe that almost a half-century ago huge loads of logs were snaked down that railroad.

Negotiating windfalls and wet spots along the uncleared railroad bed, we finally came to the gorge--and there it was! A magnificent waterfall. Not one huge spear of water, but a series of cascades dropping down and down and down. As we ate our respective lunches by the site of the railroad trestle, beside pools of water, it was difficult to see the top of the falls, so hidden by hemlocks and so high above us.

The trip back was just a pleasant walk in the spring forest--with spring beauties, trilliums, dogtooth violets, and other spring flowers. Amid discussions of conflicting names of these flowers, Jim Frink added his valuable knowledge of rocks and minerals, while Rolston and Weeks eyed the various pools along the stream with visions of lurking trout awaiting their lures.

Back at the cars, it was agreed that this MUST be Vermont's highest waterfall. So you may remove that question mark from the title of this article.

Trip to McLaughlin Falls and Gorge -

On May 28, eight people met at the Koltonski Fire Station for the hike to the McLaughlin Falls. It was a beautiful day for a hike; the temperature was in the 70's and the sun was shining brightly.

We left the station at 1:00 p.m. and traveled along the rough, dusty Wheelerville Road to the Falls. It was quite a hair-raising ride! When we reached our destination, all of us were quite hungry, so we had a picnic lunch on the rocks beside the falls. It was wonderful to see the water cascading over steep rocks and ledges to little pools below.

After our lunch, we followed an old logging road, overgrown with bushes and weeds, for about a mile. Unfortunately, the road soon came to a dead end, so we turned around and went back to search for a trail leading down the gorge. However, there were no cleared trails, so we went and sat beside the falls. A couple of us tried wading in a pool at the bottom of the falls, but soon decided that the water was too chilly for us, despite the warm weather. It was quite an interesting little

GREEN MT. CLUB OR VT. PARKS DEPT.????

Below are two letters from Herb Ogden. The editors of S&B hope that the many Killington Section members who realize and appreciate all Herb has done for the section will call him or drop him a line and persuade him to reconsider his action.

June 1, 1972

Frances:

Here is a copy of a letter I have sent to Ray Secor. Can you include it in the next issue of S&B?

I think it is important that members of the Killington Section should know that I am withdrawing because of Main Club action, not because of anything that has occurred in the Killington Section.

Sincerely,
Herb Ogden

Ray:

I have concluded, after Saturday's Annual GMC meeting, that I can no longer volunteer my wholehearted services for the Green Mountain Club as a member of the Killington Section. This is not a sudden decision. In recent years it has seemed to me that an unhealthy trend has been strengthening as Sections falter and Main goes "big time." I am inclined, in any such situation, to go either whole hog or get out. I find this trend so disheartening, over a period of years, that I can no longer go whole hog.

As I indicated in my "memo" on Saturday and sought to point up during the seminar, I feel that the present trend can lead only to the Vermont Parks Department. This trend involves standardization of too many facets of trail & shelter maintenance, directives from Main, permission from Main rather than advice, salaried executive secretary, the executive-committee-of-the-executive-committee (Advisory Board?), a stifling of individual initiative and responsibility in the Sections, a position that Sections are creatures of the Main Club rather than the other way around--and several other considerations.

I have, in recent years, spent considerable time and money on the Long Trail as an active member of the Killington Section, in hopes that my perception of that trend might be clouded. That hope no longer exists. I do not wish to play an active role in the dissolution of the volunteer organization once known as the Green Mountain Club.

SIXTIETH ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION

The Killington Section will commemorate this important event by turning the scheduled Bald Mt. hike into a celebration. Reservations have been made for Tamarack Notch facilities for Sept. 10, and a dinner will follow the hike--at 6:30 p.m.

Members are urged to bring historic pictures and slides of KS activities and hikes. This should be an evening filled with nostalgia and a well-deserved feeling of accomplishment, as KS is the oldest and most active section in the Green Mountain Club!

MENDON PEAK - Trip Report - Sunday,
June 11, dawned cold and clear. This was the day of the most ambitious bush-whacking trip of the year and as the 16 of us and two dogs rode up the lift we enjoyed traveling into the area of the frost covered mountain peaks. The view from Killington was beautiful in spite of the strong NW wind that hurried us on to the shelter for a few minutes of rest before we headed for Tamarack.

The advance party had a good fire, soon coffee was served, and then we all got out compass and map and started west.
The route led a bit north of Little Killington into a red-flagged trail.
This took us in the general direction for some distance, but at last cut north and down hill, so again we cut cross-country.

In 1960, our last trip here was quite open from Little Killington to the last slope of Mendon with a number of lumber roads, but now it was an endless woods.
As we started to climb again we found a faint trail which helped to reach the first summit where we could see the ledge on the second summit.

After enjoying the view there for some time (just the same as 1960, cold, clear and beautiful) most of us were ready to call it quits and head for home, but Jim insisted that we go a bit farther west and really stand on the summit of Mendon. It was well worth the effort for we could see all of the area not visible from the eastern ledge.

The return trip seemed to be an endless plodding succession of trees, brush and undergrowth as we headed a bit south hopefully to avoid the worst slash. At last we came to a very welcome stream where Ray's folding cup refreshed everyone's spirits. Soon after we hit the trail, about a half mile south of Tamarack.

At the shelter Mauri had already left so we all rested, and then at Cooper we all gathered together again and agreed it had been a rough day. Around the Juggernaut Trail and down the work road finished our ambitious trip.

THE NEXT ISSUE OF SMOKE & BLAZES will carry a complete report from "Wes" Weston, Trails Chairman. In the meantime, this account by Jim Frink will give some idea of what the Trails Committee is doing:

Today, Thursday, June 1, "Wes"
Weston and I started from Sherburne Pass at 8:25 a.m. and built water bars; sawed blow-downs and dead falls; clipped branches from in and across the trail; picked up all debris from the trail, and left it in good condition all the way to Pico Shelter. We were caught in a very heavy rain during our walk from the Junction to the shelter. We built a fire in the stove and dried our clothes and ourselves. Had our lunch in the shelter. We arrived back at Sherburne Pass at 3:45 p.m.

IN A LETTER dated June 14, "Wes" Weston did state that temporary repairs had been made on the bridge over Clarendon Gorge, and that "At this point, the trail has not been completely gone over; that stretch from Cooper south to Tamarack as well as the stretch from Cooper to Pico Camp has yet to be done."

COMING OUTINGS

Sunday, Oct. 15, 1 p.m. at Koltonski Fire Station. Ruth LaBrake will lead this hike since it is at her camp in the area where we will assemble before taking the trail. We drive to Florence and take the road west which leaves the north-south road just south of the underpass. We follow this road to the LaBrake camp and then take the trail to the summit of Fire Hill. On our last hike to Fire Hill we missed the trail to the summit, but Ruth assures us that she has very good directions this time as to which turns to take!

Saturday, Oct. 28, 9 a.m. at the fire station. Churchill Scott will lead this hike. We will drive to Waitsfield on Route 100 and turn east for about two miles to the trail to the summit of Scragg Mountain. This hike is about four miles total.

Saturday, Nov. 11, 9 a.m. at the fire station. We drive to East Wallingford and go down Route 155 which runs into Route 100. Follow 100 to West Wardsboro and then take the Stratton Mt. road to where the trail begins. This is about a six mile hike, and is led by Wes Weston.

Sunday, Dec. 10, 1 p.m. at fire station. A complete deep and dark MYSTERY. NO-BODY KNOWS!!!!

THANKS, HERB

For more than sixty years, the Long Trail has been a "labor of love" for untold hundreds of volunteers who have worked hard, without monetary remuneration, to keep the Trail System cleared, and shelters built and maintained, for the free use of all who seek a bit of solitude in the wilderness.

Some of these volunteers worked for many years. Some of our present workers have been wielding the clippers and paint brushes for a decade, or two or three decades.

Others contribute their services for a lesser period of time, but with great zeal and enthusiasm, until family obligations, geographical limitations, or other conflicting duties cause their trail-working activities to disappear from the scene.

And other workers are of the short-term, or "one-shot" nature, such as constructing a shelter, or participating in a Boy Scout trail work project.

Whether a person spends only one day of hard work on the Trail or at a shelter, or whether he spends his spare time over a period of ten years or more, this person receives a great deal of personal satisfaction knowing that he has contributed toward the aim of the founder of our Club, James Taylor, "to make the mountains of Vermont play a larger part in the lives of the people."

For about ten years, I was one of these volunteers, working in various areas--Killington Section's part of the Long Trail, within the National Forest (Baker Peak area), the Appalachian Trail east of Sherburne Pass, or elsewhere.

I, too, greatly enjoyed this work, with no desire for remuneration other than the satisfaction of knowing that my efforts helped to make the Trail more enjoyable for others who followed me. It was with deep regret that a physical setback forced me to curtail most of this enjoyable work.

For the past several years, our Killington Section member Herb Ogden put in hundreds of hours of hard physical work on the Trail and at the shelters. I know that Herb loved this work, as I do, and made his contribution entirely for the benefit of hikers who, I am sure, appreciated all that he did.

Dorothy and I both regret Herb's decision to give up this work. We know that it was a hard decision to make, one that required much thought and evaluation. We respect his decision, without any criticism. We know that he will miss this work just as much as I miss the work that I did, altho we gave up our respective contributions for different reasons.

I trust that other Killington members, inspired by Herb's great devotion to the maintenance of the Trail and shelters, will be motivated to pick up where Herb has left off.

I now wish, through the medium of Smoke and Blazes, to express my personal appreciation of Herb's great contribution to the Killington Section, to the Main Club and other Sections, and to all who use our Trail System and to express my hope that other readers of Smoke and Blazes will also let Herb know that they, too, appreciate all that he has done.

We'll greatly miss you, Herb. We are all richer because you walked with us.

REPORT OF TRAILS COMMITTEE FOR 1972 (TO DATE)--Starting on April 10th with the efforts of Jim Frink, the Trails Committee began its season of trail clearing. On snowshoes, Jim worked his way (in 7 hours) from Rte. 103 to Sunnyside Camp clearing brush and removing blowdowns. The next day, Jim and I again tackled the job of clearing, etc., in a sortie from Rte. 140 to Sunnyside Camp. We also snowshoed. A lapse occurred until May 20th when several members of the Section turned out on occasion of GMC Day and worked at clearing; removing blowdowns; blazing and making drainage ditches, and reinforcing steep, dangerous areas such as the Deer Leap Trail.

Subsequently, other parts of the trail were cleared on various dates and with the assist of various members of the Section.

It is doubtful if that part of the trail between the Upper Cold River Road and Clarendon Shelter was completely covered, but hikers met on our part of the trail always exclaimed about how well the trail was kept up.

Through the courtesy of the State Highway Dept., three barrels were set out on the Trail just off Routes 4, 102 and 140, and by periodic check, I found that they were being systematically picked up and emptied. The two trash cans put out on the Upper Cold River Road and the Lottery Road by the Section have been checked out and emptied several times by yours truly, and fresh trash liners inserted.

The overly wet summer was partially responsible for not getting out more frequently to clear trail. The situation with regard to the bridge at Clarendon Gorge is still pending. Temporary repairs have been made on the bridge, and blueprints of its structure received from the builder, Emile Boselli, a former member of the Killington Section. Some members of the C.V.P.S. Corp's engineering department are the individuals who made the temporary repairs, and will shortly be starting on the permanent job of replacing new cables, etc. Within the next few weeks, those section members who can will be asked to lend a hand in helping with the permanent repairs.

Many thanks to the section members and others who have turned out on the various work parties to assist me in the work I had to perform.

Respectfully,
W. F. Weston, Trails
Chairman, Killington
Section, GMC

TRIP REPORTS

Blue Ridge Mt. - July 22. Robert Carey, Joan Tomasi, Paschal DeBlasio, Kathy Hayes and her three very nice children, Sherry, Chris and Andy, and Matthew Eastman joined me at the fire station at 9:00 a.m. on a beautiful day. We drove to Craigie Perkins' Tall Timbers Camp on the old Turnpike Road in Mendon, and from there we followed the blue blazed trail to the summit. The view was clear and beautiful, and we ate our lunches sitting on the summit rocks. After a short rest, we descended, and all agreed that we had had a very pleasant day.

Jim Frink

First Annual Harold Valiquette Memorial Hike to the Summit of East Mountain -
On Sunday, August 6, at 1 p.m., Harold's good friends started to assemble at the fire station. Thelma Valiquette, of course, was the leader of this hike. There were 26 of us, and I, for one, was delighted that so many turned out to honor a man who for many years was one of the most skilled, best liked, most congenial and hard working members that this club ever had.

We drove to Loveday's Camp on the Wheelerville Road west of McLaughlin Falls and took the trail to a point where bushwhacking commenced! The entire company pushed and broke its way through some very dense brush and bramble, but we avoided the steepest climb by so doing, and everyone reached the summit in good time. Again we had a lovely day and the view of Rutland and the surrounding country is one of the finest to be found in this area. After a lunch and rest at the summit, Joe Valiquette, Harold's stalwart son, led us down the steep and short way home. This was a fine memorial and we plan to have one every year.

Jim Frink

Hike to Mt. Moosalamoo - On August 20, 1972, five people gathered at the fire station for the hike to Mt. Moosalamoo. We left at approximately 9:30 a.m. to head for the mountain. When we reached the Silver Lake Road, we were joined by two more people.

The weather that day was good; the sun was shining and the temperature was in the seventies. But, unfortunately, the mosquitos and bees were with us. With our containers of OFF and OLD TIME WOODSMAN, we strove to keep them away.

The first sight we saw was the waterfalls near the power line. They were just beautiful! Several of us took pictures.

Next, we began the steep climb to the summit. With Jim Frink as our leader, we hustled right along. We reached the top in less than an hour. The view was just breathtaking! One could see Silver Lake, a good portion of Lake Dunmore, and all of the neighboring mountains. There was clicking of cameras for a time, then we settled down to eat our lunch. We then descended the mountain and headed for home. All of us decided that the magnificent views were well worth the trip

Bald Mt., 60th Anniversary Party -
Perfection is the word to best describe Killington Section's 60th Anniversary party on Sunday, 10 September 1972. Weatherwise, it was a crystal clear early fall day, cool but sunny, when Jim Frink rounded us up at the fire station to guide us to Tamarack Notch Camp.

The climb up Bald Mt. proved steep enough to challenge the young, yet gentle enough so that of the 28 starters only one (me) turned back partway. Back at Tamarack, a super supper, prepared and served by the Martin family to over 50 members and guests, was followed by an evening of nostalgic slides and movies to round out a celebration to long remember.

Bald Mt. climbers, led by Janet Martin, hiked through a mixed forest of huge trees that were, Jan explained, planted many years ago after earlier growth had been cut over. Underfoot, the forest floor was thickly carpeted with ferns of many varieties; sensitive, bracken, Christmas, woodsias, polypodies, grape, maidenhair, and others less easily identified. At the summit were panoramic views toward Pico and Killington, and near the summit was an interesting bog where Jan, Nancy and Carol pointed out the cotton grass and other unusual plants, both native and transplants, growing there.

Meanwhile, back at the Notch, Jack was completing the chicken fricassee (for which Jan had cooked and boned 30 lbs. of chicken ahead of time!), baking the crisply light biscuits served under the chicken, and preparing the equally delectable apple crisp served warm for dessert. A green salad, hot rolls and fluffy mashed potatoes almost completed a delicious supper. Almost, for a surprise addition was a huge birthday cake contributed by "Wes" Weston, its frosting decorated with a pine tree and Long Trail emblem and the dates 1912-1972. President Ray Secor cut the cake with assorted juniors cheering him on, and they and their seniors soon consumed it.

While members from Springfield cleared away the dishes, Jack supplied background music with the accordion that had enlivened so many Killington gatherings over the years. And for all, but especially for those of us who get to Killington outings too seldom nowadays, there was the additional fun of catching up on news of old friends and meeting new ones.

Many familiar faces and trail scenes were identified happily in the slides shown by Jack and by Betty Weeks, and the movies of early intersectional weekends shown by Jim Green.

May this be the start of a second 60 years as productive of happy trails as the first 60 have been!

Fran Green

Somerset Reservoir - The September 16 hike turned into a canoe weekend when three Springfield couples, the Weeks, Days and Roberts, were the only members to appear at Somerset Reservoir. It "just happened" that they had three canoes with them, so, after Jim Frink dropped by to report that it was raining in Rutland and no one had shown up, the "hikers" packed in their gear and shoved off.

Now, how many hike chairmen have been known to drive 150-plus miles to get word to a group of hikers? That's well beyond the call of duty. Jim came, established that the scheduled event was A-OK, then drove back to Rutland to take care of some things back home. He took time to look around, though, and agreed that the Somerset Reservoir area was a beautiful spot and he'd be back one day.

A strong headwind marred an otherwise ideal fall day, and a 3 to 4 mile paddle into the wind on an open lake can be hard work. But the water and sky were a brilliant blue, the trees along the shores were beginning to turn color, and the setting was one of the few remaining wilderness areas left in Vermont.

By late afternoon, a primitive camping area hove into view. The boats were beached, tents set up, and preparations were made for supper and an overnight stand. In early evening a third-quarter moon brightened, formed a golden path on the water, and stars began to blaze. As the night came on and the temperature dropped, the campers toasted their toes and marshmallows over a driftwood fire----

Now, don't you wish you'd been there?

Bromley Mountain Hike - My husband George, son John, and I set out for the Peru General Store on a pleasant Sunday in July (the 9th, to be exact), hoping to find some of our old Killington Section friends ready to climb Bromley Mountain with us. We were surprised at first to see only half a dozen or more strangers, and wondered if we had the right group. Shortly we were joined by Vic Randolph of Wallingford, and his three children, Karen, Allen, and Warren. Then we felt more at home, because we have known the Randolphs ever since we first met on the Long Trail shortly after each of us had our first child. Which is all by way of saying that we should get out on Killington Section hikes more often and get to know more people!

Those who joined us for the day were Paschal DeBlasio, Madeline Schnabel, Jacob Sherman, Jay Rosinger, Robert Carey, Jean Tomasi, and Matt Eastman. We were almost joined by another hiker --an oversize, four-legged beast. This was a large St. Bernard dog who insisted on climbing in every car that parked in front of the store.

After placing one of the cars on Route 11 and driving the rest of them to Mad Tom Notch shelter, we finally began the actual hiking around 11 a.m. The hike itself was relatively uneventful and unspectacular, for the reason that it was a somewhat overcast day, and we never did have the breath-taking views we expected, even from the Bromley summit. The main thing some of us learned was that you should never wear sneakers for hiking when there's just been a three-week stretch of rainy weather (you remember June, don't you?).

Following a welcome lunch break at the summit, we descended at varying rates of speed, with this writer always bringing up the rear. After reshuffling the cars, we all took leave of each other around 3 p.m., and the Reynolds topped off the day by stopping at Hapgood Pond for a chilly swim. We wished once again that we could join the hikes more often, and will try to dream up some more down this way so we can do just that.

LOOKING BACKWARD

The following excerpts from a 1929 paperback entitled Vermont Lakes and Mountains, published by Capital City Press, Montpelier, may be of interest:

The Green Mountain Club guide book with eighty-six pages of text and maps covers the Long trail in detail, and gives much further information as to cabins, equipment, etc. may be obtained from the Green Mountain Club, Rutland, Vt. for 53¢ in stamps... tourists who do not care to tramp the Long Trail may secure information...which will enable them to park at the foot of any of these higher peaks, leisurely ascend the mountain for a picnic, enjoy the wonderful views afforded, and return for the night to a hotel or farmhouse in the valley. Some of the railroads have provided special excursions to enable tourists to enjoy hikes over portions of The Long Trail. ...Bus lines enable one to approach the base of several mountains and thus enable the tourist to reach The Long Trail. A combination of steamboat, railroad and bus trips will give a variety of mountain views in Vermont long to be remembered....

The summit of Killington, like that of Mansfield, is a mass of bare rocks. It may be reached by a climb up a natural rocky stairway. The view from the summit, one of the most comprehensive in the entire Green Mountain system, is magnificent, and so extravagant are we in the use of adjectives in every day conversation that no descriptive words are left that are satisfactory or adequate for a scene like this. It is a noble and inspiring scene that greets the eye in any direction....

The Green Mountain Club House, at Sherburne Pass,... is a gift from Mortimer Proctor and his mother, Mrs. Florence D. Proctor. This Lodge, unique and artistic in its design, expresses rustic architecture at its best, is a charming place of entertainment and is patronized by many tourists. There are nine bed or bunk rooms, each accommodating from two to four persons. ...there are baths, telephone connections and all conveniences....The Long Trail passes directly through this Lodge.

ANNUAL MEETING - 1/27

The Killington Section annual meeting will be held on Saturday, January 27, at 7:30 p.m. The place will be the same as last year--the Universalist Unitarian Church vestry. This is located on West St. across from Movie Land Theater.

At this meeting three 3-year term directors will be elected. Retiring directors are Wilbur Weston, Elizabeth Weeks and Kathy Hays.

On another page you will find the Killington Section By-Laws. It is suggested that the articles pertaining to Directors be particularly noted.

Refreshments for the annual meeting are in the charge of Vera Perkins. A program is in the works.

Although a tentative hike schedule has been prepared by the Chairman and the Board of Directors, there are several spots to fill, so bring along to the meeting some ideas for interesting places to go.

GOV. CLEMENT SHELTER - 1/28

On Sunday following the annual meeting, members and friends are invited to meet at the Koltonski fire station at 9 a.m. for a snowshoe or ski expedition to Gov. Clement area.
The more ambitious may continue on past the shelter along woodroads.
The leasers, Dick and Frances Roberts, have not explored roads beyond the shelter so cannot give the distance, but it would appear to be a challenging trek.

Bring a lunch and dress warmly for this trip will take a good part of the day. Hot coffee, tea, cocoa and soup will be provided by the Club.

MYSTERY HIKE - 2/10

W-h-e-r-e w-e a-r-e g-o-i-n-g, n-o-b-o-d-y k-n-o-w-s !!! / Only Churchill Scott. Meet at the usual 9 a.m. at the usual fire station and Churchill will (hopefully) lead us to some wintry rendezvous, possibly with the abominable snowman.

Bring lunches and snowshoes. The date is Saturday, February 10.

DAGGETT MT. - 2/24

Those who survive the Mystery Hike may be in condition by the 24th to bushwhack up Daggett Mt. If Churchill Scott survives, he will lead this trip also.

According to a topographical map of the area, hikers will leave Rte. 4 in Sherburne Pass (after meeting at Koltonski fire station at 9 a.m.) and hike to Willard Gap. They will then bushwhack in a north-westerly direction along the height of land over Dagget Mt. to Elbow Road, a distance of about two miles. Total hike will be five miles.

Bring lunches, snowshoes, and wear warm clothing.

SKI TOURING - 3/3

Dave Govatski and Ray Secor will lead this trip from Mt. Tabor to Little Rock Pond. Please note the different meeting time and place in the information they have furnished:

Walk from Silver Bridge in Mt. Tabor on Forest Road #10 two and a half miles to Black Branch. Cross-country ski to Little Rock Pond and down Homer Stone Brook trail to So. Wallingford. About eight miles. Intermediate skiers.

Meet at Mt. Tabor Forest Service Supply Depot entrance at 8:30 a.m. Bring extra clothing and a lunch. Date: Saturday, March 3.

MOONLIGHT HIKE - 3/17

All Irish and non-Irish are invited to celebrate St. Patrick's Day with a hike into Sunnyside Shelter. Meet at Koltonski fire station at 4 p.m. and bring a bag supper. Hot drinks and soup will be provided.

The moon will be almost full, and the view from the overlook about a mile or so beyond the shelter should be soft and moonlighty.

Those who cannot bear to leave after the hike may stay overnight in the shelter or may bring their mountain tents. Be sure to bring breakfasts, down sleeping bags, and wear your woolies.

The trip will be led by Lloyd and Betty Weeks, noted for bivouacking in snowbanks.

GULF SHELTER - 3/31

This trip will take hikers to a shelter on the Appalachian Trail. After meeting at the fire station at 9 a.m., the group will drive to Woodstock, turn north, and take Rte. 12 for three or four miles. The AT junction is not clearly marked, so it is necessary to look closely for the signs. Gulf Shelter will be found about two miles west of the highway on the Trail.

Although Mauri Winturri has not confirmed his leadership at this writing, the Hikes Chairman, the Board of Directors, members and friends of the Killington Section of the Green Mountain Club, and prospective hikers all are all waiting with bated breath and crossed fingers for his "yes." We'll see you on March 31, Mauri.

SUGAR-IN-SNOW PARTY - 4/7

Doc and Kay Howard will entertain at this party but details have not yet been worked out. Watch the papers if the next issue of Smoke and Blazes doesn't reach you in time. Circle your calendar.

DUES HIKE

At the January 1972 annual meeting the subject of increased dues was discussed at length. It was voted to keep the 1972 dues the same but to ask for contributions to take care of increased expenses. However, beginning January, 1973, Section dues to the Main Club have been increased from 50¢ to $1.50 per adult member and 75¢ per junior member. Because of this higher assessment and greater Section expenses, it is therefore necessary to ask Killington Section members to pay dues this year according to the following schedule:

Spouse: $3.50

Senior Citizen over 65: $2.50

Single Junior: $1.75

Family Junior: $.75

Dues should be mailed or given to W. Churchill Scott, Treasurer, 132 Maple St., Rutland, Vt. 05701

A NEW HANDBOOK, Winter Hiking and Camping, by John Danielson, has been recently published by the Adirondak Mt. Club. The purpose of this book is to help winter hikers, campers, snowshoers, and cross-country skiers to enjoy the out-of-doors to its fullest with utmost safety.

It is guidebook size and contains a wealth of valuable information. It was planned and written to fill the need for a basic manual on wilderness excursions during winter conditions.

This book may be purchased at Dakins Mountain Shop in Ferrisburg, Vt., or ordered from the Adirondak Mt. Club, Glens Falls, N. Y.

A DIRECTORS' MEETING was held at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Howard on Friday, Jan. 5.

It was voted to hold the Killington Section annual meeting on a Saturday so that more out of town members can attend.

Mr. Weston spoke of the site for the 1973 G.M.C. Intersectional, and said that if the Killington Section sponsors it at Tamarack Notch he will need a lot of help.

Betty Weeks announced that her six years as a Trustee expires this May and a replacement should be considered.

The tenure of various directors was questioned, and the Secretary directed to obtain this information.

It was voted that the duties of the Board of Directors be read at annual meeting, and the By-Laws printed in Smoke and Blazes. A hike schedule was discussed and planned.

HIKE REPORTS FOR THE RAINY LAST QUARTER OF THE YEAR:

Merck Forest - Sept. 10. Four members of the Killington Section met at the fire station on South Main St., Rutland, to begin the fourth pilgrimage to the Merck Forest domain. Two of us were prepared for the event while the other two members were there out of curiosity and to possibly cheer on the two hardy souls who were to battle the elements and take the hike.

It was raining, and although the papers, TV and other news media predicted clearing by afternoon, the two were not so well treated. It rained all the way to Merck, and after we arrived.

Don Lourie met us at the red barn and wondered where all the others were. From the barn we two, namely Bob Carey and yours truly, donned our packs and made the trek to the camping area with the big fireplace where several of us stayed last year.

All the while the rain poured down and soaked us quite thoroughly. Once, for a space of about four minutes, the sun shone and for a few minutes we were elated. Then the rain closed in again and for three hours we huddled in the shelter hoping it would cease.

We had a lunch of soup and a sandwich. It should be mentioned here that Rascal and Sport also shared our misery.

About 3:30 p.m. we headed back for the barn, stopping on the way to inspect a new shelter on the Mt. Antone Road. It wasn't as inviting as our L.T. shelters, and we gave it up as a bad job and drove back to Rutland.

Driving west on Kendall Ave. we were greeted by the rays of a beautiful sunset. Thus ended the day.

Wes Weston

Fire Hill, Oct. 15 - Hike leader, Ruth LaBrake. Jim Frink, Wes Weston, Rascal and Sport, Bob Carey, Ruth, and three strangers--young giggly girls--made it to one of the small summits on the ridge, but missed the big one. A short but enjoyable hike.

Scragg Mt., Oct. 28 - Hike leader, Churchill Scott. Ed Trzesniowski, Bob Carey, and Churchill, because of the poor visibility and threat of rain, went only to Mt. Cushman. They took the new return route via jeep road and Old Town Road. No water along the trail, so be prepared next time.

Bird Mountain, Dec. 2 - Hike leader, Churchill Scott. Jim Frink, Mauri Winturri, Bob Carey, Churchill Scott, and fine prospective member John Hughes, drove to a farmhouse east of Bird Mt., hiked up the east side to near the summit, built a fire, had lunch, and returned. Snowshoes all the way, and fine, clear weather.

Two hikes were cancelled--Stratton Mt. on Nov. 11 as it is not wise to be in the woods on the first day of hunting season, and the Mystery Hike on Dec. 10 because of bad weather. So endeth the 1972 season.

The following poem reminds the Editors of climbing Mt. Mansfield during August dog-days, carrying a fifty-pound pack:

Red exhaustion rips at your throat
And salt sweat spills off your forehead and mats your eyelids and brows.
And drips on the burning ground
And your legs start to turn to rubber and collapse like a balloon.
"Pretty soon I've got to rest.
How much farther? What's the good of this g-- d--- work anyway?"

The long distance runner is paid by the snap of a white thread across his chest.
You are paid by the picture at your feet.

From the bare ledges at the summit there is a spectacular view of the flat Champlain Valley with Lake Champlain and the Adirondacks in the distance.

A small pond may be visited on the mountain top. Interesting plant life may be seen here including a profusion of Trailing Arbutus. Also near the summit is a cranberry bog. Here will be found an acre of open bog mat com-erised of sphagnum moss. The bog is 33' deep, and is believed to be 9500 years old. It began forming shortly after the retreat of the last glacier. In this area pitcher plants are exceptionally abundant.

This mountain is near the flyway of the Canadian Geese. These birds may be observed at the Dead Creek Waterfowl Area immediately below the mountain.

Sat., June 23, 9 a.m. Stony Brook Shelter, Appalachian Trail. Bettina Roulier, Leader. Meet at the fire station and follow Rte. 4 to Sherburne village in Ottauquechee Valley. This rugged trail leads through a dense forest along a height of land between N. and S. flowing streams. The section typifies the rugged, wild terrain of Vermont forests.

HIKE REPORTS

Gov. Clement, Jan. 28. The 1973 Hike Schedule began with a trip to Gov. Clement shelter on Jan. 28. We didn't have to tunnel our way down into the shelter, as predicted in Smoke & Blazes. It just wasn't that kind of a winter.

When Hike Leaders, Dick and Frances Roberts, arrived at Upper Rd. they came upon a traffic jam (on Upper Rd., yet!) so many GMCers had turned out. Twenty-four hikers, representing three states, signed Jim Frink's register.

Although the sky was over-cast, the air was delightful. The trail was on the icy side at first, but with increased elevation the snow became thick and squeaky under foot. Those who brought their X-C skis were glad they had.

After building a fire, carrying water up the steep bank from the brook, boiling coffee and soup, the group settled down to the business of eating lunches and catching up on news.

Most went home soon after lunch, but 7 or 8 hiked on further up the trail for an hour or so. It was one of those days one felt reluctant to end.

F. Roberts

Mystery Hike, Feb. 10. The hike began just as the one a year ago did. Blue sky, bright sunshine, no wind, with the temperature around zero. Only this year the destination was a mystery to more people.

After a ride over Sherburne Pass to 100A, we turned south, and after passing a couple of bigger than life size ice statues, or maybe snow women, we parked opposite and a little north of the entrance to the Calvin Coolidge State Park area. Snowshoes were not necessary as we walked up an old town road with some folks making a side trip to an old granite quarry where Jim gave a very interesting description of the area.

We passed by Whetstone Brook Shelter and continued on for another mile, then dug up all the way. A couple of ski bobbies passed, and then all was quiet again. Soon we turned north off the road, and came to Crooked Shelter where a beautiful, quick, hot fire was built. This is the second of three shelters built and maintained by the Vt. Forest and Parks Dept. which form a very interesting area for overnight trips, exploring hikes, and a side trip down to the Farm and Wilderness Camps.

The bright sun made the day perfect, and again we all said, "What can we do to get more folks out with us to enjoy it all?"

Churchill Scott

Daggett Mt., Feb. 24. The day of the third (at least) attempt to climb Daggett Mt. broke clear, cool and calm. This time we decided to approach from the eastern route, and after arriving at Willard Gap we spent some time discussing the best route - to go from that spot, or to have lunch at Johnson Shelter and slab up from there. Finally Willard Gap won, and we took off, switching back and forth, climbing all the way. As we went along the ridge dropped sharply to the south, and a number of good views were obtained of Pico, Killington and other nearby peaks.

At last we all took turns standing on the peak of Daggett Mt. Then a good, hot fire provided water for drinks to wash down our lunch. The way back was much easier, and it was said a lot more enjoyable than making a round trip of it down the west side, which looked very steep. It was a big surprise to see no fresh animal tracks in spite of the very good weather. Mauri, Ray, Jim, Bob, Kim and Churchill were the hikers.

Churchill Scott

Ski Touring to Rocky Pond, Mar. 3. In spite of threatening skies and weather forecasts for rain, Betty Staack, Ray Secor, and Betty and Lloyd Weeks started up the nearly snowless road with skis and snowshoes for Little Rocky Pond. As we reached the higher altitudes we began to find more snow and could actually ski a little by picking our way through boulders. We arrived at Lulu Tye Shelter just about to eat lunch when Jim Frink, Churchill Scott and Bob Carey arrived. They had come up the Home Stone Brook trail on snowshoes.

We visited, finished lunch, then each party went its separate way. Skiing back out on the trail was much easier, and a good time was made to the cars.

The choices of wax used on our skis were not exactly the best. We could slip back nearly as easily as forward. The consensus was that more knowledge is needed in choosing waxes and applying them.

Let's hope for more ski trips next year as this was a thoroughly enjoyable excursion. The nine miles slid by easily and quickly.

Lloyd Weeks

Moonlight Hike to Sunnyside, Mar. 17. Driving up Rte. 103 to Cuttingsville with rain pouring down and all streams overflowing, we knew that no one would show up for the hike to Sunnyside.

We had planned a moonlight hike and overnight to Sunnyside on March 17 to celebrate St. Patrick's Day. We had looked forward to spending a balmy moonlight night in our mountain tent with several other GMCers who were planning to attend with tents.

When we arrived at the dirt road that takes us the last few miles, we found barricades across the road and a sign, "MUD, four-wheel-drive vehicles only." Luckily, we were driving the Scout. And MUD was right! Slipping from rut to rut we finally made it to the top of the hill. Donning rain pants and other rain gear, we sloshed through mud and water up past the beaver pond to the camp. The neat, clean cabin with plenty of dry firewood waiting, was a welcome sight. The first robin we had seen this spring was singing in one of the old apple trees nearby.

We had started the fire and put the soup kettle on when Jim Frink, Bob Carey, Wilbur Weston and Rascal (Continued p. 4, col. 2)

DIRECTORS' MEETING REPORT - W.C. Scott

The Board of Directors' meeting was held on Saturday, March 16, at the home of Mr. Weston. Present were Janet Martin, Teen Palen, Jim Frink, Doc Howard, Wes Weston, Ray Secor, Churchill Scott. Peter Palen was a guest.

Ray has finally received a report on the caretakers at Pico Shelter for the 1972 season, and hopefully this year there will be a better method of communication so we will know more from the Main Club. More discussion was made about the "Adopt A Shelter" program which Mr. Palen oversees for the Main Club. Miss Mausolff, who is moving closer to Vermont, is willing to have Gov. Clement. Doc suggested that Spring Lake Ranch be contacted about watching over Sunnyside, and Farm and Wilderness over Tamarack. Lyle Van Guilder was mentioned as a sponsor for Clarendon.

Wes made the motion to submit Fred-erica Welch's name as a replacement for Bob Rothenmeyer who has moved to Mass-achusetts and can no longer serve as Director.

Wilman Day's name was mentioned to contact to see if he would consent to act as a Trustee to replace Betty Weeks whose term will expire this May.

Janet Martin, at the request of Mrs. Jean Davis, Director of Camp Betsy Cox in Pittsford, spoke about the Pittsford Ice Caves and their popularity with many of the local camps. Their group hopes to create interest and sponsor a number of money-raising affairs this summer to take advantage of an offer to buy an area of land that will provide a right of way and an access to the caves.

Wes spoke again of help needed to run the GMC Intersectional at Tamarack Notch this August. Hike leaders, night enter-tainment, registration, help for TNAFA supper, nurses, sanitary engineers, and a PA System, to name a few.

ADOPT-A-SHELTER PROGRAM - Peter Palen

There has been in existence for over two years an Adopt-A-Shelter Program which was designed to try and get more people involved in shelter care and maintenance. Out of approximately 66 shelters, 21 are presently adopted and these adopters have been very faithful about their duties.

Here in the Killington Section two shelters have been adopted. Doctor Howard and Wilbur Weston are the co-adopters of Tucker-Johnson. Miss Anne Mausolff of Northampton, Mass., adopted Gov. Clement in 1971. She had indicated that she wishes to continue in 1973 as she is moving into the area this summer.

Basically an "adopter" agrees to make periodic inspection trips, doing routine housekeeping chores such as sweeping out the floor; if needed, replacing the log book; keeping the foundation porky-proof; packing out any rubbish; and reporting on a regular inspection form any other repairs that may be necessary, such as windows, doors, stoves, etc. A copy of the inspection report form is forwarded to the Section Shelter Chairman. This is most important since regular maintenance time is often wasted finding out what needs to be done. The Section still has the primary responsibility for the shelter.

Would you like to adopt a shelter in your section? If you are interested and would like more information, please contact: Peter C. Palen, Box 163, Hurley, N. Y., 12443, Adopt-A-Shelter, Program Chairman.

arrived. So we had a merry supper party after all!

On the way back down, not by moon-light but by flashlight, we stopped to look at two large trees nearly gnawed through by the industrious beavers of the pond.

ANNUAL MEETING REPORT - W.C. Scott

The annual meeting of the Killington Section of the Green Mountain Club was held at the Universalist-Unitarian Church meeting rooms on January 21. There were 48 members and guests present making this meeting the largest in the memory of anyone.

John Spencer of Cuttingsville gave a very thorough and interesting talk about the proposed high-tension lines from the Atomic Plant in Vernon. The projected route is over Clarendon gorge in the vicinity of Rte. 103 and the suspension bridge.

The Secretary and Treasurer's reports were read and accepted.

Betty Weeks reported on the trustees' meetings. There has been a large jump in membership, so the number of trustees from Members-at-Large is to be increased to four. The Caretaker program will be expanded with one at Pico.

The Main Club has signed a 5-year lease to stay in Rutland. Miss Hinchey will have an assistant to help, and to learn the office routine.

Contributing members will pay $10.00 for a new category.

No Long Trail Patrol in 1972, but the budget increase of 1973 will provide the much needed work.

The GMC annual meeting will be held at East Poultney this May.

The local Section, in charge of Mr. Weston, will host the Intersectional during the last week of August.

Betty Weeks' term as Trustee ends in May. Wes reported on Trails. Jim Frink's first work party on snowshoes. Sent letter of thanks for trash barrel provided by Vt. Dept. of Highways. Mill River Bridge temporarily repaired. Blueprints received from Emil Bousell. Men hope to repair bridge as soon as possible.

Ray reported on shelters. In good condition. Has received many reports from hikers on pleasant stops at our shelters which they compliment very highly. Gov. Clement will need work. Bunks at Clarendon need some repair.

Frances Roberts spoke on Smoke and Blazes, and how the paper is put together. Would appreciate write-ups on hikes as soon as possible. Other interesting articles are wanted.

Kathy Hayes regretfully submitted her resignation as Long Trail Reporter. F. Roberts will be new reporter.

Teen Palen and Terry Gulick were elected as new directors; "Wes" was re-elected.

Jim Frink conducted an outing schedule session, and many hikes and leaders were added to the 1973 list.

"Wes" spoke of the 1973 GMC Intersectional. J. Martin spoke of Tamarack Notch-Aitken Forest Assoc. and made the motion to donate a $5.00 membership which was passed.

Mrs. George Kirk suggested short walks for younger members.

Again the ladies provided a very enjoyable social hour and our thanks to them all once again.

SMOKE and BLAZES

Vol. 25, No. 3 - KILLINGTON SECTION, GREEN MOUNTAIN CLUB - July-Sept., 1973

COMING OUTINGS

Sun., July 8, 9 a.m. TACONIC CREST TRAIL, George Pearlstein, Leader. The hike will cover about 8 1/2 miles of the Taconic Crest Trail between Petersburg Pass and North Pownal. Although a rather long hike, most of the way is easy going. A side trip will be made to Snow Hole, where snow may be found for much of the year. There are good views into New York State, Massachusetts, and southwestern Vermont. Bring a canteen full of water since water sources are scarce. Fires are prohibited on this part of the trail, so plan your lunches accordingly.

NOTE: On all three of George Pearlstein's scheduled hikes, hikers should bring their own lunches, rain gear, canteens, and other day hiking essentials. There will be no fires built. These trips all offer good opportunities for unusual photos, so bring your camera.

Sat., July 14, 9 a.m. CHATAUGUAY ROAD APPALACHIAN TRAIL, Doc Howard, Leader. Drive to Bridgewater Corners, then go north to Bridgewater Center. Continue driving about 5 more miles on that road. Park cars at the Chataugay Road where it shows dotted lines on the Guide Map. When the group gets to the crossing of the Appalachian Trail, it's every one for himself--either straight ahead on the Chataugay Road, left to Stony Brook Shelter, or right as far as anyone wants to go on the Appalachian trail.

Sun., July 29, 9 a.m. BIG BRANCH SHELTER, LT, Ray Seger, Leader. Drive to Danby; proceed up the Mt. Tabor road to where it crosses the Long Trail, and then hike south to the Big Branch Shelter.

Sun., Aug. 5, 1 p.m. SECOND ANNUAL HAROLD VALIQUETTE MEMORIAL HIKE TO EAST MT., Joe Valiquette, Leader. We will drive out the Tamarack Notch road, and then the Wheelerville Road to Loveday's camp west of McLaughlin Falls, and take the trail from there to the summit. This annual hike is in honor of one of the most active and helpful members this club has ever had.

Sat., Aug. 18, 9 a.m. TONGUE MT, LAKE GEORGE AREA, Jim Frink, Leader. The group will drive west on Rte. 4 to Whitehall and Fort Ann, and then on 149 west to Rte. 9N. We go north on 9N to Bolton's Landing and continue north until we see the signs on the right indicating the beginning of the Tongue Mt. Trail. We continue on this trail until we get to the Frenchman's overlook of Lake George. This is a very well kept trail and the view at the end is superb.

Sat., Aug. 25 to Mon, Sept. 3, GMC INTERSECTIONAL, Wes Weston, Chairman. For further information, see separate article in this issue.

Sat., Sept. 8, 9 a.m. SHREWSBURY MT., George Pearlstein, Leader. The hike will cover the 3 1/2 miles between the old Northam Picnic Area and the summit of Shrewsbury Peak, where there are good views to the south and east. The hike can be extended, if there is interest, to Tamarack Shelter on the LT. Also, if there is interest enough, a loop trip can be arranged via other trails leaving the Killington Peak region.

Sat., Sept. 15, 9 a.m. MT. EQUINOX, George Pearlstein, Leader. This hike will use the Burr and Burton Trail to the summit of Mt. Equinox, a distance of about 3 3/4 miles. There are good views from the summit ridge to both east and west. If there is sufficient interest, the return trip can be made via the old carriage road trail to Beartown Notch, and then down the abandoned road back to Three Maple Drive.

Sat., Sept. 22. COVERED DISH SUPPER, Janet Martin, Chairperson. More information is forthcoming as date near Sat., Sun., Sept. 29, 30. MERCK FOREST OVERNIGHT, Wes Weston, Leader. One day or overnight hike in Merck Forest. Wes will be among the overnighers. The hikers will have a chance to troup through 2,600 acres of field and woodland in the Taconic Mountain Range of the forest. The forest was donated in 1950 by George Merck, a conservationist, in the interest of providing an area for recreation and conservation study. Area members and others interested should meet Saturday at 9 a.m. at Koltonski Fire Station. Those going to Manchester Center will meet the Rutland group at the intersection of Rts. 7 and 30 in Manchester Center at 10 a.m., on Bonnett At.

INTERSECTIONAL NOTES:

Doc Howard tells how to get to Tamarack Notch Aitken Forest Camp in Mendon. "The site of the 1973 GMC Intersectional is Tamarack Notch camping grounds. Many people know it as the Girl Scout Camp. It is about 3 1/2 miles east of Rutland, Vt.

To get there, proceed to the corner of Killington Ave. and Route 7 which is 0.4 miles south of the junction of Routes 4 and 7. You will recognize this corner by the beautiful white marble church. Go east on Killington Ave. 1.8 miles to its end, turn right and you will come to a Y in the road. Take the left and proceed approximately 1 mile to the camp. From the east end of Killington Ave. on you will see GMC directional signs."

Wes Weston suggests we read Intersectional plans that were announced in the May issue of Long Trail News. All details have not been planned as this goes to press, but fliers will be sent out soon.

At the Intersectional there will be need for the services of hike leaders, entertainers, help at the registration table, help with the supper held at the last Saturday night, two or three nurses, a sanitation engineer, the use of a PA system, possibly a typewriter, cash box, etc. Volunteer help will be appreciated. Any member having the time either for a day or two, or 2 for the week, please get in touch with any of the following: W. F. Weston, 48 Edgerton St., Rutland, Vt. 05701; Gardiner Lane, Box B, Bolton Valley, Vt. 05477; Alan Mead, 52 Skinner Road, Rockville, Conn. 06066.

HIKE REPORTS

Gulf Shelter, Apr. 1. Sunday April first was the day for the hike to Gulf Shelter. The skies in Rutland were threatening but we drove to Woodstock and north on Route 12. We drove part of the way up the road to the shelter. Then we sloshed through the mud the rest of the way with Mauri Winturri leading the way. When we got to the shelter the Palens were there. They had spent the night there and had a fire going. Pat Howard had fallen into a pond on the way up so the fire felt good to him.

There was still some snow around the shelter. After we had been there a while it started to rain, making the fire feel good to all. After we had eaten our lunches, the rain slacked off so we left. There was a good turnout that provided a chance to be with Section members. Let's hope for good weather in the future.

Robert Carey

Mt. Moosalamoo, Apr. 15. Churchill

Scott came to the house at 8:40 Sunday morning, April 15, and asked to see my list of the attendees at the Sugar-on-Snow party last week. He said he could not go on the Moosalamoo Hike but he had talked with Terry Gulick, Hike Leader, and Terry planned to go up the trail from the Keywadin Camp at the north end of Lake Dunmore. I'm glad he told me because I had written a letter to the Herald and the Times-Reporter saying that we would go up from the southern end of the mountain. The Herald, in NOT printing the itinerary or the name of the Hike Leader, which I had given them, saved people here from getting a "bum steer."

Having climbed Moosalamoo every year from 1936 to 1955 and always going up the southern trail, I now know why it is called the "Aunt Jenny" Trail! Terry took us up the northern approach, and while the southern trail is steep it presents no climbing problems. The northern trail, on the other hand, is steeper than steep, and presents a few rugged rock climbing problems. Since these northern face rocks were covered with snow, it made our climb particularly interesting and exciting, for me, at least. Terry and Ray Secor (there were only three of us), being young and strong, took the climb in their stride, but Uncle Jim had to crawl in a few places. Once I chose a route which was possible because I saw a root half way to my objective which I could hang on to and pull myself up. When I got up to the "root" and tested it before putting my weight on it, the root turned out to be a loose round stick and I was really stuck--couldn't go up or back. Luckily, Ray was on top, having gone another route, and was able to reach me a hand to help me up. We chose "routes" because the snow covered the trail.

The trail we used comes out near Rattlesnake Point which presents the best and least obstructed view. Some young friends of Terry's were down on the Branbury Beach grounds using a

"mine detector" to find old coins. 3
Terry flashed a mirror at them and they saw it and flashed back to us.

After a lunch at the look-off, we continued up the yellow-blazed trail and went down the south side. Steep, yes, but no problems. As we passed the Cascades, which were very beautiful because of the volume of water coming down, Ray took some pictures which we may see at some future meeting. Ray pointed out the red blazes he had repainted as part of his job, and the route these blazes took him had him hanging by his teeth in many places. At one point, he had to shinny down a convenient tree trunk with the paint pail (full) hanging from his teeth!!

So endeth a tall tale and perhaps it is just as well that some of our more delicate members didn't attempt it.

Jim Frink

Mt. Ascutney, Apr. 29. On an April Sunday we left for a hike up the Weathersfield Trail on Mt. Ascutney. We met on the Cascade Falls road at the base of the mountain. It was a grey, chilly day but 13 people showed up to marvel at the waterfall and hopefully get a view from the top of the mountain.

We had only one incident on our outing, and that occurred when one of the dogs cut his foot; however, the other 4 dogs made it all right.

The waterfall was beautiful as usual, and many people were surprised that there were falls that large in that area. Near the top we were surprised that there was still some snow.

We ate our lunch at the top although it was cold and windy.

The trip was an enjoyable one and all had a good time. We all thought that Herb Ogden and the Ascutney Trails Association had done an excellent job on this trail.

Judi Geezi

Snake Mt. and Wildlife Refuge, June 9.

The hike up Snake Mt. was almost a disaster! Twelve hikers left Rutland in three cars on a hot, humid morning. Leaving our cars near a farmhouse at the base of the mountain on the west side, we climbed at easy grades up an old road to the summit, hurrying to keep ahead of the mosquitoes and black flies! About half way up it started to rain but subsided before we reached the top. We ate lunch on the edge of the cliff at the top near the ruins of an old hotel. The usually fantastic view was disappointing due to the humidity. Young botanists in the party enjoyed identifying the variety of wild flowers native only to rocky locations.

After visiting the tarn on the edge of the cliff we descended to a side trail which led to Cranberry Pond. Mauri Winturri left us here to go on down the mountain.

We had all looked forward to seeing Cranberry Bog which is one of our most interesting natural areas. After skirting a large beaver pond which had inundated the trail, we continued on to the pond near which we knew the bog was located. While Lloyd scouted for the bog, the rest of us waited near the pond admiring the quantities of pink moccasin flowers that grew everywhere. The search for the bog was abruptly terminated when we realized that three young people in the group, thinking that they were on a trail which led back to the cars, had wandered down an old wood road. Another girl, trying to find them, did not return.

All young people were finally located at the base of the mountain. Three had come down on the east side, the other girl had wandered back over the top and finally reached the trail down.

This experience only emphasizes the necessity for everyone in the hiking party to stay with the hike leaders, and never go ahead!

A week later, Betty and Lloyd Weeks and their daughter Judi returned to the area to locate the bog. We found it, not more than fifty feet from Cranberry Pond. It is about an acre in size. This beautiful area is a mat of quaking Spagnum moss ringed by tall spruces. Pitcher plants in blossom grew so thickly everywhere that it was impossible not to step on them. Sundew and other bog plants were interspersed with blossoming sheep laurel.

Hopefully, we'll all make it next time!

Mountain Bars

2 cups crushed vanilla wafers
1 1/2 cups finely chopped nuts
2 cups powdered sugar
1/2 pound finely chopped dates
1 cup finely chopped dried apricots
1 cup seedless yellow raisins
2 tbs. light corn syrup
6 to 8 tbs. honey
1/2 tsp. vanilla or maple flavoring enough water to bind together

Combine all ingredients in a large bowl. Add liquids and knead to mix. Press and shape into small log rolls about 2 by 5 inches. Roll in powdered sugar and wrap in plastic. Store in refrigerator until ready for use.

Molasses-Nut Bars

1/2 cup molasses, 1/2 cup honey or 1/4 cup of each
1 cup powdered milk
1/2 cup crunchy peanut butter
1/2 cup raisins

Mix all ingredients together and turn onto wax paper sprinkled with powdered milk. Knead and add more powdered milk until mixture loses its stickiness and is the consistency of pie dough. Pat down until 1/2 inch thick and cut into sticks. Wrap in plastic and store in refrigerator.

HIKING TIP

The last thing to put in your pack before starting on a hike is a plastic flask of drinking water. If it has been placed in the freezing compartment of the refrigerator about 24 hrs. it will be a solid chunk of ice.

On the trail it gradually melts, providing a supply of ice water for several hours.

Water expands when it freezes, so leave some air space in the flask when you put it in the freezer.

TRAILS AND SHELTERS REPORT, KILLINGTON SECTION - Sept. 25, 1973.

Considerable work has been done in our section this summer. Starting from Route 140 north, maintenance, etc. has gone as follows:

The trash barrel at 140 has been checked and the trail cleared of blow-downs, etc., to Sunnyside. Teen and Peter Palen dug a new outhouse hole at Sunnyside, and moved the outhouse onto it; the stove pipe was replaced; floor repaired; and Lynn Eaton from Spring Lake was persuaded to adopt the shelter, and has since checked and cleaned it regularly.

"Wes" Weston and Ray Catozzi re-routed the trail around the washed out bridge over Clarendon Gorge, and put up signs soon after it was disabled.

The Army Corps of Engineers were contacted and agreed tentatively to rebuild the Clarendon Gorge bridge next summer, and the Flood Relief people were contacted, and $2,500 was lined up to pay cost of materials, etc. The bridge project was then was then turned over to the main club, Sandy Stare, Churchill and Kim Scott and myself put new roofing on Clarendon Shelter--one really hot day! Bob O'Brien checked and cleared the trail from Clarendon Shelter to the Lower Cold River Road.

Mrs. Forrest at the Lower Cold River Road had been complaining for years about hikers going through her yard. A short relocation was done here to everyone's satisfaction. Rob Carey, Pat and Paul Howard, John Braddock and myself did this job.

Rob Carey, Pamela Kerstner, Mauri Winturri and I spent days clearing and brushing the trail from the lower to the upper Cold River Road. It really needed it! At Gov. Clement Shelter, Teen and Peter Palen dug a new hole and the outhouse was moved onto it. The legs of the picnic table had been torn off and this was repaired. Mauri Winturri and I did this job. From here to Tamarack, the trail was cleared and several wet places were bridged with split log bridging. The Farm and Wilderness people were contacted and they assumed responsibility for the care of Tamarack Shelter--a job they had been doing anyhow.

Sherburne Corp., the State of Vermont and the Green Mountain Club have all had a hand in watching out for Cooper Lodge. Much "Tourist Trash" has been carted out. A new backhouse was built at Cooper. From Cooper north the trail was relocated to the west to avoid the ski trails. Two hundred thirty feet of split log bridging was put over boggy areas between Cooper and Pico.

Close contact was kept with Tim Sorrow, the Caretaker at Pico Camp. He dug and built a new outhouse there, and did many minor repairs as well as clearing trail to Sherburne Pass.

North of Sherburne Pass, yours truly cleared trail from Willard Gap to Jacker-Johnson. A work party of the Killington Section dug a new outhouse hole here and moved the outhouse on it.

In addition, multiple visits were made to various shelters where registers were replaced and general policing of the camps was done. Mauri Winturri was particularly active in this field. Many others aided in various ways in our section maintenance, and to them I am very grateful. Believe me, all this work took a great deal more time and effort to do than it does to tell about it!

Respectfully submitted,
Harold Howard

HIKE REPORTS

Taconic Range, July 8. On the Taconic Crest trail hike there were only the leader, George Pearlstein and two others and one car. The group hiked to Carmel Camp, lunched, and then went on to Wetmore Gap where sites for a new shelter were marked out just east of the LT. On return trip, climbed the fire tower on summit, but hot, humid weather cut visibility to zero.
Chruchill Scott

Chatauguay Road, July 14. On the day of the Chatauguay hike, which was called off due to the June flood, Mauri Winturri, Peter Louras, Bob Carey and I drove to Rte. 103 trail crossing, looked over the swinging bridge remains over Mill River, drove to Sunnyside to check on the shelter, back to Mill River to take some photos, then on to Gov. Clement where the two upper bridges were washed out, all the time with two additional hikers packed in Mauri's "Bug." At Gov. Clement the six of us tried to move the toilet building but could not. On the way back to the car we made a side trip to the side of Herb Haley's farm where the Main Club annual meetings were held in the dead of winter.

Churchill Scott

Big Branch Shelter, July 29. On Sunday, twelve people met at the fire station at 9 a.m. and drove to the parking place on the Mount Tabor Road where the new LT heads north from the road. We walked up to where the new LT comes into the road from the south and then followed the trail to Big Branch Shelter beside the stream.

Doc Howard and Mauri Winturri drove up to where the old LT crosses the road and walked down to the new trail near the shelter.

After lunch, Churchill Scott and some of the others, walked up the old LT to Old Job Shelter. The new trail takes a more interesting path to Baker Peak and Griffith Lake.

The return trip along the trail made us wonder about the old road that used to run along Big Branch and which crossed it seven times before the flood of 1927 washed out all the bridges.

Our peerless leader, Ray Secor, never showed up. Those who went besides myself were Churchill Scott, Bob Carey, Anne and Mat Ulenski, Kenny Fulling, Kathy and Konrad Kruesi, Mauri Winturri, Doc Howard, and Peter and Chris Louras.

Jim Frink

East Mt., Aug. 5. On Sunday afternoon, a group gathered at the fire station for the Second Annual Harold Valiquette Memorial Hike to East Mt. Thelma Valiquette donated the red bunting and the cord for a new flag at the summit, just as Harold used to do. Joe Valiquette led the hike and it was mostly bushwhacking up and down, although there were some sections of trail available. A good time was had by all and those present were, besides myself, Thelma Valiquette, Sophie Connors, Elsie Maier, Bob Carey, Mildred Kramer, Robert Kramer, John C. and Mat Ulinski, Kenny Fulling, Joan Kramer, W. F. Weston, (and Sport), Churchill and Kim Scott, Jack and Tom Martin, Joe, Tom, Mary Ann Valiquette and John and Ronnie Rorison.

Jim Frink

Tongue Mt., Aug. 18. On the Tongue Mt. hike, Mr. Frink was unable to lead because of a wedding engagement. As there were no cars, he took the group to the upper Cold River Road for a hike to Rte. 103. The trail was in very good shape due to a lot of work done by section members under the leadership of Dr. Howard. Clarendon Shelter was clean and neat with a new roof put on in August.

Churchill Scott

Shrewsbury Mt., Sept. 8. Eight GMC's climbed Shrewsbury Mt. on a predictably

(but unpredicted) rainy Saturday. Rain pelted us and wind belted us with increasing nastiness as we neared the top. We chickened out from the lunch-at-the-top ritual, and ate sandwiches with numb hands in an almost sheltered spot halfway down the mountain. Let's schedule Shrewsbury for a sunny day next year. It's a good climb and has promises of excellent viewpoints. Those of us who had never climbed it agreed we'd like to try it again in good weather.

Frances Roberts

Mt. Equinox, Sept. 15. On Saturday Bob Carey, Lon Catozzi, Carol Chapman (a teacher at VTC and probable new member) and I were just about to leave the fire station at 9:15 when our peerless leader, George Pearlstein, arrived. (He also arrived a few minutes after we had left for Shrewsbury the week before, and that's why we never saw him on that hike.) We drove to Burr & Burton Academy in Manchester where we met a young man from Chester, Bob Piper, who climbed half the mountain with us and then turned back.

It was raining practically all the way up, but the three and a half mile climb is so steep, and we were so heated, that most of the rain evaporated as soon as it hit us. (We still got pretty wet.)

At the summit the restaurant was open and there were hot chocolate and cold drink machines. After a short rest, luncheon, and a playful episode with a handsome young thoroughbred German Shepard, we made short work of the long descent.

Jim Frink

Covered Dish Supper, Sept. 22. Not much to report on pot luck--small crowd--damp, cold weather. Nineteen were there, I believe. Eats were good as always. The Junes were with us as Mr. June was up for the trustees meeting. They had camped at Gifford Woods the night before. Enjoyed the fireplace and blazing logs from last winter's blowdowns. Perhaps a special mailing should go out for this if we do it another year as this size crowd hardly justifies the rental of Tamarack Notch kitchen.

Janet Martin

Merck Forest, Sept 29, 30. On Saturday Churchill and Kim Scott, Bob Carey and Jim Frink met at the fire station. At the Grand Union, we had encountered Wes Weston who had previously stated he would be unable to go. However, he said that Janet Martin had called him saying she could go provided she could leave at 10 a.m. Wes said he just might take Janet down at that time.

The four starters from Rutland drove down because I assured Bob Carey that the Springfield group would surely be there and he would have company for his overnight stay. Bob's father drove away happy that Bob would have transportation home on Sunday.

Upon arrival we found that parking was allowed only at the edge of the Merck area--we had to walk up to the barn. From there we hiked to the Lodge and waited there for a while for the Springfield group to show. But they didn't. Then we bushwhacked down to the lower four shelters and built a fire in the fireplace of the big one. We boiled a pot full of water and walked around to visit the other three shelters. They were all occupied by packs of the Boy Scout "Phanton Patrol."

After we had finished lunch, the following group arrived from Rutland: Wes Weston; Jack, Janet, Tom, Betsy, Nancy and David Martin; Vera Perkins; Dorothy Kirk; and Sport and Rascal, Wes's dogs.

Bob Carey found that Tom and Betsy Martin were staying overnight so he had the company he wanted. After making the supplies available to the late group, Churchill, Kim and I packed up and took the Schenk and Old Town Roads to Antone summit, and then back to the car and home. It was a beautiful day and a very enjoyable walk in the woods. A fine view from the top.

Jim Frink

Wes Weston adds to the above: Bob Carey, Hike Director Exceptional for the Intersectional, stayed over night at Merck Forest along with Betsy and Tommy Martin who slept in their mountain tent. Bob started the night in the loft of the shelter with the large fireplace, but ended up on the table; he was smoked out by the smoke from the fireplace. The thermometer which Bob carried registered 38 degrees when he awoke in the morning. They report a much clearer day than Saturday and they had some beautiful views.

COMING OUTINGS

Sat., Feb. 2, 10 a.m. MYSTERY HIKE, Doc Howard, Leader. Meet at the Koltonski Fire Station warmly dressed and equipped with lunch, snowshoes or skis. Doc guarantees a warm place to eat lunch but it may be chilly en route. Hot coffee, tea and cocoa will be provided by the Club.

Sun., Feb. 17, 10 a.m. Gov. Clement Shelter, Dick and Frances Roberts, Leaders. Rutland area people meet at the fire station and join the leaders at the junction of the Long Trail and Upper Cold River Road (Division V Map). This area is good for x-c skiing as well as for snowshoeing, so bring along your choice. Also bring your lunch. The Club will furnish hot coffee, tea and cocoa.

ANNUAL MEETING

Killington Section Annual Meeting will be held on Friday, Feb. 1, at 7 p.m. at the CVPS meeting room. This is located on the corner of Maple and Grove Streets in Rutland, and the Club has been asked to use the Maple St. entrance.

The agenda includes election of three 3-year term directors, retiring directors being Ray Secor, Churchill Scott and Jim Frink.

Hike Chairman Pro Tem, Churchill Scott, will welcome suggestions for hikes. (Please see tear section on last page.)

Changes in by-laws have been discussed by the directors, and a committee will be formed to work on possible revisions. One suggestion is to change Article 7 (Killington Section By-laws will be found on another page in this issue) to allow election of officers from Section membership at the Annual Meeting. If any member wishes to make this or any other changes in the by-laws, please bring them in writing to the meeting on February 1.

Refreshments are in charge of Janet Martin. Please call her at 773-8621 and volunteer to bring some type of dessert.

DIRECTORS MEETING

The Killington Section Board of Directors held a meeting at Trinity Church on Thurs., Jan. 17, 1974. Present were Jim Frink, Terry Gulick, Dr. Howard, Janet Martin, Churchill Scott, Ray Secor, Wilbur Weston, with Frances Roberts and Betty Weeks sitting in as representatives of Smoke and Blazes.

Terry discussed briefly Pres. John Nuffort's appreciation of volunteer help and the concern of the Main Club to keep lines of communication open. The president asked for information about historical background of sections relating to Main Club on various areas of non-communication. Terry also spoke of last Trustees' meeting. The GMC Annual Meeting will be held in Bennington on May 25-26. Jay Section (a new one) has been accepted and will maintain the northern end of the Long Trail. It has been suggested that a historical record be made of each section. The Swezey tract has been transferred to the USFS with the request the shelters be named William Douglas and Mr. Swezey. Peggy Pons is to resign as editor of Long Trail News.

A date and place for the Annual Meeting was picked and Janet Martin offered to have charge of refreshments. The Board of Directors set-up was discussed at great length and many pros and cons were offered. Terry suggested that anyone having suggestions on the by-laws bring them in writing to be presented to the Annual Meeting.

"Wes" Weston asked about dues set-up and the increase of our section dues have helped to pay for the jump in Main Club dues, so it is suggested that they stay the same for 1974. "Wes" also explained the resolution to vote in an executive secretary (a salaried position) which will be brought up at the next Trustees meeting. This also will be discussed at the Annual Meeting.

Gardner Lane, Presidential Assistant, has been invited to our Annual Meeting to explain the duties of the new executive secretary. We hope for a good turn-out for this meeting.

Blue Ridge Mt., Oct. 14. The hike up Blue Ridge provided one real thrill for some of the hikers. Weatherwise the day was not just what we could have ordered for this fall hike which can be so gorgeous. It was cloudy, cold and windy. Just how windy we didn't fully realize until we reached the top. Here we had in addition to the wind some slight precipitation closely resembling snow.

However, there were 11 starters up the mountain. Doc Howard was on hand to start us off and hike for a short distance. Doc's four legged friend hiked with us all day and we returned him to Doc on our way home.

Arriving on top, we found a somewhat sheltered spot for lunch and surely appreciated the hot coffee the first arrivals had ready.

We didn't linger on top. Four of us started down immediately after lunch, which we will always regret, and the others soon followed.

The second contingent were the lucky ones. As they stopped to greet Churchill who was on his way up, they spotted three bears ambling through the woods! Nancy Martin was able to snap a picture which unfortunately didn't show them too clearly due to distance and intervening trees. This incident was really the high point of the day.

We met Wes Weston with Rascal and Sport before we reached the clearing, stopped to say "hello" to Mary and Craig Perkins, and were soon joined by the rest of the group. So ended another good Killington Section hike--always interesting and always fun.

Little Rock Pond, Oct. 27. Twenty-two people and four dogs attended the hike to Little Rock Pond with Elizabeth Weeks as substitute leader for absent Virginia Day. Seventeen of us followed the old East Wallingford-Wallingford Pond Road to the Long Trail across and along the Homer Stone Brook to Little Rock Pond. The remainder followed the Long Trail south and met the rest of us at the newly located Lula Tye shelter for lunch. On the return trip we stopped at the new location of Little Rock Pond shelter. The original shelter on the island in the pond and the bridge were removed when the shelter was relocated some distance from the pond. Weather was cloudy and cool with some sun on the return trip.

Stratton Pond, Nov. 10. Jim Frink and one other lady hiker met leaders Peter and Teen Palen in Arlington 10 A.M. on a cold, grey, windy day. By the time we drove up the mountain to our starting point on the new LT relocation it was nearly 11 A.M. We had a very muddy hike in to the Pond with frequent snow squalls. After some effort we managed to get a fire started from wet wood as there was no dry wood at the shelter. While we were enjoying hot soup, Ray Gecor and Anne Boucher arrived to swell our number to six. After lunch we started promptly back as it was extremely windy and cold. The walk back was slippery on ground turned white with snow.

Peter Palen

Pico Peak, Dec. 1. The hike to Pico Peak showed that one never knows how many will show up for a hike. December first was a dull, cloudy day. Despite this, eight hikers, including myself met at the fire station. It was good to see some new people, including Janet Gustafson. Paschal DeBlasio came, also. On the way up, we stopped at Doc's and met Mauri Winturri.

There was just a dusting of snow on the ground when we started the climb. Soon we gained enough elevation to be in an area in which the trees were coated with rime ice. It looked like a winter wonderland.

At the junction, we split up. I led one group to the summit and Jim Frink took the others directly to the camp. We expected them to have the fire going and the water hot. When we arrived at the camp, after a pretty good view at the top, there was no fire. The wood on the ground had gotten a thorough soaking before it froze, and the standing dead wood was coated with rime ice. There was no dry wood in the shelter.

While we were looking for dry wood, three more hikers arrived. They helped us look for wood. After about an hour (and several tries) we did manage to get a fire going, despite all the adversities. After some time, with the water still cold, we decided to leave. Some hikers had brought thermoses of -4- coffee and these were generously shared. All in all it was an enjoyable hike, even though it wasn't on snowshoes.

Robert Carey

Christmas Party, Dec. 15. The Christmas party this year is a little difficult to describe. Fifteen attended; all had a good time; it was noisy; there were lots of goodies, like cakes, cookies, candy, etc., that were generously passed around, and the hot drinks furnished by the Club really hit the spot. There were at least three non-GMC members as guests who seemed to be having a ball. Annie Boucher was there way from Springfield, Mass.

A group hiked to Spring Lake clearing over to the parking space, in the morning, and in the afternoon a group hiked around the beaver dam. We tea drinkers sat close to the stove. I believe this is an ideal set-up for a hike--short for us old folks, with lots of space and trails for further excursions for the more ambitious.

Again let me emphasize--don't let winter discourage you from a hike. With clothing we have today they can be most enjoyable and comfortable.

One disappointment was that more did not attend. We missed the Springfield, Vt., crowd. In talking it over later several of us came to the conclusion that Sunday afternoon would be a better time for future Christmas parties.

Harold Howard

Johnson Shelter, Jan. 5, 1974. This hike fell on a beautiful sunny day with fresh sparkling snow underfoot, but at a depth to permit us to walk in without snowshoes.

On our way up to the starting point we stopped in at Doc Howard's for a warming cup of coffee which was a wonderful eye-opener and also primed us for the very cold morning.

Attendance was on a 3 to 1 ratio--15 adults and 5 dogs! We think an award for the member who travels the furthest and most often should go to Mauri Winturri of Fitchburg, Mass.

The last few hikes we've had very reluctant fires but fortunately, this time (at an open shelter in winter) the GMC pot boiled by lunch time and we sure enjoyed the warmth of a roaring fire. Everyone seemed to have had a good time and on our return trip several of the younger members took the long way back around Deer Leap.

Poem for the day:

Roses are red,
Violets are blue.
We all enjoyed
Weston's hot stew.

Killington Section members might be interested in what the Connecticut Section schedules for winter hikes: Jan. 18/19. Peter Dabbs is working on a Winter Backpack in New Hampshire, hopefully on the Lafayette Ridge... Feb. 8/10. Weekend at Derrybrook, Vt....

Feb. 16/17. Beginner's Backpack... into and out of a campsite where we will tent and climb...We will help you rent or borrow needed equipment.

Three additional less ambitious hikes were planned for January and February. Winter camping sounds great to your editors. Any takers? Let us know at the Annual Meeting.

PORCUPINES

My father-in-law, age 87 and a Vermont farmer all his life, looked somewhat askance at me when I suggested that porcupines did quite a lot of damage in the woods. He promptly told me that the amount of damage they did didn't amount to a row of fiddlesticks. On my property here in Mendon there are three porcupine dens which I have observed closely for over eleven years. This, together with my 65 years, much of which has been spent in the woods of our beautiful state, brings me to the same conclusion--the damage they do is negligible. One observation I have made is that they -5-gnaw mostly bent, short, scrubby trees that aren't going to make it anyhow.

Rarely have I seen where they chewed on a good, tall, healthy tree.

You will hear farmers say, "I wish they'd kill off every last deer."
They nibble on the crops. Bears kill a sheep or a calf once in a while, hawks kill an occasional chicken. Owls, bobcats, wolves, and foxes kill our small game. Of course, the law says we can shoot raccoons, rabbits, partridge, skunk, squirrels and other game so we do it---do not the powers that be sanction it? Sure, we're holier than thou--we're within the law! Try to think of a species of animal that somebody doesn't want to eradicate.

Now, Mr. G.M.C.'er, don't you think it's about time we changed our tune regarding "Porkie?" Sure, he's a prickly old thing and he chews on our precious shelters, but which is more important, a fellow mammal or our shelters? Often he is the only wild creature of any size that we see while hiking. So, let's find some other way to protect our shelters and leave our spiked friend alone.

Evidence of serious damage by the highest of all living forms is shown
....This organism has two legs,

There is a rapture on the lonely shore
There is society where none intrudes
By the deep sea, and music in its roar

PORCUPINES

You have made a brand new john
And stood it on a nit
And staring down into the yawn
You are very proud of it.
But when you pass that way again
The hole is getting bigger
A porcupine, with no disdain,
Has attacked it with some vigor.
Now I'll fix your wagon, you decide
And with a club you lay in wait.
There was nothing to it, you confide,
As Porky met his fate.
Hang by the tail, you foul ingrate,
For all to see and know
That porcupines who desecrate
Are going to have to go.

KILLINGTON SECTION DIRECTORS' MEETING

Doc's views on the porcupine may well exemplify the kind of rethinking all of us may be compelled to face as man's progress continues to advance in the face of ever increasing danger signals. The outdoors cannot be at one and the same our cathedral and our playground.

A few years back we observed our first Earth Day here in Springfield, Massachusetts, and Pioneer Valley Section was asked to put on a display. I contrived a "Problem Wildlife Survey" with the point that we ought to try more to live with our problem wildlife. One of the incidents that prompted this interest was a public hanging we had of a porcupine at Congdon Camp the previous October. Naturally, Porky was one of the creatures featured in my display. The card

A Board of Directors Meeting was held on Wednesday, Fe. 20, 1974, at the home of Wilbur Weston. Present were Frederica Welch, Vera Perkins, Janet Martin, Thelma Valiquette, Wes Weston and Churchill Scott. Dr. Howard was absent on account of illness, and letters were received from Teen Palen and Terry Gulick expressing their regrets for being absent.

The following officers were chosen:
 President - Wilbur Weston
 V. Pres. - Frederica Welch
 Sec.-Treas. - W. Churchill Scott
 Committee Chairmen:
 Trails - Paul Howard
 Shelters - Dr. Howard
 Outings - Robert Carey
 Membership - Thelma Valiquette
 Entertainment - Janet Martin and Vera

Wes spoke about setting a deadline on payment of dues, mentioning the by-laws of the Conn. Section. It was suggested that our dues stay the same and that as the Treasurer must report and pay assessment to Main Club for each member by April 1, a member shall be dropped if dues are not paid by April 1 of each year.

In order to cause less confusion, it was suggested that the Section's annual meeting be held on the third Friday of January each year and that it would be listed on the fall and winter hike schedule as the last activity.

We hope to put in the next issue of Smoke & Blazes a request for more hike leaders and more suggestions for places to go on our next schedule.

Janet Martin made a motion, seconded by Frederica Welch, to contribute $5.00 to the Tamarack Notch-Aitken Forest Assoc., and it was approved.

It was suggested that stamps be purchased for one year's postage on Smoke & Blazes to eliminate one step in preparing the mailing.

Paul Howard offered to make placards for each shelter inviting persons to become members of the Killington Section. We want to thank him very much for his offer, but after much discussion it was felt that notices attached to the front of the shelter registers would do as well.

Thelma Valiquette led a discussion on the duties and work of a Membership Committee.

Frances Roberts shall be asked to have dues notice outlined in black for emphasis.

Directors' Meeting notices shall be sent to Smoke & Blazes.

Trustees shall vote as directed by the majority of section members.

A special meeting will be held on Friday, March 29, at 7:30 p.m. at the Universalist-Unitarian Church, 117 West St., Rutland, to discuss the question of an Executive Secretary which was tabled at our last regular meeting. And also, we hope to have Mrs. Jean Davis of Betsy Cox Camp discuss the Pittsford Ice Cave Fund.

A motion was made by Janet Martin and seconded by Fredrica Welch to make a donation to this fund. The amount is to be decided by the Section members.

Respectfully submitted,
W. Churchill Scott
Secretary, K.S.G.M.C.

NOTE: The Resolution Page 3 regarding the acquisition of an Executive Secretary is printed below in order to familiarize Section members with the question to be voted upon at the Special Meeting on March 29 at 7:30 p.m. in the Universalist-Unitarian Church, 117 West St., Rutland.

RESOLUTION

Whereas the Executive Secretary of an organization receives, reads, and answers most of the mail; works in the nerve center of the organization; sees and counsels various visitors; often supervises all publications, and in general directs much of the activities: and

Whereas an Executive Secretary usually remains in office for years while the elected officers come and go: and

Whereas an Executive Secretary is apt to become the dominating force in an organization and such would radically change the tradition and character of the Green Mountain Club: and

Whereas the expense of the office would necessitate continued and concentrated effort to recruit new members and other sources of income, thereby creating a larger, unwieldy organization with huge budgets: and

Whereas the extra work of the President that has occurred in the past few years could be handled by one or two competent regular secretaries: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Killington Section go on record as being opposed to any change in the by-laws of the Green Mountain Club which would create a position for an Executive Secretary.

CONGRATULATIONS go to Bob Carey on his spring and summer hike schedule. However, Bob is sending out an S.O.S. for more hike suggestions and leaders for the remainder of the year. His address is 78 Church St., Rutland, Vt. 05701, Tel. 775-5720. MORE HIKES, MORE LEADERS. MORE HIKES. MORE LEADERS.

The annual meeting of the Killington Section of the Green Mountain Club was held on Feb. 1, 1974, at the C.V.P.S. Corp. meeting rooms. There were 43 members and guests present.

Pres. Secor opened the 62nd (we believe) annual meeting at 7:15 p.m. with praise for the good job that Frances Roberts, Editor-in-Chief, and Betty Weeks have done on Smoke & Blazes.

Terry Gulick gave a report on the Trustees' Meeting. Also explained that new-comers do not know the location of the Koltonski Fire Station where our hikes begin. This should be clarified in hike notices to the paper and in Smoke & Blazes.

It was suggested that letters of appreciation be written to Peggy Pons who is resigning as editor of The Long Trail News after many competent years.

Jim Frink spoke on outings he has chaired, and how well his hard work has paid off in larger attendance.

Miss Hinchey, Corresponding Secretary of the GMC, was introduced.

The terms of Jim Frink, Ray Secor and Churchill Scott as directors ended, and Vera Perkins, Thelma Valiquette, and Churchill Scott were elected to serve for 3 years on the Board.

Richard Roberts suggested that a nominating committee be appointed, and this will be followed at the next meeting.

Terry Gulick introduced Gardiner Lane, Presidential Assistant, who spoke about the GMC, its growth and increasing problems as years go by. An estimated 50,000 hikers annually use this public service; 10,000 Guide Books sold; there are over 3,000 members-at-large, and half of the LT is on Federal or State Land. These were the highlights of Gardiner's talk. Mr. Lane has spent much time in obtaining land acquisition agreements with private land owners, and this is now nearly finished.

Ray discussed a resolution on an executive secretary. Wes read same, and spoke at length about it. Betty Weeks suggested we go slow on the matter for the Club has grown greatly and it is difficult to find a person willing to do the work for free. Terry added that we may not be able to find a president who will serve without remuneration due to the large amount of travel and paper work required.

Ray received many reports of poor trail conditions due to the Club's worry about other subjects than trails and shelters. Old time members are becoming disillusioned and turning away.

Wes Weston stated that he does not favor a big push for large membership and the accompanying increase of dues due to increased budget and inflation. He spoke of the dual responsibility of Clarendon Bridge, and the importance of replacing it soon.

Lloyd Weeks made a motion to table the resolution, and it was seconded by Peter Palen. The motion was carried. It was suggested that a job description be written up for an executive secretary.

Gardiner Lane conveyed a message from the Burlington Section for a joint hike to the Pittsford Ice Caves, and the date they suggested was June 16.

The meeting was adjourned at 9:20. It was followed by a pleasant social hour in charge of Janet and Vera. This hour is the most enjoyable part of our annual meeting, and it should happen more often. Our thanks again to all the ladies.

Respectfully submitted,
W. Churchill Scott
Secretary, K3GMC

HIKE REPORTS

Tinker Brook Shelter, Mar. 2. There were 15 hikers, including myself. The road was closed to traffic so we had to hike from Rte. 100. Of course, we had planned to, anyway.

The weather was nice, but not much snow. At the shelter we built a hot fire and had hot water within minutes. The shelter is in a very beautiful spot, with the pines, but it is quite a drop down to the water in Tinker Brook.

We returned the same way, and all agreed that it was a good outing.

Robert Carey, Outing Chairman Sunnyside, Jan. 19. Lou Catozzi, Bob Carey, John Braddock and I departed about 11 a.m. for an overnight hike to Sunnyside. We found the camp in good order, with ample firewood. The weather turned out to be beautiful, and snow was plentiful. Mid-afternoon brought a group of 9 Boy Scouts and their leader from the Brattleboro area. This made a total of 14 over-nighters, a bit crowded to say the least, but a bunch of happy kids.

In the morning the Scouts left and we had only a matter of moments to tidy up the camp before the GMC hikers were scheduled to arrive. By the time they --Churchill Scott, Doc Howard, Wes Weston and others--did arrive, we had the "old" coffee pot on and water hot for drinks. With side hikes, hot drinks, sandwiches and good conversation, a good time was had by all.

Northam to Plymouth, Mar. 16. Wet snow and wind greeted the 13 hardy souls that gathered by the Fire Station. After a bit of discussion we all drove to Plymouth with the plan to spot a couple of cars. The conditions were so bad that by the time Plymouth was reached we parked at Round Top and hiked from there.

After crossing Great Roaring Brook we found a sheltered spot for lunch in some evergreens. As most of the group then wanted to hike a bit farther, we continued west. At two and a half miles, according to Mauri's pedometer, we turned around and retraced our steps.

The drive home was an ordeal, but as soon as Sherburne Pass was reached the snow changed to rain. Hopefully we can take this walk again as this is a very interesting and historical area.

MANY HELPING HANDS

Alerted by Churchill Scott who, the morning of April 10, was notified of some missing hikers following a near 2-foot snowfall, a group of young GMC'ers, Churchill and Terry Gulick met at the Rutland State Police Barracks to prepare to locate them.

Along with members of the Vermont State Police, US Forest Service, and snowmobile volunteers, search parties were organized and located at various points to be taken into the Long Trail between Sherburne Pass and Brandon Gap. One group was set to enter at Sherburne Pass, others were at the jeep road going into Rolston's Rest from Rte. 100, and still others prepared to come in from other side roads, if necessary. Concentrating on the southern portion was the initial goal.

Meanwhile, clouds lifted and a helicopter from Plattsburgh Air Base, retained by our State Police, ended the search by locating the hikers, three 15-yr. old girls from Long Island, who were walking in the Rolston Rest-Noyes Pond area when seen by the pilot and Joe Sposta of the USFS, who guided the pilot.

According to reports, the girls were not lost, but stayed at Rolston's Rest during the storm. Concern from worried parents brought out the search party. One report suggested that there was reluctance from one girl about leaving.

GMC participants besides Churchill and Terry included Kate Tarbell of Wallingford, John and William Dunkle, N. Y. Section members and two of their friends, all from Staten Island, N. Y. The four boys abandoned a scheduled 5-day, 50-mile hike the day of the storm at Rte. 9 Bennington, because of the deep snow, but not until they hiked 5 miles from Congdon Camp during the storm. Proper preparations and experience prevented any discomforts. Their hike had started Sunday at Blackington, Mass.

CALIFORNIA END-TO-END'ERS

Four members of the California Branch of the Killington Section of the Green Mountain Club have earned end-to-end recognition for completing their trek along the John Muir Trail in California. They are Mr. and Mrs. Bob Perkins and their children, Polly and Tim, all of San Jose, Calif. Perkins is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Craig Perkins of Mendon. The John Muir Trail runs for 210 miles through the High Sierra from Yosemite Valley to the Summit of Mt. Whitney. The Perkins's hike was undertaken on four-and five-day trips begun in 1964.

(The above was clipped from the Rutland Herald, April 4, 1974, and sent to Smoke & Blazes by President Weston as an item of interest to many members of the Section.)

HIKE REPORTS

Sugar-on-Snow Party, April 6. About 17 attended and we were disappointed that there were not more. Usually this event draws twice that number. I built a fire up at the sugar house but no one seemed too interested, so we congregated in the house for the goodies. And goodies they were!

We put the syrup on at about 9 a.m. and between Fredrica Welch and Ardelle Blood, the pot was watched with an eagle eye until about 1:30. We had considerable syrup left over and we worked another 2-3 hours and made enough maple spread to fill 10 plastic bowls, all of which now have GMC labels on them. Churchill and I will keep this and we can use it at the covered dish supper or at the next Annual Meeting.

I believe future Sugar-on-Snow parties would attract more people if held indoors in the evening.

Harold Howard, KS, GMC

Haystack Mt., Apr. 20. Eleven cheery souls (with two little dogs belonging to Wes Weston) trekked up Pawlet's "Little Gibraltar" on a perfect spring day.

The old coach road, which used to run almost to the top, turned into steep going after a little bit, but the hike was leisurely and most pleasant for all.

The view from the bald summit, known in the 19th century as one of the finest panoramas in Vermont, was almost hazeless, and included peaks from Pico to Little Killington.

After lunch in the warm, drowsy sun, we picked our way down through the still bare woods and split up. A very rewarding trip!

Zane Rodriguez

Work Party, May 4. The trail was checked and cleared from Sunnyside Camp to the Lower Cold River Road.

Wilbur Weston, Ian Wark and Al Reiner cleared from Rte. 103 via the covered bridge by-pass to Sunnyside.

Churchill Scott and Carl Schmidt started at the Lower Cold River Road and met Mauri Wintturi, Lew, Joey, and Billy Catozzi coming from the Lottery Road. Mauri did considerable blazing.

Yours Truly met the leaders of a Girl Scout troop at Route 140 who were supposed to clear from there north to Sunnyside. The project was called off because of threatening rain. (It turned out to be a beautiful day.) They plan to do that action on May 18. I had the coffee pot boiling when all congregated at Sunnyside at 1:00 p.m.

On the drive up to the trail south of the covered bridge, we were all treated to the sight of two wild turkeys.

We had a great time and accomplished a lot. We plan to do from the Lower Cold River Road to Governor Clement Shelter the next time.

Work parties can be fun, you know! Don't let the word "work" scare you!

Cantilever Rock, May 11. The Cantilever Rock hike to Mt. Mansfield turned out a few sturdy hikers for a very enjoyable trip.

Louise Mumford, Jim Frink, Bob Carey, Mauri Wintturi, Kim and Churchill Scott arrived at the Underhill State Park area about 11:30 a.m., so it was planned to eat first. Due to a long spell of rain we almost had a repetition of the Pico Trip but after lots of huffing and puffing we had a boiling pot of water.

Jim drove up the old C.C. road to the Sunset Ridge Trail, then an easy walk .5 miles to the C. Rock Trail. Then only .2 miles to our destination, a very spectacular rock formation. A number of pictures were taken and before long we started for home.

Plans were made for a hike (perhaps this fall) for a round trip using the Sunset Ridge Trail, the Long Trail along Mt. Mansfield, Butler Lodge, and Stevensville. If so, we hope to see more interested persons along for the trip.

Kim S. Scott

Work Party, May 18. We had planned to clear the trail from Lower Cold River Road to Governor Clement, however, a couple of days ago Scherwin Start called and said he had cleared that section and except for being muddy, it was in good condition. Many thanks, Scherwin!

The Bucklin trail had had little attention for years, and was considered to be our next most urgent problem. Rob Carey, Douglas Landon, Pam Kerstner, Lew Catozzi and I proceeded to Brewers Corners. The entire trail was cleared and pronounced in good shape.

Jim Frink was at the fire station to see us off. However, he was headed for the annual Mt. Ascutney hike and regretfully could not join us.

Pittsford Ice Caves, June 16. The hike to the Pittsford Ice Caves was a well attended, quite successful hike. It was a joint hike with the Killington and Burlington Sections, and because of the 37 members and guests that attended, I am not going to go into a list of names.

The Killington Section met as usual, at the Koltonski Fire Station in Rutland, and proceeded to Pittsford and the hike up the slope and ravine to the entrance to the cave. The planned meeting with the Burlington Section at the entrance of the State Police Academy in Pittsford could be called the only flaw in the plans. This writer understood that the meeting place was the Police Barracks in Rutland, and led three other cars to that point. After due conversation there, and just plain logic, we decided an error was made and proceeded to the trail to the caves. It was later that I learned that the meeting place was in Pittsford. However, an hour after the Killington Section's arrival at the caves, the Burlington Section hikers began to arrive, well equipped to rope themselves to the lower sections of the caves whereas the Killington members were not so equipped.

Of the 37 hikers, Killington Section was represented with 14, and the remainder from the Burlington Section. The lack of water there eliminated the old coffee pot and hot drinks, but we all had a fine lunch, and between the thermos bottles and Kool Aid bottles that were there, enough liquid was found to devour our sandwiches.

I am sure that Killington Section would have been better represented but for summer commitments that some of our leading members had. I would call this hike a complete success, and the little rain that fell, I am sure, did not dampen the enjoyment of all.

Paul Howard

Pancake Breakfast, Mar. 23. On a beautiful snowy winter morning we drove to Rutland and picked up Judi before continuing up to Tall Timbers to attend the pancake breakfast. We were surprised to find that we were the first to arrive in spite of our long trip from Springfield. Craig Perkins welcomed us in the recreation hall where we sat around the stove waiting for others to arrive. Soon about a dozen hungry GMC'ers came in carrying all the fixin's for a delicious breakfast. Pancakes, bacon, eggs, fried potatoes and sausage along with good hot coffee, congenial company and Carl Schmidt's wonderful cooking made it a memorable occasion.

After breakfast some of the more hardy hiked or snowshoed up the Tall Timbers road. (Undoubtedly trying to work off all those calories!)

Betty Weeks

White Rocks, June 2. The hike to White Rocks brought out eleven hikers on a beautiful but buggy day. We drove up to the farmhouse at the end of the road and hiked up the Long Trail to Greenwall Shelter where we rested a bit before continuing the climb. The woods were full of spring flowers which some enjoyed identifying.

By the time we reached the turn-off we were so far apart that we didn't realize that some had failed to see the side trail sign and had continued on the Long Trail. We didn't miss the hikers until we reached the view. We were quite relieved when the lost hikers arrived as we were finishing lunch.

Since the bugs threatened to eat us before we could eat our lunch, we ate hastily and hurried back down the trail to the cars.

FIRST PRIZE WINNER

Joe Baxter, 4th grader at Park St. School in Springfield, won first prize in a reading contest, and from a long list of prize possibilities (including a free movie ticket or a free sundae at Idlenot) chose an overnight on the Long Trail. So, your Editors, Betty Weeks and Frances Roberts, took him, along with Betty's grandson, Keith Abbott, to Sunnyside on Monday, June 24.

Joe had a wonderful time, even though it rained almost constantly, and he wants to become a GMC member and go on all the hikes!

Section members might be interested in the situation we found at Sunnyside. Shortly after we arrived a 27-member Boy Scout troop came in. Betty (as a good GMC member and ex-trustee) took the Leader aside and pointed out a few GMC rules, such as no campfires other than in the main fire circle. The Leader said Yes, he had shown the film we put out for youth groups; however, he still was unaware that such large contingents were not encouraged to stay at the shelters.

The boys were great, and the Leader certainly had them well organized. Really, the only complaint we had was that three patrols set up camp along the banks of Sunnyside's water supply. There were temporary fireplaces in that area, and no doubt the scouts thought it was all right to camp there. Betty and I feel strongly that this area near the spring should be posted and made unattractive as a camping spot. A few boulders strategically placed, for example.

In all, there were 37 campers at Sunnyside, and on a Monday night in June! Luckily, Betty and I both have mountain tents which we could use. Three other parties used the shelter, and the scouts camped out.

Although it is generally believed that most LT hikers are not members, it was interesting to find out that nearly all the hikers we saw on that trip were GMC'ers--including the scouts.

We all had an interesting camnout, visiting with people from Florida, Ohio and Colorado--that's how it is on the LT nowadays. However, somehow large groups of people such as the 27 scouts should get the message that they cannot be accomodated at our shelters.

*MANY INTERESTING HIKEs ARE IN THE WORKS. WATCH THE PAPERS AND CONSULT THE NEW SCHEDULE SOON TO REACH YOU.**

THERE'S BAR IN THEM THAR HILLS!

Would you like to hear a bear story? Lloyd and Betty Weeks can tell you one.

It seems one dark and rainy night they pitched their mountain tent in the wilds of the Adirondaks, thinking they were alone. They tucked their packs in the tent with them out of the rain, and socked out as soon as they sacked in.

In the darkness before the dawn something woke them up. By the time Lloyd had unsacked and groped out, there was nothing there but the evidence--a knocked-down Space Blanket they had used as a tarp with absolutely, positively, no doubt about it bear-clawed holes in it.

Lloyd reconstructs that the night visitor had slapped at the tarp to get at the food supply--which was in the tent just below--but was frightened off (possibly by a loud snore?).

Well, that's what they get for leaving the Long Trail to hike in the Adirondaks.

F. Roberts

NEXT SMOKE & BLAZES DEADLINE IS DEC. 15. SEE P. 4 FOR PLACE TO SEND NEWS.

DIRECTORS' MEETING

A meeting of the Board of Directors of the Killington Section of the Green Mountain Club was held at the home of Mr. Weston on Fri., Sept. 20, 1974.

Present were Mr. Weston, Frederica Welch, Janet Martin, Vera Perkins, Teen Palen and Churchill Scott. Also attending were Peter Palen, Paul Howard, Mauri Wintturi and Sherwin Start.

Was discussed a letter sent to the Directors during the summer in lieu of a meeting, and the questions it contained. A number of By-Law changes were mentioned. Art. #3 - All dues shall be paid by April 1. Art. #11 - Annual Meeting shall be held on the 3rd Saturday in January to nominate and elect directors. (Ed. note: It was suggested at the last annual meeting that a nominating committee be chosen so that a slate of officers could be presented at Annual Meetings.) Art. #5 - Length of term of officers should be deleted.

Vera stressed that persons elected to the Board of Trustees should be aware of the responsibility of attending meetings and taking an active part in the Club.

Paul Howard spoke on the following shelter conditions: Tucker-Johnson, good. Pico needs new stove pipe and Pico Ski Area rescue sled moved off roof. Tamarack in good shape. Gov. Clement has new wooden lower bunks. Clarendon is clean and good. Sunnyside needs new floor. It is hoped it will be repaired before winter.

Mr. Start accepted office of Trails Chairman. During the summer he has worked many hours cleaning and improving Trail. Also, he hopes to contact land owners and get permission to pass Trail at all hazardous points.

Mr. Weston spoke of danger with new bridge due to the long space between upright cables. The feeling is that there must be some protection to prevent any accidents before the snow and ice season begins.

The annual dues were discussed. With receipts and expenses about even, it was considered best to leave them as last year. Also, any dues money received after Oct. 1 shall be credited to the following year.

Janet Martin told of her latest talks with Mrs. Davies regarding the Pittsford Ice Caves Fund. The owner of the property has said that the building is for sale also, and it is hoped that enough funds can be raised to purchase this natural area and preserve it for the future.

Mr. Start explained the work of the Youth Conservation Corps located at the Mt. Tabor area.

Mr. Weston spoke of discontent and friction between the Main Club and the Sections. He suggested two remedies. 1) Transmit all responsibility to Sections, and when the Sections were unable to deal with problems to ask the Main Club for help and assistance. 2) Pay all dues to Main Club, eliminate Sections and let the Main Club take over all responsibilities. Mr. Weston will draft a letter to the other Sections to get other opinions.

Respectfully Submitted

Tinmouth Channel, June 30. Three canoes and six hardy canoeists met under threatening skies for a canoe trip on Tinmouth Channel. By the time we had reached the launching point at a culvert in the north end of the town of Tinmouth the skies had cleared. At first glance this looked like an unlikely place to launch canoes. To the north the small rocky stream plunged rapidly down hill to become the headwaters of the Clarendon River.

We carried canoes down the steep bank and paddled south in a clear, alder lined stream. Avoiding rocks in the shallow waters, we soon reached deeper, wider stretches where the channel meandered through marshes and old beaver meadows. There are about four miles of canoeable waters here.

Many interesting water plants grow in the shallow waters, and small trout darted to hide in them. Clumps of yellow and blue iris were frequently seen, and yellow pond lilies lined the waterway.

We enjoyed glimpses of an occasional Virginia Rail running through the tall swamp grasses. The views of mountains beyond the marshes make this a scenic trip.

At one point an old beaver dam blocked the way, and we balanced precariously on the top to pull the canoes to the other side.

About noon we lashed the canoes together and ate lunch before returning. Aided by wind and good current, we soon reached the cars at the culvert.

Chataguay Area Hike, July 6. On Saturday, July 6, Doc Howard led a hike to the Chataguay Area. We all met at Doc's house and were on our way about 9:30. Albert Reinez, Bob Carey, Roberta and Sherman Start, Carl Schmidt, Louise Munford, Doc Howard and I made up the group.

When we arrived at the Chataguay Area we met some townspeople repairing the road. Some beavers built a dam, and with the help of the flood, forced the water over the road. After watching the road repair crew for a while, we started hiking. We hiked for about 2 1/2 miles. When we stopped for lunch we saw a beautiful pond.

On the way down we looked through an old house that had burned down to nothing. From there we hiked on the Appalachian Trail and down to the dirt road to where the hike started.

The weather was perfect for hiking and we all had a very good time.

Pam Kerstner

Herrick Mountain, July 27. I led this hike and we did not get lost, although we did not get any view from the ridge. We found that it is possible to climb Herrick Mountain, but the chances of a view from it are slim. I think exploration hikes should be considered in the future.

Robert Carey

Mt. Carmel, August 3. This hike was led by Mauri Wintturi. We made good time to the Camp. There we had lunch and the more ambitious then continued to the summit. We had reports that the tower was unsafe, so we climbed it with extreme caution but found it safe. Unfortunately the view was very limited because of incoming clouds. All twelve of us returned from that hike also. R. Carey

Gov. Clement Shelter, Work Party, (Unscheduled), Aug. 10. In less than three hours Wes Weston (Rascal and Sport), Bob Carey, Paul Howard, Jr., Lou Catozzi and I, accomplished a task that should have been done years ago, in this writer's opinion.

Departing from Rutland in a L&W drive pick-up, loaded with pre-cut lumber, nails and tools, at some time after 1:00 p.m., we drove to the shelter, and with the assistance of some willing hikers (there were many on the trail that day) the lumber was unloaded & our work party proceeded to cover the worn-out lower wire mesh bunks with a "platform" type bunk, the popular type in today's hiking.

Wes, Bob, Lou and Paul all pounded nails to their heart's content, while I engineered the job. After the platform was completed, due to weak structure of the upper bunks, and using 2X6's, we reinforced the upper bunks, making them durable for another several years.

We were back in Rutland by 4:00 p.m., very satisfied that the job was done, and all agreed that this was not "labor," but more darn fun than a regular scheduled hike.

Paul R. Howard,
Shelters Chairman

Grampa's Knob, Aug. 18. This hike was changed to Gov. Clément Shelter where we inspected the new bunks. All found them satisfactory. This hike proved that one never knows what to expect on a hike. Just after we left the triangle a bear crossed the road ahead of us. You never know what you might miss if you don't go on the hikes.

THE FOLLOWING POEM was sent in to Smoke & Blazes by Paul Howard with the comment, "Although it does not pertain to the GMC, I like it and you may find some use for it in your publication." Many GMC'ers will like it, too.

THE MAN IN THE GLASS

When you get what you want in your struggle for self
And the world makes you king for a day,
Just go to a mirror and look at yourself, and see
What that man has to say.

For it isn't your parents, your children, or wife
Who judgement upon you must pass;
The fellow whose verdict counts most in your life
Is the one staring back from the glass.

Some people may think you're a straight-shooting chum
And call you a wonderful guy;
But the man in the glass says you're only a bum
If you can't look him straight in the eye.

He's the fellow to please, never mind all the rest,
For he's with you clear up to the end;
And you've passed your most dangerous, difficult test
If the man in the glass is your friend.

You may fool the whole world down the pathway of life
And get pats on your back as you pass;
But your final reward will be heartache and tears
If you've cheated the man in the glass.

HAVE YOU SEEN the write-up about hiking on the Long Trail in New England Sportsman Magazine, (Vol. 1, No. 2, March/April 1974)? Dexter Goulston tells of a 70-mile trip he took with his son and a German Shepherd in September of 1972. The blurb introducing the article makes this statement. "The 'Long Trail' between Mt. Horrid and Camel's Hump is famous for its porcupines, history wonderful scenery and not so reliable weather." Several colorful photos illustrate the article.

In his story, Mr. Goulston describes the painful results of a dog/porky encounter while on the Trail. In this same magazine, (published two years too late to help the Goulstons) is an article about the many uses of baking soda, including that of aiding in the removal of quills from a dog's nose. According to the author, Robert I. Ward, a mixture of 1 cup of vinegar and 2 tsp. baking soda applied gently on the quills at 3 ten-minute intervals will soften the lime and calcium composition of the quills and make them shrink. You can then remove the quills with very little discomfort. With so many dogs bounding along on our GMC hikes, it's good to know about this. An emergency supply in one's day pack might well be worth packing.

PROPOSED BY-LAW CHANGES

Article V of the By-laws of the Killington Section of the Green Mountain Club, Inc., reads as follows:

"The term of office of the Directors shall be three years, with three Directors elected each year. A Director who has served two terms may not be re-elected until after a lapse of one year."

The proposed change, approved by the Board of Directors for submission to the voting members, would delete the second sentence. The article would then read,

"The term of office of the Directors shall be three years, with three Directors elected each year."

Article XI of the By-laws reads as follows:

The Annual Meeting shall be held in January to nominate and to elect Directors, hear reports of the Officers and Trustees, plan for the coming year and to transact any other appropriate business."

The proposed change, also approved by the Board of Directors for consideration would be the insertion of the words "on the third Saturday," and the By-law would then read,

"The Annual Meeting shall be held on the third Saturday in January to nominate and to elect Directors, hear reports of the Officers and Trustees, plan for the coming year and to transact any other appropriate business."

These proposed changes will be voted upon at the Annual Meeting, January 18, at the Universalist,-Unitarian Church in Rutland.

HIKE REPORTS

Mt. Hunger, Oct. 5! Located east of the Green Mts. is the Worcester Range. It stretches from Mt. Elmore, near Morrisville, south to Waterbury. Mt. Hunger is situated in the middle of the Worcesters, rising to an elevation of 3539 feet.

Three early risers, Mrs. Rachel Charland, Mauri Wintturi, and Lou Gatozzi met my father, Donald Rice, and ~~no~~ early Saturday morning in Waterbury. A short drive followed which brought us to the base of Mt. Hunger. The trail rises steadily for roughly 2 1/2 miles, paralleling a stream. A short distance from the trail a small but beautiful waterfall greets the inquisitor's eyes.

The summit is rocky, open, and supplies a near 360° view. Unfortunately, Saturday wasn't a sparkling, clear day. A haze had muted the clarity of view. To the east, the White Mts. rise. Mt. Washington, barely visible, was white capped. The Green Mts. lay west of us, stretching in an endless conglomeration of ridges and valleys. Autumn dressed the nearer slopes in rich yellows and golds.

A stray white Huskie pup, begging for a free handout, reminded us of Mt. Hunger's reputation; our growling stomachs told us that it was time for lunch!

Descending was much easier and a delight. Many leaves had already dropped. Their scuffing and rich odor brought us to the realization that fall had quietly slipped in and was discreetly slipping away.

Rachael, Maurri, and Lou joined my family for an informal dinner in Stowe. Many a tale was told, which topped off a warm and relaxing day.

I'd be more than willing to lead another hike--perhaps in the spring. Perhaps Lou, Maurri or Rachael can entice more of you up!

Krisanne Rice

Silver Lake, Oct. 12. Five adults and Mr. Schmidt's delightful two year old made the trip to Silver Lake--the little girl via back pack. By spotting a car at Lake Dunmore we were able to make the circle from Route 73 down by the Falls of Lana, always worth a visit.

It was interesting to find that the path from Rte. 73, unsigned and unnamed last summer, now has a Forest Service sign at the road and has been named the "Leicester Hollow Trail." This trail follows a narrow valley well supplied with large boulders--a more attractive route than the route from the parking lot off the Goshen-Rinton Road. The trail from Lake Dunmore has also been graded. The only "fly" in the day's ointment was the car, that, in spite of signs and gates, had managed to get in with a camping party! I wonder if they felt the heat from our combined heightened blood-pressure!

In spite of the car, though, it was a very pleasant trip to a very scenic area.

Doris Newton

Covered Dish Supper, Oct. 19. The supper was held this year at Tamarack Notch. It being a cool day and the cabin being already warmed up for Girl Scout training, it was held in the Rotary Cabin--a bit snug but certainly more comfortable than the fireplace could have gotten the Lodge in a couple of hours.

A few hearty souls came early and took a hike along a beautiful old road high above the east side of the Cold River which came out at an old favorite--McLaughlin's Falls. We wished there had been time to poke around some old farms along the way--a row of maples along the road were estimated to be 60-100 years old. We returned to camp by the Wheelerville Rd. past a small old cemetery dating back about 100 years when this land was all small hill farms--just before the great migration.

When we arrived back at camp, most of the others had arrived, the food was spread before us and all enjoyed what had been provided by the various people. It is continually a source of amazement to me that we end up with as well balanced a meal with so little coordination--but we always seem to!

The Bennett Bells were welcome old faces that we hadn't seen for some time.

This mountain, located in the Curtis Hollow area south of Bridgewater, got its name from the fact that during the 1870-80 sheen raising period the whole mountain was bare. As years went by the forests grew back and now from the valley the summit looks completely covered.

On a cool, clear November day, Carl, Mauri, Rachael, Anna, Harold, John Hughes and Churchill started our hike with very little knowledge of what to do or where to go. With a lot of discussion, help from the topo map and advice from a friendly logger, we went the right way. As we passed what we thought was the last water another lively discussion about stopping for lunch ensued. Some said, "No coffee, eat at the top," others, "Let's have coffee." Also would we get too lazy after lunch and not be out of the woods by dark. Finally, coffee won.

After lunch we continued on a wood road, and only about the last half mile was bushwhacking necessary. As we broke out on the summit it was open, with grass and ledge combining to give a 360° view. Mt. Monadnock, Ascutney, the main Green Mt. Range were all visible.

A steep drop along an old stone fence soon brought us to the wood road and our cars.

It would be more enjoyable if more folks were able to go on these trips and enjoy the fresh air and sunshine, but we can always hope that as time goes by our section will be better known.

According to the topo, an approach from the east would be about 1 mile with an 800' rise in elevation as compared with 1 3/4 mi. and 1200' rise the way we went. It will be interesting to explore the eastern hike next time.

Churchill Scott

East Mountain, Nov. 10. About 50 hikers led by Joe Valiquette hiked East Mt. in Mendon and placed a flag on the summit in memory of Harold Valiquette who was a very active member of the Green Mt. Club. East Mt. was said to be his favorite spot.

A motorcade of about 10 cars transported the group up Killington Avenue and around the mountain to the east side. The climb was fairly easy and we made it to the top in about an hour. Although the valley was hazy the view from the summit was beautiful. Below us we could see all of Rutland area, and off in the distance the Adirondacks.

The hike took about 2 1/2 hours in all with time out for coffee and a snack. All in all it was a fine day and everyone enjoyed the hike.

We were very pleased to find an article and pictures of our hike in the Vermont Sunday News dated November 24.

Eileen Valiquette

Mt. Independence, Nov. 22. Five members met at Koltonski's fire station and later drove to Mt. Independence entrance for a hike. Some snow had fallen so it wasn't easy to follow the various routes, yet we were able to find the monuments and the Horseshoe Battery site. Members enjoyed their lunch at the edge of Lake Champlain. While coffee boiled some of the members read about the background of the historical site --the book was Mt. Independence, by Joseph Wheeler. A new book will be forthcoming which will contain additional historical facts about this side as well as marked trails.

Rachael Charland

Fox Lot, or A Tale of the Three Little Kittens, Dec. 7. It was good to see Mauri here at the park to lead the hike up to the Fox Lot. Mauri, Harold, Pam, Carl, Jim, Rachael, Wes, Carol and Churchill spotted cars at the Rte. 100 crossing, drove up Lincoln Hill past the Adams farm where we saw the large vats to be used on the Saltash Mt. maple syrup project which will be one of the world's largest.

We parked on the Lottery Road, walked past the Shrewsbury Town House, or Poor Farm, and to the height of land. Here we turned west, bushwhacked about 1/2 mi. passing by many tracks (deer, rabbit, fox, bobcat, porxie and numerous smaller game). At last we broke out to an open area where a beautiful view was obtained. To the south, Stratton, Dorset, West Herrick, Handley, North Bloodroot, and Carmel could be seen.

After eating a late lunch in company with a group of boys and leaders from Gardiner, Mass., we headed for home.

The last carload took time out to visit the new bridge over Mill River and one can ask this group more about the parable of the Three Little Kittens, if interested.

KILLINGTON SECTION HISTORY STARTED

Efforts to compile historical information on the life of the Killington Section began at a December meeting with Past President Craigue Perkins, his wife Mary, Sec.-Treas. Churchill Scott and Trustee Terry Gulick during which recollections and questions were listed. The gathering was in response to G.M.C. Historian Ralph Bryant who is coordinating work on a History of the Club and its Sections.

Armed with Craigue's complete set of Smoke & Blazes (Sept. 1947-Dec. 1974), his guide books and notes, Terry has the awesome task of putting together material for inclusion in the G.M.C. History. Needed still, however, is documentary or first hand knowledge of the Section's origins and early years (1912? to 1917 or later).

Anyone having information, papers, and interesting stories about the Killington Section may correspond with Terry Gulick, RFD 1, Springfield, or Churchill Scott, 132 Maple St., Rutland.

Possibly the story of the Blue Triangle Camp and its travels will be included as well as mention of the famous coffee pot and the debate between the "scourers" and "non-scourers."

KILLINGTON SECTION TRAILS REPORT

During the summer our entire section was checked by various members and pronounced in good shape. The opinion of many hikers was obtained and found favorable as were many notes left in registers. Several called it the best maintained section in the state. The following are from my notes.

April 20, 21. Mauri Winturri checked trail and painted places from 103 to Beacon Hill.

(Work parties on May 4 and 18 have already been reported on in Smoke & Blazes.)

The trash barrel at the Upper Cold River road was checked and emptied a number of times. Seems these barrels are always full.

May 26. Sherwin Start dug a new out-house pit at Tucker-Johnson and between 5/30 and 6/5 he checked and cleared trail from Sherburne Pass to Cooper Lodge.

On July 3, 14, and 15, Ardell Blood and I checked the trail from Sherburne Pass to Tamarack Shelter, and then the Shrewsbury trail to Northam. This latter trail needs some clearing, but the Farm and Wilderness Camp have assumed responsibility for this area.

Respectfully submitted,
Harold Howard

OUTING SCHEDULE, SPRING & SUMMER, 1975

Although we have had a number of offers to lead hikes, we hope to have more folks willing to take us to new areas. Suggestions have been made for 3-day weekend End-to-End trips, hikes in the White and Adirondack Mts., and even up to Katahdin and Baxter State Park.

Let's all come prepared to discuss the possibilities at our Annual Meeting on Saturday, Jan. 18.

DEADLINE FOR NEXT ISSUE OF SMOKE & BLAZES IS MARCH 15. Send news to Mrs. Frances H. Roberts, 2 Hill Place, Springfield Vt., 05156, by that date.

The following letter from Frank Bequart, 44 Bertwell Rd., Lexington, MA 02173, should be of concern to Section members.

"I thought that you might be interested in my experience in hiking the Killington Section in late May of this year particularly in relation to your article in the last Long Trail News. Three boys and myself hiked from Mad Tom Notch to Sherburne Pass on May 24 through 27 of this year. On the way we ran into a large number of Boy Scouts. At Gov. Clement Shelter we found the Shelter completely full of Scouts and had to camp outside. Apparently this appearance of the scouts is a yearly event (or so I gathered from the leaders I talked to). One group starts at Sherburne Pass and heads south and the other starts just south of Greenwall and heads north. They all met in the middle (probably about 20 of them) at Gov. Clement Shelter. The scouts were from somewhere in New York.

Other than the fact that they planned their trip so they totally overloaded one shelter, I had no real complaint about them. The boys seemed pretty well behaved and the leadership okay (although I would have had more leaders per group.) I just felt you should be aware that this operation goes on in your Section over Memorial Day weekend.

Let me add that we found the trail in good shape and very easy to follow in your Section, particularly the reroute over Killington.

We need your help to plan activities for the coming year. Please fill out this form, tear off and bring to the Annual Meeting or send to Churchill Scott, 132 Maple St., Rutland, Vt. 05701.

COMING OUTINGS

Note: Koltonski Fire Station where hikers meet is adjacent to Main St. (Rte. 7) Park in Rutland.

Sat., Mar. 29, 6 p.m., SUGAR-ON-SNOW
Universalist-Unitarian Church. Watch papers for details.

Sat., April 12, 9 a.m., ECHO AMPHI-THEATER, Anne Mausolf, Leader. Meet at the fire station. Anne has offered to lead this hike to an interesting area on the old Elbow Road that few people know about. This may be the mud season, so let's wear appropriate footwear and warm clothing, and bring a good lunch.

Fri.-Sun., April 25-27, JAY PEAK AREA,
Kim and Churchill Scott, Leaders. This is a trip planned to help End-to-End hikers get over the northern part of the Long Trail, especially Wes. If too much snow, there are a number of lower areas to cover. Let's have a good turnout.

Sun., May 4, 10 a.m., WALLACE LEDGE,
Robert Gibbs, Leader. This is a new area for most of us, and Mr. Gibbs states that very interesting rock crystals and spring flowers should be found. This is an easy walk with good views of the Taconic Mts. and the Adirondacks. Meet first at the fire station.

Fri.-Sun., May 9, 10, 11, DERRYBROOK.
Hopefully, we shall have a sizeable turnout for this three-day Killington Section affair. For those who have not been there, you are in for a treat and the experience will be well worth the trip. It was voted at our Section's Annual Meeting to assess each person for each day they attend, $1.00 per day to cover rental expense. A committee with helpers will prepare and serve all meals, and it was also agreed at the Annual Meeting that the cost of the food to each individual will be based on the number of days attending or meals eaten. To help us plan for this event will you please fill in the form AT THE BOTTOM OF THE LAST PAGE OF THIS ISSUE no later than May 1.

Sat., May 17, 10 a.m., WORK PARTY,
Sherwin Start, Leader. There is so very much to do in the spring in order to get the trails and shelters ready for the hiking season that Mr. Start will need all the help he can get. Let's all of us get out and do just as much as we can. Volunteers should meet at the fire station.

Sat., May 24, G.M.C. ANNUAL MEETING, Waterbury, Vt.

Sun., June 8, 8 a.m., ABBEY POND,
Anne Hoover, Leader. This area was in the news recently because VELCO wanted to develop it. An easy 5.5 mile hike. Miss Hoover has kindly offered to lead this hike (a joint-one with folks trying to form a Breadloaf Section). Many folks have suggested joint hikes with other Sections, so now is a good time to see if we can really put this into practice. Let's have a big group go to Abbey Pond, meeting first at the fire station.

Sat., June 14, 9 a.m., VERMONT'S
HIGHEST WATERFALL, Lye Brook Trail,
Rob Lacey, Leader. Rob will be home from college by this time and he has offered to lead us on a repetition of the first hike he went on with the Killington Section, so we must all help him celebrate. Hikers should meet at the fire station.

Sun., June 29, 1 p.m., WALLINGFORD
POND, Wes Weston, Leader. Watch the papers for details on this hike as the date approaches.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Following the annual meeting on Jan. 18, a meeting of the Killington Section Board was held at the home of the past president, Wilbur Weston, and the following officers were elected for 1975:

Pres., Janet Martin, 7 Curtis Ave., Rutland

V. Pres., Ian Wark, Woodstock Stage, Kay's Cabins, Rutland

Sec.-Treas., W. Churchill Scott, 132 Maple St., Rutland

The first action of your new officers was to set up a new hike schedule for Spring and Summer, 1975. We wish to thank all those who made suggestions. In fact, we had so many good ideas a few will have to wait for early fall!

On the new schedule you will note that we have tried to have a variety of activities, old favorites and some brand new ones.

One innovation was to schedule two shorter Sunday afternoon hikes. Another was a three-day backpacking trip for aspiring end-to-enders. Also scheduled are three day-trips to complete definite sections of the Long Trail.

You will also note that from mid-May to mid-June we have indicated work parties between scheduled hikes. We hope if you are available to work on any of these dates that you will contact either Sherwin Start (Tel. 775-3193), Trails Chairman, or Paul Howard (773-3948), Shelters Chairman. We must depend on you, the members, to carry out this necessary work.

Please note that current (1974) memberships are considered delinquent after April 1, so won't you send your dues in to Churchill right now while you are thinking about it--it's so easy to let it lapse!

Janet Martin, Pres.

ANNUAL MEETING REPORT

The Annual Meeting of the Killington Section of the Green Mt. Club was held on Saturday, Jan. 18, 1975, at the Universalist-Unitarian Church. In spite of a hard mid-winter blizzard, a total of 35 people attended, including members from Clarendon, West Pawlet and Springfield.

Pres. Weston opened the meeting with a word of appreciation for the large attendance in spite of the very poor weather.

The Secretary and Treasurer's reports were read and accented with the provision that $65 of Smoke and Blazes expenses be carried over to 1975 for that amount was spent for supplies to use during the current year.

Trails Chairman, Sherwin Start, reported that all trails are in good condition and that he has received many reports that our Section has excellent trails. He stated, however, that a few spots could still be improved.

Pres. Weston suggested that whenever committee chairmen need help with various projects, they should not hesitate to ask other members for assistance.

Lou Catozzi read a very complete report of maintenance work done by Shelter Chairman, Paul Howard, who was unable to attend due to his doctor's orders.

Janet Martin spoke for the Entertainment Committee, mentioning their work on Covered Dish Supper, Sugar-on-Snow Party, and Annual Meeting.

Thelma Valiquette told of the Membership Committee's work in sending out a dues reminder on April 1. Wes suggested that it be done again.

Frances Roberts, Smoke and Blazes editor, expressed thanks for the many contributors, and stressed the importance of meeting deadlines.

Mr. Weston spoke about the attempt of the Main Club to take over the business and affairs of the Sections. He also reported on the construction of Brugmann Bridge and the difficulty of obtaining a protective fence.

Richard Roberts suggested a By-law change to appoint a nominating committee six months prior to the Annual Meeting. This will be recommended by the Board of Directors and submitted next year. Betty Weeks agreed to chair the Nominating Committee.

Jim Frink made a motion to delete the second sentence in Art. V of the By-laws. Janet Martin seconded and it was so voted. This will allow directors to serve more than two terms.

The By-law change to call the Annual Meeting on the third Saturday in January was discussed. This change was not voted affirmatively as it was decided that publication of the Annual Meeting date in the Fall and Winter Schedule would give sufficient advance notice, and allow more flexibility in calling a meeting in case of inclement weather.

Pres. Weston read a letter describing the charges, facilities, and activities at Derry Brook, located near Londonderry, and it was decided to schedule a weekend trip there on May 7-9.

Terry Gulick spoke about the proposed history of GMC being compiled by Ralph Bryant and the part each Section must take in writing up its own history. He told of looking over the complete set of Smoke and Blazes issues that Craigie and Mary Perkins possess along with many old Guide Books. He also asked for more information about the Tin Shelter on Killington Peak, Blue Triangles history, and how our Section got its name.

Pres. Weston discussed the New England Trails Conference to be held Sat., Apr. 5, at Worcester, Mass. George Pearlstein explained about this good opportunity to learn more about other New England Outing Clubs, their aims and objectives, and to view various exhibits.

Betty Weeks submitted the names of Janet Martin, Paul Howard, Sr., and Ian Wark to serve on the Board of Directors. Janet will be serving a second term; Paul and Ian are replacing Frederica Welch and Dr. Howard. Richard Roberts seconded the nomination and it was passed.

Pres. Weston spoke of the Channel 3 news film of the Brugmann Bridge dedication which we had hoped to show.

He also spoke of the great amount of time and effort given to the job of being president of our Section. In conclusion, Pres. Weston was given a standing ovation for the very good work he has done during the two terms he has served as president.

The ladies deserve our thanks for the tasty refreshments and an enjoyable social hour. Entertainment followed with Mr. Louis Rousseau calling square dances and polkas.

Churchill Scott
Sec.-Treas.

DIRECTORS' MEETING

A Board of Directors meeting was held of Feb. 8 at the home of Wilbur Weston. Present were Mrs. Weston, Ian Wark, Paul Howard, Janet Martin, Vera Perkins and Churchill Scott. Cynthia Keyes was a guest.

Discussion was conducted about the proposal by Richard Roberts to amend the By-laws in regard to nominating candidates for the Board of Directors, i.e., to appoint a nominating committee. Janet Martin made a motion, seconded by Vera Perkins, that a nominating committee of three members be elected at the Annual Meeting to serve for one year.

Wes spoke of the advantages of trying to find a few minutes at the Annual Meeting for all directors to get together and choose officers so they may be announced.

It was voted to donate $10 to the Tamarack Notch-Aitken Forest Association and to submit to the Association the names of editor of Smoke and Blazes and the Secretary-Treasurer for inclusion on their mailing list.

First Aid supplies were discussed, and it was finally thought best to put together kits of our own. Cynthia Keyes donated a very sturdy and suitable metal container.

Wes mentioned a rummage sale as a possible way to make money. He also spoke of having someone act as custodian of supplies and equipment.

Ian Wark distributed copies of Killington-Pico newspaper, published every other week with news of interest to everyone. Ian suggested that in line with the appeal by Wes for more publicity for the GMC and Killington Section, that we submit articles to this newspaper explaining our history, aims and activities.

Wes spoke about the increasing pressure of the Main Club to run the affairs of the Sections, giving such examples as the Mill River Bridge incident and the withholding of information regarding a caretaker at Cooner Lodge.

Also, he said that Mrs. LeBlanc is concerned about having snowmobilers cut brush and limbs to build bridges in the old Buffum area with the resulting possibility of flooding in the spring.

A deposit has been made for Derry Brook outing on May 9-11, and Cynthia Keyes has offered to cook and purchase supplies with help from others. It is hoped that we can follow the example of our past Winter Weekends with work details set up for cooking, setting tables, serving, cleaning up and washing. It was suggested that an advance be made for food to take advantage of sales. Also that the deadline for reservations be May 1 with a form printed in the next Smoke and Blazes.

The meeting was adjourned and a very pleasant social hour followed with Mr. and Mrs. Weston serving many delicious snacks. Once again we are very grateful for their hospitality.

Respectfully submitted,
W. Churchill Scott
Secretary

THANKS

We all want to thank Miss Eleanor Walker for the gift of a number of copies of the Long Trail News issued during 1941-1945. These are in the form of a booklet about 5"x6", with a number of photographs. It is very interesting to see the changes throughout the years of the LTN.

Also, thanks to James Frink we have a pair of asbestos gloves which will always accompany our "Old Faithful" coffee pot. These will provide a welcome relief from the burned fingers, scorched mittens and frayed nerves of the past.

Cynthia Keyes must also be thanked for her gift of a new coffee pot which could almost be a sister to our old one for its color, size and style are almost identical. We only hope that it will cover as much ground, last as long and be able to tell as many stories. Records indicate that the old pot was purchased at W. C. Landon's, Nov. 4, 1938, for $1.50.

HIKE REPORTS

Moonlight Hike, Johnson Shelter, Dec. 29. The moonlight hike to Johnson Shelter had few things going for it, but no one seemed unduly disheartened. Two different times to meet at Koltonski's Fire Station were publicized, 4 p.m. in the newspapers, and 7 p.m. on the Hike Schedule. The result was that one group started in just as the earlier one arrived back at the parking area. This was o.k., though, because the night was cold and raw, and the total number couldn't possibly have kept warm around the fire.

Amazingly enough, the timing was right for those going-inners and coming-outers who otherwise might have collided on that overcast night. Anyone who has tried to X-C ski on the Long Trail in the dark can appreciate that.

What all this points up is the fact that when we go out on Killington Section outings, we have fun, in spite of nor'easters (and we've hiked in them), peculiar tasting water (and we've drunk it), smoke in our eyes, and moonless "moonlight" hikes. The only thing that isn't fun is when no one turns out for them.

F. Roberts

Puddledock Ski Area, Jan. 12. Puddledock Ski Touring Trails in the Granville Gulf State Reservation on January 12 saw 13 hikers-skiers-snowshoers travel along the unplowed road past beaver ponds and deer winter yards. At Kendell Brook a bonfire was built, the coffee pot was suspended from a tripod over the fire, and soon hot chocolate, coffee and tea combined with good conversations and reunions. Carl Parsons and Phil Woodbury renewed their acquaintance from the 1930's when they were members of the Civilian Conservation Corps.

Betty Staack

Piney Hollow Area, Plymouth, Jan. 25. Jim Frink, Lou Catozzi, Bob Biddiscombe, Rachel Charland and Churchill Scott, all hardy souls, gathered at Main St. Park in spite of freezing rain and forecast of worse weather. Harold Rogers arrived with word of Rte. 7 north closed and a 25-car pile up over Sherburne Pass. Guess that was too much for Harold.

After a long discussion, we decided to find a geological formation on Boardman Hill. Jim drove us all over the Hill, down to Chinnenhook, down Walker Mountain, along the West Creek road almost to Wallingford where Jim pointed out a very pretty ice mountain made by a stream from a broken water pipe. By the time we arrived back in Rutland, the rain had stopped and Rte. 4 opened.

We drove to Plymouth but soon the rain began again, and increased as the day wore on. Parking at the old CCC area, we walked up the Whetstone Brook road for one mile to the shelter, and soon we were enjoying a good, hearty meal and hot drinks.

After a short trip to a surface granite quarry which furnished stone for the Smithsonian Institute, we returned to the car, pretty well soaked to the skin.

Even though the weather was poor, everyone had a good and enjoyable day, and already we are looking forward to the next hike.

Churchill Scott

Gov. Clement Shelter, Feb. 9. We all met at the intersection of a wood road and the Upper Cold River Road. We hiked, snowshoed and skied to the Gov. Clement Shelter. Six of the group of 18 were on cross country skis and they went on ahead and went a few miles beyond the shelter, then back to the shelter.

Six of the group were on snowshoes and the third group of six hiked. Due to the packing of the snow by many snowmobiles, the trail was in excellent condition for all types of locomotion.

Despite the lack of water because of cold, it was necessary to melt snow to make the coffee, etc., and it took a relatively short time to get plenty of hot water. Firewood was scarce because of 18" to 24" of snow cover.

Everyone had a good lunch standing around the fire, and all seemed to enjoy the hike very much.

Carl O. Parsons

Northam Picnic Area, Feb. 23. In spite of threatening skies, 23 ski tourers, snowshoers, hikers, and one dog made the trip from North Shrewsbury to the Pavilion in the Northam area of the Coolidge State Park.

Leaving our cars at the sand pile above Pierce's store, we were surprised to find the road plowed about a mile further. Skiing was good on the snowmobile trail from there to the shelter. Even the skiers had to hustle to keep up with Jim Frink on his snowshoes.

Soon a roaring fire was melting snow for coffee in the new coffee pot. The large shelter with stone fireplace made this a very comfortable place for a group of this size to eat lunch. All too soon the snowshoers and hikers from Rutland headed back down to their cars. Twelve adventuresome skiers from the Springfield area continued on trusting to compasses and maps to find their way down an unexplored route. Leaving the road on a snowmobile trail we skied up and down over moguls for another 2 1/2 mi. before coming to the old Northam-Plymouth Road. The trail led through mixed hardwoods over the shoulder of Burnt Mt. The old road was smoother with several brisk down hill runs. After another 2 1/2 mi. of easy skiing we arrived at North Shrewsbury. Pleasantly tired after our 8 mi. ski tour, the cars at the sand pile were a welcome sight.

HIKE DATA

Churchill Scott has come up with some interesting Killington Section statistics dating from Aug. 18, 1974 to March 8, 1975, or from the beginning of our new register.

Number of hikes: 15
Total miles hiked: 55
Total number of hikers attending: 225

From available figures, it appears that the number of hikers from the Rutland area is about double that of hikers from outside Rutland.

In the next issue of Smoke & Blazes, Churchill plans to list hike destinations for the past 10 years or so to get ideas for the Fall and Winter Hike Schedule.

Vol. 27, No. 3 - KILLINGTON SECTION, GREEN MOUNTAIN CLUB - July-Sept., 1975

COMING OUTINGS

Note: Koltonski Fire Station where hikers meet is adjacent to Main St. (Rte. 7) Park in Rutland.

Sat., July 12, 9 a.m., BRANDON GAP TO MT. CARMEL, W. Weston, Leader. Let's all support Wes as he hikes this section of the Trail. With this and the next one, he will have covered all the way to Bolton Lodge. This is not too hard, so all should try to go.

Sun., July 27, 9 a.m., MT. CARMEL TO SHERBORNE PASS, Janet Martin, Leader. Janet has offered to take time out from her busy summer schedule to lead this hike for all aspiring End-to-Enders, so let's all show our appreciation.

Sun., Aug. 10, 7 a.m., CLARK BROOK TRAIL TO RTE. 125, Betty Staack, Leader. Please note the starting time, 7 a.m. (Suggested by Betty for we have a job to spot cars and hike.) Betty will lead if she is back from her trip abroad with her husband, Jim. When she gets to Boyce Shelter, Betty will have completed her End-to-End, so let's see how many can be on hand to congratulate her.

Sun., Aug. 17, 1 p.m., BUTTERMILK FALLS, Anna Nyiri, Leader. Anna has suggested that although Rutland area people will meet at Koltonski Fire Station as usual, others may wish to meet near the Branch Brook Restaurant at the junction of Rte. 103 and 100 North. She also suggests that hikers wear or bring sneakers for walking in the brook! This is a very pretty spot to visit for a short afternoon walk. The cool water, the falls, and many wild flowers should make this a pleasant trip.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS' MEETING

The Directors met at the home of Janet Martin with Judi Butterfield, Janet Martin, W. Churchill Scott, Sherwin Start, Vera Perkins, Ian Wark, Wes Weston and T. Valiquette present.

Janet Martin brought before the group the latest information on the Pittsford Ice Caves. She suggested asking the Trustees to make a donation to the Fund. $28,000 is given as the price, now, which includes the house. Sherwin Start suggested buying the house first to obtain a parking area and as a start for getting the whole area. A motion was made and seconded to direct Trustees to recommend to the Main Club that they donate to the Pittsford Ice Cave Fund.

Mr. Keenan, Municipal forester, states that the Canty Trail up Blue Ridge Mt. has been lumbered, and trees cut within 50' of the trail in spite of provisions in the contract to prevent this. He asked that interested persons write to him complaining of the cutting.

Wes has taken over as quartermaster and is to obtain an overseas packing crate to store material in. Also, he will stamp all tools with KS-GMC and have a sign-out-sign-in log. The urgency of having an adequate first aid supply kit was discussed once more and it was suggested that we try to obtain a belt pack.

Judi Butterfield explained Mr. Peet's caretaker program and how it has enlarged this year. Discussion followed of the Caretaker system in general, and Pico's problems in particular.

The relationship between the Main Club and the Sections was again discussed. Pres. Martin stated that the Main Club is legally responsible, and that apathy and the tendency to let things slide in the Sections are responsible for some of the Main Club's actions. Janet stated that the GMC has grown so much that it can no longer be run as it has been in the past, and each year more and more problems are being discovered that years ago we did not have to deal with.

HIKE REPORTS

Pcho Amphitheatre, April 12. Hikers:
Mauri Wintturi, Rachel Charland,
Churchill Scott, Christopher Mausolff,
Betty Ward, Lou Catozzi, Jim Frink, Carl Schmidt, Anna Nyiri, Carl Parsons.

It was a glorious day, mild, blue-skyed. We saw 2 groups of geese honking north, like a delicate string of pearls glistening against light blue velvet.

Since the way had been snow-mobiled all winter, those walking had no trouble. Three went on skis, another was trying out snowshoes made in a do-it-yourself project.

A lovely lunch site beside a rill soon crackled to a well-made fire and each one enjoyed a hot drink of his choice plus other goodies humped in by generous fellow Killington Section hikers.

A couple tested some echoes on the middle pond, but the leader forgot to demonstrate the amazing 360° echoes of the last pond.

Anne Mausolff

Jay Peak Area, April 25-27. Late one Friday afternoon, Pam Kerstner, Lou Catozzi, Rachael Charland and Churchill Scott began what should have been a spring hike on the Long Trail, but due to the big April 2-3 snowstorm, it turned into a mid-winter snowshoe trip.

Making Jay Camp our base, Lou and Pam were let off at the Sargent farm location at North Troy while Rachael and Churchill left the car at Rte. 105. After a long hard struggle to find the blazes due to deep snow and a wet, driving blizzard, we arrived at the height of land. Pam and Lou continued to the car and Rachael and Churchill north to the border. There it was decided to split and Rachael would travel the side trail past Journey's End camp to the road while the rest picked her up at the Sargent Farm. In spite of the utter exhaustion, Lou prepared the most tasty meal that has ever been devoured on the Long Trail.

Sunday, Lou was left at Rte. 105 again where we met Norma Phillips. After attending church, Rachael and Churchill returned to Jay Camp where Pam had decided to stay for the day. Hiking north on the trail, we finally ran out of blazes and bushwhacked the rest of the way to the ski trails on Jay where the wind was fierce and snow flurries heavy. At last, after a hard, hard struggle, we reached the summit of Jay Peak about 4 p.m. From the ski trail, on the return trip, we found the trail but once again we ran out of blazes, and so began bushwhacking to Jay Camp again.

At last we smelled smoke, next heard a shout from Lou who had caught up with us, leaving Norma at Shootin' Star Shelter to return to the car. We finally arrived at camp, had a bite to eat, packed up, and left about 7 p.m. with about one gallon of gas. For the next half hour we sweated out finding a gas station until Rachael, with her sweet talk, persuaded a man to fill us up.

Next we visited Rachael's son and family in Derby where they asked us to spend the night, for it was a long way home. We enjoyed the hospitality of Mr. Kangas and his huge recreation room. We rolled out our mattresses and sleeping bags, and spent an enjoyable night. Up at 5:30 a.m., we ate and left, getting home around 9 a.m. in time for the kids to get to school.

A few things were learned on this trip. George Pearlstein is correct when he says the Long Trail is not for winter hiking. Also, there are a few people who wear flannel nightgowns and woollen night caps to bed even on the Trail.

W. Churchill Scott

Abbey Pond, Middlebury, June 8.
After a slightly confused start, Jim Frink, Anna Nyiri and Bob Carey representing Killington, caught up with five members of the Bread Loaf Hiking Club.

After a lot of rain during the week, and a prediction of 60% rain Sunday, it was a cheerful hike without a drop of precipitation. The cascades along the trail were also cheerful with a great deal of water coming down the mountain.

First find was a mushroom we think was a Poliporus sulphureus; however, the book said it appeared from August to November. The leader took it home, but was unable to identify it positively so it was not consumed.

A snack at Abbey Pond and we decided to look for an old jeep trail to the S.E. which we found and continued around the pond. There we found several pitcher plants in flower which was a real treat. It was a fine trip; cool, no rain, and NO MOSQUITOES.

Anne Hoover

Vermont's Highest Waterfall, June 14.

I led the hike on June 14 to Vermont's highest waterfall. There were twelve of us. We had a bit of trouble finding the Lye Brook Trail, but once we got going we had no trouble following it. We followed the Lye Brook Trail for 2 miles, before turning off and following the switchback of the old logging railroad for one half of a mile. Although the turn is not marked, it is not too difficult to find. You can see the logging railroad on your left, up above, before you get to where it crosses the Lye Brook Trail. It looks like a stone wall at first. Where it crosses the Lye Brook Trail, you follow it to the right. The Lye Brook Trail begins at the bridge on the Lye Brook Road, just off the Richville road. (Note: Since the falls are within the Lye Brook Wilderness, you should have a permit.)

The falls were just as spectacular as they were three years ago. We estimated them to be 200 to 250 feet high. After a good lunch and reading the Vermont Life article about the logging rail road brought in by Wes, we returned the same way. All in all it was a beautiful day in the woods.

WORK PARTIES

Information on work parties, scheduled and impromptu, have been phoned in to your Editors. Errors in reporting may be blamed on hasty note taking. Anything serious will be corrected in the next issue of Smoke & Blazes.

Sat., May 17. This scheduled work party brought out 9 people who, reports Wes Weston, cleared trail from Rte. 103 to Sunnyside, and from Rte. 140 to the same shelter. Some blazing was done.

Sat., June 21. An unscheduled, but advertized, work party consisting only of Sherwin Start and Wes, finished the blazing and did some more clearing from RTE. 103 to Sunnyside.

Sun., June 22. Paul Howard called in to report on work done at Pico Camp. It seems that a letter had been received from a hiker complaining about the deplorable conditions at Pico, so an unscheduled, unadvertized impromptu work party took off to do something about it. After contacting Job Brugmann, caretaker at Cooper, Wes, Paul and Patrick Howard and their dog, Rex, and equipment for repair were taken up by gondola from Rte. 4 to the top of Killington. They then hiked from Cooper to Pico where they put in a hard day repairing, checking and measuring such items as the wire around the bottom of the shelter, the stove pipe, door latch, and the john.

Paul feels that a great deal of credit should go to the Sherburne Corp. for the free use of their gondola for both workers and equipment. Their fine cooperation is certainly appreciated.

NIKE REPORT: Sherburne Pass to South Pond, July 27. This hike was scheduled to go to Mt. Carmel, but the group decided this was going to be too much, so elected to go from Sherburne Pass to South Pond and down to the Chittendon Reservoir. Jan Martin, Leader

DIRECTORS MEETING

A Board of Directors meeting was held on Saturday, Aug. 16, at the Pinney Hollow cottage of Churchill Scott. Janet Martin, Vera Perkins, Wilbur Weston, Sherwin Start, Rob Carey, Sandy Stare, Peter and Teen Palen, the Paul Howards, Jr. and Sr., Mauri Wintturi and his friend were present.

Janet read letters from John Nuffort and Ralph Bryant, former president and current president of the main GMC, respectively, asking if the Killington Section would be willing to take the responsibility of maintaining the Brugman Bridge over Mill River. She also read a letter from Al St. Peter to Pres. Bryant regarding the detailed maintenance work of the bridge. Pres. Martin said she wrote to Al St. Peter and invited him to the meeting so we could learn first hand the work involved, but received no reply and he was not present.

Paul Howard was appointed chairman to head a committee including Rob Carey and Sherwin Start to look into the matter more thoroughly. They will study exactly what is involved in maintaining the bridge if the Killington Section takes over in regards to cost, liability and amount of work. Paul also spoke of water bars and log steps at the bridge which were a big improvement, and as far as he could see no motor bikes had been there.

Janet also read a letter from Hans Frisch asking for at least two persons in each section to act as photographers on section activities so that the Main Club would have an up-to-date file for publicity, news stories and slide collections. Lynee Slushman was mentioned as one and Janet said she would contact her.

Sherwin Start spoke of the very poor attendance on work parties and the fact that it is becoming less and less as time goes on. He listed the many various improvements that should be made throughout our section of the Trail and on the shelters before winter. Newspaper ads and articles, radio announcements and individual contact were mentioned as some of the possibilities of interesting more people, especially women, who in addition to cooking for the work parties could do many jobs on the trail. He also mentioned the article in the latest issue of the Long Trail News about what a good response the Burlington Section got for workers to help rebuild Puffer Lodge.

The rest of the evening was devoted to making up a Fall and Winter Schedule of outings. This schedule has been printed and was mailed out to all members on Tuesday, Sept. 2. If anyone has not received a copy please notify W.C. Scott, 132 Maple St., Rutland, Vt. 05701.

Respectfully submitted,
W. Churchill Scott
Secretary

OPEN LETTER TO THE MEMBERS OF THE KILLINGTON SECTION OF GMC:

Work completed as of 9/8/75.
Blazing from Vt. Rte. 140 to Upper Cold River Road. Clearing from Vt. Rte. 140 to Upper Cold River Road. Thanks to Jeb Brugman, (caretaker at Cooper Lodge this summer) the trail from Cooper Lodge to Pico Camp has been cleared and blazed. Jeb also did a considerable amount of work in starting the Jaugernaut Trail relocation.

More to be accomplished as of 9/8/75
Long Trail/Appalachian Trail to be cleared and blazed from Upper Cold River Road to Cooper Lodge, and from Pico Camp to Sherburne Pass.

We need to do some badly needed drainage work on several sections of the LT/AT and will be getting into some of this work this fall, hopefully!! We are also planning to put some puncheon foot bridges across a few wet areas.

In passing at this time, representing and speaking for the entire membership, we would like to thank any and all parties that so graciously took part in the trail work that was done of the LT/AT on both sides of the new Clarendon Gorge suspension bridge. Thank you!!!

The trail is one of the cleanest of the whole LT. We do, however, need a great deal more help than we have been getting. On the 4 trail work parties we have had only 4 people showed up at the first, and only 2 on each of the other three. We need more help!!!

Also at this time I would like to express my gratitude and that of the Club to Harold Howard and his daughter-in-law, Carla, for their invaluable assistance in helping yours truly in his efforts to keep the refuse picked up. Our hats are off to you. Also, many thanks to Wes Weston, Rob Carey, Mauri Wintturi and Paul Howard for their efforts far above the call of duty.

In parting I would like to make a special point of the fact that I know that there are quite a few persons in the Killington Section that are physically capable of helping us take care of both the shelters and trails, and we desperately need your assistance. For further information call me at 775-3193, or call our Shelters Chairman, Paul Howard, at 773-6070.

One final note. In case you haven't received the new Fall and Winter Hike schedule, we have planned a couple of trail maintenance outings, on Sept. 13-14, and the second on Oct. 4. Please pitch in and show that you really care. Thank you for your cooperation.

Sherwin A. Start
Trails Chairman, KSGMC

CROSS-TALK

July 9, 1975. After I had made arrangements with Frank McCormack, manager of Radio Station WHWB in Rutland, the GMC was slated for an hour's broadcast on a talk program called "Cross-Talk."

Rob Carey, Job Brugman and I reported to the station on the East Proctor Rd. at 9:55 AM. We were escorted to the broadcasting booth by Ed Lloyd and Ed Larson, the MC's where a short discussion was held before going on the air. However, this was completely unrehearsed, but with the ability of our two MC's to properly question us during the program, the talk show went smoothly without repetitious conversation.

We talked about the GMC in general and the Killington Section in particular. Rob did an excellent job in his history of the club and of the Hikes Program and how it works. I was surprised at the knowledge Rob has about the club and his ability to put it across to the listening public. I congratulate him. Job did a fine job in answering questions about the Caretaker's Program, the hikers he had met in his caretaker job, and general knowledge about being out there on the trail.

Rob is an end-to-ender for the Long Trail, while Job is an end-to-ender on the AT trail. I cannot boast on that score, for my mileage on the trail is not too great. Job told of the 86 year old hiker that had finished half the AT last year and was completing the AT this year.

The actual 50 minutes that we were on the air passed swiftly, and with the help of Ed Lloyd and Ed Larson we had no difficulty in producing an interesting program for the listeners, giving the GMC a boost in this area.

The manager of Radio Station WHWB has been very generous and presented us with tapes of the entire program. Any interested parties that would like to hear this program would be welcome to use the tapes. After I am finished with them, the tapes will be placed on file at the GMC main office on Center St., Rutland.

Respectfully,
Paul R. Howard
Shelter's Chairman
Killington Section, GMC

HERBERT G. OGDEN, JR., of Palo Alto, California, has sent Smoke & Blazes a copy of an interesting and controversial letter written by him to the editor of the Long Trail News. Regretfully, lack of space permits us to print excerpts only. Killington Section members should be sure to read the complete letter when it appears in the forthcoming LTN.

What, one may ask, is wrong with seeing the Sections as "participants" in "Main Club" work? Plenty, I think. To begin with, the very words "participants" and "Main Club" imply that the Sections are merely ancillary organizations whose function it is to aid the Main Club. On the contrary, it seems to me that the Club has long derived its strength from the reasonably autonomous functioning of Sections which were free to set their policies and plan their activities more or less as they saw fit, which were free to innovate and get things done on their own, and which benefited from the coordination provided by the President and Trustees -- but these Sections did not allow that "coordination" to become "direction," and they prospered in their freedom.

Now, unfortunately, the Sections seem to be losing their character as decision-making bodies and turning into administrative divisions, serving to implement decisions by Club leadership. To me, this state of affairs is reflected by the idea that the Sections exist primarily to help keep up the trail for the Main Club. The important decisions about the Trail, however, are being increasingly concentrated at the Main Club level. In my own Section this was pointed up particularly by the conduct of the Caretaker program, and, more prominently, by the Main Club's costly reversal of a promising local initiative on the rebuilding of the Clarendon Gorge Bridge after the 1973 flood.

The opinions expressed above are shared by many Killington Section members, and have been stated in recent editions of Smoke & Blazes.

CHURCHILL SCOTT has sent in some more statistics from KS records. Below are the 10 best attended activities in recent years.

2/24/68, Spaghetti Supper at Tall Timbers with 51 present.
3/29/69, Sugar-on-Snow Party, 51.
9/10/72, 60th Anniversary Party at Tamarack Notch with 48 present.
11/10/74, 3rd H.D. Valiquette Memorial Hike to East Mt., 47 attending.
3/30/68, Sugar-on-Snow Party, 45.
6/16/74, Pittsford Ice Caves, 37.
6/15/72, Natural Bridge, Lake Emerald, with 36 present.
12/28/74, Moonlight Hike, Tucker Johnson with 36 attending.

5/15-16/71, Clarendon Remodeling, 32.
7/25/70, Canoe Trip, Florence to Brandon, on Otter Creek, with 25 present.

Churchill concludes that the social activities seem to be the most attractive!

HIKE REPORTS

Wallingford Pond, June 29. At the outset this hike was a problem in frustration. I did not know where I was going. After several abortive attempts to get the proper directions, the ever loyal Churchill came to my rescue. On his only day off he took me to the starting point and I felt better.

From the Koltonski Fire Station, 19 hikers in a 7-car cavalcade drove to Wallingford, then east on Rte. 140 to a turn-off, and to our "jump-off" place.

Soon after we started hiking, we met 3 happy hooligans in a dilapidated pick-up truck transporting 6 or 7 oil drums into the pond area. Their plan was to build a houseboat. At one point they dropped 3 drums and 1 hooligan, but fortunately no one was hurt.

The day was warm and our hiking time was short, about a half hour each way. The pond is located in a rather wild setting with no camps or cottages that we could see. We sat around, nibbled and rapped, and a couple of "Waltons" tried their skills at fishing.

Our visit was cut short by a fishing group that had driven to the pond and whose exit our parked cars prevented.

Wes Weston, Leader

Brandon Gap to Carmel, July 12. On this hot but clear July day, 7 Killington Section members assayed that part of the LT from Brandon Gap south to Mt. Carmel, a 2-mile jaunt.

It began by 5 hikers going to the Gap with Jack Martin to await arrival of the other 2 who spotted cars at the foot of the New Boston Trail. With the kindly assistance of Jim Frink, the 2 spotters were driven to Brandon Gap where they joined the awaiting five.

As the group prepared to start, Jack Martin imparted a bit of sage advice directed to aspiring end-to-enders. He stated that in order to prevent any "gaps" in hiking the entire trail, we should walk up to where the trail crossed the highway from the north side to the south side and cross there. We all complied and did just that. The trail was very level and in good shape so that we jauntily took off at a brisk pace.

We did the first mile in a little over 20 minutes. As the day wore on we tended to wear out, but only slightly. We made one stop for lunch and maybe two for rests. We were too weary to make the climb up Carmel and left it at that. We met some hikers en route and our group opined it was a day well spent.

Wes Weston, Leader

Buttermilk Falls, Aug. 17. Though far from a muscle tingling hike, our Sunday afternoon walk to Buttermilk Falls did get eleven of us outdoors enjoying the rocky scenery of the three unique falls separated from each other by short walks.

This is a cool spot on a hot day, but our day was too cool for sneaker walking in the brook.

A Note About Numbers

Smoke and Blazes started in 1948 as a monthly publication and continued so until about 1959 when it became a bimonthly. In about 1967 it switched to quarterly publication. Occasionally issues were skipped, especially in 1970 and 1971.

In general each calendar year was assigned a new "Volume" and "Numbers" were assigned consecutively from "1" through each year.

There is some lack of consistency in the months of publication, and there are some out-and-out errors in the numbering.

The following Table of Contents lists the issues in this binder showing the Volume, Number, and Date as printed, and, where different, what the Volume, Number, and Date probably should have been.

Dedication

This set of copies of Smoke and Blazes is donated to the Rutland Historical Society in memory of my parents, Mary and Craig Perkins and my aunt, Vera Perkins. They conceived the idea for a Killington Section newsletter in 1948 and served as editors and publishers for the first several years of its existence, cutting stencils, and running mimeograph copies in our living room. They continued as frequent contributors to the publication and as active members of the Club for over a half century. Fortunately, Dad had a pack rat proclivity which I seem to have inherited. By combining his collection of Smoke and Blazes with mine, I have been able to put together this complete run of the publication.

Vol. 28, No. 1 - KILLINGTON SECTION, GREEN MOUNTAIN CLUB - January - March, 1976

THE NEW BOSTON TRAIL - Oct. 11, 1975

Since Churchill was still working and Jack and Janet Martin had other commitments for 10/11/75, I agreed to lead the hike for Janet. There was myself and Gregory Bostock, a young man and new member that showed up. ('Twas an overcast, predictably rainy day).

Never before had I gone UP the New Boston Trail, and only ONCE before, many years ago, had I come DOWN it, but I remembered no problem.

We left, in two cars, at 9:10 AM and arrived at South Pond Trail entrance at 9:50 AM. Then we drove the 1.6 miles back to where the power line crossed the road, making the turn-off point from the road out of Chittenden. (This turnoff is not marked and it is 3 miles from Chittenden Corners. This for the benefit of future hikers who will be hunting for the way to the South Pond Trail).

Then we drove 4 miles (Past Mountain Top Inn) and to the entrance of the New Boston Trail.

There is a sign there pointing up a straight, wide, roadlike path into the woods. Never doubting the sign, we took off up this path, and after about a quarter mile we met some hunters who called after us "Going to Mt. Carmet?". Knowing that Mt. Carmel was just a bit north of where the New Boston Trail joins the Long Trail, we nodded assent and kept going on what we had no reason to doubt was the New Boston Trail.

Finally we came to a clearing with many trails leading from it. We cursed the people who had failed to blaze the New Boston Trail and explored several of these trails, all leading to dead ends, in deep woods. Finally we realized something was radically wrong and we retraced our steps. It was raining, everything was swampy and and muddy. Our feet were soaking wet, and much of our clothes the same. We did not feel kindly toward the people who had failed to blaze the trail.

We got back to a point about 30 yards from our parked car, and noticed an unmarked path leading off our broad highway. We went up this path a way to see what it was, and Lo and Behold about 50 yards in, and out of plain sight of the big road, was a sign indicating that THIS was the way to the Long Trail.

There is no mark or sign at the roadside to indicate that the New Boston Trail makes a sudden departure to the right only about 30 yards from the starting point. We were disgusted, wet and not in a good mood.

We had walked for two hours in the rain and had covered about 5 miles. It was now 12:30 PM, the rain was coming down in torrents, so we swore at the lack of trail markings at the most important point, and decided no more sloshing thru mud and rain that day. WE THOUGHT YOU'D LIKE TO KNOW !!!

James C. Frink

SALT ASH MOUNTAIN - September 21, 1975

On a very wet day, 10 of us gathered at the Kontolski Fire Station at 10:00 AM and departed for a hike to Camp Flying Cloud, Salt Ash Mountain. This was a brook-like hike all the way to the top. I ate lunch sitting in a branch over a spring spring! Good view toward east and south. Beautiful Fall day. Used by-pass around Flying Cloud Camp on way back and found it dryer although the bottom looked worse when we went up. Found an axe and Car-teen belonging to Saltash Camp.

PLYMOUTH FIVE CORNERS - Nov. 8, 1975

This historical hike was the longest 4.5 mile trip even the oldest of old timers could remember. It was wonderful to see 32 people in this turnout on a beautiful warm sunny day in the fall.

After parking at the Coolidge State Park picnic area, we walked along an old town road to Plymouth Five Corners. Here we visited the Cemetery, with dates going back to the 1810's. Here, also, are buried ancestors of Newell Briggs, Burlington Section member, who was well known to many in the Killington Section.

At the Five Corners Area, Ray Stoodley gave a very thorough description of the many foundations, including a very interesting Grist Mill, complete with sluice way. He also pointed out how gold had been found in one of two brooks, but not in the other, just a short distance away. All of this, coupled with the early 1900's photos shown by Frederica Welch, made this an interesting spot to stand and try to visualize where the school; the blacksmith shop; and the Hotel, with a Ball Room resting on six foot rubber balls could be located among the now completely foreclosed area.

Heading west and up grade, we came to the Bethany Birches Bible School area, with a beautiful view of the Broad Brook and Hale Hollow Valleys.

Turning north, we passed the site of yet another school and soon arrived back at the picnic area grounds, where Doc Howard and Wes Weston had a fire and hot coffee water waiting for us.

In addition to the weatherman, who was most cooperative, we want to thank Wes, Doc, Freddie, Ray Stoodley and all members of the hike party for making this hike a most enjoyable day.

GOV. CLEMENT SHELTER - Dec. 13, 1975

According to schedule we were to meet at the Kontolski Fire Station on 12/13/75 for a hike from the Upper Cold River Road to Gov. Clement Shelter. Starting time was 10:00 AM, but with some commitments I had, it was 10:10 before I could get to the Fire Station. However, Wes Weston (Sport and Rascal), Sherwin Start, my son Paul Jr., John Braddock and another hiker was ready to leave for the starting point. The above mentioned hikers reached the hike starting point where the Long Trail and the Upper Cold River Road crosses, and the hike was underway. Wes and I decided to hike the "old road" instead of the Trail, while Paul Jr., John, Sherwin and the other hiker used the trail. Our timing was good as both parties met at the bridge where the trail joins the old road at the same time.

The hike to the shelter was uneventful but very slippery, forcing Wes to assist his Sport and Rascal.

After a fire was started and hot water available, to our surprise, five more hikers appeared, who had planned on the scheduled hike but probably due to my tardiness, had departed the Fire Station prior to my arrival. This made a total of 11 members on this hike, to include Churchill Scott and Jim Frink. The former location of "Blue Triangle" camp was located, across the road and near the brook, but few signs of a camp remained. Although on our return to our vehicles, this writer did not veer from the road down, Churchill, Sherwin and others stopped to view an old water-powered saw mill, just to the right of the old road.

It was a gray, chilly day, and footing was poor due to ice, but a good time was had by all on the hike. We found Gov. Clement Shelter to be in excellent condition, although reports of "nonhikers" during the summer months gave our section much concern.

EDITOR'S NOTE:

Please bear with the producer of this issue of SMOKE AND BLAZES. This is the first issue that I have put out, it is the first time that I have used a duplicating machine in many years, and again many years since I have cut a stinzel for a duplicating machine. YOU WILL FIND ERRORS, in spelling, which I am going to blame on typographical errors, and you will find other errors that you may question. I note (and this is most important, that I failed to place the writer of the PLYMOUTH FIVE CORNER'S ARTICLE on page 2. That article was written by Mauri Wintturi, who I feel did a fine job, and my apologizes to him. We hope that our next issue of SMOKE AND BLAZES will have fewer errors, and that you will still find this paper interesting as you did when Frances and Wes were producing it.

BOARD OF DIRECTOR'S MEETING - Oct 29, 1975

By request of Janet Martin, President of the Killington Section of the GMC, a Board of Directors Meeting was held at her home on Curtis Avenue, Rutland, Vermont at 8:00 P.M. on 10/29/75 to determine certain requests from the Main Club.

The following is the Secretary's report on this meeting:

Janet, Vera, Thelma, Paul Howard, Sr. Paul Howard, Jr. and I were present at this meeting.

Janet spoke about the request of President Ralph Bryant to forward Killington Section History as soon as possible for inclusion in printing of History of the Green Mountain Club. This request was forwarded to Terry Gulick.

Rachael Charland, Paul Howard and Betty Staack were asked to serve as a nominating committee for next year's officers.

"Wes" Weston stated that he sold his mimeograph machine and will no longer be able to print and mail the Smoke and Blazes. His many years of faithful service will be missed and it will be hard to replace him. It was suggested we inquire at the Rutland Business College and Army Reserve Center for quotations on price to print this publication. However, this issue of Smoke and Blazes is being produced by Paul Howard, in an attempt to find if this procedure can be continued within the Killington Section family.

Paul said that due to ill health, it might be necessary to obtain a new Shelters Chairman next year. He has done a very thorough and complete job during the last few years and we hope he will like continuing his good job come next spring.

He also spoke of the Clarendon Gorge Bridge maintainence, and suggest that due to lateness of season, we could offer to creosote and lubricate the cables, but Mr. St. Peter said he could help only at his convenience and detailed so many minute specifications of maintainence that the Killington Section felt that it could find neither the money or the time to say nothing of the personnel willing to do the work.

Also he told in detail how many members of the Killington Section still feel about how the Bridge rebuilding effort was taken out of the hands of the Killington Section by the Main Club after much of the ground work had been laid and financial aid obtained.

Paul made a resolution: "The Killington Section creosole the bridge, lubricate the cables this season, with the understanding that we do not take permanent responsibility for the maintainence for the bridge beyond this fall. This was seconded by T. Valiquette, passed unanimously.

Wes, through Paul, spoke of old trusses and cables from the former bridge that could be put to use as supports for bridges over smaller streams, and that we could pick-up and store these items for future use.

Teh Officers of Wilson Moving and Storage, Inc., after a request, informed Terry it would be impossible to offer any storage space for material from the Main Club. The reason being, according to Paul an official in that corporation, is the complexity of the now existing storage accounts.

Mauri Wintturi and John Braddock have started to creosote Sunnyside, and Pico could stand a coat this fall also.

Paul asked that we conduct another radio talk show describing the various activities of the local section and the Main Club. (Scheduling for this show is contained in another part of this paper).

Respectfully Submitted

Secretary.

HEAVY TRAFFIC

Janet Martin reports that her son Tom took a backpacking trip with his cousin, Ralph Perkins (Grandson of Creigue and son of Peter) from the Application Gap to Middlebury Gap in the first week of August of 1975. They met 117 Hikers in their 3 days on the trail, including Ralph Church who has been working on materials for the youth group leaders on hiking the Long Trail. Seventy two of this total they met the first day (Sunday). Didn't realize this was such a heavy use area.

HELP HELP HELP

We need assistance in making up our next hike schedule. What hikes you would be interested in, where and when do you feel a good hike can be suggested, and would YOU like to lead a hike. Below is a sample questionnaire you could prepare and have ready at the annual meeting for discussion and activating:

LOCATION: _____

BEST DATES: _____ [Hikes are usually scheduled for a Saturday or Sunday]
I would be glad to lead a hike, or will be willing to suggest _____ as a hike leader if available.

Any such suggestions you have, please get the information to W. Churchill Scott at 132 Maple Street, Rutland, Vt. 05701, so we can discuss this matter at the Annual Meeting on January 17, 1976.

CROSS TALK SHOW, Radio Station WHWB

On January 16, 1976, another "Cross Talk Show" will be aired on Radio Station WHWB to bring out the features of the Killington Section and the Green Mountain Club as a whole. On the show, as it is scheduled at this printing, will be Churchill Scott, Sherwin Start and Larry Van Meter, our new Main Club Executive Secretary. This is an unrehearsed program and should prove interesting to all listeners. Be sure to be near a radio for this airing, and we thank Frank McCormack for his giving us an opportunity to put this show on the air.

Don't forget the Annual Meeting on January 17, 1976, Saturday, Beginning at 7:00 P.M. at the Universalist Unitarian Church, 117 West Street, Rutland, Vt.

There are many important items to come before the meeting and plans for our 1976 schedule.

The business meeting will be followed by our usual coffee and dessert. Those who can bring something please call Janet Martin by Friday 1/16 at 773-8621. We thought if people could bring along their favorite old and new and new Killington Section Hike Slides, we might have fun, historically . . . hysterical review of members, past and present. A projector will be provided, so put your slides in a box and bring them along. Jot down your suggestions now and be ready to discuss the spring-summer schedule.

SMOKE AND BLAZES CHANGES

After many years of cutting stencils, printing and mailing SMOKE AND BLAZES, almost single handedly, Frances Roberts and Wes Weston has felt that it was time to resign and let some of the other folks take over. The Killington Section owes a great deal of thanks to Wes and Frances, for the wonderful job they have done over the years.

Let us hope that the many folks necessary to get out SMOKE AND BLAZES in place of Wes and Frances will be as good, prompt and efficient.

Thanks again Wes and Frances, from each and every one of us in the Killington Section.

MISTERY HIKE

The intent of this hike was to climb Green Mountain near Little Rock Pond. We got most of the way up the mountain, but not by the exact route intended, making the destination a mystery, to those seven people that came. We went up the mountain from the west leaving the Homer Stone Brook Trail at the bridge, crossing the brook before the Trail does. Due to difficulty walking (too much snow for boots, not enough for show shoes) we did not have time to get to the summit, but had lunch several hundred feet below the top. All agreed however, it was an enjoyable hike

O B I T U A R Y

We extend our most heartfelt sympathy to the family of Mrs. Adolf Frenkiewicz who recently passed away, at the age of 90, remembering especially her daughter, Mrs. Thelma Valiquette and her grandson, John Joseph and Thomas Joseph Valiquette.

All members of the Killington Section were recently saddened to learn of the sudden and unexpected death of William "Bill" MacArthur of Williamstown, Mass.

The Green Mountain Club has lost a very faithful member, who gave so very much of his time, effort and energy. Bill set a perfect example for all of us to follow with his devotion to the Green Mountain Club throughout his life.

WORK PARTIES NEEDED

Unfortunately, there is a lot of "work" to be done on the Killington Section of the Long Trail by members of this section. We have had work parties advertised in the local media at times that we had work parties, and our turn out has been quite slim. THIS IS YOUR TRAIL, it is set up for your enjoyment and lack of all members to take part in the up-keep of our Trail System makes for bad communications both for the Killington Section and the general public. A work party is and can be fun; blazing, brushing, shelter maintenance to make the Trail System a joy, not a quoted "Freeway", so we can enjoy it. It is fun, the work party, let's see more turn out to assist the shelter's chairman and the Trails chairman.

DEADLINE for next issue is March 15th. Please send all information to Paul R. Howard, 70 Allen Street, Rutland, Vermont 05701. PHONE (Unlisted) 775-2638. The sooner I get the information, the more sure I can get the paper out in time.

EXECUTIVE SECRETARY

I and others of our section have had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Larry Van Meter the new Executive Secretary of the Green Mountain Club., a man to assist us as a Section and the Main Club in General. We have found him to be very cooperative with us, willing to take time from his busy day and discuss all matters in his jurisdiction. He is working at the Main Club Office on Center Street with Manerva Hinchey, and Miss Hinchey states that he has been most helpful and cooperative in his work in the short time he has been there at his duties. With the changes in Smoke and Blazes, he has offered along with Miss Hinchey to be of any assistance possible in the publishing of this paper.

The Killington Section extends a warm welcome to Larry, and we hope that members will feel free to stop in at the Center Street Office and meet him, and wish him well.

FORT CASSIN HIKE November 27, 1975

On November 27, 1975, at 9:30 AM, ten members of the Green Mountain Club drove to Flat Rock Parking Area located on the Otter Creek River Road a short distance from Vergennes. Here the group hiked a short distance and found a very old cemetery where one member of our group, Ani Anderson, made two rubbings of two very unusual gravestones. At this point the group divided so as to follow the two roads indicated at this point of the Journey, one of which was bound to be the "tow" road. One group gave up soon and drove to the entrance of Fort Cassin and were quickly joined by the second group. All enjoyed a hearty lunch over a roaring fire along the shores of Lake Champlain. Mr. Goddard and his son of Shoreham Area Joined us and Jim Frink explained the information that we observed. After our lunch, the group proceeded to inspect the peninsula further and amid the modern dwellings, found a cellar hole which now included two caches that might have been used many years ago for ammunitions. Our thanks to Mr. Adams of the Commodore Inn of Vergennes for arranging this hike and we were sorry that due to unforeseen circumstances he was unable to join us on our trek. He had planned the hike. Approximately 3 miles of the "tow" Road was hiked.

MAD. TOM NOTCH

On November 1, 1975, a beautiful sunny warm day, seven (7) members of the Killington Section together with two visiting hikers, both from Virginia, we gathered to hike from Mad Tom Notch to Lake Griffith, a distance of approximately 8.5 miles. The first portion of the trail was rather steep but was greatly aided by the lovely views and the large stepping stones and logs that indented the path. Six fast hikers made a great fire at Peru Peak Shelter which greatly helped the slower group in cooking their lunch as they arrived not too far behind the first group. No need to "Douse the Fire" as several hikers from Massachusetts came into view as we prepared to leave camp enroute to Lake Griffith. We learned this group had been on the trail for two days and were making Mad Tom Notch for the night. It appears that the U.S. Forest Service are in the process of constructing many thousand of feet of "poncheons" along the route from Peru Peak past Lake Griffith. Ruins of Lake Griffith Shelter could be seen as we jogged along the Trail to the Lake Road. The many look-cut spots made the trip a memorable one for those who had not hiked this section of the Long Trail. I am great-ful to the following members of the Killington Section for making the first hike I have led this year a most enjoyable one for me, to name, Mauri Wintturi, Jim Frink, Mahlin Haustein, Carl Parsons, Sandi Salaby and Mike Cavalier (from Virginia), Greg Bostock and Churchill Scott.

COVERD DISH SUPPER - TALL TIMBERS

About 25 people attended the Spaghetti Supper Social at Tall Timbers Field House on December 7, 1975. The Spaghetti and Sauce were provided by Janet Martin (to include Jack), and others attending brought salads, and/or desserts to complete the menu. The Ping-Pong Table was transformed into an excellent Buffet table and a quality, quantity and variety of food upheld the tradition of the Killington Section Suppers.

A few people came early enough in the afternoon to hike the Blue Ridge Trail as far as the Cascades. Here we understand one of the hikers took an unexpected late season swim. Fortunately, Rachael adheres to the Scout motto "Be Prepared" so had a change of clothing in her car.

Except for this minor disaster, all went smoothly and a good supper and pleasant social evening were enjoyed. We just wish more of you had been there with us.

Our many thanks to Craigie Perkins for not only giving us the use of the Field House, but also supplying us with wood and water and warm fires to welcome us.

THIS IS IT

This is the first edition of SMOKE AND BLAZES to be produced in many years without Frances and Wes, and we hope you find it interesting. As stated before, please excuse the errors, and we hope there will be fewer of them in the next issue. It will make this job much easier if all hike leaders and other members with articles would sit down and type out or write what you have to say as soon as possible after the event. It is a good paper, let's all help in the continuing production of it.

SUNNYSIDE SHELTER WELL LIKED AS AN OVERNIGHT HAVEN

The following is a letter that was received at the Main Club Office, and I think it speaks for itself:

"Dear GMC: On the first weekend of December, 1975, my friend and I utilized the Sunnyside Camp on the Long Trail. We would like to thank the maintainer of the camp for the beautiful split wood and a very clean cabin. The Long Trail has given my friend and I many enjoyable moments.

Thank you very much for your interest. Best Wishes for the New Year.

Sincerely,
Donna Fruscione."

WATER, WATER, BUT NOWHERE TO BE FOUND

Although this happened some time ago, I thought I would like to pass it along to the readers of Smoke and Blazes. On Oct. 26, 1974, a dozen or more hearty souls went on a hike to Rattlesnake Ledge in Fair Haven, Vt. It was a good hike, except for a supply of fresh water. Near the spot that we were to fire up the old coffee pot, the only water we could find was a marsh full of dead leaves, wood, moss and everything else that could have been in it in this wooded area.

It SMELLED, but it was water and we wanted hot drinks. A pot full was scooped up and rapidly boiled for 5 or 10 minutes and although still smelly, brown in color, it was used for our hot coffee and cocoa.

I can not say that all partook of this hot drink base, but the ones that did are still much alive and still getting quite a laugh when we think back at our predicament. THIS IS WANTING A CUP OF COFFEE VERY BADLY.

MOUNT HANDLEY ON A COLD CHILLY DAY

On January 11, 1976, at 10:00 A. M. the weather was below zero, there was a high overcast and snow was predicted, but nine hearty hikers were at the Fire Station, including Larry Van Meter, the GMC new Executive Director. Also there was Jack Crowther of the Rutland Herald and Peter Patten, a young man who hitchhiked in from Fair Haven to be on our hike.

Everyone almost froze before getting our packs and snowshoes on, but soon warmth returned as we walked up an old road toward the summit of Big Handley. Pete gave us a brief history, it was named after the Handley family. The first Mr. Handley from Great Britain had bought some land on the mountain and to impress his friends at home said "I can not ride around my land on horseback in one day." He didn't explain however, the rocks and ledges that prevented this.

Jack used cross-country skis and did a very good job to get up the hills we climbed and had a fast ride back. He also took a number of photos to be used in the Rutland Herald on winter sports, to include hiking, skiing and snowmobiling.

Soon it was snowing, getting near 12:30 P.M. and everyone was hungry, so, of course, we stopped to build a fire and eat. It did not seem like a good idea, as after eating, everyone wanted to start for home, but due to the cold, snow and poor visibility, I guess it was the right thing to do. It was 2:30 P.M. when the hike ended and all agreed it was a very enjoyable outing. (Jack published the photos in the Sunday edition of the Rutland Herald, 1/18/76, along with a very good writeup). MOONLIGHT HIKE, COLD BUT ENJOYABLE

Seven brave souls ventured out in 5° below zero weather for a moonlight hike on December 19, 1975. We originally Shelter, but decided that it would be warmer at Sunnyside, a closed shelter. The sub-zero weather may make us sound like real nuts, but once we were on our way it didn't seem to bother, and it felt rather invigorating as we walked along. The most spectacular thing was how brightly the moon shon on the snow. It was really a perfect night for a moonlight hike and it was enjoyed by all of us who braved the cold.

TRAIL AND SHELTER MAINTAINENCE - Progress

On September 13 and 14, 1975, a work party was due to depart from the Kontolski Fire Station at 9:00 A.M. for an overnight at Cooper Lodge near the summit of Killington Mountain.

Those hearty souls that showed were Lou Catozzi, John Britton, Jim Kapitan and myself. We departed for Sherburne Pass on the hour of 9 bells. On the way we met Doc Howard and Mauri Winturri at Doc's home in Mendon. We talked Mauri into taking some pictures of us doing trail maintainence work. Thence, we proceeded to Pico Mountain, working with all HEART AND SOUL. We stopped at Sink Brook for a rest and refresher. Because it was near 3:00 P.M., and as Jim and I had not planned to spend the night (due to a forecast of snow) we broke company with Lou and John, and descended to Sherburne Pass, while Lou and John proceeded to Pico Shelter to spend the night. On our descent to Route U.S. 4, we were greeted with a hail storm.

Next morning, Sunday, 9/14/75 brought both Jim and I back to find Lou and John who were busily sawing and blazing their way back down the mountain. This was just south of Sink Brook, but Jim and I continued up to Pico to make an inspection of Pico Loop Trail. At the summit we made radio contact with interested people then proceeded to Pico Camp, and we rested, then again started down the Trail to U.S. Route 4.

I would like to express to the Killington Section and the Main Club, my appreciation of the work that Lou, John and Jim did on this work party on the week-end. I hope that the future will bring out many more workers to assist on this very important task, Trail and Shelter's Maintainence.

JAUGGERNAUT TRAIL

Departing our usual starting point, the Kontolski Fire Station on Oct. 4, 1975, Betty Stacek, Bob and Marge Fish and I were soon on our way to West Bridgewater. On arrival, we took our saws, clippers, our paint brushes, swizzle sticks and located the Jauggernaut Trail. We then proceeded to delineate it.

Bob (Mr. Limrich as I dubbed him) kept us laughing with his slish of the tongue "Lim Ricks", as we assended the gradual climb up the old road. We found the Trail in need of clearing and brushing to expose the blazes.

The old road is still the Trail, However, it coincides with newly built roads in some places, so be careful to follow the blue blazes, to assure the right path. We arrived at Ghost Camp at 3:00 PM and we went thru the remains and digested (in small gulps) the great archeological wonder of it along with our lunch. We cleaned out the spring from which came the coldest and purest water you could ever find.

We decided to turn back and head down the hill. We did make one re-route about 300 yards long, to the south of the washed out trail just east of the register. We got back to the motor vehicles about 4:30 PM, where upon, I commenced to give a lecture about modern Forest Management to our Betty, Bob and Marge.

The Jauggernaut work party is one outing I will always remember for a number of reasons. Bob Fish's antidotes and Lim Ricks, Marg's sotle but pesuasive, prodding and ambivalence, and not last, Bob's "Jack Benny" jokes, and my clumsy attempts to come back with a punch line. I have had so far, few oppertunities to work with people, who were so willing to do their part and best for the Killington Section. I am looking forward to having this trail work party again soon, and I fully intend to do my best to see to it that it becomes a tradition and inspiration to all those that follow.

On behalf of all dedicated Killington Section GMC'ers who made the ultimate sacrifice this is respectfully submitted:

HELPING HAND ACKNOWLEDGED

Although in my rush to get out the last issue of Smoke and Blazes, I failed to, I would like to acknowledge the tremendous help my son Paul Jr. was in the operating of the duplicating machine, sorting, stapeling and address labeling of the last, and this issue of Smoke and Blazes with his help, this job has been much easier for me.

OMMISSION:

At the end of the report on the MOONLIGHT HIKE, I regret that I failed to include the writer of that article. This very fine article was written by CAROL MARTIN.

HALF MOON POND

At 11:00 A.M. on February 7, 1976, thirteen of us departed the Koltonski Fire Station for a trek to Half Moon Pond in Hubbardton, Vermont.

Of the 13 hikers, the youngest was six (6) years old. It was a clear mild morning and appeared to be an enjoyable day for a hike. Starting from our parked cars, we traveled a one lane road, but, as the going got rougher, we switched to Snowmobile trails and continued to Half Moon Park - our youngest hiker needing a lift now and then, especially on our return as the weather turned cold and windy.

It was a pleasure to stop at Cindy and Bob's kitchen where we had hot stew, home made bread and hot drinks to warm us up.

At 3:30 P.M. the hike ended and although the sudden change in Vermont Weather is to be expected, all 13 of us enjoyed the wonders of our Vermont outing.

TRAFFIC SURPRISE

Four years ago I hiked from Route 103 to Bolton Mt. In those 10 days I met a scarce dozen others - Mid-August too. The short paragraph in the last issue of S&B shows us drastically the great increase in people hiking and backpacking. We Must be concerned, for many of these "Hikers" have little idea of what they are doing, and most importantly HOW they should be doing it.

If anyone wants to see what happens when swarms of people trample a Trail, visit the White Mts. See the stomped over trail beds, huge foot-made mud holes, long stretches of log and rock paths across these mud trails; plastic, candy wrappers, McDonald's cups and trash where floweres should be; camp sites a mucky mish with all vegetation tramped to death.

Let the White Mts. be a warning to us. We CAN keep our trails and camp sites beautiful, but only if we are willing to approach and show others HOW TO.

PERSONALITY OF THE WEEK

This week we have picked our renowned Jim Frink as our personality of this, the first of a new series.

James C. Frink was born in Scranton, Pennsylvania, and attended schools there through High School. He then joined the U.S. Marine Corps for a period, and went to Syracuse University, class of 1927.

He was employed by Westinghouse Electric Corporation in East Pittsburgh for one year and the New York City Office for a period until 1965, Northeastern Zone Manager, then retired, at which time he moved to Rutland, Vermont.

He first came to Vermont on vacation in 1936, and continued to come each year since then. He had been staying at two cottages built and owned by his wife's father on Lake Dunmore.

Since being in Vermont, he has been a member of the Rutland Chamber of Commerce, Founded the Rutland Rock and Mineral Club, where he served as president for 4 years, and was a member of the Executive Board for a period of 10 years. He resigned this post to find more time for outdoor life and activity.

After coming to Vermont, he met Harold Valiquette who was a very active member of the GMC, and Jim joined the Killington Section. During his membership, he has served as Vice President, Chairman of the Hiking Committee, Director, and has done much in trail and shelter work with other members.

He now lives at 60 Litchfield Avenue, Rutland, Vt. with his wife Ethel, and states that he and his wife are in love with Vermont and that is why they came to Vermont for their retirement years.

Many cheers for Jim from all of us, for on any hike, without Jim, there seems to be something very important missing, we all love him for his energy, his dedication to the Killington Section, and we wish that all shared his enthusiasm in the work and activities of our section.

LITTLE ROCK POND OUTING

After departing our usual starting point, with many carrying snow-shoes, the conditions made snowshoes almost useless, with cold weather thick crust, which made walking slippery and cautious. Of course Jim Frink was best prepared with his heavy duty ice creepers.

Greg crossed Homer Stone Brook, but with wide, raging currents and slippery ice covered logs, the rest of us were discouraged, and we continued up the old town road toward Wallingford Pond. We met the trail just north of "Aldrich Job" and walked north until 1:15 P.M. For about the first time in memory it was impossible to build a fire. All wood was completely water-logged and ice covered. Sterno and Gas powered stoves gave a bit of hot water.

We continued on past White Rock Mountain where we met some snowmobilers bushwhacking along the top of the ridge.

We walked down the Keewaydin Trail to the parking area where once again Carl was waiting to take the stragglers back to their cars.

This hike is a good example of what Creig Perkins always says, that one must be prepared for any emergency in the winter. We should have had fire starters, or ribbon or stick with us in order to have a good fire and hot meal. Also getting a few miles on the trail in winter may mean walking a number of extra miles. But all in all, we had a good time and proved that it could be done and we are already to go again-- Whenever.

BOILING SPRINGS, MT. CARMEL

On Sunday, Feb. 15, Nine of us met at the fire station and drove to Mountain Top Inn. We continued down the road toward the East Boston Trail, hoping we could take the Jeep all the way. At the top of the hill, the ploughed road ended, and only snowmobile tracks continued, so we thought it advisable not to take the Jeep any further. We walked to the East Boston Trail and from there took another trail north and east to it's end.

Before going to the Springs, we stopped by the trail, built a fire, using Harold Roger's saw to make a good pot hanger, filled the pot with snow and we continued. Lou Catozzi and his brother Bill, with Dorothy Kirk, stayed behind to build up and care for the fire so it would be ready for lunch.

At the end of the trail, we crossed a deep gorged creek and started bushwacking thru the woods in the direction of the Springs (North-East).

The snow was five feet deep and we had decided not to take snowshoes because we thought there would be a supportive crust beneath the six inches of new snow. There was a crust, but not enough to support a 200 pound man, so, I, as trailbreaker

It was rugged, but finally John Sch-Immel took the point and saved me from total exhaustion. I called directions to John and we arrived at the Springs shortly thereafter.

The entire water surface, a rough circle about 15 feet in diameter was unfrozen. The water temperature was estimated to be about 50° F. and the bubbling sand-filled water was impressive to watch. The water brought up light sand from the depths. The only place we could reach with my staff was at least five feet deep. It was a dangerous quicksand.

On the way back we passed Lou and Bill who came up to see the Springs. Back at the fire we had lunch and the return walk was uneventful. The 8 mile distance made us REAL TIRED.

ANNUAL MEETING, KILLINGTON SECTION, GMC

The annual meeting of the Killington Section of the Green Mountain Club was held on Saturday, January 17, 1976 at the Universalist-Unitarian Church on West St. Rutland, Vermont.

President Janet Martin introduced our guests, Larry Van Meter, Executive Secretary, and Harry Peet who is in charge of the Caretaker Program.

Paul Howard gave a thorough report on the Shelters. All are in good repair. Have had the usual amount of maintenance work. Jeb Brugmann, Caretaker of Cooper did a good job at both Pico and Tamarack, as well as the general trail portion he had within his boundaries.

Sherwin Start outlined the Trail work. Juggernaut Trail relocation has been dropped. All of the Long Trail has been covered. He spoke very strongly about poor attendance on work parties. Out of a membership of 115, there were times that only 2 would show up on a scheduled work party. We must have more interest in keeping up our Trails and Shelters.

Frances Roberts sent a letter resigning as Smoke and Blazes editor and thanked Paul Howard for taking over and others for the helping her in the past.

President Martin suggested we send a letter of thanks to both Frances and "Wes" Weston for the wonderful work done by them.

Terry Gulick gave a report of Trustee's meeting held earlier in the day. Sweeping by-law changes will be presented at the annual meeting in May. If passed will not be in effect until May, 1977. Worcester-ter Section offered to build a large shelter away from shore of Stratton Pond to replace those at the Pond. Want to discourage wood fires on the Trail, at the shelters and above 2,500 feet.

Breadloaf Section at Middlebury was officially chartered and they extended an invitation to GMC after annual meeting in May.

There was a mis-understanding about the nominating committee and Cynthia Gibbs said it should still be considered and made a motion to keep the idea open and subject to the approval of the Board of Directors, and shall be taken up at the annual meeting. Paul seconded the motion and it was passed.

Mrs. George Kirk made a motion to continue membership in Tamarack Notch-Aitken Forest Association and that the Board of Directors consider an additional donation not to exceed $50.00. "Wes" seconded and it passed.

New hike schedule discussed and hike leaders were requested.

Mr. Weston, Start and Rogers were chosen as directors.

Judi Butterfield resignation and replacement discussed. Sherwin Start is our new trustee.

Larry Van Meter explained Act 250 and it's application to the Long Trail and relocation around Stratton Pond Area.

Sherwin stated we should have a by-law to assure representation at Trustee meetings in case the regular Trustee is unable to attend due to illness or various other reasons.

Wes, Sherwin, Ray Catozzi and Churchill appointed.

Betty Staack expressed her regret at being unable to attend the meeting.

"Wes" explained all of the work he has done as Quartermaster and listed the various equipment we have.

Dr. Howard distributed the Killington-Pico newspaper containing an article and photos of the Killington Hotel of 1880's.

After adjournment the ladies served light refreshments and they were just as enjoyable as ever. Next, slides were shown of back in the 50's and 60's and brought back many pleasant memories of winter week-ends, sugar on snow parties and work parties.

DEADLINE, NEXT ISSUE: JUNE 15, 1976 -

Let's all get a report in and make it

CLARENDON SHELTER OUTING

Although this old hiker can not do as much as he would like to and used to on the Long Trail, it was a pleasure to get out as leader of the Clarendon Shelter hike on Saturday, February 28. We had a full block full of cars on the starting point by the fire station, with "Wes" Weston delivering the necessary coffee pot and hike needs, and Doc Howard there to see us off. I know that "Doc" would have liked to been with us, but had to return to Mendon for other commitments.

Seventeen of us showed for this hike on a day that was almost perfect for all hiking conditions. Jim Frink made the remark to me that (as we turned off the trail road on the last leg to the shelter) he could hardly beleave that we were already at the shelter, it was that enjoyable.

My two sons, Pat and Paul, and my foster son, John Braddock was well ahead of the "pack" and had a fire started when we arrived, and soon the water was hot and ready for coffee and cocoa.

Harold Rogers and others took side hikes, and as I left early with my sons, I can not report on the return for them, but Churchill told me later it was uneventful and a good hike. The shelter was found in good condition and ready for the next "overnighter" that might come along. Accompanying our 17, was my son's dog Rex Von Salsburg Klessheim, a german shephard, who throught the efforts of Pat, carried the coffee pot on his back, quite confidently.

I wish YOU were there, try to plan on the next one.

Paul R. Howard.

BOARD OF DIRECTOR'S MEETINGS:

January 17, 1976: A short meeting was held after the Annual Meeting to hear Mr. Peet and Mr. Van Meter outline in detail the Caretaker Program and it's various rules and regulations.

Janet Martin, with reservations, agreed to serve as President of the Killington Section one more year. "Wes" Weston was elected Vice-President, Churchill Scott, Secretary-Treasurer, Ray Catozzi, Trails Chairman, to succeed Sherwin Start who resigned to take the Trustee position, Lou Catozzi, Shelters Chairman to take the place of Paul Howard, who resigned on doctor's orders.

If new by-laws of main club. GMC are have only one Trustee. Terry Gulick offered to serve until when ~~and~~ if that happens. Mrs. Judie Butterfield resigned and Sherwin Start was chosen to act as Trustee until May, 1977.

January 22, 1976: A well attended meeting was held at the Martin's house on this date.

Janet read a letter of thanks from a youth group who recently used Sunnyside.

The Caretaker Program was discussed in detail and it was decided that Cooper Lodge would be the best location as it would be possible to visit other shelters from there. Vera moved to donate $100.00, Paul seocnded and it was so voted.

Paul spoke of the great amount of help the Sherburne Corporation was in transporting material up the mountain to the caretaker.

Ray and Lou Catozzi discussed the project of up dating folders of the Killington Section and Lou will contact the Vocational School for information on the reproduction.

A donation to the Tamarack Notch-Aitkin Forest Association of $50.00 was suggested by "Wes", seconded by Paul and it was so voted. It was noted that we are going to use the facility for a week end and also the covered dish supper in the fall.

PROGRESS ON THE CARETAKER PROGRAM

The GMC's Caretaker Program is rapidly taking final shape in preparation for this coming summer. A total of twenty-two caretakers will be in their locations by the middle of June.

In addition there will be two supervisors and two "replacements" who will fill in for caretakers on their day off or substitute in the event of sickness or other unforeseen problems.

Each year, Harry Peet, the program director and Club Trustee, receives up to two hundred applications for the positions. As a rule caretakers who have worked previously for the GMC are automatically hired, thus intensifying the competition for the remaining available spots. Harry doesn't advertise these positions; almost all applicants learn of the program from other caretakers while hiking the Trail themselves.

Caretakers are responsible for the

Conjunction with the section trails and shelters chairman), and for educating hikers in the proper use of the woods and the trail. They also keep records of usage so we can determine if use is still increasing on the Long Trail.

The greatest concentration of the caretakers is in the area of Camel's Hump (4), Mt. Mansfield (4), and on the ponds in the southern part of the state (5). In the Killington Section's portion of the Long Trail, the Section has elected to place a caretaker at Cooper Lodge. Harry has selected Cecilia Elwert of Crescent St., Rutland for that job. Cecilia did extensive hiking in the South while with VISTA in North Carolina and has also climbed in the Tetons and hiked end-to-end on the Long Trail, No. 766. She is a graduate of UVM.

Cecilia is a good example of the highly qualified people the GMC has hired for the summer of '76. Get to know them! Those of you who got to know Jeb Bruggmann last summer know how enjoyable and educational it can be to visit the local caretaker. Jeb will be working at Stratton Pond this summer.

Lodge fees pay the better part of the caretakers' meager salary, and this year the fee will be raised to $1.00 for non-members and remain at 50¢ for all GMC'ers.

The Main Club would like to thank the Killington Section for its generous contribution of $100.00 toward defraying the costs of the Cooper Lodge caretaker. This contribution amounts to over half the cost of the caretaker to the Main Club, and in this time of tight money, is especially appreciated.

KILLINGTON SECTION LOSS IS THE ARMY'S GAIN

I received a letter intended for all members of the Killington Section from Lou Catozzi who is now serving his country at Fort Jackson in South Carolina. I knew of no other way to get his message to all of you, so I am printing it below in this SPECIAL ISSUE OF SMOKE AND BLAZES for all of you to enjoy.

24 July 1976

Hello,

Sorry I couldn't make the director's meeting but I had to leave for my Basic Training the Sunday before. My father tells me that it was well attended and that a lot was accomplished. I hope the Killington Section continues to have an active "Activities Schedule" as I have enjoyed in the past.

Army life is sort of different than life around Rutland, but I seem to be adjusting quickly, especially to the 110° plus temperature of July in South Carolina. The area is about 10 miles east of Columbia, the Capital of the State. NO hills or mountains to speak of; if it is over 100 feet above the surrounding area it's called a mountain. And I miss the nice cool green hills and the rich brown dirt of Vermont. Around here all there is are Pine Trees and Oak Trees, and lots and lots of hot sand. It gets into everything, your hair, (what's left of it), your clothes, your boots and everything.

On the bright side though, the food is terrific (as some of you know, I like to eat) and to those of you who were in the Army before, that sign is still up there "Take all you want, but eat all that you take".

I am bunked in an Air-Conditioned Modern, three story Brick building that holds five companies, one thousand men in 50 Platoon Dorms. No more double bunks to fall out of, but steel beds with good mattresses. We are not allowed to wear any Civilian Clothes but I've been given four sets of "Fatigues", a set of Kakki Dress Uniforms, and a set of Dress Green Uniforms.

Our Battalion will be graduating from our basic Combat Training on Thursday, September 9, 1976.

I hope to see you in September when, if all goes as planned, I should be home for 10 or 11 days.

Because I hope to hear from all of you, below is my address. See you all in September

VOLUME 30, Number 2 - KILLINGTON SECTION -- GREEN MOUNTAIN CLUB - June - Oct. 1976

GREEN MOUNTAIN CLUB ANNUAL MEETING, MAY 29, 1976, CAMP KEEWAYDIN, LAKE DUNMORE, VT.

As reported by Sherwin Start

After Arriving and registration, the Annual Meeting got underway at about 10:00 AM with President Ralph Bryant calling the meeting to order. - The first item on the agenda was discussion of the minutes of the last Annual Meeting. No one seemed to have a copy of the minutes of that last meeting, so they were accepted as not read.

This in my opinion is not the earmarks of a big organization of which the Main Club seems to profess that it is. With this topic of discussion closed, we pushed on to the Treasurer's Report that was actually explained in some detail by Granget Kammerer, Treasurer. After some embarrassing moments, Granget turned the report over to Don Wallace who is Chairman of the Budget and Finance Committee, who very clearly stated that the reason for the $7,400.00 deficit of the Main Club is that we hired an Executive Director and a too optimistic projection of the expected income. As for my feelings, I am strongly in favor of Don Wallace's philosophy, meaning we must face reality, cut expenses, even if it means cutting or doing away with certain programs.

Here we have the basic confrontation that has faced the U.S. Government for years, the battle between the extremeist and the conservatives. It appears that the extremeists have put the Club in debt over it's head. We have at the head a fine Beta Kappa key man, who has great visions of operating the club like a big corporation. On the other hand, we have another fine Beta Kappa man, who uses logic, realism and just plain common sense to guide the Club's physical policy and resources. With this thought in your minds, as you read the Treasurer's report for the last fiscal year, which of the two men do you feel should be responsible for the finances of our Club ?

Following the Treasurer's Report, was the Auditor's report. Because Ron Nemcosky could not be found, this report was not read. Oral assurances by Vice President Joe Frank and Executive Director Larry Van Meter, that everything was A-OK, the motion was made that the Auditor's Report be accepted as read. The motion was seconded and passed.

My viewpoint is that, and I feel that at this point the membership were beginning to be aware of this, the Main Club is run by a few key people, who expedited the agenda much as they please without the approval of the trustees or the general membership. It appears that the membership were being pushed into accepting many items as being the gospel truth without verification or evidence to support the assurances of the key men.

Don Wallace then, completely unprepared due to the lack of communication, gave the Budget and Finance Committee Report. I feel that Don gave a very comprehensive report under the circumstances, making it quite clear he did not approve the revenue projections and optimism that has put the Club in the red. Had he had proper knowledge that he would be called on to give this report, he would have had a stronger case.

We move to the Report on the Trust Funds and it was made by Joe Frank, who apparently has full control over them, and also the Club's Investment Portfolio. In essence the Report stated that we are using the funds as they were intended to be used by their donors. Here again, we have no documentation to prove this but if they say so it must be so. (Get the Idea ?).

I have some serious reservations about the Investment Portfolio. The basic concept of an investment is to make money, but however it appears that the opposite is occurring due to some faulty advise on the part of someone as what to invest in. Lets get out of the Investment Business and stop loseing money, or at least let's invest if we must, in something that will produce a dividend.

Madeline Nules gave the nominating Committee report and had the best nominees for the ensuing year. They were as follows:

President	Ralph Bryant
Vice President	Joe Frank
Secretary	C. E. McGoon
Treasurer	Georget Kammerer

All were unopposed, with no floor nominations, so all were elected by a showing of hands.

Also, we have a number of young new trustees at large, perhaps with some new blood in the organization we can get this Club back on it's feet and functioning like a HIKING CLUB.

The President's Report was quite short, clear and concise, with no statement of achievement in the year past and no goals set for the ensuing year. However, he did praise almost everyone for what they had done and termed the year as a highly productive and fruitful year and appreciated the opportunity to serve.

Larry VanMeter was in the spotlight next with the Executive Director's Report. At the onset Larry stated that the Main Club needs volunteer help to get the new guide book out. So if there is anyone who is willing to spend an hour or two in assisting the Executive Director, please do and we thank you very much.

Larry stated that the GMC has got it's work cut out for it in securing land Owner Agreements on the Section of the AT that the GMC has just recently assumed responsibility for (Rt. 12 to the Connecticut River). This work is being paid for by the Dartmouth Outing Club and the Federal Government. He also went on to say that some portions of the Trail (or most of it) doesn't follow the ridges like it does in Vermont (South of Sherburne Pass). As a matter of fact the AT follows roads, goes through fields, pastures, etc.,

Thus, there are a lot of problems in the securing of land agreements.

Joe Frank was our next speaker and the subject was the New By-laws. (Editor's note: Here Sherwin wanted the by-laws printed to be published with this issue of Smoke and Blazes, however, I felt it impossible to type up the necessary 12 pages of the printing of the proposed By-laws of the Main club at this time. I have a copy of these By-Laws or they may be seen at the Main Club Office.) The Trustees have done a lot of work on these by-laws, but are by no means final and we are actively soliciting your comments either in writing or orally. Please be free to contact me at my home whenever you feel like expressing yourself and your opinion. My home is at 18 Pine Street, Rutland, Vermont and my phone number is 775-3193. I am going to call a special meeting of the entire section membership in September to discuss this topic and many more. So, please either write, telephone, attending the meeting or all three at any time.

Section Reports were given by the Section Presidents and most of all of them reported things were pretty much on an even keel with a very noticable lack of interest noted by most. Some Sections can not recruit officers and most of all they are losing members.

Killington Section has been losing members gradually a few every year.

1971	103 members
1972	105 members
1973	87 members
1974	99 members
1975	98 members
1976	86 members

Lets all pitch in and get some new membership for our Section.

The last and final item of business was Committee Reports. As there were no Committee Heads prepared to give a Report they were put off with noticable exception of the Membership Committee which gave a lengthy report.

GOVERNOR CLEMENT - Work Party

A rainy day at 9:00 A.M. on April 15, looked like the work party scheduled for Gov. Clement Camp might just be a fizzle stick. However, Doc Howard and I were sitting in his car at the Fire Station when Cecilia Elwert showed and then soon after, Larry Van Meter, followed by Wes Weston. I had our Company's 4W drive pick-up, hoping I could give Doc a ride right to the shelter, and also, have transportation to lug out any debris. We departed for the Triangle in our 3 vehicles, intending to all transfer to the 4W drive for the ride up the old road to the shelter. At the Triangle, none other than Sherwin Start barreled in and joined the party.

At this point, Larry and Cecilia decided to walk up the road, and we "old timers" decided to go via 4W Drive. Although there was one very bad mud hole, the pick up truck made it with no difficulty to the shelter. Accompanying us at this part of the trip was Wes's "Sport" and "Rascal", and Doc's "Obadiah", a beagle hound.

Soon after the fire was started, Marg & Bob Fish showed, parking their car just beyond the "mud hole" heretofore mentioned. Joining us about the same time was Churchill Scott. A lot of time was used in eating, although some work was accomplished, with Rachael Charland coming in time to grab the rake handle from me. We were pleased to find the shelter in good condition, with little trash. Larry and Cecilia made the rounds and picked up a lot of "rusty" trash that had been ingrown in grass for some time. The dirt floor needed racking and the immediate area around the front of the camp also, which was accomplished. A more major project that we were not prepared for is repair of the "swivel grate" on the fireplace which has come loose, and which Lou intends to repair.

For an ending, Obadiah, Doc's Beagle did not show when it was time to go. A return to the site in the 4W, failed to find him, but Obadiah, on his own, returned to Doc's Mendon Home, some 3 days later, how, I can not answer.

LOVELY SENTIMENT

The following verse that I found in my collection of items for publication is a fine article about a section of the IT that all Killington Section members feel near to their heart, and I quote:

"By the side of the shadowed mountain, is the Long Trail Lodge serene,
With it's beauty so rare and rustic,
Mid the hush of woodland green;
Where the rocks and the solid ledges
Lend a firmness to the scene.

There's a path that is leading upward,
To Old Pico's summit, grand,
Where the view from it's lonely tower
Is the finest in the land,
And it links ev'ry heart to Nature
With an everlasting hand." End Quote.

If the writer of this fine verse will acknowledge, so will I in next issue.

NEW YEAR'S EVE AT GREENWALL SHELTER

By Bob Crawford (28" & 12" snow).

Wishing you were here; just to watch the snow fly down and wonder with a kiss (depending) for the NEW YEAR. A song dancing among the night time trees - carving shadows in the deepening sky. Are we falling you could ask, and hear the hollow echos of a train whistle, somewhere far below in the valley, where life goes into a New Year in orange hats and confetti; strewn like the stars. The magic, it goes on - won't you share it with me? Whisper memories in smoke that rises from your breath and laugh - that even the silent snow smiled at. Love, such a small word for a world that is so complex. It rolls off the sunshine, between flurry clouds, onto our faces. I love you and that makes the whole winter world wake up. A flower for your troubles. HAPPY NEW YEAR - It'll be GREAT.

GET WELL FAST MAURRI

A few weeks ago, our renowned friend, Mauri Wintturi had a heart attack and was placed in Intensive Care at the Burbank Hospital in Fitchburgh, Mass. He was in Intensive care for 5 days, and was discharged the following Tuesday. He visited Doc Howard on Sunday, 5/23/76, with Dana Riotka as his chauffeur. He had his attack while visiting the Roitkas who, in their quick efficient action, did a lot to lessen Mauri's troubles. He has since visited Doc for several days and is feeling much better. He asked me to say that he really appreciates all the cards and get well wishes that he has received from all his friends. He hopes to be able to again soon hike in his favorite spots.

WINTER WEEKEND - TAMARACK NOTCH

March 12 to 14, 1976

By Janet Martin

There weren't many takers at the start of this weekend at Tamarack Notch but the leader and daughters, with the help of Wilber Weston on the Transportation end, took off up the Notch Road in the face of a Horrible weather forecast. Actually it was not at all bad and an enjoyable walk up the hill, with the road even bare in spots . . . in addition to the one "hot Spot" that is always bare even when the snow is deep, . . . Cause unknown.

After some adjustment to dampers, etc., the stove was made to heat and supper was prepared. Midway thru this, Lou Catozzi turned up, projector in hand. Must say it's the first time I ever saw a backpacker hike with a slide show for entertainment of the group. We had brought along some pop-corn so we had an enjoyable show. Lou had hung his hammock outside and reported he was dry and warm in spite of some wind and snow during the night. The predicted rain held off until late afternoon/

In the morning more people began to arrive, including several from my night school "Wildlife" Class. We took a long walk into the city forest area behind the camp looking for tracks. Since the snow did not stop falling until about 4:00 AM, tracks were not as plentiful as had been hoped. However we did see deer, racoon, snowshoe hare, cottontail red squirrel, and a bob cat which apparently calls camp home. Two of the wildlife class people followed up a snowshoe hare track, right to the rabbit and had to throw a couple of snowballs before it high-tailed it out of there.

The Martins' had to return to town Saturday afternoon so Lou was left in charge at camp as several other people were expected up for Saturday night. Eventually there were 8 more who braved the weather forecast to spend Saturday night.

The condition of the Notch Road made the Editorial page in the Rutland Herald.

(An added note to Janet's fine article, this writer had been up on Saturday afternoon in a 4W drive, and decided to ask Wes Weston and Ray Cattozzi if they wanted to join us in spending the night. They accepted my invite for a ride and we proceeded to camp. With us was my son Pat and John, and "Sport", Wes's dog. Before I reached the end of the good road, I stopped and shifted into what I thought was 4W drive. On reaching the end of the good road, I found that I had not properly shifted and fish-tailed. Ray and Pat got out and we all viewed the situation, I had not properly shifted into 4W, and did at this time. I started ahead, assuming that all were in the vehicle, but I found on reaching the summit of the hill, Ray had not gotten the vehicle and in street shoes was hiking up the road in a snow storm. I don't think that Ray was too happy at the time but later we all got a laugh and all ended well with a good overnight).

DOWN THE LONG TRAIL

We have a historic road in Mendon, now partially abandoned due to beavers and the wear and tear of time. Let us hike it to where it comes out on Route #100 on the day before Battle of Bennington Day, on Sunday, August 15, 1976 beginning at 10:00 10:00 A.M. Let us have members of the Green Mountain Hiking Club as guides and units from the 1st. Mountain as advance detail. Drive up the Turnpike on Elbow Road, then hike the rest of the way. Bring your own lunch. Maybe someone has a camp coffee pot and will brew some. Maybe friends can meet you at Route 100 or the hearty will hike both ways.

The above copy of this hike is from the MENDON BICENTENNIAL NEWSLETTER, and Larry Van Meter has asked us to publish it. If anyone is intrested, contact Larry Van Meter or Getty Page, East Ridge Acres, Rutland, Vermont. Sounds like an interesting hike, lets all plan to go. . .

IT WAS WORTH IT. ALL THE WAY

I want to thank all readers of Smoke & Blazes for the fine comments that I have received since the publication of the last issue. As you all know, it is a lot of hard work, but I enjoy it, and will continue to try to do my best for you.

PERSONALITY OF THE WEEK

This week we would like to honor our long time friend, associate and corresponding secretary of the Main Club, MINERVA H. HINCHAY, in this, the second of a new series for Smoke and Blazes.

Although Minerva told me that she would be 39 years old on her next birthday, I find that she was born in Rutland, Vt. on September 11, 1895, this was 31 years ago and Minerva is still very active, both in her leisure time and on her job.

She attended the Rutland City Schools, graduating from High School in 1913 (before this writer was born). One of her classmates was the late Cleon Perkins, the father of our Killington Section President, Janet Martin. (See elsewhere in this issue for details of his recent death).

Although she did not have the advantage of a college career, her knowledge of secretarial work would put some college graduates to shame.

After graduating from High School, she went to work as a stenographer for the Rutland Fire Clay Company, where she worked for four or five years. Her salary was considered good in those days; it was a full $5.00 per week. After leaving the Fire Clay company, she obtained employment with the Roger Pike Insurance Company, where she put in the next 20 years of an active life.

After leaving the Pike Company, she went to work for the Vermont Children's Aid, working with Mrs. Fred Fields. This was back in 1950 when the Green Mountain Club office was located in Mr. Fields Office space. Mr. Fields having difficulty in obtaining a secretary for the Club, asked Minerva to take the position, and she did. At this time, there were 200 members in the Green Mountain Club.

The Field Office closed and Minerva moved the GMC office to her home on Park St., where she continued to put in 10 to 12 hours a day, and at times, working all night to get the Long Trail News out on time (she told me that after those sessions, she would sleep all the next day).

In the early 1970's, when Shirley Strong was the President of the Green Mountain Club, the office was moved to it's present location on Center Street, Rutland, Vt.

Minerva is still there, with her pleasant smile and welcome, putting in 8 to 10 hours every day.

On the suggestion of Doc Howard, a day in 1974 was set aside and proclaimed "Minerva Hinchay Day" and a large party was put on in her honor at Craig Perkins "Tall Timbers". This was attended by many, to include the then President, John Hufford and this writer. It was a wonderful memento to a very dedicated lady.

In replying to my question "What extraordinary events and happenings could you tell me?", Minerva stressed the tremendous change that has taken place in the Club and it's structure. It's membership has grown from the 200 when she started over 20 years ago, to over 3500 today. This increase has created the need for new specialized people to handle special jobs. One of the newly created jobs is Executive Secretary, which has been competently filled by Larry Van Meter. Minerva has nothing but praise for Larry saying that President Ralph Bryant made a fine choice on picking Larry. Larry works in the same office with Minerva, and was in the office during my interview. He could not resist the temptation to speak up and had nothing but the highest praise for Minerva. He like all of us, feel that Minerva is one of the most dedicated person that the Club has.

Although Minerva was an ardent hiker in her younger years, time has reduced her hiking to walks on Park Street, and she enveys those that still can get out and hike the trail.

She recalls the annual meetings at the old Madison Street School, with lunches that followed at the Berwick Hotel. Her favorite spot in years past was the Long Trail Lodge at Sherburne Pass. All 3 of these buildings have since been destroyed, either by fire or by man. She favors the stretch from Sherburne Pass to Killington summit.

Our expression of graditude and admiration goes out to Minerva for her dedication to the Club, her tremendous hard work in the past 22 years which benifited all GMC members, and her pleasant personality and smile we all like to see when we stop in at the Center Street Office.

EDITORIAL

Of the 100 or so copies of Smoke and Blazes that were mailed out in March, 1976, let's assume that 90% of the readers did in fact read the fine article written by Ann Kausloff entitled TRAFFIC SURPRISE.

Of the 90%, let's again assume that 5% did take the article seriously and will try to help in the enlightening of the would be hikers that (and I quote) "does not know what he is doing, and more importantly, how he should be doing it."

There then remains a large percentage of the Green Mountain Clubber's who feel that the problem is not their own, but that of section officials, club officials, caretakers and trails and shelters chairmen along the trail system.

It appears, in my opinion, this is the sorry fact, and until ALL GMC'ers realize that it is THEIR problem, and not only the problem of a picked few, our Trail System is going to hurt from over use by the casual, untrained hiker.

You, as the most likely one to be on the Trail, will meet up with the un-trained hiker; will see what he is doing wrong, and how he should be doing it right. As a paid up member of the GMC, you have the responsibility to help these hikers and teach them the proper use of our Trail System; for example, leaving a shelter clean, neat and with as much firewood as was there when they arrived, and teaching them the many things you have learned, the carrying out trash, a very important part of this teaching.

I feel that Harry Peet has put much effort in his Caretaker Program, and one of the most important items that he drills into his selected caretakers is the teaching of the casual hiker, especially those who are new on the trail.

As Ann said, we CAN Keep our Trail System in an excellent condition, and we will if all members of the GMC in all Sections do their part in educating the untrained hiker.

MAIN CLUB ACTIVITIES

By Larry VanMeter. . .

The Main Club has a number of projects underway this summer on the Long Trail. Besides the Cartaker Program, which I reported in the last issue of "Smoke & Blazes", the Club has six ranger-naturalists stationed on Mt. Mansfield and Camel's Hump to help educate the thousands of day hikers using the area and to protect the fragile areas near the summits of the two peaks.

The Long Trail Patrol is, for the second year, working under a U.S. Forest Service contract to relocate the AT/Ut south of Glastenbury Mountain. George Peralstein, the Patrol leader, reports that progress has been exceptionally good so far, in part due to the cooperative work of the energetic Bennington Section.

The Club is also, indirectly, helping to keep a watchman atop the firetower on Stratton Mountain. The Tower, which was built in 1913, was scheduled by the State to be unmanned this summer because of financial difficulties and because most forest fire surveillance is now done by airplanes. Rather than leave the tower and watchman's cabin to certain destruction by vandals this summer, the Club worked with Forests & Parks and the U.S. Forest Service Backcountry Research Program in Durham, N.H. to raise the money to keep the tower manned. No Club money was used in this project, but without the GMC acting as a catalyst as well as a conduit for the donated money, it is unlikely that Hugh Jondry, the watchman, would be up in the tower educating the many neophyte hikers who climb Stratton Mountain in order to get a view from the tower.

The Club is also cooperating with the USFS Backcountry Research Program on a number of projects, several of which were reported on in the February Long Trail News. Not mentioned was the continuing work to perfect a composting outhouse system for high elevation lodges and an investigation to determine the usefulness of sign-in registers to gather usage figures on the Application Trail and Long Trail.

In other matters, the Club and Worcester Section have been dealt a setback by a delay in permission from International Paper Company to build a replacement shelter for Willis Ross Camp at Stratton Pond. It does not appear that a shelter will be built there this year.

JAY PEAK WEEK-END TRIP 4/30 - May 2, '76
By Rachael W. Charland

Only three people, Lou Catozzi, Churchill Scott and myself enjoyed the Spring trip to Jay Peak on April 30 through May 2, this year.

Friday evening was a warm, Spring Day and after arriving at Jay Camp, Lou made his version of Beef-Stroganoff while I prepared biscuits for our dessert - - - Strawberry Shortcake, complete with the Whipped cream !

Saturday dawned a sunny day and as we left Route #105 hiking toward Shooting Star Shelter, we found the trail in good condition. We enjoyed a brief lunch at this shelter and found hiking toward Laura Woodard Shelter a completely different story. During the distance of approximately 4.1 miles we encountered all kinds of weather and trail hazards, high stream-like trails, mud, fallen trees and lots of SNOW - - two to four feet in some areas. Even Lou and Churchill, veteran hikers, said they had never seen the trail so difficult. Strong winds and pouring rain greeted us at the summit. Lou stopped and chatted with the Tram Operator while we headed for the thick wooded trail that would lead us back to Jay Camp. Lou managed to get ahead of us and he and our Canadian visitor, Andre, had a great fire going in the ever faithful stove. Even Churchill's thermometer registered 86° about 8:30 PM. As we strung many lines of rain-soaked clothing throughout the cabin, beef stew whetted our appetites. All were too tired for dessert !

Sunday was a rainy day (Anyone know the foot miles between Route #242 and Route #105? Ask Churchill sometime). A hearty breakfast was especially enjoyed by all. Andre left for the trail to Jay Peak while Lou made ready for another trip to the Tram station and still others attended church services in Montgomery. The sun did shine briefly Sunday morning so we hiked a bit of the trail from Route #242 toward Hazen's Notch. Let's have more hikers for the next north Country hike - - We've seen those mountains in the Spring and Winter - - How about a look at them in the Fall. . . .

PICO CAMP WORK PARTY, June 5, 1976
By Sherwin Start

At the fire Station, we met Wes Weston, Jim Frink, Robert Diddescomb, Lou Cattozzi, Carol Chapman, Betty Staack and Rachael W. Charland, all ready and anxious for the hike. At 8:45, we departed the Fire Station and arrived at Sherburn Pass at 9:00 AM. After an uneventful hike, we arrived at Pico Camp at 10:15. After a short break, we got started, and this found Jim in a general clean-up, who started afire to burn up burnable trash. Robert and I jacked up the the North-East corner of the shelter and put in supports that had previously given away. At 12:00 noon Carol was still in the process of cleaning the interior of the camp, while Robert and I were still working on the repair to the structure.

This work was dreadfully needed, to give you an idea, there were 50 pounds of tin cans, bottles and other containers which had collected in two weeks, for we had removed 8 bags of trash 2 weeks earlier.

At about 1:15, Rachael, Betty, Lou, Wes and others prepared a full-course turkey dinner, HOT ROAST TURKEY that is, with all the trimmings, to include the giblet gravy. This was the most delicious meal that I have ever seen served on the Long Trail. Our thanks goes out to Rachael especially, who prepared the big bird and lugged it up the mountain. I told her she should have kept the Turkey on the hoof and led it up the mountain and then butchered it and cooked it.

With the additional supplies brought in by the second echelon, Betty, Rachael Lou and others, who were reported at the fire station at the beginning of this article, more maintenance work was accomplished, such as stove-pipe repair, creosoting, glass repair, entrance step to the entrance door and other tasks that had to be done.

Next work party is July 19th., which will be the Jaegermant Trail, and let's all get out and help. Hope that that party can be as interesting and as useful as the Pico Party described above, it was a good turn out, and we need that kind of turn out to make this maintenance work pay off. We have boasted about our fine shelter condition.

TRUSTEES MEETING, May 29, 1976

By Sherwin Start

(1) Election of Officers:

This was all incumbents, all unopposed, all re-elected unanimously.

(2) Committee Assignments: None

(3) Life Membership:

Ralph Bryant apologized to all present because of neglecting to raise the Life Membership at Large, although annual dues was raised. After discussion, it was then turned over to the Membership Committee for recommendations for the next Trustees meeting. It was the general consensus that the Life Membership dues should be raised to conform with the increase in At-Large membership dues.

(4) Relocation of the Main Club Office:

This matter was very vaguely touched, to consider dollar and cents costs, advantages or disadvantages, but general discussion was prevalent. The matter was then turned over to the Planning Committee for a recommendation at the next Trustees Meeting.

(5) Land Owner Agreements on the A.T.:

Larry VanMeter stated that there is a very serious problem between Route 12 and the Connecticut River. However, your Trustee stuck his nose in and requested the Main Club to undertake as soon as possible the Land Owner agreements between the National Forest Proclamation Boundries (Rt. 140 to U.S. 4) This motion was seconded and then passed, as a first priority item, leaving the section from The Rt. 12 to the Conn. River a second priority

The next meeting of the Trustees will be held at Stowe, Vermont, time and place to be announced later.

LAKE PLEIAD, 3/28/76 - Middlebury Gap, Vt.
By Sherwin Start

At 9:00 AM we departed the Fire Station in Rutland and proceeded to Middlebury Gap. It was 50 in Rutland and the weather was fine. However, when we reached the Gap the temperature was 25° with wind from the west at 15 - 25 miles an hour, with the sun hidden behind the clouds. The ground was covered with snow to make the conditions more undesirable. Still not dampened by the weather, the 8 of us, Jim Frink, Churchill Scott, Anna Nyiri, Harry Hayes, Kathy Hayes, Andy Hayes, Cris Hayes and myself. We started along picking as many of the frozen foot prints as we could for support. In spots that were not too many, we did at times sink in up to our waists. The only snowshoes that were among the party was a pair that I had brought and felt glad that I did so. It was a 30 minute struggle before we reached the Lake Pleiad shelter, and almost afraid to venture any further. At the shelter we met up with a well armed, but poorly foot dressed "Daniel Boone" who was none other than Churchill Scott's boy Robert. Bob had a good fire going which we all enjoyed and appreciated Bob having ready. After warmth had returned, we ventured further with Jim Frink in the lead. It appears that no one knew where they were going, as the route to Lake Pleiad was not known even to our illustrious leader. After several attempts to find the route, all were wet, tired and next to exhaustion. At this point, I and Chris Hayes along with Andy Hayes started for the summit of Worth Mountain. It took us about 30 minutes via the trail and ski slopes to reach the top. The two boys were light enough to stay above the Corn-Snow cover. We checked in at Worth Mountain Shelter. The view revealed Lake Pleiad nestled in a little hollowed out place in the rocks.. I talked on my CB walkie talkie to some folks in Glens Falls, N.Y. and Manchester N.H., then started to descend to Lake Pleiad, the boys carrying 75¢ worth of cans and bottles they had collected on the summit. Snowshoeing down hill is different than uphill and I had my problems, and we soon picked up the blue blazes of south Trail to the lake. After 15 minutes, with difficulties of falling and crawling at times, we stood on the East Shoreline of the Lake at the site of the old Lean-to. Because of the difficulty in our endeavors, we would have planted a flag and claimed the lake for the Green mountain club if we had had one. As no one else showed at the lake, we departed following the Blue Blazes on the Trail East back to the Main Trail. Had we followed the trail we started on in our first search for the Lake, we found we would have been correct and found the Lake in the first place. On return to the Shelter, the rest of the group were around a blazing fire in the process of enjoying a cup of coffee. Cris and Andy had hot chocolate and dried their socks. When all were well warmed, we backtracked to our vehicles to end a perfect hike.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS MEETING. . . .

By Churchill Scott

A Board of Directors meeting was held at the home of President Janet Martin on Tuesday, May 18, 1976.

Present were Mrs. Martin, Thelma Valiquette, Vera Perkins, Ray Catozzi, Cecelia Elwert, Wes Weston, Paul Howard, Lou Catozzi, Churchill Scott and Harold Rogers.

Lou Catozzi reported that new flyers describing the Killington Section, and a recruiting measure, were being readied this summer. Also the Trail from Route 140 to Sunnyside was cleared and Blazed. Sunnyside to Gov. Clement was blazed. Gov. Clement to Cooper was blazed and is O.K. However, here we need drainage work. Cooper to Pico is good except for some blow-downs. Pico to Route 4 could stand drainage work also. Lou explained a new ski trail and road to be built by the Sherburne Corporation which will cross the Long Trail. He showed on maps a proposed re-location of the Long Trail to the west which would also avoid the wet area. This met with the approval of the directors.

A letter from Don Wallace to Lou Catozzi about the "Adopt a Shelter" program was discussed. Don has received offers to adopt Sunnyside and Governor Clement, but it was pointed out that Ann Mauseloff and Miss Lynn Eaton were our appointed adopters of those two shelters respectively some time ago. A letter will be written to see if they are still interested. Paul Howard has since written to Don Wallace and explained that although the shelter program is good, we feel we are keeping up our shelters, and can not see his appointing of adopters for our shelters.

Mrs. Martin stated that shelter reports go to sections for quick action. Paul suggested expense bills go to the section for approval. Possible conflict of interest for Miss Elwert, as caretaker at Cooper, is responsible for Governor Clement also. All these items were voted on and passed to present to Mr. Wallace at the annual meeting.

Miss Elwert described her duties as the caretaker at Cooper Lodge, her need of a broom, door latch and help to clean up the trash left from the winter use.

Wes made motion, seconded by Harold to approve the relocation of the Long Trail north of Cooper at new ski cutting with the Main GMC to do the necessary paper work on Act No. 250.

The removal of stoves from camps at high elevation or heavy use was discussed. Camel Hump and Mt. Mansfield are gone but the Department of Forest does not want to remove the one at Cooper. Jeb Brugmann the caretaker at Cooper last season would not allow a fire in that stove at Cooper. It, at that elevation, was a hazard to the fragile nature of the woods. Jeb felt that if the stove was not there, temptation to use it would cease. Jeb did a very fine job at his post there last season, I know, I kept close track of what he needed, etc. The other stove in question would be the one at Pico Camp. Because the elevation is not as great as Cooper, the real danger in this stove is the tremendous cutting of trees in the area, green or dry, with no consideration of the hiker as to the damage being done to the growth in that area.

SUMMER LOCATION, CHURCHILL SCOTT

Let us report that Churchill Scott will again be at his same post at Plymouth State Forest Park in Plymouth, Vermont. He will reside in the same cabin he had last year and his duties will be about the same as last year. We envy Church, for it is an outdoor life all of us would much enjoy. Read your schedule, we have a week-end scheduled at Pinesy Hollow in Plymouth on August 21 to 23. That is my birthday, and I intend to be there.

NORTHAM PICNIC AREA HIKE Jan. 25, 1976 By Sherwin Start

Because of automotive difficulties, this hike leader did not meet the 12 people ready for the scheduled hike to Northam Picnic Area, and the group left the fire station at 9:00 AM.

At the end of the portion of the road that was travelable by car, the cars were parked and on skis, snowshoes and in some cases, using just plain boots, the group took off up the road to the picnic area.

Fortunately for those that were not equipped with skis or snowshoes, the road had been used for snowmobile trails and the snow was well packed to support the weight of the hikers.

In the meantime, your leader had overcome his automotive difficulties and was in route to the scene. After parking my automobile, getting into my snowshoes, I sprinted up the trail to the picnic area.

On reaching the area, I found Rachael Charland, Jim Frink, Carol Martin, Carl Schmidt, L. Slusmon, J. Crouther, Lou Cattozzi, Churchill Scott, Bob Pryer, Harold Rogers, C.O. Parsons, Janet Martin and P. Woodbury, all cuddled around the fire enjoying their lunch.

The fire was in the huge fireplace at the area, making a very warm setting. Harold Rogers finally found some water and hot drinks were available.

The group split up then, one group going up the hill to the shelter and the other group hiked off to the G.C.C Stone Shelter.

On rejoining later, we readied and hiked out to the parked automobiles and departed for home. It was a good hike, and the group was no worse for the lack of a leader at the start.

PINNEY HOLLOW, Plymouth, Vermont 6/28/76 By Paul Howard

Unscheduled and unplanned, at the spur of the moment, Wes Weston, Doc Howard, Mauri Wintturi left for a visit with Churchill Scott at Pinney Hollow. Learning of this, Lou Cattozzi and I decided to join the group. Apparently it sounded interesting, for Ray Cattozzi, Billy Cattozzi, and Carl Schmidt joined us, and the evening was a fruitfull event, although no formal meeting was held. Doc, Wes and Mauri stayed the night and my car full returned to Rutland about 10:00 P.M.

SUCKER BROOK TRAIL 6/13/76 By Robert Carey

Only three of us turned out for this hike on a fine Sunday morning. Doc, Paul and others were at the Fire Station at the take off time, but for other reasons, they could not make the hike.

Rachael Charland, Robert Biddiscombe and I in Bob's vehicle, proceeded to Goshen to locate and conquer the trail. Our most difficulty was locating the trail, but we finally did and proceeded up to Sucker Brook Shelter on the L.T. At this point we enjoyed a rest, lunch before starting back to the vehicle.

It was discouraging to find a rake and other tools there with the handles burned off. This sort of thing costs money and is spoiling our trail system. The shelter was in good condition otherwise, and the day was perfect for the hike.

BALD MOUNTAIN By Janet Martin

Although Bald Mountain is not on the Long Trail System, there is much hiking and a lot of work to do there in the upkeep. The Senior Girl Scout Troup 342, with myself as leader and advisor spent much time working on the Aitken State Forest in Mendon getting the trails ready for the summer influx of hikers.

The trail starting at the Girl Scout Camp runs in a figure 8 pattern returning to the Girl Scout Camp. The work we have done is essentially the same as would be done on the L.T., although the area is not as well known. A fine article appeared in the Rutland Herald about our work on this trail, along with good pictures of our group at work. This was published Sunday May 9, 1976.

HONOR STUDENT

Betsy Martin, daughter of our President, Janet Martin, was named Valedictorian this year. She is a winner of a National Math Scholarship, and a regional winner of the University of Vermont Life Math Contest. She placed second in the 1976 French Teachers contest. She is very active in the Girl Scouts, and will study forestry at the University of Maine in Orono, Maine next fall. Congratulations, Betsy, and

SMOKE and BLAZES

VOLUME 30, Number 3 - KILLINGTON SECTION - GREEN MOUNTAIN CLUB, October - Dec. 1976

A WEEK-END AT THE BICENTENNIAL GREEN MOUNTAIN CLUB INTERSECTIONAL

By Rachel Charland

On Saturday, August 28, 1976, I arrived about 9:30 A.M. and registered at the office of the Green Mountain Club Intersectional located at the Twin Hills Girl Scout Camp in Jonesville, Vermont. Everyone was so friendly and helpful in explaining the activities planned for the coming week. A Guide was dispatched with me to locate my tentmate, Dot Knight. She had spend Friday night in a shelter because of the heavy rain. She selected a tent site and we proceeded to pitch her tent and get her gear in order. Meari Winturri stopped by to chat as we were working and told us about a Nature Hike that had been planned by one of the caretakers at Little River State Park. Dot decided against going on this hike so her friend, Elizabeth Ahern, of Connecticut accompanied me to Little River where we were met by a group of campers there. Not only was it a Nature walk but a Historical walk as well as the Caretaker had documented a leaflet which told about the various former home sites as well as the old saw mill in the area. As we walked along she told us about the various flowers and bushes and some background of each of the sites. Delicious blackberries added to the enjoyment. At the end of the afternoon, Elizabeth and I attended Mass at Watbury and the day ended with a fine dinner at Twin Hills and folk dancing.

Heavy rain made Saturday evening a trying time but all seemed to survive. One unfortunate group of 4 found several inches of water in their tent and had to move to higher ground to dry out. Bad weather still prevailed on Sunday and all events were late getting started. Elizabeth Ahern gave Bob Carey and myself a ride to Mt. Mansfield summit, and Bob and I hiked the trail northward. Although the group that hiked to Camels Hump met with bad weather, we had a fine hike with the best in scenery. Lunch was at the Chin. On this hike we met approximately 40 hikers, and among them was the smallest dog I have ever seen on the Trail who had hiked up the trail behind his master. One outstanding point of this hike was for me, the view of the lake in the clouds, a small lake, but certainly the highest lake in Vermont. After descending the trail I finished that part of the trail by walking from Smugglers Notch back to the entrance of the trail where Elizabeth was waiting for us and we returned to be greeted by a delicious Broiled chicken dinner.

With so much from so many GMC members and friends, my first impression of an Intersectional was most pleasant and I want to thank Bob Carey, Elizabeth Ahern and Dorothy Knight for all their assistance. I feel that the annual Intersectional is an opportunity for all members of the Green Mountain Club to get together to understand the meaning of G.M.C. and how to cope with the problems, structure and all that concern good hiking people, and to enjoy social entertainment with the kind of people we have the same interest with.

PINNEY HOLLOW WEEK-END - AUG 21, 1976

The Pinney Hollow Week-End camping trip was rather poorly attended. At the Fire Station, Jim Frink, Mrs. George Kirk and Paul Wiggins were there ready to go. Meari Winturri and Rachel Charland arriving at Pinney Hollow separately with the latter attending the Crown Point Military Road Hike from the Boy Scout Camp at Plymouth north along the famous French and Indian War road to the foot of Saltash Mountain.

The remaining four drove past the Coolidge Home and Cheese factory and parked. Walking along this road toward Morgan Park.

PINNEY HOLLOW - Cent.

After breaking into open country with good east and southernly views the group turned east on the Whetstone Brook Road, heavily damaged by the storm Belle in July. Jim and Mauri arrived to have lunch at the cottage with me. From 2:00 P.M. to 4:00 the leader spent at the Farm and Wilderness Fair hoping to see some more Killington Section Members.

At the Contact Station in the Park 4 to 8:30 the leader hoped to see some of the folks that had planned to stay overnight but on one arrived. Upon returning to the Cottage the latest Smoke and Blazes plus the schedule was found.

When plans were made for this outing that fell on Paul Howard's Birthday, it was hoped that a good turn out would materialize so it was very disappointing to see no one there on Saturday night.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS MEETING July 15, 1976

A Board of Directors meeting was held at Pinney Hollow on Thursday July 15, 1976 Present were Janet Martin, Vera Perkins, Wes Weston, Rachael Charland, Paul Howard Harold Rogers, Sherwin Start and Churchill Scott. Guests were Jack Martin, Mauri Wintturi, Harry Peet and Cecelia Elwert. "Adopt a Shelter" Program discussed in depth and Wes made a motion to allow members of the Killington Section to volunteer as adoptees first and then if unable to find any, contact Don Wallace, head of the Program. Motion was seconded by Vera Perkins and passed. Information has been received that the Pioneer Valley Section has the same feeling. Paul read a letter from Frank Boquaert with an offer to help the Killington Section on Trail Clearing and work parties.

Need a Trails Chairman to replace Lou Catozzi who left for Army Service. Bob Biddescombe was suggested.

Wes offered to look up list of suggested duties for various officers and committee heads which he drew up some time ago.

A work party was planned for Saturday, August 14, 1976 and Cecelia suggest water bars and work on trail from Sherburne Pass to Pico and beyond if possible.

Report of Cecelia Elwert, Caretaker of Cooper Lodge, reports that Pico-Outhouse needs repair. Cooper bunks need repair and the spring, coolest on the trail has developed a leak. At Tamarack, the porkies have been busy on the shelter and the out-house, the latter needing jacking up. Governor Clement needs repairs to fireplace grate and Cecelia suggest that signs may help to prevent further damage if it were advertised that the grate was movable. The path to the water supply is eroded.

Mauri stated Sunnyside spring should be repaired. Bucklin Trail should be Blazed. Around Little Killington, Trail eroded and should be relocated a short distance.

The Juganout trail to be worked on by Camp Cox or Sagamon.

The subject of Trash barrels came up and Sherry made a motion to purchase two with covers and chains for road crossings. This was seconded by Rachael and passed.

Harry Peet will relay this idea to Main Club to interest them in Trash Disposal. Caretaker program policy deferred until a meeting with Larry Van Meter.

Harry Peet explained caretaker program and stated it has become more efficient as time goes by. He is glad to receive help in obtaining named of possible caretakers. He suggests that members of the Killington Section be contacted before caretaker for our area is hired.

Paul Howard explained chance of getting a duplicating machine at a reasonable price. He was authorized to look into and purchase same. Sherry Start stated some posters in short supply.

Meeting ended in good season and all enjoyed Janet's delicious loaf of home made breads and Rachael's Black and White Cake.

SPECIAL MEETING OF THE KILLINGTON SECTION BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

By Rachael Charland

On Monday, 10/4/76, an evening special Board of Directors meeting was held at the home of our President, Janet Martin. A List of Volunteers who have been working on the Long Trail repairing damage done to it by Hurricane Belle will in the next issue of Smoke and Blazes. Sherwin Start Trails Chairman, stated that response of the volunteers for working on the Trail Restoration program has been overwhelming. About 65 waterbars and approximately 290 feet of ditch so far has been completed on the Trail from Sherburne Pass to Pico Shelter.

Carl Schmidt is the new Quartermaster for

The Killington Section due to the planned departure of Wes Weston to reside in No. Carolina. Paul Howard was appointed as Vice-President, again in replacement of Wes who had that position.

In appreciation of the long and tireless dedication that Wes has given in service to the Killington Section, a subscription to VERMONT LIFE was presented to him. Wes in turn presented a plaque that he had obtained after fire had destroyed the former Long Trail Lodge, and which was imbedded in a rock near that sight.

We will all remember Wes as a dedicated member and we will all miss him. We wish the very best to Wes and Baily in their new venture ! !

Sherry Start gave a short report of a recent Trustees Meeting that was held in Stowe. Also, Sherry announced that Wes's name was mentioned and he has been recommended for the Honorary Service Plaque that is given by the G.M.C. to the most outstanding member of the year. The meeting ended with delicious refreshments service by Janet.

THE GMC AND THE SUMMER OF 1976

By Larry VanMeter

The GMC has had a busy summer. Most Sections had active hike and work party schedules, and as reported in earlier edition of Smoke and Blazes, we had some 25 caretakers, 6 ranger/naturalists, and 8 Long Trail Patrol people on the Trail. Cecilia Elwert did an especially good job as caretaker of Cooper Lodge, thanks in part to the generous Killington Section contribution which helped pay her salary.

The summer of '76 was unusual in several respects. Three deaths occurred on the Trail: 2 heart attacks in the Mt. Mansfield region, and a drowning on Camel's Hump. In addition, our Mansfield rangers were kept busy with the unusual business of helping authorities investigate to hang glider fatalities and the discovery by a hiker of a badly decomposed body found off the L. T. just south of Smugglers Notch. Since our caretakers and rangers started keeping records in 1971, '76 has shown a sharp decrease in hiker traffic. Poor weather was at least partially responsible for this, unexpected, but not entirely unhappy situation.

The upcoming issue of the Long Trail News will give details of the replacement of Carmel Camp by a fine open-face shelter of the Tucker-Johnson design.

We have no word from the International Paper Company on approval of the Worcester Section's proposal for Stratton Pond. The trustees' Long Range Planning Committee has recommended the relocation of the Club Office from Center St., if economically feasible. Endorsed unanimously by the trustees at their September meeting in Stowe was a move to the Long Trail Lodge "dorm" a small out-building near the site of the original L. T. Lodge. If such an arrangement can not be worked out, relocation to Montpelier was prominently mentioned so that the Club can work more closely with the Dept. of Forests & Parks, the legislature, and be closer to the "private stretch" of the L. T. where the GMC is the sole maintaining organization.

The storms in July and August caused considerable damage to some parts of the Trail. However, as George Pearlstein, Trails & Shelters Chairman, noted in his report to Ralph Bryant, "...while it is convenient to say that these storms wreaked varying amounts of havoc, we should not forget that the real culprits are our years of neglect and our failure—despite the 1973 experience—to maintain and protect the trail with the worst possible run-off conditions in mind. Let us hope that other Sections will follow the lead of Killington and Bennington in scheduling special work parties to restore and protect the trail."

Without belaboring the point, I was a little discouraged to read Sherwin Start's report on the Annual Meeting in the summer issue of Smoke and Blazes. Concerned GMC'ers need only talk to other Section members who attended (among them, Rob Carey, Lou Catozzi, Rachel Charland) or pick up a copy of the minutes at the Club office, to find that Sherry's report was erroneous and misleading.

I think it's important for all GMC'ers to remember that the policy and decisions of the Club are made by its Board of Trustees, and not by the staff (Minerva and myself) or a "select group of people." On the Board there is 1 trustee for every 70 Section members, and only 1 trustee for every 450 at-large members! Each trustee has equal voice and vote. If there are problems with the so-called "main club," then they are largely between one section and another, or between individual GMC'ers. As the characters in the comic strip "Pogo" learned about pollution, "We have found the enemy, and he is us!"

With trustees in proper communication with the section, and vice-versa, the volunteer director of the Adopt-a-Shelter program, a N.Y. Section trustee, could never have assumed Section responsibility for the maintenance of certain shelters. Although the problem was rectified at the September meeting, if the trustees had specified how the program was to be run at the outset, the whole problem could have been avoided. Your trustee Sherwin Start and Terry Culick are both dedicated and energetic GMC members. But unless they know how you feel and you are sure to find out from them what happened at meetings and how they performed it is very difficult for them to work in the best interest of the Killington Section

CARMEL SHELTER TO SOUTH POND

By Rachael Charland 9/25/76

On Saturday morning on the 25th. of Sept. Chris Oey, Carl Schmitt, Jim Frink and I met at the Koltonski Fire Station at about 10:00 AM and prepared for a hike to Carmel Shelter then to South Pond. Cars were spotted at each end of the hike trail and the hike commenced at 10:30 A.M. at the New Boston Trail in Chittenden. AGAIN, THERE IS NO TRAIL SIGN INDICATING THE CORRECT DIRECTION OF THE NEW BOSTON TRAIL. Jim Frink indicated this neglect in his hike report last year. It is a mystery to find out who is responsible for all of the blazes, blue or white, on this trip from Carmel Camp to South Pond. In many instances the trail is not adequately marked. Also a very dangerous form of wet ground covering is being used on the trail and that is sheets of tin roofing covers the ground in wet areas without much thought that when this material is wet and covered with leaves, it becomes a very slippery means of crossing a swampy area. It did not take us long to reach the newly constructed Adirondack shelter at the site of the former Carmel Shelter. After lunch we continued to South Pond and found many trees that have blown down in the path and much stubble that leads to dangerous falls evidently someone has tried to clear parts of the trail without much help in the way of tools. Good weather was the order of the day and all of enjoyed the sunny, cold fall day.

PRESIDENT'S REPORT Sept. 12, 1976

By Janet Martin

At the Pot Luck supper last night which was attended by about 22 people it was decided that the condition of our section trails made it necessary to revise our hike schedule to allow for a sufficient number of outings to get the Killington Section of the Long Trail restored to a more usable condition before snow sets in otherwise the spring runoff is liable to make matters even worse than they are now. We will need the help and cooperation of all Killington Section members and friends to get our trail back into good condition. We are responsible for it and we have a record of excellent trail maintenance, but we have not done the preventive work of installing waterbars and drainage ditches which probably would have prevented much of the damage which resulted from the heavy storms this past summer.

The following schedule changes were made:

Sept. 11, Bald Mountain, this hike was changed to restoration work party at the last Board Meeting. September 18, Regularly scheduled work party will continue work started on the 11th. Ray Gatozzi in charge. Oct. 2, a work party will ride the Gondola to the summit of Killington and work from Cooper Shelter north toward Pico and Sherburne Pass. October 9, regularly scheduled work party -- hope to finish up work in the Pico-Killington Area. October 22, work on area in need of restoration in the vicinity of Button Hill. Oct. 23, Mreck Forest walk, reduced from overnight. It should be noted that Sherwin Start has undertaken direction of this trail restoration work but we desperately need a Trail's Chairman and regular committee members. If you can help please contact Sherwin or your President...773-8621.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS MEETING - AUGUST 31, 1976

Present were Paul Howard, Janet Martin, Vera Perkins, Churchill Scott, Sherwin Start, T. Valiquette and W. Weston.

Sherry discussed hurricane "Belle" damage to our section of the Long Trail. Sink Brook to Pico Junction very bad. Needs great amount of work and water bars. Feels more work than section is able to do. Chain saw necessary. Wes appointed to look into cost.

Wes spoke of the proposed By-Laws of the G.M.C. Article 6 on Trails and Shelters and also about how he felt that it was unnecessary to increase the office and administration expenses so greatly.

Paul explained a comparison of the Killington Section to the Main Club as Vermont is to the United States. Each section cannot go off by its own. It was felt that both parties need each other and must work together.

Sherry gave a report on work parties. Very poor attendance. Suggest they be called "Trail Restoration Projects". Ask if hike leaders be willing to cancel outings in favor of work parties until Nov. 7.

Vera spoke of ways to make donations to trail maintenance.

Sherry asked about organizational membership in section. Do not have at present. Read ways to meet deficits.

Possibly hire caretaker at Pico and Cooper and furnish equipment as a way to help improve Trail.

A resolution was approved to include day of week on the next outing schedule.

Paul spoke about another radio talk show to promote interest in the section. Suggested that the girls take over next time.

The Board discussed a replacement for Ian Ward and Wes was asked to contact Betty Stacey who agreed to serve. It was passed unanimously.

Sherry stated the proposed By-Laws say each section shall have a President, Sec.-Treas. and a Trails Chairman.

Rachael Charland has been asked to contact Robert Biddiscombe for the latter position.

After the meeting a very enjoyable social hour was given to the Board by Wes and we all had a very pleasant evening.

A very thorough report on "Belle" damage was read from Cecelia Elwert, Cooper Lodge caretaker. All shelters in good shape. Trails did not wash too badly. But the Bucklin Trail and Long Trail Pico Junction north to Sherburne Pass are worst hit and will require a great deal of work.

BAID MOUNTAIN HIKE CONVERTED TO TRAIL RESTORATION PARTY, PICO SOUTH
Six people reported for work with shovels inland Saturday Morning Sept. 11, 1976.
Among them we were pleased to find Lou Catozzi home on leave from the Army, his father, Ray, Sherwin Start, Jack Crowder and Janet and Nancy Martin. We started out with Sherwin with the rented power saw indicating where to put the necessary water-bars to prevent further erosion of the trail and cutting the necessary logs. We started work on the first up hill pitch beyond the Long Trail Lodge buildings and soon were working diligently in two crews. In all we installed thirteen water-bars and channeled drainage in two extremely wet areas - one right at the register where fill of logs and dirt hopefully will get the hikers up out of the muck when the mucky fill dries out!! Another very wet area just beyond this was also ditched and filled. Then came the big gulch - here we installed a water bar at the bottom and filled and leveled to achieve better drainage and also found a good location for another water bar part way up to divert some of the volume of water running down the trail...a log will be cut to install here next week. Then filling can be completed and the crew continue on to install the rest of the waterbars which Sherwin has laid out and cut between there and Pico Shelter. Mid way thru our labors the first hiker of the day appeared and kindly offered to help us a bit...thru conversation we learned he was John McDonald, newly arrived in the Rutland Area, invited him to the Pot Luck Supper and a new member was recruited. We weren't so successful with the other hikers who came along but at least they are now aware of the work which someone has to do to get the trail into good hiking condition!

Report Completion of the Bald Mt. Trail relocation and extension. The Bald Mt. trail is now a figure 8 going over both summits and a new loop back from the Red Rocks viewing area around the side the mountain eliminating the necessity of returning to the top before descending the Mountain Work completed by Senior Girl Scout Troop 342 on September 2.

BUSINESS MEETING - TAMARAC NOTCH Reported by C. Scott

After a tasty and enjoyable covered dish supper at Tamarack Notch a short business meeting was held.

work parties, now called Trail Restoration Projects will be held on Saturday, September 18 and October 9, 1976 as scheduled on the outing list.

Hike to Dorset Mountain with the Bennington section cancelled and Paul Howard will try to arrange for use of the Killington Gondola to bring the Restoration party to the summit of Killington Mt. and work will progress from Cooper Lodge toward Pico to meet a point the Oct. 18th. party will have completed coming from Sherburne Pass southward.

Editor's Note: The Sherburne Corporation as in the past was very understanding of our needs and very cooperative in allowing us to use the Gondola.

Merck Forest hike changed to a day hike on Sunday, October 24 and on Saturday October 23rd, work will be done on Button Hill Area.

Janet led the discussion of a list of questions by the Long Range Planning Committee of the Main Club. Sherwin Start our Trustee, will report our answers at the next Board of Trustees meeting.

MAIN PURPOSE OF GMC: To see to the overall needs of the club such as blazing; taking care of shelters; brush clearing --namely good sectional control. Shelter repair was acclaimed by all present as adequate. Outhouses and sewage control could be improved. Some talk of the new type of outhouses in use at Little Rock Pond. Should GMC make an effort for more members? Yes. Should there be greater effort sign standardization on the trail? Yes. What changes in the Caretaker program should there be? The Sections should be consulted. Should Ranger naturalist program be continued. Yes, it is very good program. It is good hiker education. There was some question about the cost of the patrol and caretaker programs and it was answered by those present that they thought (2) more people should be added to the present patrol or even to the caretaker program. More elaborate GMC headquarters was squelched. Since GMC does more and more business with the State (Act 250, for example) it has been suggested that GMC headquarters be in Montpelier. There was much discussion. More wanted the the GMC Headquarters here in Rutland area not necessarily on Center Street but much discussion about purchasing, leasing or renting of presumably empty buildings near the Long Trail opposite the present Long Trail Lodge. There doesn't seem to be any address for the Green Mountain Club except a Box number at the Rutland Post Office. A few of us know where the office is on Center Street but the average hiker would not. Sherry asked his questions about raising funds for the Main Club and most were against it -- Paul very much in favor of raising funds for our own Section and perhaps a percentage for the Main Club. He was very certain that he could raise funds from the local businesses. These funds to help with more money for the Caretaker Program, locally. It was noted that money given to the GMC, as an organization, for a specific purpose should remain just that way. No such monies to be put into the General Fund.

A policy should be set up for hiking the trail in the winter months. There was much discussion. Such winter hiking is NOT recommended for the novice or inexperienced hiker. Other subjects were the need for a Guide for the outlying trails, GMC should influence the Legislature to assist the GMC as the Long Trail is a vital resource to the state, Ski expansion should be restricted and controlled.

If the GMC had $10,000.00, what to do?? Trail improvement and coordinate field work. Trail assignments for new Guide Book. Can barely keep up with our own Section, but at most would consider maintaining trail to Tucker-Johnson Shelter, inclusive.

The proposed By-Laws changes were discussed. Any interested person may obtain a copy of these changes from the GMC office on Center Street. Rachael Charland was appointed to read activity report at next Annual G.M.C. Meeting.

VOLUME 30, Number 4, - KILLINGTON SECTION, GREEN MOUNTAIN CLUB, January - April 1977

ANNUAL MEETING, KILLINGTON SECTION, GREEN MOUNTAIN CLUB, January 15, 1977

As submitted and reported by W. Churchill Scott

The 1977 Annual Meeting of the Killington Section was held on Saturday, January 15, 1977 at the Unitarian Church attended by about 30 members. Out of town folks included Ralph Williams, West Rutland, Mr and Mrs. Lloyd Weeks Springfield and also "Wes" Weston from Raleigh, North Carolina. Also, attending was Larry Van Meter, Executive Director of the Green Mountain Club.

The Secretary and Treasurer's Reports were read and accepted.

Janet gave the President's report and also the results of the Main Green Mountain Club Questionnaire filled out at our last Annual Meeting.

Sherwin Start reported on Trails, Stressing the amount of work done to repair Hurricane Belle damage and how important it is to keep ahead of the maintenance work. Some hikes were changed to work parties, now called restoration parties.

Janet read Cecelia Elwert's report on her varied experiences as caretaker at Cooper Lodge and her recommendations for next year.

Ray Catozzi spoke about the Shelters and their conditions. Pico and Sunnyside work parties during season. Others were visited and cleaned and "picked-up" for the hiking season.

The outing Program headed by Rachael Charland, resumed the Winter-Week-End-Hike and visited Half Moon State Park, Boiling Spring, Mount Abraham, Cavendish Gorge and Rock Point in Burlington for the first time. Plus a wild flower identification hike to Bald Mt.

The membership dropped to 103 from 114 in 1976.

It was voted to donate $50.00 again to Tamarack Notch Aitken Forest Association for we use their facilities for the Winter-Week-End and Covered Dish Supper.

Mrs. Jean Davies brought us up to date on the Pittsford Ice Cave Fund and stated that within a short time the legal Title for a right-of-way and purchase of the area will be completed. She also presented a number of slides.

Both Sherwin and Larry discussed dues credit for persons joining the Section and also the Main Green Mountain Club at 3, 6 or 9 months into the membership year.

Mrs. Dorothy Kirk established a Fund in memory of Mr. George L. Kirk with a check for $500.00. Mr. Kirk, a long time Rutland Herald employee and for 25 years the U. S. Weather observer, was an ardent Green Mountain Club member and country wide authority on all items of Natural History.

To be named the George L. Kirk Trails and Shelters Fund of the Killington Section of the Green Mountain Club, Inc. This Fund to be managed by the Killington Section and when the principle reaches $5,000.00, the income will be used for maintenance. Mrs. Kirk will continue to contribute with the understanding that the Section do the same. A number of methods were discussed. Voluntary donations at the time of paying dues, gifts in memory or honor of a person, or a small donation on hikes.

Sherwin urged everyone to read and digest the proposed by-laws of the G.M.C. to be printed in February issue of the Long Trail News.

Directors elected: Raymond Catozzi, Rachael Charland, Carl Schmidt and Churchill Scott. Rachael Charland appointed Trustee to replace Terry Gulick.

Paul Howard sent greetings from Doctor Howland for being unable to attend the meeting. Also, Mauri who could not make it.

It is hoped that the Green Mountain Club will be able to have offices on the Long Trail Lodge Property by Summer.

Our thanks to Janet Martin for a job well done as President of the Killington Section, to Larry Van Meter for his part in the purchase of a new Mimeograph Machine, to Vera Perkins and Thelma Valliquette for all their help as directors, and especially Dorothy Kirk for her generous gift.

Also enjoyed was a extra special showing of nature flower slides, and songs by the Martin girls to fit the theme. After refreshments of the finest and tastiest variety was served, the meeting ended in a pleasant and happy mood.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS MEETING - 1/15/77

At a Board of Director's meeting following the Annual Meeting of the Killington Section the following Officers were elected:

PRESIDENT: Carl Schmidt

VICE PRESIDENT: Raymond Catozzi

SECRETARY-TREASURER W. Churchill Scott

Cooper Lodge was again picked as the most appropriate location for a caretaker this season. Sherry Start suggested a sum of $150.00 toward the caretaker program, seconded by Paul and passed with the provision that the Section recruit our own caretaker if possible.

Work Parties were discussed by Sherry Start and he stressed the importance of keeping ahead of the maintenance work and more interest in the maintenance of the trail by all members of the Killington Section.

Shelter Adoptor Program was discussed and it was brought out that certain stipulations do exist before an adoptor is assigned to a shelter.

The need for more young people was discussed and methods of attracting the young people to our section, and it is hopeful that our new brochure will be useful.

Many thanks from Paul for the Killington Section and the Main Club in the purchase of a new Mimeograph Machine to put out more clear and legible copies of Smoke and Blazes. (Ed. note: It won't help my spelling!).

LONE ROCK POINT By Jim Frink

Today, although Churchill had given a notice to the Rutland Herald about the trip to Lone Rock Point, apparently it never was printed and as a result only 6 showed up at the meeting place. We did pick up another at the High School Parking Lot in Burlington.

Churchill had written to the Episcopal Diocese and gotten permission for our visit to their property, so we drove through the gate, up to the Chapel, Office and Gymnasium and announced our arrival. Then we continued to a point near the lake shore and walked down to the water. The fault thrust we had come to see was visible to our left across a cove of the lake. Then we walked to Lone Rock Point on steep slippery shale and inspected the line of demarcation between the over thrusting Dunham Dolomite and the shale streaked with calcite.

I gave them the following short talk on the geology of the area:

The essence of geology is change. Tennyson realized this when he wrote:

"The hills are shadows and they flow from form to form and nothing stands; they melt like mists, the solid lands, like clouds they shape themselves and go."

Arrowhead and Eagle Mountains in Milton; Pease Mountain in Addison and Waybridge, are all thrust blocks.

The latest rocks in the state are the glacial accumulations which belong to the Pleistocene or Glacial Epoch, of the Quaternary Period.

The Lower Cambrian Dunham Dolomite which forms the overthrusting member of the Champlain Fault as far as Lone Rock Point, includes Eagle Mountain, Red Rock Point, Mallets Head, Ethan Allen Park, and Lone Rock Point. It's Maximum width is 1.4 miles.

The Lone Rock Point overthrust is the most striking topographical feature of the Champlain Fault. It is one of the finest examples of over thrusting in the United States, and has been visited by geologists from all over the world.

After a thorough inspection of the fault, we climbed the escarpment and enjoyed the beautiful views of the lake and the Adirondacks. After returning by car to the Bishop's residence, we further explored for a half mile. Lunch was at Ethan Allen Park, which we enjoyed and further exploration done. The Top at Indian Point, once the principal lookout for the Algonquin Indians, has a large tower but this was closed because of unsafe steps. According to the inscription on a plate within the tower states that it was built in 1905 by the Vermont Society of Sons of the American Revolution, dedicated to Ethan Allen, for his capture of Fort Ticonderoga and his assistance in creating the State of Vermont.

We returned to Rutland via back roads and all had a wonderful time, we regret that so many could not have been with us.

BELMONT AREA HIKE - August 7, 1976

By Anna Nyiri

The hike was not rained out but the nine hikers were rained upon generously. Though we were undecided about completing the planned walk, 7 of us did, while two turned back to drive their cars to meet us on Route 155 at the exit of the woodland road. We were very happy to see the rescue cars. It was lucky that temperatures were mild because we were wet. The 7½ year old hiker denied she had had a good time, but we adults knew otherwise.

PROSPECT ROCK AND OUT reported by
 W. Churchill Scott

At 9:00 A.M. only Jim Frink, Carl Schmidt, Rachael Charland, Betty Staack and myself attended this hike planned to help members earn their End-to-End patch. The weather was very good, blue sky, bright sun and a very warm temperature.

A long easy up hill grade found us at the Spruce Peak side Trail at lunch time where a large flat table high rock held our stoves and food while a near-by fire lent it's atmosphere for warmth.

One more hile of up grade and then downhill to Prospect Rock and the Look Out. Here we followed the old Rootville Road, slipping and skidding and mumbeeing to ourselves about who said this was an easy 7 mile hike. Soon we were at our spotted cars and another section of the Trail was finished.

G.M.C. MAIN OFFICE REPORT by Larry Van Meter

Things have been busy at the office on Center Street this winter, although not quite so hectic as in the summer and fall when hiking season is still going full tilt. Most of our time is spent pulling the details and data from the season of 1976 together, and laying plans for the next season.

The move of the Office to the Long Trail Lodge site was unanimously endorsed by the Green Mountain Club trustees at their September meeting in Stowe, Vermont, and indications are encouraging that something can be worked out with the land owner. At present, however, we're waiting for the Lodge itself to be sold. The realtor does not expect much sales activity until the end of the ski season in March. Hopefully by the beginning of the summer season, we will be up at the "Carriage House" near the site of the original Lodge.

Finances for the Main Club have turned out very well this year. After a couple of bad years with substantial deficits, the 1976-1977 fiscal year promises to show the Green Mountain Club running in the black by at least $1000.00. At large membership loyalty, despite the big dues increases a year ago, is largely responsible for our improved situation.

Harry Peet, the director of the Caretaker Program, and I both feel that Cecilia Elwert did an outstanding job at Cooper Lodge last summer. Apparently the Killington Section also agrees, as evidenced by an increased contribution authorized by your directors for the 1977 caretaker program.

Minerva and I, speaking for Ralph Bryant and other G.M.C. officers, wish Carl Schmidt the best of luck in running the Killington Section next year, and Janet Martin in running the Intersectional at Tamarack Notch. Any help we can provide will be gladly given. Best of luck too, to Sherry Start in his new position with the U.S. Forest Service in the state of Utah, what are we going to do for excitement (and trail work) with Serwin gone?

RADIO "Cross Talk" SHOW, W.H.W.B.

On January 11, 1977, another, now the third, Radio Talk Show featured the Killington Section of the GMC. With our host, Ed Larson; Janet Martin, Betsy Martin and Cecelia Elwert (and myself as a silent sitter) reported to the Radio Station just before 10:00 AM. We went on the air at 10:10 and the ab-lib show went smoothly for an hour. Several of the important items concerning the trail system was brought up. The necessary trail maintenance, the dangers of "winter hiking" and other aspects of interest to all hikers. We hope that most of you heard it. Cecelia did a fine job in explaining her job as caretaker at Cooper in 1976, along with the different people she met. We expect to have another such show in about six months, and any member interested in participating, please contact either Paul Howard or Churchill Scott. Tapes of the show will be available. EDITOR

RESTORATION PARTY, August 14, 1976 by Sherwin Start

This was a scheduled work party but was less than routine. It was vigorous. Don Mollern, Cecelia Elwert, Jim Frink and I put in 21 water-ditches and excavated 46 feet of trench and constructed 18 feet of cribbing. About noon Rachael Charland and Betty Steack passed us on their way to Pico Camp where when we arrived we found a delicious meal of Roast Chicken, gravey, hot vegetables, stuffing, hot rolls and cranberry sauce ready for us.

I would say that our Roast Chicken Dinner was the only one cooked and served at that elevation and without customary modern conveniences, in the entire state.

After this fine meal, Jim and Don went back down the trail to Sherburn Pass, Betty and Rachael went thru to Governor Clement Camp, and I went up to the summit of Pico to modulate with a few friends in N.H. Cecelia was left at Pico, apparently totally eshausted, but happy with the day's activities.

MERCK FOREST HIKE, October 22, 1976

By Rachael Charland

On a blustery fall Saturday morning on Oct. 22, 1976, only four hiked to the luxurious Lodge located in the Merck Forest of South Rupert, Vt. Chris Oey, a new member of the Killington Section, Churchill Scott, Eric Anderson of Castleton and your leader enjoyed exploring the vast acreage and numerous trails. There was plenty of wood for the fireplaces, one of which was in our bunk room. Sunday, we hiked up Mt. Antoine amid the snowflakes.

The caretakers of Merck Forest opened up the Museum that is located in a large barn on the property. A great deal of work has been expanded to offer to all who wish to investigate the various types of flower and fauna of the Merck Foundation. No doubt spring-time would offer even more natural surprises and the Killington Section looks forward to enjoying this lonely spot once more.

SUNNYSIDE SHELTER - Week-end hike by Churchill Scott

Although Paul Howard was to lead this hike, because of hospitalization, Harold Rogers did agree and did lead this outing. Saturday's blue sky and bright sunshine saw 7 of us visit Sunnyside again. After gathering firewood for the night and a good lunch, Jim Frink left us to watch the Patriot Game, while Rachael Charland and Harold Rogers, and Churchill Scott visited "Patch Hollow" (Bear right where Long Trail begins climb up Button Hill). A high farm area with celler holes, lilac bushes, beaver dams and a wood duck protector is a good discription. We learned later that the tracks we saw was that of an Otter. More firewood as found and cut.

Ray Catozzi and Lou Catozzi (Lou was on leave from the Army) arrived and after a hearty supper, we played cards, told stories and watched the stars go by and finally filled up the stove for the night.

Another beautiful day on Sunday, Carl Schmidt showed up with his cross-country skiis and brought the bad news that Oakland won in the last few seconds of the game.

Again we say even though an overnight hike is planned why do not more people come for just a day. There are always many nearby points of interest to visit.

TRAIL RESTORATION PARTY, September 11, 1976 by Sherwin Start

After the disasterous flood and resulting damage to the Long Trail a month earlier, the Board of Directors decided after hearing of the damage, to cancel certain scheduled outings and replace them with parties to restore the damage done. Janet Martin, Nancy Martin Jack Crothers, Jack Martin, Lou Catozzi and his dad, Ray Catozzi, John MacDonald and myself worked from the Pico Pond Road up the mountain. With a rented Chain Saw we put in many waterbars. John MacDonald and I cut logs and stakes to Sink Brook, far out distancing our work force. By 4 o'clock it had started to rain and we all headed out of the woods. I had cut and placed 17 waterbars (136 feet) and excavated 82 feet of drainage channel and diversion channel. Also I felled about 12 large trees that were about to fall over the trail. After that particular day I think a lot of people had a much greater respect for the work and the people that do maintain the trails in this country. They may think I am a "slave driver" but this work is important and must be done.

HAZEN'S NOTCH - JAY CAMP

By Churchill Scott

On Friday, October 29, 1976 at 6:00 PM we started a hike that would end on October 31, 1976 at 5:30 P.M. The hike was a 7.1 mile hike. We had five members and one dog on this hike. After a long ride in darkness, we thaww (3) (Rachael, Chris and Churchill) arrived at Jay Camp. Soon after, Bob Carpenter and John MacDonald and their dog reached the shelter via Burlington. The shelter (one of our favorites) was in good shape with a bit of firewood. On Saturday, we drove to Hazen's Notch, and we stayed together till Hazen Notch Camp. The trail started up Bruce Peak and soon snow was deeper and deeper. It seemed there were endless mountains to go up and around and down.. Finally Domey's Dome was reached at just dusk. Flashlights were used from there and at last we were within earshot of Route #242 where Bob and John were just starting out with lights and emergency supplies. Being the first time getting caught out on the Trail after dark the importance of having lights and equipment and friends ready to help ~~struck~~ home very seariously and we are grateful.

After church and supper every body was ready for bed. Rain begain along midnight so Sunday's hike was called off. Thanks to Chris Oey, the fire was a beautiful sight and the coffee just right.

Bob and John left around 10:00 A.M. and soon ever one was up. Must be great to be able to sleep all day.

For the past two years the second day's trip has been rained out so next year we will try again and hope for better weahter.

MOONLIGHT HIKE (With no moon)

By Ray Catozzi

On Saturday, December 4, 1976 at 6:00 P.M., The Scheduled Moon-Light hike got underway. It is always a gamble when planning our annual full moon hike as to whether there is to be or is not to be a clear sky on the nite of the hike. The gamble is 50 to 50 chance. The night before this hike saw a beautiful nearly full moon, the night after the outing was a gorgeous clear night. The night of the hike ??? OVERCAST.

Oh, well, twas a nice night, and many new people walked in the short distance to good old (new?) Sunnyside. Churchill Scott and your writer went in late afternoon and had a supply of dry firewood, warmed up the shelter and had the pot of water ready boiling before the hikers arrived. A nice, multi-simulton-eous conversational time was had by everyone, as the hot chocolate, coffee and donuts were consumed. We had hoped that some of these many new people would show up on some of our succeeding hikes, but one have shown up to date. What are we doing wrong? Must be that we are using the wrong coffeemaker. . . !

CHEER3 TO WES WESTON

Never do we know that the absence of something that we take for granted will do to our welfare. Wes Weston has been a member of the Killington Section for a long long time and has been very active in the welfare of out Section of the G.M.C.

Suddenly, we loose "Wes" Weston, for he has moved to North Carolina, he is not there to supply the hikers with the necessary coffee pot, first-aid kit, and wish all hikers the best on the hike, even though he may not be able to meke it himself. We all miss "Wes" very much, his willingness to help, his desire to see that the best happened for our Killinton Section, his dedication to the preservation of our trail system, and the vigor he had in all his endeavors for the club. Wes was up to Vermont to visit Doc Howard a couple of weeks ago, and it was a pleasure to see him. He and his dog Lady spent several days with "Doc" and he visited many of his friends in Rutland area. We all had the p pleasure of seeing "Wes" for a short time at the Annual Meeting on 1/15/77. He has returned to North Carolina now, his biggest difficulty while he was here was his car, he had to put in a new "Starting Motor", but he will be back . . I promise, His last words when he left was "I shall return" and we hope so, soon. The very best to you Wes.

HOW TO GET?
A NEW MEMBER?

ASK HIM

PERSONALITY OF THE WEEK

In this issue, we would like to honor our long time friend and member, Mr. Craig Perkins.

A native of Rutland, Vermont, Craig was born in 1903 in Rutland Town and has been a country boy all his life. He attended Rutland Schools, and graduated from Rutland High School in 1920. He also attended Worcester Polytechnical Institute, majoring in Chemistry.

He has been an "out-door" man all his years and first became active in hiking with the Boy Scouts in 1918.

One of the projects that he remembers well, is the building of the "Tin Shelter" at the summit of Killington Mountain. The conception that the top portion of a silo would make a good shelter inspired this building, and the top of a silo was hauled to the summit of Killington and assembled. It was of many sides, giving it a generally round shape. All sections were well bolted together and the roof of pie shaped pieces were assembled. The stove was in the center of the structure and the chimney extended upward through the center of the roof. Mr. Perkins was about 15 years old then, and he and six Boy Scouts rode their bikes to Brewer's Corners, hid them in the bushes and hiked up the Rooney Trail. When they did arrive at the site, they were put to work "keeping the flies away from the men assembling the shelter". This was before the stone shelter, known as Porkey Lodge was built. Both shelters have long since been destroyed.

In the early 1920's he was on a hike from Vt. Route 103 to Spring Lake and met up with Willis Ross, then a prominent member of the GMC at the time, and at the meeting Ross was doing work on the trail. This meeting gave Mr. Perkins a much better understanding of the importance of trail and shelter maintenance, and what goes into the preservation of the Trail System. After this, he became much involved in Trails and Shelter work, and he stated that his preference was shelter.

One re-location he recalls, was between Gov. Clement and Killington Summit. As I understood him, on the original trail markings, no one had a compass, and the blazing was done by earshot calls from the trail-makers. The result was quite a crooked winding trail. Mr. Perkins re-location really improved the trail in that stretch.

Although he has been a member of the Killington Section since he can remember, he is not now too active on the trail. However, he does a lot of work at his "Tall Timbers" on the Elbow Road in Mendon, where the trail to the summit of Blue Ridge Mountain starts.

He has been very generous with the Killington

Section in the use of the Field House at his Tall Timbers. He has donated it's use for the "Minerva Hinchey" day party in 1974, and on several other occasions for functions of our section.

The work at Tall Timbers keeps him quite busy in keeping up this 50 acre wonderland.

Not only was he an ardent hiker, his activity included much in the Executive Branch of the Green Mountain Club. He was a Trustee, he was President of the Main Club for 2 years, and very influential in making the Green Mountain Club one of the finest hiking clubs in America.

His stories told me of how the Long Trail Lodge was acquired, a gift, I understand, and the unforeseen tremendous expense in maintenance after it was acquired. He told me how, in an attempt to meet expenses, rooms were rented out and how it was used as sort of a Hotel. He also explained how it was finally sold to the Treadway people and the Green Mountain Club was out of the Hotel Business.

His reply to my question "What is one of the most memorable experiences you had?" was the story of a trip to the summit of Killington in the winter of 1919, when he, Gale Spaulding, Genny Beale, Les Hooge, Pason Weber and Jim Cowan, using a toboggan, starting from Rutland lugged the toboggan up over East Mountain to Brewer's Corners and up the old wagon road to the summit of Killington. The six took turns in tugging the sled, and when it became dark, they were still three miles from the summit. At this point, they split into two groups of 3 each, with Mr. Perkins, Jim and Pason as the advance party and the other three left to haul up the sled. The advance party arrived, finding the stove covered with snow, but readied the camp and built a fire at the Tin Shelter. The sled crew soon arrived and a good night was had by all.

During World War II, Mr. Perkins, Doc Gasco and Mr. Spaulding engineered the work of the Killington Section, both physical and executive, and all was in good shape when the boys returned from the war and the section again put on routine basis according to the by-laws.

Churchill Scott was with me at this interview at Tall Timbers, and the stories that Mr. Perkins told were delightful and very interesting, enough to fill a book, let alone a short article in Smoke and Blazes.

I found Craig Perkins a fascinating man, full of energy, and we all envy his life at his 50 acre wonderland, Tall Timbers.

DIRECTOR'S MEETING - January 21, 1977

A directors Meeting was held at the house of Carl Schmidt on 1/21/77. Present were Rachael Charland, Janet Martin, Carl Schmidt, Harold Rogers, Sherwin Start, Ray Catozzi and Churchill Scott.

The report of the Annual Meeting was read and approved. Mrs. George Kirk's establishment of a Trail and Shelter Fund in honor of her late husband was discussed. Harold to write up an article for Smoke and Blazes. Motion was made and passed to donate $250.00 to the Fund.

Sherwin asked for permission to buy new tools and it was voted to spend up to $139.56. It was finally decided to rent a chain saw rather than purchase one. On Work Parties, the ladies want workers to be on time for lunch. The Hike schedule was completed for the upcoming months. It contains a good many of Trail Restoration and Shelter Inspection trips. Sugar on snow was decided to forego the addition of a Tasting Supper.

Dues Credit for trail workers was discussed and the Secretary was authorized to give membership to persons working 8 hours (Excluding the portion paid to the Main G.M.C.)

Honorary Life Membership was tabled until next meeting. Adopt a Shelter was discussed.

We have at Sunnyside, Lynn Eaton, at Tucker Johnson, Ray Catozzi.

Ways of increasing membership was discussed. The new brochure is most ready for printing with photos.

Motion was made and passed to confirm the election of the directors at the Annual Meeting.

Mr. James Frink was the guest of honor at a birthday celebration held recently at the Week-End trip to Sunnyside. May he also, have many more to enjoy hiking the trail with his friends.

CAVENDISH GORGE - November 7, 1976

By Rachael Charland & Carmen Guica

This was a most unusual hike and found 14 naturalists accompanying their leader to Cavendish Gorge. Carmen Guica started the hike with a short description of the area which he read from the "History of Cavendish". Such sights as Devil's Gulch, the Bathtub, Lover's Leap kept most of us busy scrambling up and down the embankments along the Black River. There is even a cave or two there that Ray or Lou Catozzi have not located (better luck next summer Lou) After lunch in the picnic grove we were all invited to visit the Cavendish Historical Museum and we found many postal card views of the Gorge along with many artifacts of the Cavendish Area. Carmen invited our group back to the Gorge during the summer months when he said it would be possible to walk down the river and explore the caves.

PROMOTION FOR SHERWIN START

We congratulate Sherry Start for his promotion with the U.S. Forest Service and we wish him the very best in his assignment in Salt Lake City, Utah. I know that this is a big chance for Sherry, but the Killington Section is losing one of the most energetic members. His tremendous ability to organize trail and shelter work, his ability to represent the Killington Section as a Trustee, and his devotion to the Green Mountain Club is commendable. Members were willing to work for him and with him, and he was able to handle his workers and produce the most possible in restoration of the trail. Sherry, you will have to write to us, for I am afraid that your C.B. output will not reach Vermont once you get to Utah. The very best to you in your new environment.

NORTHAM PICNIC AREA - January-8, 1976

By Ray Catozzi

A beautiful, but cold winter day greeted us on Saturday, 1/8/77 as we met at the Fire Station for this always enjoyable walk. Three on cross-country skis and four on snowshoes, made a small but very enjoyable group. We started up the unplowed road in a few old and a few new snowmobile tracks. A few snowmobilers passed us going the same way, and after arriving at the picnic Shelter, they started showing up from all directions. They continued to come and go, up and down the different roads and trails in the area, filling the woods with their raccous noise, while we had our hot lunches.

The cross-country skiers, which included the G.M.C. Executive Secretary, Larry Van Meter finished lunch in a hurry and got back to skiing on more roads in the vicinity, Jim Frink left for home early, but Churchill Scott, myself and Rachael Charland went half mile further down the road and visited the Stone House that is also in that part of Coolidge State Park, and which is used as a gathering place, warming house and watering hole by snowmobilers. There were a considerable number of them and their machines all around that area, and they were joined by two of our Vermont State Police on their snowmobiles. The Police were probably up there to enforce the snowmobile speed limits (?) or protect the state property.

This was a perfect winter hike except for the snowmobile noise and all enjoyed a perfect winter day at a very lovely location.

SMOKE AND BLAZES - Deadline

I regret that because of circumstances beyond my control, this issue of Smoke and Blazes is late in being mailed to you. The deadline for the next issue will be March 15, 1977, so please try to get all articles to me by that date. I expect to have the next issue mailed on or about April 1, 1977.

RESTORATION PARTIES - -

By Sherwin Start:

September 18, 1976

After the wonderful article that Jack Croathers had in the Rutland Herald on 9/14, the result was a wonderful turnout for all of our restoration activities.

Ray Catozzi led the 9/18/76 outing. Under the faithful and professional guidance of Ray; Jim Frink, Erick Anderson, Paul Wiggins, Wes Weston, Marge Fish, Bob Fish, Maria Stadlmayer and Anna Nyire worked like beavers. They dug, shoveled, placed logs, built some steps and cut roots. They put 18 waterbars, (90 ft.) and excavated 39 feet of drainage ditch. This completed the planned work up to Sink Brook. I regret that I could not be at the outing because I had a previous obligation (Board of Directors of the Main Club) in Stowe, Vermont.

October 2, 1976

Through the efforts of Paul Howard, the Sherburne Corporation, per a letter from the President, Preston Smith, granted our restoration party permission to ride their Gondola from U.S. 4 to the summit of Killington, making the efficiency of our planned work much greater.

Besides myself, Robert Carpenter, Tom Martin Sandy Marsh, Paul Wiggins turned out for the work. We did not have time to stop at old Cooper Lodge and we immediately started down the mountain working toward Pico Camp. We put in 12 waterbars (Logs) on the north slope of Killington which were very badly needed and six more between there and Pico Camp. We also dug 35 feet of diversion channel, inlet ditch and outlet ditch.

I must say that this crew of fellows put in everything they had into this work and after the long walk out of the woods to Sherburne Pass, all of was in some state of fatigue.

In retrospect I was very pleased with the turnout we had with all of our trail Restoration outings we had this fall. The labors and sacrifices made by all that turned out for these outings is commendable and you have thanks from all members of the Killington Section, the Green Mountain Club and especially from myself. It is people like all of you that will keep our Long Trail a pleasant place to be in many years to come.

The damages from Storm Belle is far from completed. Work on this must continue in the spring, and we are looking for another good turnout to live up to our reputation of having the best maintained section of the A.T. outside of the National Forest, and one of the finest maintained sections of the L.T.

APPALACHIAN TRAIL - NEAR SHERBURNE

By Betty Staeck
January 23, 1977

Nine of us snowshoed, hiked and skied up the Appalachian Trail east from River Road, Sherburne. We broke trail past a snow covered car which had been abandoned many years before, and then found a snowmobile trail. At the point where the snowmobile trail left the A.T. we decided to follow the easier packed trail and found ourselves near a cabin. On the front door was a note welcoming "To Whom It May Concern" asking merely that the user make a list of any food taken. What a wonderful welcome! We ate our packed lunches, heated up for coffee and chocolate, cut a supply of wood for the gracious hosts and returned to our cars.

PINE HILL AREA

February 5, 1977
By Churchill Scott

This typical winter day brought out a goodly number of outdoor enthusiastic snowshoers and cross-country skiers - 16 in all.

Two ladies from New Jersey who were vacationing at Pico plus two local families and their children skied with us to swell the attendance to 16.

All day the temperature was mild, no wind and snow fell, heavy at times and light at other times, as we crossed the Country Club and climbed easily to Muddy Pond.

Passing a good sized area where deer had dug through the snow for food we arrived at Rocky Pond where lunch and hot drinks were enjoyed.

Next we went down the road toward Evergreen Avenue and at last we cut east on the old Recreation Department Pine Hill hiking trail to the biggest rock in the whole area. Here Jim Frink gave us all a very detailed and interesting history of it and the surrounding area.

Here the group split up with some riding and some walking back to the Country Club.

This hike is a very good example of the large amount of undisturbed woodland area within walking distance from home.

REPORT FROM THE MAIN CLUB OFFICE

By Larry Van Meter
April 10, 1977

Plans for the summer are progressing well. All the caretakers will have been hired by the time Smoke and Blazes goes to press, as will the ranger-naturalists for Camel's Hump and Mt. Mansfield. One of these rangers will be Cecilia Elwert, the caretaker at Cooper Lodge last summer.

Our hopes remain of moving the office to the Long Trail Lodge site late this spring, or early in the summer. Only time will tell, however, whether the details can be worked out. We are presently waiting for the Lodge to be sold, and hoping that the new owners will be receptive toward having the GMC lease the ski dorm.

A completely revised 21st Edition of the Guide Book of the Long Trail is at the printers in Burlington, and is expected to be available by the time of the Annual Meeting at Camp Keewaydin on Memorial Day weekend. Harry Peet has done a fine job as Editor, and Dr. H. Gardiner Barnum, a Burlington Section member, has had several of his Cartography students at U.V.M. completely redrafting all the maps. Price of the new book to GMC'ers purchasing it through the office will remain $3.00. The non-members price will be $4.50.

Although some major relocations around Stratton Pond have postponed Long Trail work in that area, we still plan to have two crews: one completing the Glastenbury Relocation and then moving north to Johnson where much work needs to be done, and the other working on the Monroe Skyline. This second crew is possible through a contribution of $4500.00 from the New York Section! Minerva Hinchey, recipient of Ralph Bryant's "green pen award" at the last trustees meeting, will be readjusting her work load toward an expanded bookkeeper's role, and the Club will be looking for a part-time secretary who is familiar with the Trail to handle routine matters at the Club Office. If anyone is interested, they should contact me at the Club Office.

TEXAS FALLS

March 6, 1977

By Jim Frink

Texas Falls is a beautiful Cataract north of Route 125 (West of Route 100)

The sharp drop, and tremendously large pot holes carved in the soft schist cerellean blue ice and massive white snow made this an especially beautiful scene. It is just as beautifully interesting and fascinating at any other season.

Before viewing the Falls - walking carefully in very deep snow and thick ice - we went to the end of the logging road, north of the Falls and watched a gasoline powered hydraulic ram wood splitter in operation. The way this machine split three foot diameter logs was a sight to see.

After the Falls we stopped to a sheltered spot (fierce wind) in the woods near the parking space, near a large supply of dead wood and, using a couple of logs as a base on the 5 feet of snow, built a fire and had a pleasant cook-out. Then home in plenty of time for the afternoon sports on T.V.

Although there was very little hiking, the 5 who attended had an enjoyable day.

MOUNT ASCUTNEY

March 5, 1977

By Carl Schmidt

On a warm day, six GMC'ers walked a steep 3 miles on the Brownsville Trail to the log shelter, where two members of the Ascutney Trail Association had hot soup waiting.

Ray Catozzi and Bob Carey carried out a very educational field test of the Optimus 99 versus the Primus Grasshopper backpacking stoves. Under carefully controlled conditions it was demonstrated that both stoves could heat snow better than it had previously been; however, the spring thaw showed more promise for actually changing the snow to water.

Everyone was able to complete the hike without snowshoes, even though the snow depth averaged two feet or more.

Only the heaviest member of the party (the writer) broke through the crust a few times. Some unusual aspects of the trip were that one of the cars got temporarily sidetracked between Rutland and Ascutney, and several the hikers noticed that the walk back down did seem shorter.

We need to know if we can count on YOU and your help. . . . call Chairwoman Janet Martin at 773-8621 or write her at 7 Curtis Avenue, Rutland, Vt. 05701 and let her know your preferences. This Intersectional will once again be held at Tamarack Notch. The TNAF Corp. has agreed to do a dinner and the Section will put on a breakfast, probably Saturday, Aug. 3rd. Plan now to spend some time at the Intersectional. If each member would donate one day or evening, I'm sure the week would be most enjoyable.

APPLACHIN TRAIL HIKE

March 27, 1977

by W. Churchill Scott

A beautiful blue sky and bright sun made this A.T. hike an enjoyable experience.

Due to snow conditions some did not use snow shoes and the climb up Deer Leap was much easier. After the Main Junction, shoes were worn but not necessary. Passing Beu's lookout a lone Cross Country Skier was met struggling up the steep grad. Who should it be (naturally) but Betty Staeck. At Gifford Woods we put a table in the sun, had lunch and enjoyed the beautiful weather.

At Route Vt. 100 we said goodbye to Mrs. DeVay and her son John. The rest continued on to the Thundering Brook Road and to our journey's end at the Sherburne Town Hall. With the coming of spring let's try to get everyone out to enjoy the warm sunny days.

TAMARACH NOTCH WINTER WEEKEND

by Janet Martin

Much to our surprise the road up the Notch had been plowed after Friday's storm so three cars drove to Wheelerville Corner. After we got ourselves settled into the Rotaz Cabin, got water etc the group broke up into cross country skiers and snow shoers and we explored various wads in the area. The snowshoe group attempted to follow the Cold between the old wad which goes down across from camp to the bridge. It was pretty rough going but we had one beautiful slide on the seat of our pants and a scramble up to the road short of the bridge. The road, beyond camp has a washout.

Six people stayed overnight. The stars were glamorous. We looked for the evening star(planet mars) with the binoculars.

Sunday two additional people joined the six in camp and we took a Snow Shoes Hike up the old wood road and then onto the new trail to Red Rocks. We saw several deer whose presence was much in evidence as they had been pawing for acorns on the west side of the mountain. Ate lunch in a "cave" discovered by the Martin last fall while looking for Hickory trees. After lunch four of the group went looking for "the Jug Handle", a rock formation that Craig Perkins had described to Janet. We not only found one but two and a "hidy hole", all at the base of ledges! We also located several more fairly large shagbark hickory trees.

Carried snowshoes going back as trail was packed and not much snow anyway. The weather was beautiful.

SUGAR ON SNOW PARTY

April 2, 1977

by Vera Perkins

At 6 P.M. on Saturday, April 2nd a "small but appreciative" group of about thirty-two Killington Section G.M.C. members and friends assembled at the Unitarian-Universalist Church for our annual Sugar-on-Snow Party.

When the thermometer reached 85 on the preceding Wednesday, we began to wonder where the "snow" part of the event was coming from. However the weather changed, as usual, and on Saturday Harold Rogers and Paul Howard found plenty of good hard snow up in Northam, so hard in fact it had to be broken up with potato mashers. Under the watchful eye of Nancy Martin (she came home for the week-end especially for the Sugar Party), the syrup was boiled to exactly the right consistency. The boxes of hard packed snow made an ideal surface for the hot syrup to "wax" on. Incidentally we needn't have worried about snow as,

Pres. Carl Schmidt had cached some away in his freezer.

As always, doughnuts and pickles accompanied the sugar. After each one had reached capacity on sugar consumption, at least for the time being, what was left in the bowl was "stirred-down" to take home for spreading on next mornings toast.

One thing which seems to remain constant in a changing world is the basic kitchen staff for the Sugar Party: Janet Martin, with various members of the Martin Family as available and "T" valiquette. We appreciate their continued interest and assistance. Our thanks also to the "snow gathers" and others in attendance who lent a hand to the clearing up. Every one working together is what makes this a "fun" party. Too bad so many of you missed it.

BRANDON GAP TO MT. TOP INN

April 17, 1977

by W. Churchill Scott

Another beautiful sunny spring day gave our End-To-End hikers an opportunity to do almost too much. Hiking from Brandon Gap to Mountain Top Inn during the early spring snow season is a HIKE.

Thanks to the cars of Jim Frink and Mauri Wintturi the party was taken to Brandon Gap. Along the beginning there were a number of good views of Mount Horrid.

A quick lunch stop and rest was taken at one of the many stream Crossings.

Snowshoes were taken by some but not used in spite of the deep snow along the way. For the snow held one up for the most part and much of the Trail was side hill walking.

A number of spring birds were seen patches of Jerusalem artichokes and mint were found and many picturesque fungi observed.

All in all perhaps this 10.6 mile hike was a little too much for this time of year but a good section of Trail was covered for those who needed it.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS MEETING

A meeting of The Board of Directors was held at the home of Janet Martin on February 24, 1977. Present were Janet Martin, Sherwin Start Paul Howard, Carl Schmidt, Harold Rogers, Raymond Catozzi and Churchill Scott.

Sherry submitted his resignation as Trustee due to his coming Transfer to Utah with the U. S. F. S. A motion was made by Janet, seconded by Harold to nominate Ray to act as Trustee at March 26, meeting. This was approved. If the new by-laws of the G.M.C. are voted upon at the Annual meeting unless we have 151 Adult Members, our Section will have only one Trustee, Rachael Charland. A discussion was held about replacing directors and Carl will contact Jim Frink to see if he will be willing to accept a position as director to replace Sherry Start.

An intersectional meeting will be held on March 10 to work on getting more specific ideas on paper, activities both day and night scheduled and list of fees discussed.

Sherry suggested constructing a small box for a shelter to hold a supply of small trash bags and information for hikers to use them to carry out their trash. It was decided this would be done on a trial basis at Pico, Sunnyside and Clarendon Shelters.

Carl spoke about trying to establish a file card system of all hikes taken and giving along all important details such as; length, difficulty, type of terrain, good for winter or summer. Also a topographical map showing route taken.

The new brochures are just waiting for the photo negatives to be recieved at which time they will be printed.

PERSONALITY OF THE WEEK

By Paul Howard

Some time ago, this writer suggested that a member of the Killington Section, G.M.C. be picked as our PERSONALITY OF THE WEEK, and a short history be written.

However, difficulty in finding personalities that want to be interviewed and entered in this column have been very difficult to find and the time and effort necessary to produce this column has made it necessary for this writer to discontinue the article.

I would like to see the article reactivated. If some member of our Section wishes to take the responsibility of finding and interviewing a person, I will be more than happy to include it in SMOKE AND BLAZES. Any interested member, please do not hesitate to contact me at 773-6070 or 775-0716 during working hours.

I think the article was liked and I hope that I can get a volunteer !

GMC ANNUAL MEETING - May 28, 1977
Keewaydin Camp, Lake Dunmore, Vt.
By Ray Gatozzi

This report will include items that concern the Killington Section mostly, and mostly as I did not take many notes, thinking the official minutes of the meeting would be available now. They aren't!

The revised by-laws were passed. The Key Item here is the new allotment of trustees (directors) from the various sections based on one director for each 100 members (adult) or majority fraction thereof. So with our 100 more or less members, we are able to have only one director representing us on the board. Rachael Charleand is the one director who will be staying on the job.

Another interesting item was the announcement that the main club has acquired liability insurance with a blanket coverage for all the sections of the club located in Vermont. The Killington Section has had fire insurance on its shelters for a number of years, but to my knowledge, no liability insurance, which seems to be needed in more and more areas of human activity every year. Details as to how the cost will be borne out haven't been worked out yet, but one method suggested was cost based on a club's membership. Joseph Frank, a lawyer from Burlington, who was elected the G.M.C. President for the coming year, engineered the insurance deal, and he says he really got a bargain for the coverage offered. This is not why he was elected President, by the way, he was Vice President the past two years.

In the Section reports it came out more and more often, when telling of their programs, of the upsurge in cross country skiing. Many of the sections are attracting many new members by placing ski touring on their winter schedules. This was talked about in our Killington Section board meetings a couple of times, and it was agreed that we, too, should include more of this pleasant method of winter hiking. Our new schedule, to be out soon, will reflect this trend.

Other sections of the club experienced much erosion on their parts of the trail last year, but in talking to various section members after the meeting, I felt that the Killington Section of the trail was hit the hardest. We should be all grateful to our ex-Trails Chairman, Sherwin Start, for the tremendous amount of work he himself did, plus the amount he got out of the rest of us, in restoring our badly damaged mileage to the reasonably good condition it is in today.

The Annual Meeting of the Main Club is always an interesting affair, with talking and comparing notes with hikers, walkers and backpackers from all over the northeast. It is also sad and too bad that more Killington Section members don't attend, especially when it is held so close to Rutland most of the time. Bob Carey and I were the only Killington Section members present. If there were others, I didn't notice them.

RUTLAND LIONS CLUB HOME AND SPORTSMAN SHOW
May 13, 14 and 15, - Mandigo Arena.
By Carl Schmidt

Thanks to Alderman's Cheverlot, who donated a $100.00 booth, the Killington Section was represented at the Rutland Lions Club Home and Sportsman's show held on May 13, 14 and 15, 1977 at the Mandigo Arena. Although we only had a week's notice, enough Section members (and some of their hiking friends) were found to staff the booth throughout the show. Nancy Schmidt and others put together an excellent presentation of GMC interests and objectives, from all season hiking to trail shelter maintenance. Guide books - the old edition - were sold at a discount. Killington Section schedules and many items of GMC literature were made available to the public. Those who staffed the booth enjoyed many free samples of pretzels and potato chips from the Charle's Chips people next door; unfortunately, Schlitz didn't have a booth in the show.

TRAIL BLAZING
By Wes Weston

What in blazes has blazing to do with Smoke and Blazes? Well, it so happens that a week ago Thursday (6/23), the author and one Mauri Wintturi and I did a stretch of the Long Trail from Route 140 in E. Wallingford to near

Sunnyside Camp, along with Chris Guerra, in the process of trail blazing. In the caos of the auther, it was a lesson in "Trail Blazing" with Porfessor Wintturi calling the shots. I learned from him on this occasion. ~~BUT~~, what we found out in the process of our endeavors was that there was plenty of work on the Trail aside from blazing. We found several blowdowns and had we been four or five in number instead of three, the extra members could have cleared the obstructions. We or I can not vouch for the rest of the Trail committed to our charge, but much could be done in this sector. Come out and see us sometime.

BENNINGTON-KILLINGTON SECTIONS HIKE TO MT. AEOLUS

By Rachael Charland

On July 30, 1977, only three members of the Killington Section met with Bennington Section members and climbed (Mt. Aeolus) Green Peak. Thom Bailey of Bennington Section led the group as they explored the site of the first Marble quarry in that area; a bat cave and finally the summit of the mountain. Wonder where the hikers were that like to explore and climb new mountains!

TRAIL AND SHELTER RESTORATION REPORT

By Ray Catozzi, Trails & Sheler Chairman

Good Friday in April A walk into Sunnyside Camp revealed two smashed sash and about 12 broken lights of glass, an obvious job of vandalism. Nothing was done at this time but to cover the openings with large trash bags.

Saturday, May 21 Hike to Black Pond was cancelled. A trail work party was substituted for the Bucklin Trail. But that trip was cancelled due to personal work schedule.

Saturday, May 14 Mauri Wintturi and Wes Weston ambled into Tucker-Johnson Shelter to inspect it. Privy needs 1 whole new wall, and some bunk repair needed. This same day Carl Schmidt, Bill Catozzi and I cleared trail from Sherburne Pass to Pico Camp. Another smashed sash (all the glass gone) was removed from Pico and brought into Rutland for replacement or repair.

Sunday June 5 Into Sunnyside again to remove the two broken sash and bring to Rutland for repair.

Saturday, June 11 Back to the trail from Sherburne Pass to Pico Camp for more grooming. Bob Carey, Rachael Charland and I worked this trip. The stove was removed from the camp, and the window that was taken out to be repaired, was re-installed. This window was repaired by using semi-rigid clear plastic instead of glass, as an experiment and we hope it works.

Saturday, June 25 Mauri Wintturi, Carl Schmidt, Rachael Charland and a Killington Section member living in the Boston Area, (the name escapes me) and I headed back into Sunnyside Camp to clear trail from there to Route 140. Glass was brought in to replace broken glass (in the undamaged sash) but Mauri Wintturi, Bob Carey and Paul Howard had already made a trip in and done the job. The extra glass was then stored under the bunks and behind the front riser. Mauri stayed here at Sunnyside and dug out the spring to make it more serviceable, while the other four headed south with the trail tools.

Wednesday, June 29 Another late evening walk into Sunnyside with the two repaired windows (replaced four 8"X12" lights of glass with one 16"X24" light in both windows - glass was donated by Carmote Paint Store) All the windows in Sunnyside are repaired now; only minor things are left undone.

With many thanks to Bob Paradise, caretaker at Cooper Lodge on Killington Peak, our section of the trail from Pico Camp, where we had left off June 11, all the way to Gov. Clement Shelter has been cleared, including blowdowns. This is a tremendous help to our trail crews. Last year's caretaker, Cecelia Elwert, did the same outstanding job for us. At last word, Bob is Blue Blazing the Pico Loop Trail, and he might do the Bucklin Trail, too. Killington Section supplied the paint. On Saturday August 13, there is work party scheduled and Bucklin Trail will be cleared to go with new blue blazes.

This leaves us about 9 miles of trail left to clear before the Intersectional, from Gov. Clement Shelter to Sunnyside. Some of this is on roads, and most of it is in fairly good shape, so we think a couple of trips out will put our section of the Long Trail, 21 miles, in good condition for the rest of the year.

SMOKE AND BLAZES By Paul Howard

The deadline for getting in information for the next issure of SMOKE AND BLAZES will be no later than September 15, 1977. This issue is late for two reasons, I did not get the reports in time, and my business work load has been very heavy. I regret that, although I will not let our section down, I am ready to retire from Editor of SMOKE AND BLAZES, and any interested member that would like to take over, please contact President Carl Schmidt or Churchill Scott.

GREEN MOUNTAIN CLUB INTERSECTIONAL
AUGUST 27 Through Sept 5
1977

TAMARACK NOTCH

A report from Janet Martin, Chairwoman.

The intersectional is shaping up well. Hike leaders have been obtained for all hikes. If not staying at Camp they should report to the Staff House (where Registration is held) at least ten minutes before the scheduled departure time.

The Breakfast to be put on by Killington Section on September 3rd. is pretty well covered but we could use a few more diswashers ! !

Our last big call for help is for workers to man the registration table. Only one evening volunteer so far and three day-time dates covered (Aug 27, Aug 31 and Sept. 4). We need you. . . this is a job "retired hikers" would enjoy . . a pleasant setting, cool refreshing mountain air, and you meet the nicest people. Give me a call 773-8621, if no answer, try 773-6740 which is the number of Tamarack Notch Office., if you have some free time. We need people for morning (9:00 AM to 12:30 PM) afternoon (12:30 PM to 5:30 PM); evening (5:30 PM to 9:00 PM)Aug. 27 through Sept. 5 (morning only at last day.)

Jack Martin also needs a few volunteer rubbish men to collect trash after supper each night and on the first day to put out trash barrels, etc. and a final cleanup crew. . . we are borrowing latrines from Girl Scout Camp and these must be dismantled and filled in on Labor Day as well as picking up site. If you can help with this please let him know . . . Telephone Number above.

There was a final Committee meeting at 7 Curtis Avenue. on August 2nd.

We have an Auction scheduled for Thursday September 1st. so check your attics. If you can't bring items to Camp the week of the Intersectional, please leave at Martins the week of August 22-26. Call me if you can't get your auction items to us and I will arrange for pick-up.

MERCK FOREST, RUPERT VERMONT
By Churchill Scott

Our semi-annual trip to Merck Forest was favored with one of the best week-ends of spring. Warm weather, blue sky and perfect visibility.

Saturday was spent hiking and sunning. Ray Gatozzi, Rachael Charland and Churchill Scott climbed Mt. Antone to enjoy the distant Adirondacs and nearby Tocomic Range. Spring flowers were in great abundance, mainly leeks Dog Tooth Violets (Trout Lillies) Dutchman's Breeches and Spring Beauties.

During our descent a very inquisitive Scarlet Tano entertained us for a long time. Next we finally swung around Beebe Pond and home where Carol and Miss Austin drove a deer into the front yard to everyone's amazement and enjoyment.

On Sunday, Jack and Janet brought a group for the day was conducted an interesting flower identification trip to a different area than normally covered.

It was good to see so many new people join us on such a beautiful day. We believe it was the most since mid-winter Pine Hill walk.

MAIN CLUB GMC OFFICE REPORT
By Larry Van Meter

A very hectic summer means that this report for SMOKE AND BLAZES will be pretty brief. As you all know, the Caretaker and Ranger-Naturalist Programs are being run essentially the same as they were last year. The Long Trail patrol, however, is larger than ever - two separate eight-person crews. Both crews are concentrating on chronic problem areas in the north, although we do hope to get the cribbing replaced at Clarendon Gorge before the end of the summer.

Other activities this summer include the distribution of the new Guide Book, working with Bennington Section on the new Nauheim Shelter just north of Route 9, and continuing to look for new office. The Long Trail Lodge has at last been sold, and the new owners are not interested in having the GMC set up offices at Sherburne Pass. The focus is now on the Winooski Valley.

One item with which the Club has had limited involvement, but which will certainly have impact on the Killington Section is the prospective acquisition of all private lands along the Appalachian Trail by the National Park Service. The full implications of having the Killington Section stretch of the Long Trail owned by the Federal Government rather than by relatively passive private landowners is difficult to predict.

As many of you already know, I will be leaving shortly after the Intersectional to return to school. I've thoroughly enjoyed my involvement with the Club and particularly with the Killington Section, of which I am a member (and intend to remain a member !!). My successor will be Steve Rice, with whom I have worked for several years. Steve and I have both been involved in the same U.S. Forest Service Backcountry Research Program in Durham, N.H., and he brings a good knowledge of the Long Trail with him (a two time End-to-End'er!).

I'm sure you will show Steve the same warm hospitality and cooperation you showed me when I first arrived in Rutland two years ago, Thanks again !!

HAZENS NOTCH SOUTH TO ROUTE # 118

On Friday evening, April 29th., at 6:00 PM the sky was very clear and blue and cloudless in Rutland. However, after passing through Morrisville later on that same day it began to rain and then the rain became mixed with snow and then SNOW! There was really a blizzard atop Route #142 as we parked the car and unloaded our gear in preparation for a short hike to Jay Peak Camp. We were lucky, just as quickly as the blizzard had begun, it stopped and the moon shone through long enough for us to hunt up wood and start a fire at the camp. Throughout the night the wind blew and snow fell leaving on the ground approximately 2½ inches. Saturday morning we spotted two cars, one at Hazens Notch and another at Route #118. Began hiking at Hazens Notch at 9:45 A.M. and struggled southward - - - snow was very evident everywhere, from 3 feet to 5 feet deep making the traveling rather difficult, on a side hill angle, to Navigate. Blazes were difficult to find and much time was lost trying to find them. When we did find blazes they were real old and faintly visible. As we climbed the ridge to Haystack Mt. bear tracks were clearly visible as well as partridge and many times we frightened the birds enough to cause them to frighten us by their thundering flight. We arrived at Tilliston Camp, all of us with wet boots, socks and well seasoned with "dropping into holes" of the soft snow. The outhouse at Tilliston is new and if it had been larger we would have camped in it since it would have been in better condition than the shelter itself. No stove so we hung our socks for decoration, prepared our supper and built a fire outside to get ourselves warm before bedtime.

Sunday morning about 7:45 A.M. we headed for Belvidere Mt. and the same thing was true of this trail, THE LACK OF BLAZES! We were well equipped with topo maps and bushwacked much of the distance to the top of this mountain. The Fire Tower still waves in the wind and there is a resemblance of a cabin there too. Since Sunday was much warmer than the previous day we all took off our socks and went barefoot on the bare ground while our socks dried on the hot rocks. Signs were visible calling this area, Rock City. After a leisurely luncheon hour or so we were happy to don DRY Socks for the descent to Route 118. Two young people who had climbed from Route 118 indicated that they too, had had a most difficult time finding the blazes and said to follow their footprints in the snow. Oh, yes, snow was still on the western side of the mountain too. There is a logging operation at the lower end of this trail and tops of trees had been thrown with abandonment over the Long Trail making it impossible to use. However, it was with welcome relief to see bare ground many flowers, trilliums, trout lilies, spring beauties and numerous ferns were a delight to behold. This trip I think convinced the Hike Scheduling Committee that Spring DOES NOT ARRIVE ON MAY 1st. in the NORTHEAST KINGDOM. I wish to thank my friends for helping me over this difficult part of the Long Trail.

MONADNOCK STATE PARK, June 19.

By Jim Frink

On Sunday, June 19, 9:00 AM (should have been 8:00 AM) the hikers assembled at the Fire House. Rachael Charland, Bob Carey, Joe Catozzi with his father Ray, Bernie Donahue and I drove to Mt. Monadnock State Park and paid 50¢ per head entrance fee. (Joey got a free ride).

We climbed the cascades, Red Dot, and Pumbelly trails to the summit - high and very windy. It was a beautiful day, blue sky, sunshine and widely spaced beautiful white clouds. The trails we took to the summit were steep in places, but not difficult over all. They were very well blazed with yellow dots for the first, red dots in white circles for the second, and rock cairns (above the timberline) for the third. In the woods, mosquitos were ferocious, but on the exposed rocks the high wind blew them away. The summit is only 3,165 feet but affords a 360° marvelous view.

This mountain is an old volcano composed of hard lava flows which have resisted corrosion until all the surrounding country has been worn away leaving the neck of the volcano exposed. The word "Monadnock" is a geological term describing a volcano formation rising out of surrounding level country-side.

Southeast of the one we climbed is "Little Monadnock Mountain" - elevation 1883 feet. There is one in the far northeast corner of Vermont but I can't find it on any of the Vermont maps I have now.

We came down, after an hour for lunch and relaxation, over the "white dot" trail, the shortest and steepest route. The upper part all over bare glacial smoothed rock descends at an average angle of about 50 degrees! Sit down and slide is an answer to many of the very steep sections.

Since the mountain is an old volcano, the rock is solidified lava. When the volcano stops erupting, the lava flows cool very quickly which results in the fine grained igneous rock called basalt. The various lava flows, of varying thickness, are evident near the summit of the mountain where all the rocks are exposed. There are rocks which feldspar phenocrysts and many with andalusite crystals changing to muscovite. A few hollow pyromorphite crystals were noted.

About half way down the mountain some mica schist were observed which remained from the eroded rocks which surround the volcano. Many wide veins of quartz have solidified in the cracks of the basalt where the silica bearing liquids deposited them. Some of the lava splashes are so rich in iron that they rust on the surface.

The last glaciation approaching from the northeast has polished and rounded the basalt into domes which have the typical granitic shape but there are only a few dykes of granite to be found. The rocks at the southwest are vertical cliffs of the columnar basalt which form in the neck of a volcano.

This was a most interesting, enjoyable, and educational hike for me. The weather was perfect, and I hope the others enjoyed it as much as I did.

DIRECTORS MEETING G.M.C. (Unscheduled)
By Rachael Charland - K.S. Director

A special G.M.C. Directors meeting was held Saturday, July 30, 1977 at the Bardwell Hotel. The meeting began with a few minutes of Silent Prayer for Mrs. Barbara Vielle, who drowned on May 28th.

President Joseph Frank gave the Directors one minute to scan the Minutes of the Annual meeting held on May 28th. at Camp Keewyden. Larry Van Meter's report concerning the services of the Rangers, Trail Crew and Caretakers brought out the fact that there is still much trail work to be performed on the Long Trail. He recommended better communication between the Trail Patrol and Section Volunteers so that the Long Trail could be better serviced.

After carefully considering all of the applications submitted for the position of Executive Secretary for the G.M.C., President Frank submitted the name of Steven Rice of Stowe, Vt. Steve is a Forestry Major and also has a degree in Journalism. His extensive Survey of the Long Trail coupled with the photographic album were available to the Directors during the morning recess. This survey has been used during the past months in connection with determining much needed repairs to both Shelter areas and the Trail.

Present Directors unanimously voted that Steve be given the post of Executive Secretary of G.M.C. on August 22nd. Larry Van Meter after that date will begin his college studies in Rochester, New York.

The proposed idea of having a Fall Trail Crew, presented by Larry drew much discussion by the Directors. Members of the Summer Patrol indicated that even though a great deal of work has been accomplished this summer, there is considerable more to do.

After a delicious Roast Beef luncheon, the Directors resumed their discussion of the proposal of hiring a Field Supervisor. It was indicated by both President Frank and Executive Secretary, Larry VanMeter, that such an employee was needed as at the present time, as there are 45 employees working in various sections of the Trail. Not only is it time consuming for one person to oversee the Trail Section Problems as they occur but literally impossible to combine such duties with extemporaneous speech making and still manage the busy Rutland Office. As much as 60 to 80 hours per week has been the workload of our present Executive Secretary.

Harry Peet, Jr. who has been in charge of the Caretaker Program, was recommended by the President for this position. All of the Directors were in full agreement that a Field Supervisor was needed and Harry Peet, Jr. will begin his duties as of January 1, 1978.

Since the recent sale of the Long Trail Lodge, plans for a GMC office in that area have been cancelled. A heated discussion followed as to various locations recommended for this office. Final agreement was reached that the Executive Advisory Board members seek a new G.M.C. office site in the Winooski Valley. Harry Peet stressed the known fact that there is more trail traffic at Sherburne Pass and Jonesville than at any other point or junction of the Trail and that office at one of these points would greatly enhance the usefulness of our G.M.C. office.

Western planned trips were discussed and the Directors agreed to sponsor such trips in the future. It is hoped that more GMC members will take advantage of these ventures in the future.

Tentative Committee Sections announced by President Frank and Lester A. Vielle will be the Trails and Shelters Chairman and Earl Williams will chair the Guidebook Committee. Killington Section's Director, Rachael Charland will be Chairman of the End-to-End committee and serving with her are End-to-Enders: Betty Staack, Ray Catozzi and Churchill Scott.

All Sections have been requested to make suggestions for the next Annual Meeting as well as the NEXT INTERSECTIONAL SITE. Meeting was adjourned at 4:14 P.M.

PUTNAM POND TO ROCK POND, N.Y.

July 8, 9, and 10

By Ray Catozzi

This 2 night, 2 day trip, of less than 4 miles took us into a beautiful low-hills-many-ponds area S. W. of Ticonderoga. Rachael Charland drove my son Bill and I to Putnam State Park on Fri. Evening. We 3 hiked the 1.7 miles in to Rock Pond, using flashlights the last .7 mile. Our timing was to beat the Week-end crowd to the 2 shelters in the area. The 1st one was filled, and the second one we could not find, as it is located on a tiny adjacent pond, reached by confusing trail junctions. We found it the next day, but having a 3 man tent with us, saved the night.

Saturday morning dawned bright and beautiful. We moved the tent far out on a rocky point of the island. All similar to the island in our Little Rock Pond in Danby on the L.T. It is 20 feet away from the main shore and this 20 feet of shallow water is spanned by 2 small logs, one of which rolled under Bill's feet and dumped him into 8" of pilywog filled water.

Would have made a good picture, but I pulled him up out of the water quickly as he was weighed down by the pack and was relatively helpless. He dried out soon.

The day was spent with a long walk around the pond, going by an abandoned iron mine. At the far end of the pond, we basked in the sun, while eating lunch, then continued our trek around the pond, with a swim in mind at our campsite, but clouds, coolness, and threatening rain cancelled this.

Sunday was another perfect day. We packed our lunches and hiked to the far end of the pond again, where the outlet is located. A trail leads down this brook and at the $\frac{1}{2}$ way mark is a beautiful 40' water fall. Leaving the brook trail we bushwacked up the north slope of Peaked Hill, a 1900 ft open top hill with nice views of the surrounding country. Here on the open rocky hill we gored ourselves on ripe blueberries, and picked some for home. Back at our campsite, Bill and I went for a swim, with Rachael packing for the hike out. We were home at 9:30 P.M., the end of an enjoyable and interesting trip. It would have been much more fun if more people had gone. Where were all the Killington Section backpackers? It seems that only a small handful have turned out for the last 3 or 4 overnight trips. (Editor's note: The above article was shortened for space reasons, hope the author will forgive me.)

VOLUME 30, NUMBER 6, KILLINGTON SECTION, GREEN MOUNTAIN CLUB August - December 1977

REMEMBER:

Special Main Club Membership Meeting: January 14, 1978, 1:00 P.M. -Hotel Bardwell
Killington Section Annual Meeting: Same day, 7:00 P.M. -Unitarian-Universalist Church

REPORT ON 1977 INTERSECTIONAL

Killington Section was host to the 1977 Intersectional at Tamarack Notch Aug. 27 to Sept. 5. Unfortunately attendance was down considerably from 1976 with just 111 individual campers registered..this was made up of 52 camper units (individual or family) and 10 visitors who did not stay overnight. Visitors were mostly from Killington Section and were people who came up to help on some part of the activities.

Each day there were several hikes scheduled for campers to choose from. Most popular hikes were trips to Vt's highest waterfall, Cavendish Gorge, and Blue Ridge. Two of the Long Trail hikes were cancelled for lack of interest..those involving the most travel.

The trail restoration trips recruited a few workers who put in a total of 34 work hours on our section of the Long Trail as follows: repaired and replaced, as needed, waterbars at Clarendon Gorge Bridge approach; went to Gov. Clement and worked up trail repairing and resetting waterbars and brushed trail for two miles above the shelter..to the point where two brooks cross the trail.

Evening programs included two square dances, an evening of very old slides which Jack Martin managed to project with an overhead projector followed by some pictures from other Intersectionals in the 50ties and 60ties; Dave Langlois gave a talk and demonstration of leave-no-trace camping and equipment; Tiny Hare presented some worldwide travel slides; we had an auction which earned $33.73; a talent night and a magic show. The highlight of the letter was the presentation of a gift to Minerva Hinchey from the Killington Section of some Vermont scenic placemats and a Vermont Bicentennial Plate.

The Tamarack Notch Aitken Forest Corp. members put on a scrumptious dinner the first Sunday and Killington Section an equally delicious breakfast on the second Saturday which netted us $35.64.

Unfortunately the low attendance meant we ended with a deficit in spite of our money-raising efforts and donations from Mauri Wintturi, Bob Poole, and the Martins. (NOTE: The Main Club reimbursed us for this deficit.)

In closing I wish to thank the rest of my Committee: Ray Catozzi, Harold Rogers, Wes Weston, Rachael Charland, Carl Schmidt, Vera Perkins, Thelma Valiquette, and Paul Howard, and my husband Jack and daughters Nancy and Betsy and son David who put on the magic show. Also the following members who worked on registration or lead hikes; Nancy Schmidt, Carol Chapman, Betty Staack, Bob Carey, Bob Carpenter, Larry Van Meter, Frank Bequert, Jim Frink, Churchill Scott, and Rick Davies. The following also helped on the breakfast: Veda Knipes, Ann and George Reynolds, and Bettina Roulier. Smoke and Blazes Editor Paul Howard also helped by printing up our flyers and maps. Many thanks to all of you.

BAD NEWS ISSUE

By Carl Schmidt, Killington Section President

Unfortunately, this issue of Smoke and Blazes contains many items that might not be too pleasing to our membership.

1. Our old friend, Wes Weston, has moved back down South after having returned to Rutland for a few months. His contributions to the GMC will be sorely missed.

2. The Main Club office has moved from Rutland to Montpelier. There will be a special meeting of GMC members at the Hotel Bardwell on Saturday, Jan. 14, 1978, at 1:00 P.M. to give official sanction to this move (per the GMC Charter, Headquarters are officially in Rutland).

3. Your Section's Board of Directors established a Budget Committee, which quickly discovered that our Section finances were in a very bad state of decline; a long article follows. Part of our problems are tied in with the dues structure of the Main Club. The dues situation will be discussed at the above mentioned Main Club meeting, afternoon session, on Jan. 14 AND at the Section's annual meeting at 7:00 P.M. THE SAME DATE at the Unitarian-Universalist Church, Rutland. We urge as many members as possible to attend both meetings.

4. The Intersectional at Tamarack was an artistic success but a financial failure.

5. Our Trail Restoration efforts (together with the absence of severe floods) have temporarily slowed down the deterioration of the trails in our Section. But the increasing popularity of hiking and backpacking during the last few years seems to have resulted in far more trail 'users' than 'helpers'. Despite excellent coverage of hiking and GMC activities by newspapers and radio stations, we just aren't attracting enough solid new members to carry on the work and enjoyment that have been the dual goals of the Killington Section for so many years.

NEWS BRIEFS OF DIRECTORS MEETING HELD IN OCTOBER AT VERMONT STATE SKI LODGE

By Ray Catozzi and Rachael W. Charland, Killington Section Directors

Better communications promised between Main Club and the Sections concerning trails and shelters work that both might be involved in...such as the Clarendon Gorge Bridge and the caretaker in our Section.

GMC Office moving to Montpelier after being in Rutland for its entire life-- sixty years! Bulk of Main Club business and work is centered further north now, they say.

Minerva Hinchey honored at luncheon break of GMC Directors meeting.

Usage of LT down in Southern part of LT and up in the Northern part. LT Patrol has done much trail work way up North where it has been neglected for too long.

Western expedition to be sponsored and publicized by GMC for any and all members for next summer. Six hundred dollars for an eleven day trip including round trip air fare. A BARGAIN!

1978 Intersectional, and possibly GMC Annual Meeting to be in Southern part of state, possibly in the Bennington area.

HIKE SCHEDULE CHANGE

The Jan. 29 hike has been changed to Feb. 5 at 9 A.M. Betty Staack will lead this ski and snowshoe tour.

BLUE RIDGE MOUNTAIN, OLD CANTY TRAIL
By Rachael Charland, substituting for Ray Catozzi
September 17, 1977

Saturday, Sept. 17 at 9:00 A.M. was another wet, drizzly day, yet three ambitious individuals climbed Blue Ridge Mountain, a small mountain compared to nearby Killington. It used to be called the Old Cauty Trail as it winds upward of 3,278 feet and most of the trail runs alongside beautiful, roaring, powerful cascades. At the very top of the cascades a logging bridge has been built and points the way toward still another entrance to these most unusual woods of large tooth-heart shaped aspens, yellow birches, spruce and balsams. It was rather impossible to view Coolidge Range or the Adirondacks as a fine mist settled over the summit as we hastily munched our lunches. Anna Nyiri's sharp eyes found many patches of colorful lichen amid the rocks and fallen lengths of wood. Fallen leaves made the descent rather slippery in many spots but with Jim Frink leading the return trip to Route #4, we all arrived safely at our vehicle and for a few minutes the rain actually stopped!

HIGH PCND, HUBBARDTON

By Robert Gibbs
October 16, 1977

On one of the few good days of this autumn, seven hikers made a leisurely tour to a dark blue hidden lake, then to a high bluff overlooking Lake Bomoseen. There were many white-blazed trails to lead out-of-state hunters safely back to their cabins, and many signs of a large deer population.

FOOTBATH IN THE WILDERNESS: #118 SOUTH TO PARKER CAMP

By Ray Catozzi, substituting for Churchill Scott
October 29 and 30, 1977

Only three GMO hikers enjoyed the beautiful fall weather on a backpacking trip from Route 118 (Ritterbush) to Route 15 (Parker): Greg Bostock, Rachael W. Charland, and Ray Catozzi. We met two hikers on the trail who were taking pictures especially of Devil's Gulch; mildly dangerous, with wet boulders and wet leaves to crawl up and over. The hikers were from Montreal and had been there one week before without any success because of the poor weather conditions. This man also is a member of the Montreal Ski Patrol. Wet leaves did cling to the rocks making one's footing unsteady at times. There were many stretches of beautiful hard wood trees. We had lunch on a rock overlooking Ritterbush Pond and could hear the whine of an electric chainsaw in the distance as well as reports or a gun at intervals. Since Ritterbush shelter does not have a stove, all of the cooking was done outside and enjoyed in the light of the harvest moon Saturday evening. Frost was glistening on every bush and tree in the morning as we packed up and headed for Parker Camp. Bowen Mountain seemed much steeper than Butternut, probably because of the two peaks being so close together. There was a gradual climb up Butternut Mountain but the descent was another problem, especially in darkness. Parker Shelter was a most welcome sight as a warm fire welcomed us as well as the dog and the couple who were cooking steak. Another 1.5 miles brought us to the car without much difficulty.

CHATUGUAY GOLD MINE

By Churchill Scott
November 5, 1977

This hike had one of the biggest turnouts in recent years -48 people. It seems as though we were joined by the entire Bennington Section and all their friends. There were many amateur (and professional) geologists along, complete with rock hammers, specimen sacks, and head lights. We had many enjoyable explanations as to why we weren't likely to find gold, and everyone had a good time not finding any.

BACKPACKING--ROUTE #9 TO COUNTY ROAD

By Rachael Charland, substituting for Churchill Scott
December 3 and 4, 1977

Up, up from Route #9, not the stairway to the stars but to Harmon Hill! Next on the winding trail to Congdon Shelter we met 2 youthful N. H. hikers who stated they have often camped at Congdon. This shelter was very comfortable and with a good stove! About 2½ inches of snow fell during the night. We crossed numerous roads enroute to Stamford Stream; the trail running alongside the brook was the forerunner of a climb to Sucker Pond Trail and Scrub Hill. We could hear the musical hum of the powerlines even before we reached that area as the wind was really rushing across that section. Lunch was a hasty affair sheltered in a clump of trees just beyond the power line. Descending now to County Road and then our big mistake of the day! We walked many miles on West Road instead of the County Road until we met a most obliging homesteader on West Road who took us to my car on County Road--not only did he assist us with a ride but helped with starting the car and saw us safely on our way before he departed --a real Vermont Good Samaritan.

MOONLIGHT HIKE AND CHRISTMAS PARTY

By Rob Carey (Hike leader, Ray Catozzi)
December 26, 1977

The Killington Section ended the year on a dramatic note. Thirty-seven people went into Sunnyside Camp for a combined moonlight hike and Christmas party. Lou Catozzi and I went in during the afternoon to cut wood, and got a fire going to warm the camp and heat the water. Timing was excellent, as the water had just come to a boil when the rest of the group arrived. When the camp seemed full, with about 15 people in, Lou said there were still more outside than in. We got the entire group, all 37, in. It was cozy and kept the camp nice and warm. Although we were short of cups everyone was able to have a hot drink. Many people brought and shared cookies and other food. Several sang Christmas carols, adding to the Christmas spirit. There was an excellent full moon for the hike and it was not too cold. We hope to see many of these new people at the annual meeting and other hikes, and maybe at a work party or two.

We regret to announce that Paul Howard has resigned as Editor of Smoke and Blazes. Our thanks to Paul for all the time and work he has put in on this newsletter.

DUES INCREASE

The Killington Section dues have to be increased. Right now, our dues do not come near to meeting our annual expenses. Following is a breakdown of those expenses, which must be shared among our 100 adult members. These expenses are the average for the last four years; they are not padded to provide for the inflationary cycle our country is in. At the right of these figures is the minimum amount that the section directors think we can live with.

		Average: 4 Years	Lowest Cost
A. Basic Killington Section expenses
1. Trails and shelters, insurance		175	175
2. Smoke & Blazes		114	100
3. Outings (schedules, food, coffee, etc.)		115	90
4. Postage, telephone, secretary's expenses		84	75
5. Miscellaneous (annual meeting, etc.)		20	20
		508	460
B. Expenses related to Main Club
1. Dues (100 adult members @ $3)		300	300
2. Caretaker at Cooper Lodge		150	75
TOTALS		958	835

As you can see, our average expenses per member are now $9.58, and probably can't go much lower than $8.35. Things get even more complex when you realize that many of our 100 adult members are senior citizens or 'spouses', who do not pay the present full membership cost ($4.50).

One of the major expenses, Main Club dues, is an open item on the Main Club's agenda, and they are aware of our situation. Certain expenses, such as Trails and Shelters, are part of our basic reason for existence--anyone can hike the trail free, as long as the trail is there; the GMC ensures that the trail will be there for our children. Other expenses, such as Outings, help us to enjoy the trail and recruit new members. But spare dollars are hard to come by for all of us.

Dues of six other Vermont sections range from a low of $5.00 to a high of $7.50, and many are considering dues increases. The New York section charges $12.00. Few sections carry the Trails and Shelters load that we do.

The entire financial situation will be discussed at length at the Section's annual meeting in January before setting a new dues schedule. To help us do this, an initial ballot will be taken at the meeting. A sample ballot is shown below (there will be extra ballots at the meeting). The Board will then propose the new dues structure for the membership's approval.

If you cannot attend the annual meeting, please mail your ballot to: Carl Schmidt, 73 Edgerton Street, Rutland, Vermont 05701, before January 10.

VOLUME 31, NUMBER 6, KILLINGTON SECTION, GREEN MOUNTAIN CLUB January - March 1978

KILLINGTON SECTION ANNUAL MEETING

By Ray Catozzi
Vice-President, Killington Section

After postponing the annual meeting from Jan. 14 because of a large snow-storm the day before, it was decided to hold the meeting the next Saturday, Jan. 21, even though a still larger snow storm had fallen on Rutland and vicinity just before that date! Needless to say, it cut down on attendance from 30 of last year to about 20 brave souls who found their way to the Unitarian-Universalist Church this year.

At meeting time of 7:30 only 6 or 7 folks had showed up, so the opening was delayed until 8 P.M. The coffee water was started so we could have hot drinks while we waited. Just as the meeting was about to get underway, it was delayed again when Pres. Carl Schmidt had to leave to help get his wife Nancy's car unstuck over where she had made a stop enroute to the meeting. The meeting was finally underway in earnest about 8:15!

Reports from the Sec./Treas., Outings, and Smoke and Blazes were read and accepted with little discussion. The nominating committee reported with names for 3 new directors, Jean Berger, Carol Chapman, and Nancy Schmidt. Needing a 4th, Randy Seifert was nominated from the floor. All four were elected; the three women for 3-year terms, and Randy for 1 year, finishing out the term of Sherwin St@art, now departed for the West.

Ray Catozzi gave a graphic Trails & Shelters report, drawing a map of our 21.2 miles of Long Trail showing roads and shelter locations, then pointing out where work had or had not been done on the trail and shelters during 1977.

Pres. Carl Schmidt then opened the meeting for discussion of, and action on, the very important item of an increase in Section dues.

Weeks prior to the annual meeting, a new budget committee's examination of our Section's financial records showed a substantial increase in expenses over the last 4 years without a corresponding increase in income. The board agreed something had to be done by annual meeting time, and it was discussed and defined at a board meeting in November.

Various options were drawn up which were first presented to the membership in the December Smoke and Blazes. Members who didn't plan to attend the annual meeting were requested to return a questionnaire included in the issue. The Board sets the dues structure, subject to the approval of the membership, but the Board wanted to feel the pulse of the membership first, after explaining the financial plight.

At this time Carl Schmidt first gave the background of events leading up to the Board's decision to increase dues; then he presented in graphic flip chart form the entire nature of our financial problems and the various solutions. It was shown whereby the Killington Section was paying out about $5 per member for the basic things like costs of outings, trails & shelters maintenance, insurance, office expenses, Smoke and Blazes, etc., and had been paying the main club $4.50 per member for dues allotment and share of Cooper caretaker's salary. At $9.50 this was more than double what we take in for an adult member - $4.50. A fee of $10 per adult member was needed to break even with expenses with a little left to spill over into our Kirk Memorial Trails & Shelters Fund.

After his presentation of the issue, more copies of the questionnaire were passed out, showing the dues options such as the whole $10 dues or lesser amounts with some budget items cut down or struck out.

The meeting was temporarily adjourned so the board, with the new directors sitting in for their first meeting, could count and evaluate the vote. Along with the absentee questionnaires, the feelings of the members were overwhelmingly in favor of the $10 adult dues, which was then re-presented to the members at the reconvened meeting as such: $10 per adult, $8 spouse, $1 family junior, and $2 individual junior. It passed.

Next important item discussed was ways to increase membership. Rachael Charland reminded the members that even though we now have 2 directors to the GMC Board until Ray Catozzi's term runs out next year, the new GMC by-laws allow only 1 director for each 100 adult members or majority fraction thereof. Therefore we need to increase out 100+ members to at least 151 by the beginning of 1979 or lose a director.

One good idea brought forth to attract new members was to ask area Girl Scout and Boy Scout troops to work on trail and shelter maintenance with our work parties or by themselves with some supervision. Members present were asked to go out and each recruit a new member.

Nancy Schmidt then talked about the upcoming GMC Ski Touring Day at Blueberry Hill in Goshen.

Refreshments were served during the adjourned portion of the meeting rather than at the end, as the time was getting late. Cancelled was a Long Trail, White Mountains, Adirondacks showing of slides by Lou Catozzi. We'll save this for a later date. The meeting was adjourned, second time, at about 10:45 P.M.

IT WAS EASY BEING GREEN!

In case you're wondering why this issue of Smoke and Blazes appears on green paper instead of the usual white, we took advantage of a Rutland printer's "Luck of the Irish" discount of 15% on all orders printed on green paper during the week of March 13 to 17.

APPALACHIAN TRAIL TO BE SECURED BY FEDERAL GOVERNMENT

By Carl Schmidt
Killington Section President

Congress has just passed the Appalachian Trail Bill, which authorizes $90 million dollars over the next three years for "securing" 125 acres per trail mile (500 feet average, each side) along the entire 13-state Appalachian Trail. The A.T. coincides with the Long Trail from Massachusetts to Route 4; this segment includes the entire Killington Section. The initial House bill provided only for "acquiring" the necessary land, i.e., buying it outright. As a result of numerous protests by land owners and some deeper thought by the Senate, the bill was amended to provide for securing the land by "lesser interests" (e.g., easements) as well as through purchase. The Senate version was accepted by the House. Various members of the Killington Section have contacted the land owners in our section to keep them up to date on what was happening and to give them names, addresses, and phone numbers of officials that they could contact regarding the impact of the bill on their land.

The GMC did not push for passage of the A.T. bill; the Long Trail itself is not included in the 1968 National Scenic Trails Act, for which the recent bill provides A.T. funds. We are involved only to the extent of trying to maintain the good will between hikers and land owners that has made the Long Trail possible. It wouldn't hurt if any of us who meet land owners on hikes or anywhere else take time to say "thank you" to them.

MEMBERSHIP LIST IN NEXT ISSUE

The next issue of Smoke and Blazes will include the current 1978 listing of Killington Section members. Be sure to get your dues in soon so your name will be included in the roster.

WORK PARTIES ARE FOR EVERYONE

The first work party, part of the Section's trail maintenance and restoration program, is scheduled for May 6 and 7.

Many members, we have found, think that work parties are only for big, strong men. Actually, there's something for almost everyone to do, even including children.

Litter must be picked up in shelters and along trails; branches along trails need to be trimmed with hedge clippers; and blazes need to be re-painted. Of course there is always the more strenuous work, such as clearing windfalls, placing water bars, and repairing shelters and outhouses. But as you see, almost everyone can help in some way.

If you want to know how you can help, contact Trails & Shelters Chairman Ray Catozzi at 773-3006.

SKIING AND SNOWSHOEING THE JUGGERNAUT TRAIL

By Betty Staack
February 5, 1978

On a clear, cold day (0°-10°), nine of us went up the Juggernaut Trail where we enjoyed wonderful views back of the Killington ski area.

Some of us lunched just short of the 'ghost town', a once active logging area, others went all the way to the 'town'. All that remains of this once-inhabited area are two fallen-down sheds. -A great day with grand scenery.

SUGAR-ON-SNOW PARTY

The Killington Section will hold its annual Sugar-on-Snow party on Saturday, March 25, at 6 P.M. at the Unitarian-Universalist Church on West Street.

Sugar-on-snow, a traditional event of the sugaring season, is a special dessert treat consisting of thickened syrup poured over snow, giving it the consistency of chewy candy. The customary doughnuts and pickles (that's right, pickles) will be served, along with coffee and cocoa. There will be a charge to cover the costs of maple syrup.

Eat a light supper, and bring the whole family to enjoy this special Vermont dessert treat.

NOTES FROM GMC DIRECTORS MEETING
MAR. 11 * TRAPP LODGE, STCWE, VT.

By Rachael W. Charland, Ray Catozzi
Killington Sect. Directors to GMC

- * The Killington Section, it appears, is leading the way in establishing communications with landowners along the Long Trail/Appalachian Trail.
- * The GMC will be working with the state of Vermont in establishing a State Trails System for hikers, bikers, ski tourers, and snowmobilers.
- * After the loss of attendance and money at the Killington Section sponsored 1977 Intersectional, no section had stepped forward for 1978. It was almost voted out completely, but was salvaged when 3 or 4, including Ray Catozzi, agreed to work on a plan for a weekend campout for the weekend before Labor Day.
- * A planning committee was also formed to work out details for a GMC winter weekend of camping, ski touring and shoeshoeing, for the winter of 78-79.
- * Winter trail standards for next year possibly to include marking parts of the Long Trail with 4" light blue diamond ski touring trail markers.
- * A Day Trips Guide Book to be out soon. Selling for $4.95, it is to be the same size as the LT Guide Book. Outlying Trails Guide Book is also in the works.
- * The Killington Section will not be losing money on its members anymore. It was voted to eliminate section assessment of family junior members! Individual Jr. memberships, priced by the KS at $2, will be still be assessed at $1.50 by the main club.

THIS IS THE LAST ISSUE OF SMOKE & BLAZES THAT WILL BE MAILED TO THE 1977 MEMBERSHIP ROSTER.....

NEW MEMBER ON SMOKE & BLAZES STAFF

The one issue of S & B that has come out since Paul Howard's resignation was the joint effort of many of the KS directors, and probably will continue that way for awhile. But we have a new face on the scene. Jake Sherman, a past member of the KS, has returned and has offered to help with the typing and putting the paper together. Jake is an assistant Rutland librarian. Welcome aboard, Jake!

GMC SKI TOUR AT BLUEBERRY HILL

By Ray Catozzi
January 29, 1978

Up to the land of Goshen on Sunday, Jan. 29 went the Killington Section, joining with the Breadloaf Section of Middlebury, to enjoy a fine day of cross-country skiing at the Blueberry Hill Ski Touring Center. This is the third year that the Breadloaf Section has sponsored the event and the second that the Killington Section has participated. Very special low rates were in effect for GMCers. These came to only $1 for the day with your own equipment and only $3 if you had to rent. This included a critique on modern equipment, instructions on waxing, lessons for beginners to advanced intermediates, free "bubbly" home-made soup at lunchtime, and use of many miles of ski trails. It was a fine winter day with some sunshine and a little breezy. The Killington Section group divided several different ways for the day with some heading for beginners' classes and others taking to the slopes immediately. A few went home immediately after a tour of the trails, but there were a few who skied right up to the four o'clock closing. This is a most invigorating, enjoyable, and fast-growing sport which we feel blends in beautifully with our normal winter activities and our philosophy of the outdoors. Our outing committee thinks so, anyway, as our current schedule lists many outings for both snow-shoeing and ski-touring. It is bringing out more people, and new people, and that is what we all want.

SUNNYSIDE SHELTER OVERNITE

by Ray Catozzi
March 4 and 5, 1978

Pleasant winter weather blessed this overnight trip. Saturday morning five persons found a new two-inch fall of snow on the Spring Lake Ranch Road, making it touch and go to get to the top of the hill with our cars. The weather during the day consisted of intermittent flurries and scattered sunshine. Churchill Scott and Harold Rogers came in just for the day, snow-shoeing in to the camp, then going out for a long tour of the area by themselves.

The three overnighers, Rob Carey, Rachael Charland and I, had lunch at the shelter after getting a good fire going and heating up a KS coffee pot of water. Our afternoon trip on skis was a delightful two-mile round trip, following the nearby power line in a southeasterly direction and return. We crossed many old and new ski tracks, giving a good indication of the popularity of the terrain for ski touring. Many other skiers were out.

A nourishing hot supper was prepared in camp by the light of the late winter sunset, was consumed in the afterglow, and had its dishes and pans washed by many candlelights. We were just getting ready for an evening of card playing when two young couples from Rutland arrived, with a young frisky black puppy named Satan, and carrying their sleeping bags under one of their arms and bags of groceries under their other arm. Only one person had a decent frame pack.

We rearranged our gear to accommodate them like all good LT campers are supposed to do, and then we all got acquainted as they prepared a supper of kosher hot dogs boiled in beer, baked beans, and wine(?). They also brought out for dessert a half bottle of ginger brandy which they shared with us. Not bad! I was commencing to feel they weren't such bad or crazy kids, after all. The feeling was even better when they gathered up all their trash Sunday and carried it out. We GMCers all agreed that the situation might not have been so favorable had we not been there with them. (We had informed them who we were).

Soon there were two card games going, one in each of our two groups, with the fire roaring cheerfully while the wind picked up its moaning in the treetops. A lot of lively conversation was going on in both games, and Satan, the pup, ran back and forth between the two of them. After snacks it was hit the hay, and warm and comfortable it was, with a couple of trips to the stove to replenish the wood.

Sunday dawned bright and beautiful, a perfect day for ski touring and snowshoeing. Just as our leisurely late breakfast got out of the way, two snowshoers, Roma and Al Pulling, and one skier, Greg Nolder, showed up for the day. The Pullings took two unplanned trips before they got to the right road to the camp, then after a hearty lunch, they were ready for a third. We led them on a tour to Spring Lake Clearing via the road past the camp, and back by the LT. Some came back by the road, a round trip of a mile.

Another snack preceeded our packing up for the trip home. We were sorry that we didn't have the tools to properly replace all the beautiful lengths of split white birch we found when we arrived in the camp Saturday. We have awfully good friends at Spring Lake Ranch who frequently check on this shelter for us, and often supply it with firewood. Our thanks go out to them.

TAMARACK NOTCH AITKEN FOREST CAMP AREA

by Churchill Scott
February 18, 1978

A group of 14 turned out for this hike. We left at 10 a.m. and returned at 3:30 p.m., covering a distance of four miles. Due to the inability to find suitable parking space at the Balch farmhouse area, this trip was concentrated around the Tamarack Notch Aitken Forest camp area. It was very pleasant to see Vera Perkins out with us again, for she was one of those who first discovered this road and subsequently hiked it a number of times during the 1960's. Also George Reynolds from Springfield was with us for the day. A short cross-country ski and snowshoe trip was taken before lunch, with some of the group going around the oval and others descending to the river crossing near the S. Parker homestead. After a short break for a bite to eat, again some toured the oval while others traveled across Kirk bridge and on to the cemetery at the junction of the Rousseau road and the road to Clark Mason's camp. Again, this area proved very enjoyable for both cross-country skiing and snowshoeing along the many town roads and century-old farms and cellar holes.

MEMBERSHIP AND OTHER IDEAS

By Carl Schmidt
Killington Section President

The Killington Section needs new members, as does any healthy organization. In years past, when expenses were very low and hiking was done largely by clubs such as our own, GMC sections encouraged everyone--members and non-members alike--to share in the joys and benefits of outdoor activities. Times have changed. The greatly increased use of trails and shelters in Vermont forces us to realize that no one is doing the outdoors a favor by hiking along ridgelines or toasting marshmallows over a campfire. Our recent outing announcements in local publications have tried to appeal to the person who wants to help the trail as well as enjoy it.

We are encouraging all our members to include a small Killington Section "commercial" when talking to non-members on a hike or on other occasions. We have a lot to offer. To the person who generally prefers to hike alone, we can show new trails and give some little-known trail histories (sometimes accurate). To the person who would like to get out of the house, especially during the cabin-fever season, we provide scheduled activities and objectives. To the person who just wants to get into the outdoors with some convivial neighbors, we provide the opportunity. And -- someone has to build the water bars to prevent trail erosion, cut out windfalls across the trail, carry out wine bottles left by the hippies, and provide a little financial support.

For an organization such as ours, personal contact is the most rewarding way to recruit, from the standpoint of the club and of all the people involved. As part of the American Free Enterprise System, we are offering $1.00 off present or future dues for each new adult member you recruit. Please try your best to get at least one new member in 1978.

SMOKE & BLAZES TO LAND OWNERS

Recent events have reminded us of the thanks we owe to land owners on the Long Trail. Smoke & Blazes will be sent to them (free) as part of that thanks.

REPORT ON KIRK TRAIL AND SHELTER FUND

The first year report of the George L. Kirk Trail and Shelter Fund, Killington Section, Green Mountain Club, Inc., is very encouraging.

In January 1977 we purchased a $500-one year certificate of deposit and opened a 90-day notice account. During the year additional gifts plus the earned interest allowed us to purchase on Feb. 2, 1978, a $1,000-six year certificate. As of Feb. 1, 1978, there is also $448.55 balance in the 90-day notice account.

This fund was originated by Mrs. Dorothy Kirk in memory of her husband, George L. Kirk. When the principle reaches $5,000 the interest earned will be used to help maintain the Trails and Shelters for which the Killington Section is responsible.

It is hoped that many K.S. members and friends and users of the trail and shelters will be able to contribute to this fund.

DUES AND FINANCES

By Carl Schmidt
Killington Section President

The response to the dues increase questionnaire in the last Smoke and Blazes was large, and very gratifying to the Board of Directors. The consensus of those who sent in their replies and those attending the annual meeting was to establish the following dues structure:

Adult member $10.00 Spouse $8.00
Family junior $1.00
Independent junior $2.00
Senior citizen $4.50

Members are urged to send in their 1978 dues as soon as possible to W. Churchill Scott, 132 Maple Street, Rutland, Vermont 05701.

Our special thanks go to Frank Bequaert of Lexington, Mass., who sent a $150 check in memory of his son, to pay for our Section's support of the Cooper Lodge caretaker for one year. Along with his financial support, Frank has made his presence felt at the last Intersectional and on Trail Restoration parties.

If we don't lose too many members because of the dues increase, and if new members keep coming in as they have during the past year, the Killington Section will be in good shape in 1978. We hope to build up the Kirk Fund; when this fund reaches $5,000--and we have a long way to go--the interest will give the Section some long range financial stability. We hope that we can obtain additional financial support from local businesses and individuals interested in the Long Trail. But, for a healthy Section, we want to emphasize getting the most done with the fewest dollars but with the maximum participation of our members.

ANNUAL MEETING OF GMC MEMBERS: BROMLEY, MAY 27-29

By Carl Schmidt
President, Killington Section

Since all of our members will get a more comprehensive report on business details of the meeting via THE LONG TRAIL NEWS, this article will just cover a few random highlights and impressions.

- Many of the Sections seem to be in a period of resurgence after a few years of slowing down.

- The recent Trails and Shelters Workshop at Camp Betsy Cox in Pittsford (attended by Ray Catozzi) was very effective. Ray stated that although he has been involved in trail maintenance for 40 years -- hard to believe since he is only 39 -- he learned several useful things on equipment and trail design that should help our Section.

- The Killington Section had five members present - directors Ray Catozzi and Rachael Charland, Bob Carey, Mauri Winturri, and Carl Schmidt.

- Our Section was commended for its landowner efforts, holding the Intersectional, and its concise annual report.

- Bromley Mountain was a first class choice for the meeting. With free tenting sites and washroom facilities, air-conditioned meeting rooms for the 90°F weather, the Alpine Slide for kids up to 75, and ample cold beer for Mauri and Carl, it made the necessarily long members' and directors' meetings less painful than in many past years.

- Dedication ceremonies for the new William A. MacArthur Memorial Bridge, the relocated Harmon Hill/Glastonbury Mountain section of trail, and the new Nauheim Shelter were very well attended. At the new shelter (1 1/2 miles from the nearest road), approximately 100 people were served cookies, donuts, coffee, and cold lemondade with ice.

- A Section Presidents' meeting was held with GMC president Joe Frank to discuss things in general. No one had any sure-fire ideas on how to get new members and still maintain the direct-participation attitude of the GMC. The most effective method seems to be, as always, personal contact.

- The End-to-End Committee, comprised of Killington Section members, has simplified and rewritten in hikers' terminology the End-to-End rules.

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE ANNUAL DIRECTORS' MEETING

By Rachael W. Charland
Director, Killington Section

During the mid-afternoon of May 27, 1978 the Annual Meeting of the GMC Board of Directors convened at the Base Lodge at Bromley Ski Area.

Minutes of the March 11 meeting were read by the secretary. Numerous additions and corrections were made and then the minutes were accepted and approved by the Board.

The first business of the hour was the urgent request by President Frank for suggestions on "how to shorten the Annual Membership Meeting." Though several ideas were offered and discussed, none seemed to fully meet the desperate situation.

New officers for the year were approved by the Board as follows: President - Joseph Frank; Vice-President - James Guida; Secretary - Pamela Caldwell, and Treasurer - Preston Bristow.

Don Wallace, Chairman of the Winter Outing Committee, issued information sheets concerning the winter encampment which will be held March 3-4, 1979 on the LT between Clarendon Gorge and Vt. Route 140. It was emphasized that participants must have "prior backpacking experience and be in good physical condition." More information will be forthcoming.

Committee Preference Forms were available for all of those who wish to help with the GMC work behind the scenes of the LT. A member need not be a director to volunteer for one of these varied committees. If interested, write to P.O. Box 889, Montpelier, Vt. 05602 for a form.

Steve Rice reported that he had received several applications for the Administrative Assistant position at the GMC office now held by Preston Bristow who will soon be employed by the USFS. The qualifications of John Vara of Island Pond, Vt. were discussed and the directors voted to secure his services.

Discussion followed concerning a proposal to build another TV antenna on Mount Mansfield. Directors voted against this proposal unless there was an overwhelming need.

Site of the next GMC Annual Meeting will be at the Old Lantern in Charlotte, Vt. The Burlington Section will be our host. The meeting closed with the announcements of the schedule of the next Directors' meetings.

APPALACHIAN TRAIL BILL (Part 2)

By Carl Schmidt

Since passage of the Appalachian Trail Bill, which authorizes $90 million over the next three years for securing the entire Appalachian Trail corridor (including the Killington Section of the Long Trail), we have some good news and some not-so-good news. First the good news.

1. Preston Bristow, the GMC's administrative assistant until this May, will be working for the Park Service/ATC starting in June as liaison with landowners in Vermont and other states. Preston should carry over the attitude of equal concern for the landowner's interests and the interests of the Trail that he so ably represented in his GMC job.

2. A Rutland Regional Landowner's Steering Committee has been formed which seems to be working toward reasonable approaches to landowner/government relations. Jack Barrett and Fred Elwert are co-chairmen of this group. The Killington Section will try to keep them informed of any landowner reactions which come to our attention.

3. Beginning with the last issue, SMOKE AND BLAZES is being sent to Killington Section landowners free of charge. Three landowners utilized the membership application on the last page to join the Section. Although we didn't intend the free mailings as a solicitation, we are extremely pleased to have these new members.

For the bad news: We have heard indirectly of a few instances where the trail has been fenced off, posted, or protected with a shotgun. Churchill Scott has tried to trace down some specifics, but hasn't been able to pin anything down so far.

In other trail-related matters, three landowners have requested our help in relocating segments of the trail. Now that the Park Service organization is shaping up, we will give these situations prompt attention.

KILLINGTON SECTION PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

by Carl Schmidt

Briefly -- encouraging news. With the new higher dues recently put into effect, our membership has increased from 104 to 110. Participation in hikes and work parties has been good, the Kirk Trail Fund has reached $1660 (mostly through Mrs. Kirk's efforts), we had a front page article on one of our work parties in a recent Sunday HERALD/TIMES-ARGUS, and we are holding our own against trail erosion and shelter vandalism.

It is a good time to be a member of the Killington Section, and an excellent time to ask your friends and acquaintances to join us. We need 50 new adult members to maintain our two directors to the main club -- let's try to get them.

GMC TRAILS AND SHELTERS WORKSHOP

By Ray Catozzi
May 20 and 21, 1978

The weekend of May 20 and 21 found about 35 interested parties at Betsey Cox Camp in Pittsford, Vt., ready to learn all about modern trail building and maintenance. Harry Peet, Field Supervisor, GMC, in charge of the Long Trail Patrol, the Caretaker and Ranger-Naturalist programs, set up the training session with Steve Rice, GMC Executive Director, as his assistant. The men from many of the club's sections, including your correspondent from Killington, and many young men and women who will be working under Harry on the trails and in many big shelters this summer, were divided into two groups for Saturday's session. I was in the group led by Harry, who took us to Middlebury Gap where we hiked north to Burnt Mountain to observe all the recent trail work the GMNF had done.

The other group, led by Steve Rice, hiked up the Burnt Hill Trail to observe a trail badly in need of restoration. After lunch, the two teams swapped positions. Harry stopped repeatedly and pointed out where and how a water bar should be placed, and how long it should be.

The Saturday evening session included a display and talk on trail tools by Steve Rice followed by a slide program on trail work which Steve had done while working on an AMC trail crew in the White Mountains.

Sunday we put our training into practice on the 3/4 mile horse trail and the two waterfront trails leading to Burr Pond from Betsey Cox Camp and Camp Sangamon. We divided into four eight-person crews and did a thorough job of rehabilitating 1 1/2 miles of trail with stone steps through boggy parts and water bars and log steps where there had been bad erosion. This work session lasted about four hours and then we all trailed back to the camp dining hall for a not-on-the-schedule free lunch.

It was a well-organized, well-run workshop with great camaraderie, and even to this old-timer on work parties in the Killington Section it was an eye-opener on tools and techniques. I will endeavor to update our tools and then attempt to pass on the techniques to all you willing trail restorers out there.

MEMBER IN BOSTON MARATHON

Greg Bostock, physical education teacher in Springfield, Vt., and a member of the Killington Section, participated in the 82nd Boston Marathon held on April 17. He finished the race feeling "real high". Greg is still waiting for official notice of his place in the order of the runners completing the race. His time was 3 hours, 45 minutes while Bill Rodgers, the second time winner, finished in 2 hours, 11 minutes.

REMINDER

On Sunday, June 18th, Carl Schmidt will lead a trail restoration from Cooper Lodge to Pico Shelter. The chairlift will be used for transportation to the top of Killington. Lunch will be provided.

IN SYMPATHY

On Thursday evening, May 18th, members of the Killington Section were saddened by the news of the sudden death of Jim Staeck, husband of Betty Staeck, a member of the Killington Section and a member of the End-to-End Committee. We extend our sympathy to Betty and her family.

SUGAR ON SNOW PARTY

About 30 sweet-loving adults and children met at the Unitarian-Universalist Church on Saturday, March 25th, for the Killington Section's annual Sugar-on-Snow Party.

Doughnuts, pickles, and coffee were added to the golden feast. Several unfortunate late-comers had to be turned away because the supply of syrup was exhausted.

Janet Martin and her faithful kitchen crew gathered the snow, boiled down the syrup and cleaned up the sticky remains.

The party was a success both for those who enjoyed its delicacies and for our treasury which realized a profit for this event for the first time in several years.

SNOWSHOEING & SKI TOURING TO TUCKER-JOHNSON SHELTER

by Rachael W. Charland
April 9, 1978

Sunday, April 9th was a beautiful, sunny, crisp day for seven cross-country skiers and three snowshoers as they made their way to Tucker-Johnson Shelter. In about 20 minutes all had gathered at the Shelter and, after leaving our day packs, we decided to venture toward the Elbow Road. Most of us found this terrain challenging, to say the least, so we found a spot with a lovely view of the mountain, took some pictures, and returned to the Shelter for lunch.

Two enthusiastic snowshoers had an open fire smoking and blazing by intervals in front of the Shelter as well as the pot boiling on the Sterno stove within for hot beverages. Some members decided to try the ski trails at nearby Gifford Woods. New ski trails there were found to be in excellent condition as were the well-worn trails to Mountain Meadows.

To those of you who thought all snowshoeing and skiing were over because of recent warm weather, let me tell you that at least two of our members found there was, at least, three to four feet of snow on the ground when they tried to walk beside the ski tracks! OOPS!, here we go!!

QUARTERLINE ROAD

by Harold Rogers
April 22, 1978

Saturday, April 22 was a nice, warm, spring-fever day and only Churchill Scott, Ray Catozzi, and I were at the fire station to take an easy walk up the Quarterline Road.

The road was too muddy for automobile travel but was good walking. We walked south toward Chippenhook for about two and a half miles and had our lunch at a sheltered logging landing.

While eating, we saw a large bird flying. At the time we thought it was an owl but since have wondered if it was a young eagle. Ray was looking for pussy-willows and we didn't find very many and wonder if we were in a poor area or the season was late and they weren't out yet.

Ray wanted to detour up through a pasture to a flat rock ridge, and I was glad that we did because we had a good view of the mountains from the Bromley area to about Brandon by looking east. The air was very clear and the sun was at our backs.

On the way back we saw a group of trees with a disease or fungus of large black growth on the limbs and trunks. We don't know what kind of trees they were, but maybe they were some kind of maple.

It was an easy hike, and we were disappointed that more hikers weren't with us.

KILLINGTON SECTION SUNNYSIDE-CLARENDON WORK WEEKEND

by Ray Catozzi
May 7 and 8, 1978

'Twas beautiful weather the weekend of May 7th and 8th for the scheduled rebuilding of the Sunnyside Outhouse, shelter repairs at Clarendon, and general cleanup at both sites. Fourteen people showed up at the Koltonski Fire Station, including Judy Polumbaum, the RUTLAND DAILY HERALD reporter. Judy went right along with us up to Sunnyside and continued interviewing different members of the Killington Section and snapping pictures while the members started working. It was an overnite work trip and before the work was done at Sunnyside on Sunday, the SUNDAY RUTLAND HERALD hit the newsstands with Judy's article and a picture of our president, Carl Schmidt, carrying lumber up to the Sunnyside Outhouse. Such wonderful and fast publicity we never had before!

While Harold Rogers and Churchill Scott headed north on the Long Trail to clear 2 1/2 miles of trail to Clarendon Gorge, Carl Schmidt, George Reynolds of Springfield, Joe Dicton, Dick Romano, Bob Piper and I started in on rebuilding the outhouse. Carol Chapman, one of our new Section directors, and Rachael Charland tackled the clean-up of the camp and yard. They worked hard and the place looked inviting enough to make a person want to move in and take up residence.

Rachael also prepared another of her now famous turkey dinners, complete with all of the fixings, doing all of the cooking at home Friday evening and then just preparing vegetables and reheating the turkey over an open camp fire. Both of the women had to literally "hoe-out" the cooking site before any fire could be properly and safely started. Carol and Rachael served the "bird" in the early part of the afternoon. Bob Piper rescued the nearly fire-consumed potato pot!

George Reynolds and I took Harold Rogers' car up to Route 103 crossing so when Harold and Churchill got done they could move along home. But we met them coming out with the 2 1/2 miles of trail all cleared in record time. We talked them into coming back to Sunnyside for cold beer and hot turkey!

With the work mostly done at Sunnyside by late Saturday afternoon, all went home with the exception of George Reynolds, Carl Schmidt and me. We stayed overnite and on Sunday morning replaced some broken windown glass; put up a new outhouse sign as well as a new sign indicating the location of the water supply; loaded up the trash to carry out and headed for Clarendon Shelter.

Clarendon Shelter was to have had some broken and burned-out bunk boards replaced. That was the scheduled work, but a hole in the center of the leading edge of the floor that was small enough when discovered a month ago had grown large enough for a person's foot and leg to go through to the ground. We decided the work on the bunks could wait. George and I spent two hours repairing that hole in the floor. Clarendon Shelter has a double wood floor with the first layer laid diagonally and the top layer going from front to rear of the shelter.

Carl policed the area and filled a 20-gallon plastic bag with rubbish and chopped down all of the berry bushes that were growing on the sides and back of the camp.

At 4:00 P.M. George and Carl decided to "call it quits" and hiked to their cars to go home. I stayed alone for another hour and cleaned out the area of thorn-apple trees of about a 50-yard radius.

This Trails and Shelter Chairman is very appreciative and thankful for the great turnout of members and for all the work that was done. It was a tremendous headstart for this summer's section work!

ABBEEY POND

by Jim Frink
May 21, 1978

On Sunday, May 21, thirteen hikers met at the Fire Station at 9:00 A.M. We went north on Route 7 in four cars. I had John Cioffredi and his wife, Peg, (on their first Green Mountain Club hike), plus Rachael Charland and Marilyn Ennis. It was Marilyn's first hike ever, but she managed the steep climb, with several breath-catching stops, with no trouble.

There was another car with Dick Romano and his son, Don, and still another with Joe Dicton and his son, Joe, Jr.

Carol Chapman drove the fourth car with Anna Nyiri, Joyce Whitcomb, and Doris Farenkopf.

We all met at the junction of Routes 125 and 116 in East Middlebury and drove five miles north on Route 116 to the beginning of the trail to Abbey Pond.

The trail is flat for a quarter mile at the bottom, then very steep for 1 3/4 miles, and fairly flat and rolling at the top for the last mile with many very muddy spots.

The outlet from the Beaver Dam at the north end of the pond makes for very marshy country until it starts down the mountain. Then it becomes a series of beautiful rapids and chains of crashing falls all the way along the trail to the bottom.

The trail is well marked with blue blazes, except for the first quarter mile at the start. A few more blazes at that point would help avoid some wrong turns in that stretch.

The pond is contained and kept full by many beaver dams. Freshly beaver-cut birch logs were observed on the west side where a couple of us searched, without success, for the pitcher plants which will bloom there later in the season. To get to the west side, several jumps from rock to rock over water were necessary and one of the boys was contemplating a jump, leaning over the water and supporting his weight on a stick, when the stick broke and caused him to get a thorough soaking. Fortunately, he had some spare dry socks, and we were finished with lunch and ready to start down so he could dry off.

We saw many Jacks-in-the-pulpit, Canadian violets, huckleberry blossoms, and purple and white trilliums growing profusely. Everyone said they enjoyed the trip, and I know I did.

RARE II, WILDERNESS, AND THE LONG TRAIL

By Carl Schmidt

President, Killington Section

The RARE II program (Roadless Area Resource Evaluation) has received much local publicity within the past few months. Run by the U.S. Forest Service, it seeks to determine the best uses for national forest lands around the country. It includes proposals for designating six more areas in Vermont (in addition to Lye Brook and Bristol Cliffs) as "wilderness." The Killington Section Board of Directors has endorsed the policy statement issued by the Main Club in September of 1977 and sent a copy to the Forest Service via the Rutland Regional Planning Commission.

Mr. Steve Yurich, chief forester for the northeastern U.S., attended a large meeting at Rutland High School on September 6, 1978 (at the request of Vermont's congressional delegation) to listen to Vermonters and answer their questions. Mr. Yurich confirmed that designation of areas as "Wilderness" would mean that trail shelters and outhouses would be allowed to deteriorate and could not be replaced; "artificial" improvements, such as water bars and footbridges, would be prohibited or severely restricted. This would affect four Long Trail shelters and approximately 26 miles of the Long Trail in the Breadloaf area. After listening to 100 people speak their minds, the Section's position (which follows) still made sense.

- Position Statement -

ROADLESS AND UNDEVELOPED AREA INVENTORY

by

The Green Mountain Club, Inc.

The Green Mountain Club, Inc., recognized by the Vermont General Assembly as "the founder, sponsor, defender, and protector" of the Long Trail system, is reluctant to support the designation of additional Wilderness in Vermont. While the GMC remains committed to the need for undeveloped forest land in the spectrum of outdoor recreational opportunities, we would rather see the 55,000 acres already accepted by the GMNF as "roadless and undeveloped" study area, having the potential for Wilderness designation, eventually placed in Management Area III and IV categories. This action, we feel, would effectively retain the recreational qualities Wilderness attempts to preserve while allowing greater management flexibility.

Our reasons are as follows:

1. The present lack of management flexibility inside Wilderness stems from the current interpretation of the 1964 Wilderness Act. Too often, the result has been a failure to provide for established use patterns. As one example, the presence of primitive trail shelters is considered inconsistent with Wilderness management policies. In one eastern Wilderness, however, the removal of shelters coupled with a "dispersed camping" policy resulted in increased physical impact on trail corridors and streambanks. Most overnight visitors chose to camp in these places rather than disperse. (1)

2. Timber harvesting, when carried out as prescribed under MA III guidelines and located with sensitivity toward existing or planned recreational facilities ties, can be compatible with hiking and other forms of "primitive" recreation. The GMC feels cutting operations, when conducted under these guidelines, have a limited impact on aesthetics and over the years can impart an interesting variety to the landscape. Productive timber land is included in the 55,000 acre review area, and we believe it would be unfortunate to eliminate this significant economic resource.

3. The decision to set aside remote, undeveloped lands should be made primarily on the local level. Unit Planning is designed to do this, as it includes extensive public participation. We feel this planning approach is well-suited for determining future management of those areas identified as "roadless and undeveloped."

4. The two already established Vermont Wilderness Areas are of sufficient acreage to fulfill the place of Wilderness in the recreational spectrum. The Bristol Cliffs and Lye Brook Wilderness Areas (3,740 acres and 14,000 acres, respectively) comprise approximately 7% of the land within the GMNF. We feel this is an appropriate percentage.

In light of these points, the Green Mountain Club urges that all involved parties take a critical look at the desirability of designating additional Wilderness in Vermont.

INTERSECTIONAL WEEKEND: SEPT. 22-24

By
Robert Carey

More than a dozen Killington Section members joined over 85 Club members at the Mountain Meadows Campground for the weekend Intersectional. The weather and campground were perfect. There were beautiful views of Lincoln Mountain, which inspired three hikes from Lincoln Gap to Mt. Abraham and beyond on Saturday. In the evening everyone enjoyed viewing a slide presentation on this summer's GMC Western Trip.

Following a frosty night, two groups of hikers set out Sunday morning. One group followed the Robert Frost nature trail, while the other journeyed to Abbey Pond. After returning from this hike, I could not resist the temptation of a quick dip in the pond.

Those of us who attended look forward to returning to this beautiful area.

NEW BOOK ON APPALACHIAN TRAIL RECOMMENDED

Miriam Bell writes to recommend to our readers Appalachian Odyssey: Walking the Trail from Georgia to Maine by Steve Sherman and Julia Olden, Stephen Greene Press, 1977. This account of a young couple's hike of the entire Appalachian Trail is written in a very interesting manner. A glowing tribute is paid to the Green Mountain Club's care of its section of the trail, easily the best part of the entire journey. Mrs. Bell says that reading the book made her feel as if she had taken every step of the journey herself.

BLACKINTON, MASS. TO SETH WARNER SHELTER

by Rachael W. Charland
June 3, 1978

The 3rd of June '78 was a cloudy, drippy sort of day as two Killington Section members drove toward Blackinton, Mass. Any hiker trying to find the entrance to the Appalachian Trail in Blackinton better have his GMC Guide Book handy, and even then it is a puzzle as to the entrance of the Trail and a spot to park the car. Three strong hikers, Jim Guida (Arlington), Dot MacDonald (Brattleboro) plus her dog, and Jeffrey Chenard (Arlington) were waiting for us.

Under gray skies and an occasional patter of rain we plodded along the AT amid an abundance of mountain laurel and pink lady slippers, the only bright spots of four miles of trail in Massachusetts. Only Jack-in-the-pulpits dotted Vermont's section of the LT. Waterfalls were numerous but views were blotted out by fog as we trudged ever upward. Hundreds of feet of puncheon have been installed by Pioneer Valley and I believe hundreds more feet will have to be added to aid the hiker on his way during such weather.

Then, high on a rock pile, a fugitive from Alcatraz, no doubt, we hastily swallowed our lunch as the rain drops became larger. Greg Bostock of Burlington greeted us as we munched our sandwiches -- Greg would drive my car to the County Road as he was hiking southward with two companions, Philip Woodbury of Perkinsville and George Reynolds of Springfield.

Alas! a few minutes later after Greg was well on his way, we discovered neither of us knew where Greg would leave the Car Key! Then to our rescue, our K.S. Jogger, Ray Catozzi, raced madly along the trail to meet Greg as he would be parking the car on the County Road. It was a slick, mucky, root-laden trail over which he ran to make the CONNECTION! When the remaining rain-soddened travelers emerged on the County Road, Ray was there waiting for us with the car all unlocked!! MANY, MANY, MANY THANKS FOR ALL OF YOUR PHYSICAL ENDEAVORS, RAY.

James Guida treated all of us to hot bowls of soup at a nearby restaurant while some of us changed into dry clothing, all of which made the return trip to Blackinton more enjoyable. The Plus for this wet journey was another 7+ miles for those working on their end-to-end goals.

MOOSILAUKE MT. TRIP

by Ray Catozzi
June 30 - July 2, 1978

Six stalwarts joined forces at our meeting place in Rutland Friday night June 30, ready to head out for a three-day trip in the White Mountains. The main event was to climb 4810-foot Mt. Moosilauke either on Saturday or Sunday, depending on which day promised the clearest weather.

By tenting Friday night at Quechee State Park we were able to get an 8 a.m. start on a beautiful clear Saturday morning, get a car spotted south of the peak, and start climbing out Kinsman Notch by 10 a.m.

The climb up Moosilauke from the north on the AT has the least elevation to get behind you. But it was still quite a rugged climb of over 3000 feet in 3.4 miles, with 2200 feet coming in the first 1 1/2 miles! The steepest but one of the prettiest parts of the whole ascending trail was about a mile of 30-degree climb alongside a fluming brook. Ladders, log steps, and hand rails are much in evidence along this stretch.

What a magnificent view from the windy and cool top! Visibility unlimited on a crystal clear fall-like day with the peaks of the Green Mountains marching down the far distant western horizon: Mansfield, Camel's Hump, Abraham, Pico and Killington. Our little group of Ray Catozzi, leader, Kathy Hayes and son Chris, Joan Sibley, Rachael Charland and and then up the road to the top and our cars.

It was a short, but very pleasant hike -- especially the post-luncheon part, and we were sorry more people did not decide to make the climb.

LET'S SEE CANTILEVER ROCK

by Rachael W. Charland
August 13, 1978

Under threatening skies, three vehicles with ten adventuresome hikers (Peg Cioffredi, Rita Motroni, Roberta Reynes, Joe Dictons, Al and Roma Pulling, Bernice Grum, Elena Baker, and your writer) set out for Underhill State Park on August 13th at 9:30 a.m.

It soon was apparent that all was not well with the lead car as s-c-r-a-p-i-n-g sounds offended the eardrums of the passengers. Investigation by the male members of the pick-up truck following us showed that this was the prime time for the hangers of the tailpipe of the Plymouth to just "let-go"! Amid shouts of "where's your jack?" -- "where's your pliers?" and "have you some rope or wire?" Al Pulling sprawled under the car to view the damage. His long legs projecting into the oncoming traffic of Route 7 were well protected by three female onlookers. The first repair job was followed by a second, after just a few miles along the highway, BUT the workmanship of the second repair job was such that not even the rough, graveled roads of the North Country were able to loosen the improvised hangers. Hooray for GMC mechanics!!

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Woodbury of Reading were waiting for us as we entered the Park and they provided dry kindling for the hot beverages that were requested by the hungry group as they prepared their individual mid-day repasts.

Five GMCers, fortified by their noon meal, quickly ascended the Sunset Ridge Trail to the Laura Cowles Trail. The remaining hikers were very pleased to reach the Lookout Rock area and enjoy the view and rest in the 80 degree temperature. One first-time hiker, Elena, was unfortunate enough to trip over some tree roots and tumble backward down the trail. Thankfully, her lacerations of face and forehead were minor and even her glasses were found unshattered. Four travelers, unaccustomed to the narrow, rocky terrain, decided to enjoy the views from various lookouts along the pathway instead of plodding toward the appointed destination. Needless to say, the Cantilever Trail is obliterated by two fallen trees making it necessary to crawl through the branches to gain entrance to the swampy track.

The sight of the 60-foot natural obelisk-like rock was certainly well worth the efforts of those who struggled to make it. Some agile members climbed the roughly-notched pole that was the only visible means of ascending the stone appendage to Cantilever Rock. One nimble couple managed to scramble to the very edge of the horizontal arm and cameras clicked as they were viewed enjoying their goal and sat eating their lunch. Various types of lichen and mosses lined Cantilever Rock while white turtleheads grew profusely amid brownish-green ferns at its base in this hidden glen. All agreed they enjoyed their climb and should any of you venture to Underhill State Park, be sure to ask to see the wooden, beautifully hand-carved clocks done by the Park Ranger.

BAKER PEAK

by Ray Catozzi
August 26, 1978

It seems that if you mention a steep climb on the upcoming Killington Section hike, most folks stay home. That was the case again on Aug. 26 when only four showed up to climb Baker Peak in Mt. Tabor. It really wasn't all that bad, as the Lake Trail makes big switchbacks on the way up. (It used to be a stagecoach road to a hotel on Griffith Lake).

Ray Catozzi, leader, Rachael Charland, Shirley Reynolds and Mauri Winturri were the hikers. But Mauri said

"so long" and returned to his car, after reaching the brook, just short of the junction with the Baker Peak Trail. Mauri has to take it easy since his heart attack.

The spot on the brook where Mauri turned back has a large pool which he named Ben's Bathtub, in honor of Ben Rolston who was instrumental in re-routing the Long Trail over Baker Peak. It seems that the Lake Trail was the quickest way in and out while Ben was cutting the new trail between the peak and Griffith Lake, and many times he would stop off at this spot on the brook and clean up before heading home.

Rachael Charland is working on her Long Trail End-to-End, so rather than head for Baker Peak via the Baker Peak Trail as announced, the remaining three went all the way in to Griffith Lake to pick up the Long Trail north, and that led us to the peak, joining up with the Baker Peak Trail just short of the top.

There were magnificent views up and down the Otter Valley, with the Danby Imperial marble quarry directly opposite Baker Peak on Dorset Mountain but down much lower. A small rocky opening allows the view on Baker Peak, a great place to lunch while looking over the Vermont countryside.

A large group of 30 or so boys and girls from the Killington Trail Camps hiked the mountain at the same time as our little group. You out there who didn't go -- it was really an easy climb -- a piece of cake. Try it next time; you might like it. It's coming up again on our schedule, going south from Big Branch Shelter.

PROPER CARE OF FOOTGEAR, SKIS, AND SNOWSHOES

Most experienced backpackers, hikers, and cross-country skiers agree that the single most important equipment category is footgear. Following are a few basic tips for keeping this vital equipment in good shape.

-- Hiking Boots and Leather Cross-Country Ski Boots: Any reputable outdoor equipment store can advise you of the proper leather preservative for your particular boots; different leather types will require different preservatives. For heavy-duty boots with stiff uppers, don't use preservatives that soften the leather. For any boot, the welt area (where the sole is attached to the uppers) requires the most attention. Use saddle soap and an old toothbrush to thoroughly remove dirt and sand from this area and from other seams. When the seams are clean and dry, use another old toothbrush to work in the preservative. Without such attention, thread can rot out while the leather is still in good shape.

-- Wooden Snowshoes: Each spring, clean thoroughly and dry. Examine wood frames and leather webbing carefully for cracks. Wrap any cracked area with nylon monofilament fishing line, then put liquid ferrule cement over the wrapped area (get both line and cement at a fishing equipment store). If any areas have the varnish worn dull or through to bare wood or leather, apply two light coats of marine or spar varnish (from any paint or hardware store). When thoroughly dry, tie the snowshoes tightly together with twine bottom to bottom. Wedge a block of soft wood into the space between the toes. Hang them by the tail end from a rafter (out of the sun) by a piece of fine wire. The wire will prevent mice or squirrels from climbing down and eating the webbing. NOTE: Treat leather bindings the same as boots; that is, keep the leather and especially the seams clean and preserved.

-- Wooden Cross-Country Skis: Before the season starts, many ski shops offer reduced rates on pine tar jobs. Take them up on it. You can learn to do it yourself, the same as you can learn to change the oil in your car -- but it isn't worth it. For summer storage of any type ski, saw a short piece of 2" x 4" lumber to fit the space that exists between the skis when they are placed bottom to bottom with the ends touching. Use short adjustable straps (from any ski shop) to hold the skis in this position, so that the natural curvature (camber) of the skis is preserved.

-- Aluminum Snowshoes, Nylon Ski Boots: Little maintenance required.

HIKING DURING HUNTING SEASON

It is the policy of the Killington Section not to schedule hikes during deer hunting season (Nov. 11-26, 1978) and to warn hikers to avoid areas where hunters might be. The Section does occasionally schedule outings during deer season in safe areas. The November 11 Mt. Philo hike is in a state park where hunting is strictly prohibited and where the area is thoroughly posted; so we feel safe in inviting people to join us on this holiday outing.

Also on the schedule during deer season is a Pot Luck Supper at Tall Timbers, the Craigie Perkins' residence in Mendon. Don't miss this social gathering on November 18.

TRAIL WORK THANKS AND PLANS FOR TRAIL RELOCATION

The section owes special thanks to Mauri Winturri, a K.S. member from Fitchburg, Mass., who has spent many weekends this past summer working on the Long Trail. Trail-maintenance is a never-ending job, and we appreciate the many hours Mauri has spent in re-painting blazes, making repairs, and many other necessary chores.

Also our thanks go to Rob Carey, who has worked some with Mauri on the trail, and to Rob, Harold Rogers, Churchill Scott, and Ray Catozzi, who are doing the preliminary survey for trail relocation. This trail relocation is necessary and considered urgent. We need all the workers we can get for this work party on November 4; much of the work involved is clearing and marking the new trail -- not too much hard labor. With enough volunteers, it could be completed in a day and shouldn't be that hard a job.

DAY HIKER'S GUIDE NOW AVAILABLE

The recently published Day Hiker's Guide to Vermont is available at the reduced rate of $3.50 to GMC members ($4.95 to non-members). This long-awaited guide furnishes information about more than 200 short trails around the state.

Copies may be obtained from Carl Schmidt or Churchill Scott.

AREA-WIDE COOPERATIVE EFFORT HELPED LOCATE HIKER IN AN EMERGENCY

One of the less pleasant activities of GMC members is the urgent location of hikers on the trail when an emergency has occurred at the hiker's home. One October morning we received a call from the Main Office in Montpelier asking for assistance in locating a New York man hiking northward alone on the trail between Lost Pond and Sherburne Pass. The cause for urgency in this case was the death of the hiker's father; a day had already passed in which the State Police had been unable to locate him. The overall hike was to take 4 days.

This happened on a Monday when we had no volunteers available, so we had to resort to the telephone. Eventually we managed to contact landowners at or near road crossings, as well as the large ski corporations and the hiker's destination point. The northern locations alerted south-bound hikers to watch for the N.Y. hiker, and people at other points posted notices on trail markers in addition to watching the trail. We did make contact with the hiker late that afternoon.

In every case, we received a wonderful response of concern and helpfulness. The Board of Directors of the Killington Section would like to thank the following people and organizations who assisted us in this search: The Inn at Long Trail, the Sherburne Corporation, Pico Peak Ski Resort, and Sue Darrow. Our special thanks to Diane Carrara at the Cold River Country Store, Chuck Wade, and Gary Salmon, who all 'went the extra mile' and were a great help.

One final word. The hiker for whom we were searching had left an itinerary, with starting and ending times and places, and tentative locations for overnights. This is a precaution all travelers should take, but especially persons hiking alone. The itinerary helped us in our search, even though the hiker was a bit ahead of his projected time schedule.

THE GEORGE L. KIRK FUND-- AN INVESTMENT IN THE FUTURE

Before 1978 ends, consider making a tax-deductible contribution to the George L. Kirk Trails & Shelters Fund.

Mr. Kirk, who died in 1966, was a newspaper reporter and editor in Rutland for 57 years and Weather Bureau observer for over 25 years. An authority on botany and ornithology, he was an active hiker who probably climbed Killington more than anyone else.

Mr. Kirk's widow, Mrs. Dorothy Kirk, established the George L. Kirk Trails & Shelters Fund in January 1977 with an initial donation of $500. The Fund is managed by the K.S., and when the principle reaches $5,000 the interest earned can be used for trail & shelter maintenance in our Section. Currently the fund contains over $1,800.

Section policy is that yearly income from dues should pay for all yearly expenses, including moderate trails & shelters expenses. Our recently-raised dues structure barely keeps us in the black. Unless membership expands substantially we will not have necessary funds for shelter replacement and major repairs, or major items of trail maintenance, such as puncheons and bridges.

We have virtually eliminated subsidizing social activities such as Sugar on Snow and gatherings with hired entertainment which were so enjoyable in past years, because our budget condition is so delicate.

The AT Bill and the attendant relocations that may become necessary will strain our trails & shelters budget to or beyond the breaking point. Shelter vandalism seems to worsen each year; the cost of materials for repair and maintenance is soaring.

MYSTERY HIKE

by Ray Catozzi
October 8, 1978

It had been an unusually warm autumn, they'd been saying, temperatures above normal, many sunny days, etc. So what did the weather do on this particular Sunday? It gave us a preview of the winter to come: wet snow on the ground, falling out of the trees, and more coming at us out of the sky.

The real mystery for the seven brave souls who showed up to hike, they knew not where, was what happened to the nice weather that day. However, off we drove to the north for about 15 miles, parked our cars on what is known as the Middle Road, and started up a wood road.

We were heading for the summit of this medium high mountain, but the steepness of the terrain, the thick cover, and slippery going with the wet snow underfoot, caused your leader to call a halt short of the top. With the announcement of no really good views from the summit, most voted to head back down.

Branching onto a newly cut trail, heading west down off the ridge, we soon arrived at a tiny cabin belonging to John Blittersdorf of Pittsford, a KS member. This cabin is situated at the upper edge of a high, steep pasture on the western slope of the mountain, with magnificent views to the north, west, and south. John is living in this cabin while he is constructing a larger permanent one nearby. Your leader had arranged with John for the hikers to lunch here.

John proved a gracious host, having water hot for coffee and cocoa, chocolate chip cookies he had baked himself in his wood stove oven, and furnishing spices to go in our hot cider.

It was crowded, but fun as we had our lunch with much pleasant conversation. Soon though, it was time to head back, traveling down John's motorcycle path which snaked back and forth down the pasture like a cattle trail on a Swiss Alp.

Oh, where did we go, you're saying? Sorry, I should have mentioned before --Nickwackett Mt. in north Chittenden.

VALIQUETTE MEMORIAL HIKE - EAST MT.

by Joe Valiquette
October 22, 1978

Sunny skies were over Rutland as 25 hikers met at the fire station at 1 P.M. Leaving Rutland we proceeded up the Notch Road, then north via the Wheelerville Road and parked south of Mc Laughlin Falls.

We headed up the logging road from the Wheelerville Road toward Dyers Meadows. Just south of the meadows we took a spur up East Mountain. The hike to the top was relatively easy following old logging roads and with very little bushwacking.

The view from the top was beautiful, but a little hazy. The memorial flag placed there last year was still hanging, but a bit tattered and torn. John Valiquette tied a new flag close to the worn one.

The hike down was fast and we came upon a porcupine high up in a tree. That was about the only wild life we came across.

About 12 hikers stayed for a cookout following the hike down, with Rachael Charland tending the fire. It was Don Romano's first cookout.

All in all a good day was had by all.

The AT Bill, which will secure the Killington Section of the LT, together with the remainder of the AT, was passed through Congress with the understanding that trails & shelters maintenance would remain with local hiking organizations rather than with the federal government. If we cannot live up to this responsibility, we will be forced to re-examine our reasons for existence and the objectives of the Section and the GMC.

A contribution to the Kirk Fund is an investment in both the futures of the Long Trail and the Killington Section.

OUTING CANCELLATION

Plans for a possible outing on December 30, listed in the last schedule, did not materialize.

BIRD MOUNTAIN

by Churchill Scott
October 29, 1978

A perfect fall day greeted a good-sized group of hikers, eager to explore a new route up Bird Mountain.

Parking at the usual spot, we hiked about one-half mile on the road to Ben's Slide, then bore west on an old wood road climbing easily between the series of ledges.

At the ridge top we turned south, bushwacked along the ridge, soon reaching the ravine where the old east and west roads meet. From here it was easy to follow the trail to the summit.

It was very enjoyable to have Mr. Justin Lindholm, owner of the summit and east side of Bird Mountain, with us. Earlier he had cut trees to improve the view, which extended from Snake and Philo mountains counter-clockwise to the peaks east of Middlebury. Mr. Lindholm returned via the old trail, pausing at the Big Spring and then continuing around the foot of the ledges where new and spectacular views were to be seen.

The success of this hike was largely due to Rachael Charland, who flagged a very important turn, Mr. Lindholm, Jake Sherman, who copied the story of Bird Mountain from Summits of the Green Mountains, and George Young, who loaned us the booklet, "History of the Masonic Monument Erected on Bird Mountain".

This peak, named after Colonel Amos Bird, has had many routes to its summit. As far back as 1887, when over 2000 persons attended the monument's dedication, countless thousands have climbed this mountain. For many years the Castleton State College Outing Club maintained the trail, but now it has been so neglected that George Pearlstein did not include it in the Day Hiker's Guide. If the Killington Section ever gets caught up this trail would be a good work project.

SMOKE AND BLAZES DEADLINE

The next issue of Smoke and Blazes is to be mailed out mid-March. Please submit your articles and hike reports by March 1 to: Carol Chapman, 39 East St., Rutland.

WORK PARTY - TEMPORARY LT RELOCATION

by Carl Schmidt

On November 4, a Killington Section work party cleared a new one-mile trail segment that will be used until landowner arrangements on the old trail location are clarified through the Appalachian Trail securing act. Going south from the Lower Cold River Road, the hiker will proceed south on the Lottery Road (called the Middle Road on some topo maps) about 500 yards beyond the old trail cutoff, which has been barricaded by the landowner, to its new cutoff just before a red barn/house. The new trail essentially follows a fence line to the top of a ridge, then turns right along the ridge until it intersects the old trail a few hundred yards later. The relocated trail is cleared and blazed (tape blazes); the new cutoff traveling from south to north is well-marked and the old trail barricaded.

The workers are all to be commended for their efforts. Phil Woodbury of Perkinsville, Paul Magoon and George Reynolds of Springfield, and Ralph Caddell of Poultney came the longest distances. For exceptional efforts, Mr. Woodbury was awarded free trail privileges for an end-to-end hike, and a ridge was named for Mr. Magoon. The temporary trail itself was temporarily named for Joe Dicton, who as usual was where there was work to be done. Karen Unsworth, a Section member and end-to-end hiker, put in many hours of brush demolition despite a bad cold. Rob Carey worked pretty hard until it was time for the Penn State football game. During lunch, we were joined by Churchill Scott, Rachael Charland, Joan Sibley, and Mauri Winturri, who helped complete clearing and blazing. It was a fine day among good company, and a reaffirmation of one of our Section's main reasons for existence.

And in conclusion, our thanks to Mr. Walsh, who permitted the relocation onto his land.

MAD TOM NOTCH TO ROUTE #30

by Rachael Charland
November 5, 1978

It was a beautiful, sunny, unusually warm day even at 8:00 A.M. as three K.S. members, Churchill Scott, Rob Carey, and your narrator left Rutland to meet with the Caddells at the LT crossing on Route 30. Rob gave all of us a ride to Mad Tom Notch entrance to the LT. We were especially pleased to see such spacious parking areas at both of the LT entrances. Thanks to the Green Mountain Forest, I understand.

Evidently the heat got to Rob as he quickly packed away his special woolen hiking pants and once more enjoyed hiking in his summer garb!

The woodlands were brightly carpeted with many varieties of trailing evergreens. Not many birds were heard, but numerous chipmunks kept us company as we climbed to the summit of Bromley and then onward to the tower at the site of the Bromley chairlifts.

There we encountered a hiker who told us he had left the snow in Baxter State Park and was enroute to his home in Pennsylvania.

After we had lunch we looked in vain for the five states we were supposed to be able to see from that tower. As we ascended to Bromley Shelter we met several families hiking to the top of Bromley. The shelter was in good condition and we enjoyed an extra cup of tea as we conversed with a family from Manchester who often hike to this shelter on Sunday afternoons.

It was such a lovely, easy hike, it is too bad that so few members made an effort to join us.

MT. PHILO

by Jim Frink
November 11, 1978

Anna Nyiri, Bob Carey, Churchill Scott, B.J. Stuller, and I arrived at the entrance to Mt. Philo State Park at about 10:15 A.M.

We climbed through, over or under the heavy gates and walked up the winding auto access road for about $\frac{1}{4}$ mile.

Then we climbed a steep trail back to the road, which climbs the mountain in a series of three great loops. We walked left on the road to the trail which crosses the second loop, up to the road again. A walk to the right on the road took us to the trail which cuts off the third loop, circles a great excavation in the mountain side and leads to the set of wooden steps which ends at the look-out.

From there we walked to the north-west and south look-outs where we enjoyed beautiful views of the lake and the Vermont valley. Unfortunately the Adirondacks were hidden behind haze and clouds.

We commandeered one of the park's picnic tables and enjoyed a lunch sheltered from the powerful north-west wind.

After lunch we walked down the one-way exit road. When it passed a beautiful, high, north-facing meadow, we all rolled under the three strand barbed wire fence and walked to the end of the lovely cow pasture which ended on a knob commanding a 180 degree view of the valley.

The walk down the road took only about 45 minutes, including the stop at the meadow.

DUES FOR RECENT MEMBERS (Who Joined in 1978)

For members who joined after the first quarter of 1978, it might come as a temporary shock when you are billed for 1979 dues in January, rather than twelve months after you initially joined. Section policy for some years has been to charge a full year's dues for the partial year in which a member first joins, then give credit for a partial year's dues during the next year. For example, if you paid a $10 membership in July, 1978, your 1979 dues will be $5, payable in January. Be sure to remind us of this when you send in your dues.

MAIN CLUB DIRECTORS MEETING

(Bardwell Hotel, Oct. 28, 1978)

1. The Main Club's financial status has taken a downward turn during 1978 due to increased costs (postage, Social Security) and lower than-anticipated income (especially At Large dues). Four proposals for increasing income were submitted.

- A. Begin annual solicitation of funds from At Large and Section Members.
- B. Establish and solicit special non-voting membership categories (e.g., corporate donors).
- C. Establish an additional outlet for sale of GMC publications (Contemporary Sports, Inc.).
- D. Establish a committee for exploring the advisability of accepting paid advertising in GMC publications.

Item A was passed 13-12. The Killington Section had objected since Main Club solicitations could drain contributions from our Section: contributions in excess of dues are just about the only way our Section can keep income slightly ahead of expenses, and build up the Kirk Trail Fund to provide long range stability for Trails & Shelters funding.

Items B, C, and D were also approved, with appropriate safeguards to prevent abrupt changes in Club direction.

2. A position statement on Rare II ("Wilderness") was approved, which essentially reaffirmed the 1977 GMC position printed in the last Smoke and Blazes. (To summarize, we endorse well-controlled multiple usage.) The final statement limited itself to the three proposed Wilderness areas that would affect the Long Trail. This statement will be sent to the Forest Service and to our confressmen.
3. Field programs were well-managed, effective, and held to tight budget control. Harry Peet, who leads this program, would like to have our trained field people play more of a role in leading or training local Section work parties in order to preserve the volunteer nature of the GMC. He will try to contact Section presidents in late fall/early winter.
4. Future events (to be reported in future Long Trail News).
 - a. Ski Day at Stowe (Trapp Lodge) on Jan. 28.

- b. Winter Outing, Mar. 3&4.
- c. Annual Meeting, May 26, to be hosted by the Burlington Section, Old Lantern Inn, Charlotte, Vt.
- d. GMC Summer Expedition to Scotland, Wales ($800); 10 day trip.
- e. Autumn Intersectional Weekend Outing, Sept. 21-23, at Lincoln (same location as last fall-beautiful!)

5. It was proposed that the GMC host the Appalachian Trail Conference in 1985. This will be discussed further at the next Main Club Directors meeting at Stowe, Jan. 27, 1979.
6. An excellent audio-visual program on Mount Mansfield and the GMC has been prepared by free-lance photographer Louis Boire; these slides were prepared at no cost to GMC and will be offered to Sections, schools, etc., at minimal deposit.
7. The Killington Section received two certificates of recognition for land-owner relations and the 1977 Intersectional.

POT LUCK SUPPER AT TALL TIMBERS

by Churchill Scott
November 18, 1978

The annual covered dish supper has come and gone again with the smallest group ever. Only seven attended, but what we lacked in quantity we made up for in quality. Steaming hot lasagna, delectable scalloped potatoes, crisp macaroni and raisin salad, Jello, and cookies, plus lots of good, hot coffee, tea, or hot chocolate by a nice, warm Franklin stove.

Following the supper Craigie showed us old-time photos, via magic lantern, of Killington Section activities dating way back to the 1920's and '30's.

Once again the section is grateful to Craigie and Mary for their hospitality, but it is too bad Craigie had to give up a whole day to split wood, build fires to keep the field house warm, and show photos to only six people.

The Outing Committee will have to take a long hard look to see what should be scheduled in the future.

1978 KILLINGTON SECTION FINANCES

-W. Churchill Scott, Secretary-Treasurer

In 1978, Section dues were raised to a level that was intended to cover normal operating expenses, plus provide a (very) few extra dollars. We did exactly as advertized. Following is a breakdown of expenditures vs. income through November 1978, given in the same format as last year's dues proposal. Not included are expenditures/income for Guidebooks, and special gifts for the Kirk Fund and the Cooper Lodge caretaker. We are trying to get financial support from local corporations for the Cooper Lodge caretaker; if we don't succeed, our Section's support will again be reassessed at the Annual Meeting. As for the Kirk Fund -- we must try to get more contributions and/or raise money in other ways so that our Section will have a continuing source of trail maintenance income; if you can spare a few extra dollars with your 1979 dues, please support this worthy cause.

A. Basic Killington Section expenses	Average, previous 4 years	1978
1. Trails & shelters	175	139.12
2. "Smoke & Blazes"	114	① 195.00
3. Outings (Schedules, food, coffee, etc.)	115	① 47.74
4. Postage, telephone, secretary's expenses	84	① 30.53
5. Miscellaneous (Annual meeting, etc.)	20	22.30
		434.69
B. Expenses related to Main Club
1. Dues (88 adults, 16 juniors) ②	300	282
2. Caretaker at Cooper Lodge	150	③ -0-
		282.00
Operating expenses =		716.69

① Postage went down because we include the schedules in Smoke & Blazes, rather than mailing them individually. This helps soften the blow of "S&B" increased costs.

② After this year, family juniors won't pay Main Club dues. (This was the number of members when dues were paid.)

③ In 1978, paid by gift of Frank Bequaert.

Income from dues:

1. 61 adults @ $10 + 10 spouses @ $8	△ 636.50
2. 28 senior citizens @ $4.50	△ 122.00
3. 3 juniors @ $1.75 + 13 family juniors @ $1	18.25
	776.75

△ A few memberships were sent in before dues increase was voted in. We let these go -maybe we shouldn't have.

KILLINGTON SECTION, GREEN MOUNTAIN CLUB

JANUARY-MARCH, 1979

KILLINGTON SECTION ANNUAL MEETING

by W. Churchill Scott

On January 20, 1979 the annual meeting of the Killington Section of the Green Mountain Club was held at the Pleasant Manor Nursing Home.

There were about 30 people present, but we feel the very poor forecast of snow, sleet and freezing rain kept many at home.

The Secretary's and Treasurer's reports were read and accepted.

President Carl Schmidt explained our financial standing, which is encouraging, by using a flip chart.

Likewise Ray Catozzi used a large scale map to outline the work done on trails and shelters during the past year -- a new outhouse at Sunnyside, relocation north of Hermit Spring and a re-route flagged north of Lower Gold River Road. Ray expressed appreciation to all who helped.

The main speaker of the evening was Preston Bristow, Vermont's Appalachian Trail representative, formerly assistant to the Executive Director of the Green Mountain Club. Preston gave an excellent presentation of the Appalachian Trail Bill, its history, implementation and the current status of his work with landowners. Following his talk Preston conducted a question and answer period regarding the A.T. and landowner concerns. The Killington Section is doing well in this area.

A by-law change was proposed to hold the annual meeting in April, possibly on the third Saturday, to be assured of better weather for out of town members to attend. (A number of other sections meet in March or April.) This proposal was favored by a large majority.

The George L. Kirk Trails and Shelters Fund was discussed. It is doing very well. Nancy Schmidt made a large, interesting display of clippings, articles and mementos of Mr. Kirk. Mrs. George Kirk spoke of methods to inform more people and organizations about the fund.

The following officers were chosen:

President - Carl Schmidt
Vice President - Raymond Catozzi
Secretary-Treasurer -
W. Churchill Scott
Board of Directors -
Joseph Dicton, Sr.
Carl Schmidt
Harold Rogers, each for three year terms
Roma Pulling, two year term

Roma will finish the term of Jean Berger who regretfully resigned because of her retirement and extensive travel opportunities. Good luck to her!

Joseph Dicton, Sr. agreed to be Trails and Shelters Chairman with his son Joseph, Jr. as his assistant. Initially they will be working with present chairman Ray Catozzi.

A new K.S. brochure was discussed and planned.

Rachael Charland outlined the outings for the past year, asking for suggestions of new areas to visit. She also proposed a complete meal at the time of the sugar on snow party. Let's think about this more.

Carol Chapman thanked everyone for their help on Smoke and Blazes in preparation and mailing. It helps very much to have so many offers of assistance.

We extend our thanks to the folks at Pleasant Manor for a convenient meeting room and to all those who brought the delicious refreshments.

BRIEF NOTES ON DIRECTORS' MEETING

The Directors' meeting of the GMC Main Club was held at the Trapp Family Lodge on January 27th, 1979 with a very small attendance, possibly 35 members.

President Joe Frank stated that Form #1023 has been submitted to the IRS, making application for Tax Exemption and he especially thanked John Keyes for all of the work he did on this application. If the GMC were to obtain the tax exemption, it could mean lower postal rates.

The Killington Section was commended on its relationship with landowners in the area. Sections are not to sign any land agreements with landowners.

Two new sections are being formed, Montreal and Woodstock. Joe Frank will MC an international meeting in Montreal soon.

The response for a Winter Survival Trip to be led by Don Wallace has been very high in numbers. The 24 members to be screened and selected by Don will be receiving a letter from him soon.

A letter received by some section members from Dorothy Knight concerning a full week for the Intersectional gathering instead of a weekend was read at this meeting. She is to be invited to the May Directors' meeting to offer her proposal as to her findings.

Comments are requested from the sections concerning the GMNF standards for signs. All comments in letter form are to be directed to Harry Peet in care of the Montpelier GMC office.

A great deal of time was given to the proposal that the GMC consider advertising in the Long Trail News. Four directors, of which two were KS members, were against the proposal. However, the majority wanted to try advertising in the newsletter. Much debate was given over to the question of how much, how often and what type should be considered. An Advertising Editor must be appointed by the Board for this venture. It should be noted that the Killington Section is considering advertising in Smoke and Blazes.

Harry Peet did announce that there will be a Trails and Shelters Workshop to be held at Tamarack. More details will be forthcoming.

ADOPT-A-SHELTER PROGRAM is to be re-activated. Harry is asking for responses from the sections concerning this program.

A newly designed End-to-End certificate is now available. Those who have an old one and would like a copy of the new certificate should enclose $2.00 and make their request to: GMC Inc., Box 889, Montpelier, Vt. 05602.

Carol Chapman was elected a new member of the End-to-End Committee. Betty Staek has moved from the State of Vermont. We will miss Betty's willingness to help us whenever called upon. Safe hiking, Betty.

Respectfully submitted,

Rachael W. Charland

BAKER PEAK

by Churchill Scott
December 2, 1978

All of the conditions for this early winter End-to-End hike were perfect. After having visions of parking at the Silver Bridge with our hiking distance increased by two miles, we discovered little enough snow so that we could drive to the trail crossing at the #10 - Black Branch Road.

A short rest and lunch stop at Big Branch Shelter was enjoyed before looking over the original Mt. Tabor-Landgrove (pre-1927 flood) Road and waterwheel and mill site. This would be a good overnight stop.

Hiking over the bridge and up an easy grade with deeper snow gave us a good appetite at Lost Pond Shelter. By the time we arrived at Baker Peak the northwest wind was very strong and cold, blowing away the clouds, so good views were had of the Adirondacks, Taconics, and Green Mountains.

Ben's bad weather by-pass was used by several of us for the ice, snow and wind were very bad over the ledges on the peak. These conditions also caused a big discussion over which trail to use on the descent. Due to the late hour we chose the Baker Peak Trail, but still we seemed to live up to the reputation that most of our End-to-End hikes finish in almost total darkness. A good hike, a good day, and enjoyable companions.

Twenty people turned out for the Moonlight Hike, though the moon didn't appear from behind the clouds until after the hike began. Going into Sunnyside Shelter it was a bit cloudy, but the return hike was by full, beautiful moonlight.

Since the snow was not suitable for skis or snowshoes, we all went in by foot, accompanied by a sled, which some of the younger hikers used for a bit. Youngest hikers were Charles and Ellen Schmidt, ages 3 and 6, and Greg Crowther, age 5. All three proved to be good hikers and showed enthusiasm worthy of experienced hikers for the cocos and especially the goro which Rob Carey provided. All those present enjoyed the closed shelter with its warm wood stove.

SAD SEQUEL TO THE MOONLIGHT HIKE REPORT

February 11, 1979

Ski and Snowshoe Outing

The February 11 outing scheduled for the Shrewsbury area was shifted to Sunnyside because the trails in the Shrewsbury area had been heavily used by loggers. That Sunday was a bitterly cold day (as had been the whole week), but Rob Carey and hike leader Carl Schmidt braved the sub-zero temperature since the sun was shining.

On arriving at Sunnyside, they found to their dismay that the new outhouse, constructed just last spring, had been completely demolished and used for firewood in the shelter's wood stove. From the signs and evidence, it could only have happened within the two or three days before Rob and Carl were there; the people who used the outhouse to warm themselves in the shelter were not skiers, snowshoers, or snowmobilers; there were only boot prints around the shelter. Even more discouraging is the fact that the spring outhouse-building and trail work, which received such excellent publicity in the Rutland Herald, was necessary because two sides of the old outhouse had been ripped off for firewood the winter before.

While we know that Sunnyside, an all-too-accessible enclosed shelter with a stove, is much used by non-hikers who are simply having parties of some sort, such wanton and rapid destruction of Trail property is most depressing. The Killington Section Board of Directors will consider the problem of misuse of the shelter, and whether or not to replace the outhouse, at its next meeting.

PINNEY HOLLOW, PLYMOUTH, VT.

by Churchill Scott
December 30, 1978

An unscheduled, impromptu hike attracted five hikers who made a special trip to the Forester's Headquarters at the old C.C.C. Camp at Plymouth.

The cottage provided a very good base for our lunch after skiing about two miles up the Whitstone Brook Road and making a swift downhill return run.

Churchill stayed by the fire to keep the pot warm while the rest, Rob Carey, Rae Charland, and Mr. & Mrs. Rosenthal made a second run.

QUARTERLINE ROAD, CENTER RUTLAND AREA

by Churchill Scott
January 14, 1979

Despite the steady rain and absence of the coffee pot, eight hardy souls gathered for the Quarterline Road Outing. This road at the parking area was a sheet of ice. The snow conditions were not sticky but mostly granular and, thank goodness, snow did not build up on the skis or snowshoes.

Jim, Churchill, and hike leader Harold Rogers used snowshoes, while Karen Unsworth, her friend, Lisa Bianchi, and Barbara, Dorothy, and Arnold Rosenthal used skis.

Shortly after Harold left to return to his car, we ate a quick lunch on an unplowed section of the road. Continuing on for the longest half mile all day, we hit the old abandoned Town Road leading to the east. Here the skiers were right at home for after a short easy downhill run it became a steeper descent. But all the turns and bumps were maneuvered with a minimum of falls.

Harold drove his car around to the Creek Road, walked up to meet the rest and transported all eight back to the starting point where once again a lot of pushing and shoveling was needed to get headed for home.

At lunch the blue sky and sunshine appeared for a short time, then rain again. For wildlife we saw only a pair of deer tracks and a few chickadees.

PICO PEAK SNOWSHOE

by Rob Carey
January 27, 1979

Churchill Scott, Al and Roma Pulling and myself were joined at Sherburne Pass by Kevin Smyth. In spite of the recent warm weather and rain at the lower elevations, the snow proved to be excellent for snowshoeing. It was neither crusty, icy, nor slushy. We soon discovered that one person had been up several days before us. There was some snow on his tracks, but the broken trail made the trip much easier.

We made good time to Pico Camp, where we had an unpleasant surprise. The door was completely off of its hinges, and partially broken. The heavy plastic that Ray Catozzi and I had put in was completely gone. It looked like it had been cut out.

Since the stove had been removed two years ago, we heated water on a variety of backpacking and sterno stoves. After a relaxed lunch we made an uneventful but very enjoyable hike down.

PINE HILL - NORTHWEST OF RUTLAND

by Harold Rogers
February 24, 1979

After waiting hopefully an extra few minutes at the fire station, we drove to the Rutland Country Club golf course. We had hoped that even though the heavy rain was very discouraging in the morning that others would change their minds and come along.

The conditions were not good for snowshoeing but about average for skiing. Rachael Charland and Jim Frink snowshoed while Churchill Scott and I were on skis.

We left the golf course and proceeded west up Pine Hill to Muddy Pond (about one mile), then south to Oak Street, and then back northeast to the golf course.

It did not rain but the weather was warm and cloudy.

WARMER WEATHER AT LAST (OR, MAYBE THE GROUNDHOG WAS RIGHT AFTER ALL)

Pine Hill Ski Tour, February 24, 1979
Sugar-on-Snow Party, February 24, 1979
GMC Day at Blueberry Hill, March 4, 1979

After weeks of bone-chilling cold, the weather warmed a bit starting on February 20, and continued warming. It was raining lightly the day of the Pine Hill outing, which made for a small turnout. We gather there are lots of good trails in that area, so we hope we can schedule another outing there soon.

The Sugar-on-Snow party also had a smaller turnout than usual; this may have been caused in part by its being scheduled on the Saturday of winter school vacation week. Janet Martin, as usual, presided over the kitchen and provided the delicious dessert. Those of us who took supper sandwiches to eat beforehand with the soup provided at the church enjoyed doing it as a supper event. Those who came later just for sugar on snow enjoyed it just as much as the rest of us, I'm sure.

The continuing warmer weather and rain reduced the Killington Section's attendance at the Blueberry Hill GMC Day to about half a dozen. Morning skiing was nice (with klister), but by afternoon the sun and temperature combined to make it slower going. Nonetheless, our thanks to the Breadloaf Section for arranging this annual event. We look forward to it, and to better weather for it, next year.

LEMON CAKE

By special request Shirley Reynolds shares her recipe for the delicious cake she brought to the Annual Meeting.

- 1 package lemon cake mix
(Duncan Hines is best)
- 1 package lemon jello
- 1 cup boiling water
- 4 eggs
- 3/4 cup salad oil
- pinch of salt

Dissolve jello in boiling water, let cool. Add jello to the other ingredients combined. Beat two minutes at medium speed.

Pour into greased 9"x13" cake pan and bake at 350 F. for 35 to 40 minutes.

While still warm prick with fork or toothpick and spoon glaze made of juice of 1 lemon and 1/2 cup of sugar over surface of the cake.

REUNION AT WILGUS STATE PARK

On the weekend of May 4-6 the Killington Section would like to invite to a reunion all of Ben Rolston's friends and co-workers who helped him establish the Long Trail over Baker Peak and erect the Lost Pond Shelter.

Ben has suggested we can use the facilities at Wilgus State Park, Ascutney, Vermont and at the same time assist Dorothy and him in getting the park ready for opening day.

Canoeing on the Connecticut River and a sunrise hike to the Pinnacle are other activities that may be enjoyed.

The section will furnish hot drinks.

LIVEN UP YOUR DOWN

Have you tried NU-DOWN, the concentrated bio-degradable detergent for washing down sleeping bags and garments?

Nancy Schmidt highly recommends this product which she has used on sleeping bags, pillows and down garments. Nancy finds it more satisfactory than dry cleaning as it increases the loft of the down.

A one ounce tube, which costs under $3.00 can be used to launder two sleeping bags. NU-DOWN is available in Burlington at Eastern Mountain Sports, Inc. or may be ordered through their mail order house in Peterborough, N.H. 03458.

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE GMC ANNUAL MEETING

by Rachael Charland
May 26, 1979

Foul weather did not seem to decrease the number of people attending the Annual Meeting held this year at the Old Lantern in Charlotte, Vt. on May 26th.

The Burlington Section was this year's host and duly welcomed all, as well as providing a varied program of hikes and sites of interest for those who did not participate in the meetings.

President Joe Frank asked for a few moments of silent prayer for GMC's good friend and diligent worker, Minerva Hinchey. It was reported that the Killington Section will rename one of their shelters the Minerva Hinchey Shelter later on this summer and all members were invited to attend this event. The next edition of the Guidebook will be dedicated to her.

Executive Director Steve Rice enumerated the various types of work performed by members of the GMC staff in Montpelier for the benefit of those who always ask: "What do those MPR staff workers do?" There is enough work being done there to warrant the addition of an office manager beginning in June.

Field Supervisor Harry Peet announced that many women were employed this year in the LT Patrols and as caretakers and ranger-naturalists. A new set of sign standards will be drafted by Peet and presented to the club at the next board of directors' meeting.

Treasurer Preston Bristow announced that this was the first year the GMC budget has exceeded $100,000! His report was in the form of a cash sheet and this will be changed in form next year to a balance sheet report.

The proposed amendment to the Articles of Association (see May issue of the LT News) was passed by GMC members present.

Section Reports were NOT read but given to the Executive Board due to the late hour of the Annual Meeting. Rob Carey voiced his opinion that this was a very important part of the Annual Meeting and that he would like to hear the reports of the sections read at future Annual Meetings.

The annual allocation of directors under the present by-laws was discussed with regard to obtaining institution and organization memberships as well as obtaining MORE SECTION MEMBERSHIPS to increase representation for the sections.

Dorothy Knight presented the 1979-1980 slate of officers as follows: President - Douglas James; Vice-Pres. - James Wilkinson, Jr.; Secretary - Elizabeth C. Paulson; Treasurer - Preston Bristow, and Auditor - Newell Briggs.

After lunch the Annual Meeting reconvened and section awards were presented according to the categories listed in the last LT News.

The meeting adjourned just in time for those members who wished to join the group for the Essex Ferry trip.

GMC DIRECTORS' MEETING

by Ray Catozzi
May 26, 1979

Some highlights of the annual directors' meeting which immediately follows the Annual Meeting of the general membership are as follows:

-- the establishment of two new GMC sections called Ottauquechee in Woodstock, Vt. and Le Sectione GMC du Montreal, Quebec. So we are now truly an international hiking club with a link to American history by an "Indian" section.

-- the GMC president's office is now filled again by a Bay Stater, Doug James.

-- GMC now has official IRS tax-exempt status which enables anyone making a contribution to the section or the main club not to worry anymore about its being disallowed on their income tax deductions. Donators, line forms on the right, Churchill will take your money; then we can get the Kirk Fund up to $5,000 more quickly.

-- there will be, as reported in the LT News, both an intersectional encampment at the usual time at Mt. Norris Scout Reservation in Lake Eden, Vt. and an Autumn Weekend Outing again at the Mt. Meadows Campground near Lincoln, Vt.

-- there is a good possibility, according to Don Wallace, that there will be another Winter Weekend in 1980, but in a different location. Last March they hiked and tented out on the Killington Section of the LT near Sunnyside Shelter.

-- the last item of the directors' meeting which came up so late that it wasn't even on the agenda, and which directly affects just the Killington Section (along with the main club) is a sudden possible major relocation of the Long Trail from Sherburne Pass south all the way around Pico on the westerly side to rejoin the present trail south of Pico. This proposal was made to the directors by Preston Bristow, National Park Service representative for AT protection, at the request of the Pico Peak Resort Area which has possible long range plans of expanding their ski area around Pico to the east. Their new area would overlap the Long Trail in one or more places for a possible total distance of 1/2 mile.

Steve Rice, GMC executive director, made a counter proposal to at least keep the trail crossing at the height of land in Sherburne Pass, instead of way down the highway near Beaver Pond.

Pico Ski Area wants a decision within a month, so the directors voted for the proper officers, directors and committee men to get together with the ski area officials and work something out agreeable to all concerned including the Killington Section. A KS director (yours truly) has requested to be included in any and all meetings on this important issue.

KILLINGTON SECTION CAMPS AT BROMLEY SHELTER

by Rachael Charland
March 24 & 25, 1979

Bad weather forecasts did not deter four stalwart backpackers from enjoying an overnight at Bromley Shelter. The four were Rob Carey, Churchill Scott, Lex Burton, and Rae W. Charland. Anna Nyiri and her granddaughter joined the foursome en route to the shelter.

Cars had to be parked at the ski lodge, a mile away, as the parking lot was not plowed out! Additional dry wood was hauled via Schmidt's sled.

Overcast skies even discouraged the skiers, so they began leaving the area while K.S. members enjoyed their mid-day meal in the 60 degree temperature. Rob Carey didn't think there would be enough snow for snowshoes so he just hiked along, attired in his famous shorts, behind the snowshoers until such time as he miscalculated the thickness of the snow-covered ice over a small stream. THEN A SUDDEN ICY FOOTBATH AMID HIS SCREAMS OF ENJOYMENT ???!!! He was lucky that we didn't have far to go to reach the shelter after an otherwise delightful snowshoe trip exploring Bromley trails.

Very little wood was needed for warming the shelter as we prepared our evening repast. Prior to our evening card games, Lex prepared some apples for baking atop the stove. Needless to say, those tasty fruits fortified with chocolate bits, brown sugar and raisins were hastily devoured before bedtime. The temperature of the cabin was 90 degrees with windows and door open! Rain battered the roof for a few minutes late Saturday evening (guess who bet it wouldn't rain?), but sunshine greeted us for Sunday as three of us took to the trail toward Prospect Rock -- which proves again how changeable Vermont weather can be!

3 KILLINGTON SECTION WORK PARTIES (A) BIG SUCCESS

by Ray Catozzi

Saturday - April 24 - Rte. 140 to Rte. 103

When our present schedule was set up last February no definite plans were made as to where to start the '79 season's work, but a ski trip by Pres. Carl Schmidt and Rob Carey into Sunnyside soon thereafter settled our priorities in a hurry. The outhouse at Sunnyside, which a large work party had rehabilitated in April of '78 (two walls missing), was even more ventilated after last winter -- all 4 walls were missing this time, and presumed burned in the shelter stove.

So Joe Dicton, Sr., our new Trails and Shelters Chairman, got the news, and promptly built a complete new one in his driveway at home. Made from rough boards, except the seat, and completely covered by old corrugated sheet metal, it was hauled all the way into Sunnyside in Joe's pickup truck, carried by six muscle men up to its location behind the shelter, and placed over a brand new pit dug by this same Killington WPA gang: Al Pulling, Joe Dicton, Sr., Joe Dicton, Jr., Rob Carey, Carl Schmidt, and Ray Catozzi. It is fervently hoped this metal outhouse will encourage the beer partiers to look for deadwood for their winter warming.

That was only a part of the great achievements of the day. Boy Scout Troop #105, with Asst. Scoutmaster Steve Pulling as their leader, was asked to join us in clearing trail. Fourteen boys showed up at the fire station that morning ready to go to work. Steve, son of K.S. members Roma and Al Pulling, took eight boys and started clearing trail at the Gorge bridge on Rte. 103 and worked their way to Sunnyside in time for a 2:00 P.M. lunch. Churchill Scott got a much-delayed start from Rutland, but headed south from Rte. 103 and soon caught up with Steve's trail crew.

The rest of the Scouts went directly into Sunnyside with the K.S. shelter crew. Under the leadership of Mr. Phil Woodbury, four boys headed south from Sunnyside clearing trail. After a while they came back for lunch but went out again with Churchill and finished clearing all the way to the dirt road part of the trail north of Rte. 140. Two stayed at Sunnyside.

In the meantime, after the new outhouse was installed and christened with ceremonies, all necessary repairs were made on the shelter. Roma Pulling and Pat Noyes did yard policing and Roma acted as official photographer. So, we had a good productive day with five miles of trail cleared, a new outhouse installed, and a shelter cleaned and repaired and ready for summer.

Saturday - April 28 - Rte. 103 to Lower Cold River Road

Starting at Rte. 103 this day an early crew consisting of Carl Schmidt, Joe Dicton, Sr., Carol Chapman, Rob Carey, George Reynolds, and myself headed north to Clarendon Shelter. After leaving Carl and Joe at the shelter for cleanup and minor repairs, the rest of us started clearing in a northerly direction towards the Lower Cold River Road. Carl and Joe walked back out to Rte. 103 after their shelter work, and drove around to the lower road to start working south to meet us coming north. In the meantime they picked up Al and Roma Pulling. So we had a sizeable group working towards each other. We met on the southern end of the new-relocated one mile piece of LT done by the K.S. just last fall; and then all walked out to the Lower Cold River Road! Another five miles of trail cleared and blazed, the blazing being done by Carol Chapman and Roma Pulling.

Saturday - May 12 - Lower to Upper Cold River Road

Onward we go to the north this day --- a crew consisting of Joe Dicton, Sr. with a chain saw, Joe, Jr., Carl Schmidt, Al & Roma Pulling, Rob Carey, and myself. Today we had a different chore - the job of relocating a 3/4 mile stretch of trail back to where it used to be along the Cold River before landslides washed portions of the trail into the river. It was then moved up on the flat pine woods and quite a way from the river to make use of wood roads. Hull Maynard, who owns the land in both locations, asked us if we could relocate back on the river, and this we did, following the old trail, repainting the old blazes, and moving away from the river and up on the edge of the flat woods only where we couldn't get by the landslides, which were quite like quicksand and impassable.

Joe Dicton's chainsaw made quick work of many blowdowns along this relocation as well as the regular pieces to the south and north. Roma Pulling painted the blazes all the way through this 1.6-mile stretch between the Lower and Upper Cold River Roads.

Miles cleared & blazed to date - 10.9.

Shelters & outhouses repaired - 2.

All the officers and directors of the K.S. are thankful and appreciative of the large worker turnout and accomplishments so far, with a special 3 cheers to Troop #105 of the Boy Scouts for their tremendous effort. Joe Dicton, I'm sure, in his new role as Trails & Shelters Chairman, was glad for all the helping hands so far this year.

SAID POND AND MOSCOW POND

by Churchill Scott

April 7, 1979

Again we hiked a trail from George Pearlstein's Day Hiker's Guide to Vermont and it was indeed an enjoyable experience.

It was a typical spring day as we drove to the parking area on the Regan Road, started walking on the multi-purpose trail toward Said (pronounced Si - eed' according to some hiker), and passed over the causeway at Glen Lake.

A nice dry sunny spot was chosen in which to leave our gear while we explored Moscow Pond. This body of water, high in the woods, has very interesting rock formations and ledges along its eastern shore. Ray Catozzi and Jim Frink returned via the outlet which drops and tumbles over rocks and ledges.

After lunch we all walked along an old logging road, passed by the Scotch Hill Trail, stopped at an overlook of Glen Lake and finally arrived at the causeway again.

Back at the parking lot a very serious and heated debate took place concerning the length of the hike. The schedule said 4 miles, the leader said 3 miles, but actual guidebook figures said 5.5! Oh well, it was not too hard.

WILGUS STATE PARK, BEN ROLSTON REUNION

by Churchill Scott

May 4-6, 1979

It was very encouraging that a number of members came on this weekend Killington Section outing. "Sandy" Stare, the Palens, Bob Attenboro, Ray Secor and his wife, and "Frenchy" Garfield were some of the old-timers attending Ben Rolston's reunion.

Rachel intended to lead a sunrise hike to the Pinnacle on Saturday, but no one could be coaxed out of his warm sleeping bag.

Work was the order of the day on Saturday, raking up the campsites, cutting up trees felled by beavers, and putting in place stairs to the boat landing.

An enjoyable walk up the trail to the Pinnacle was led by Rae in the afternoon.

Next Ben took us along the Connecticut River showing his own nature trail which passes by a number of C.C.C. fireplaces built in the mid-'30's.

In the evening we were entertained by Ben Rolston's slides showing the trail that he constructed from Lost Pond to Baker Peak and Mauri Winturri's slides of the AT and LT.

On Sunday some members left early while others stayed on to continue the work around the camp.

LONG TRAIL - GROUT JOB TO PROSPECT ROCK

by Churchill Scott

May 19-20, 1979

Another end-to-end hike has come and gone, and once again very few K.S. members joined in. Rob Carey, Rachael Charland and Churchill Scott left early Saturday morning, parked a car at the bottom of the Rootville Road and continued on to the beginning of our hike where the trail crosses the East Arlington - West Wardshoro Road near Grout Job. Would you believe we found snow alongside the road? So, of course, everyone had to pile out, take pictures and make a snowball.

We began hiking too early to run into the Worcester Section members who were having a work party in that area but we did hear a chainsaw in the distance and subsequent hikers from the south said they had encountered the workers.

We lunched at the site of the old Willis Ross Shelter and trudged on over a great amount of rather wet trail.

At Bourne Pond Shelter (South) we met two parties of hikers before continuing on to North Bourne Pond Shelter where we spent a very enjoyable time near the shore so we could look east to Stratton Mountain, yet far enough away so the spring peepers were insudible.

The temperature was an even 50 degrees with just enough wind to keep every black fly and mosquito away. However, Sunday was much warmer and humid.

Before leaving, we met a man hiking the Trail to U.S. 4, possibly to Canada. In time, after lots of mud and a few detours, we reached Douglas Shelter where soon the Brattleboro Section arrived to finish repairing the bunks, changing them from wire to boards. After discussing whether to return by Route 100 or Route 7, we made our way down to the Rootville Road and home.

BOOK REVIEW

by Carol Chapman

New editions of two unique books for anyone interested in identifying Vermont's trees and shrubs have just been published by the Charles E. Tuttle Company. They are The Handbook of Vermont Trees by G.P. Burns and C.H. Otis and The Handbook of Vermont Shrubs and Woody Vines by L.R. Jones and F.V. Rand.

The Handbook of Vermont Trees, a guidebook to trees in all seasons, is illustrated with line drawings of leaves, twigs, flowers and fruit and photographs of bark. Nature lovers will welcome the return of this easy-to-understand, informative volume, first published by the Agricultural Experiment Station at UVM in 1916. It is available in paperback at Tuttle's Bookstore for $5.25.

A companion volume, The Handbook of Vermont Shrubs and Woody Vines contains descriptions of a variety of plants, both common and rare, with notes on their edibility, poisonous nature, legendary properties, and ornamental values. Did you know how witch-hazel acquired its name? "The forked branches of the witch-hazel were formerly much used as 'divining rods' in searching for hidden springs of water or deposits of ore." This well-illustrated, fact-filled book is available at Tuttle's for $3.95.

HIKE REMINDERS FROM LAST SCHEDULE

On Saturday, June 23, Roma Pulling and Mauri Winturri will lead an easy hike to the Amity Pond Naturalist Area near Pomfret. Roma advises wearing footgear suitable for wet ground.

Celebrate the Fourth of July at Silver Lake. Join your K.S. friends in this scenic hiking spot above Lake Dunmore. We'll pass the Falls of Lana en route. Bring your lunch and bathing suit.

HOW TO FIGHT BLACK FLIES

A University of Maine entomologist, Arthur Gall, says he has come up with a new way of fighting black flies which may look foolish, but helps prevent bites.

A reflective hat coated with oil can trap many of these irritating insects. A white aluminum hard hat or aluminum foil taped or stapled over another hat may be used. Baby oil, mineral oil, or even automotive oil should be applied liberally. This makes an effective fly catcher which should aid the hiker or outdoorsman.

PEANUT BUTTER BARS

- 1 cup powdered milk
- 1 cup shredded cocoanut
- 1 cup sesame seed
- 1 cup soy protein powder

In a sauce pan heat carefully:

- 1 cup peanut butter
- 1 cup honey

Add the above ingredients and mix well. Transfer to a cookie sheet, roll out and cut while hot. Makes 20 bars. For backpacking, wrap individually in wax paper and plastic bag.

VOLUME 32, NUMBER 3 KILLINGTON SECTION, GREEN MOUNTAIN CLUB JULY-SEPTEMBER, 1979

APPALACHIAN TRAIL PROJECT AND THE KILLINGTON SECTION

On August 8, Preston Bristow, formerly assistant director of the GMC, and currently representative for the Appalachian Trail Conference and the National Park Service, met with the Killington Section board of directors to report on progress in securing the Appalachian Trail under the recently enacted federal legislation, and specifically to report on possible trail relocations within the Killington Section.

There are four sections of trail within the Killington Section that may be affected. From south to north, proposed relocations are:

(1) Bear Mountain Relocation. The proposed trail would be moved west from the Bear Mountain Road, go over the summit of Bear Mountain, and rejoin the present trail near the Wallingford/Shrewsbury town line. This would provide a scenically pleasant trail and remove hiker traffic from the houses at the junction of Route 1140 and the Bear Mountain Road.

(2) Cold River Relocation. The proposed trail would run west and north of the current trail, leaving the junction of Cold River and Keiffer Roads, following the eastern bank of the Cold River and rejoining the trail at the East Branch of the Cold River. This would remove the trail from town highway and private woods road and make it more remote from homes.

(3) Clarendon Outlook Relocation. This relocation would change the access to the Clarendon Gorge, which until recently has run through a roadside auction establishment. Going north, the proposed trail would bear left after crossing the Gorge bridge, climb over a wooded knob on Fish & Game land, cross Route 103, and continue north of the existing trail (now in an easterly direction) until it rejoins the existing trail below the summit of Beacon Hill.

Note: The trail south from Route 103 to the Clarendon Gorge Bridge was temporarily relocated this summer; the A.T. relocation will pretty much follow the trail as it is currently re-routed. We thank Chuck Wade for the fine job of clearing and blazing which he did in the Clarendon Gorge area.

(4) Little Killington Relocation. The proposed relocation would go west of the current trail a short distance below Governor Clement Lodge, ascend the south ridge of Little Killington to the summit, and rejoin the trail near Tamarack Shelter.

As was mentioned earlier, none of these relocations is definite yet. Section members will be kept informed through Smoke and Blazes.

There is one other relocation under discussion, though it was not initiated by the Appalechian Trail bill. Landowner corporations in the Pico area have requested that the Trail be moved to the west to allow for expansion of ski areas and possible residential development expansion. This relocation would move the trail from the crossing at Sherburne Pass. The request for relocation is under consideration by the GMC Main Club officials, and no relocation will be made that is not acceptable to all organizations involved.

TWO NEWCOMERS' IMPRESSIONS OF INTERSECTIONAL

RACCOONS IN THE GARBAGE

by

Roma Pulling

I received a wet introduction to my first Intersectional. Rachael Charland and I arrived at Mount Norris Scout Reservation in Eden Mills about 8:00 A.M. in the rain -- not a gentle pitter-patter but a real sod-soaker. We then proceeded to set up Rachael's tent in the rain, a good beginning, I guess, because everything had to look good after that. We were preceded by Mauri Winturri of Killington Section and later joined by Rob Carey.

When the storm let up toward noon, we roamed around the campground and were impressed with the size of it. After lunch at our campsite, there being very little activity at the meet, we ventured across Route 100 to climb Mt. Norris, from which the camp receives its name. The trail was poorly marked and overgrown with brush -- WET brush! It could almost be said we swam to the top.

When we returned to camp, we wrung out our clothes, prepared our supper and produced, as if by magic, a cake complete with candles, as a little bird had informed me it was Rob Carey's birthday.

The evening activity consisted of an informal meeting in the dining hall, where I was amazed to discover I was the only Vermonter present!

Shortly after retiring to our tent, peace was shattered by the clang of the trash bin cover being knocked to the ground. One ambitious soul-- not from KS!!! -- shined a flashlight on the scene and discovered a raccoon raiding the garbage. We had been forewarned of this possibility and had our foodstuffs safely stowed in the car.

We arose Sunday to near-perfect weather conditions. The KS members joined a group -- or did they join us? -- hiking from the Johnson-Waterville road to Rte. 15. All the rain that fell the day before seemed to have collected on this trail. We slogged, waded, and sometimes temporarily left the trail to get to Prospect Rock for our lunch, and it was worth it. There is a really lovely view of the Lamoille River valley. From here it was an easy walk to our car, and when Rachael and I started home, I was determined that although this was my first Intersectional it would not be my last.

MY FIRST INTERSECTIONAL

by

W. Beverly Davis

As a new member of G.M.C. and attending my first Intersectional that was held on Mt. Norris at the Boy Scout Camp, I would like to congratulate Dot for the tremendous work she did during the week.

Unfortunately I was only able to come for the last weekend. Many had left to go home before the Labor Day rush, but for those who stayed it was most enjoyable with a lovely dinner and square dancing on Saturday evening.

After a good hike on Sunday, the large campfire and harmonica playing just topped off the evening.

I am looking forward to our next intersectional gathering in 1980.

A CHANGE AT SUNNYSIDE CAMP

by Ray Catozzi

Sunnyside Camp is no more. No, it didn't burn down again; it's still there, just off the LT south of Spring Lake. It has a new name, the MINERVA HINCHEY SHELTER.

This camp, which has been used by the KS for many years for many memorable outings including our most recent winter-moonlight hikes, was the scene recently of dedication ceremonies in the renaming of the camp. Minerva Hinchey was for 22 years the corresponding secretary for the GMC at little or no pay for most of that time, and for many years a member of the Killington Section. Minerva's dedication and loyalty to the club were known by hikers from all over the northeast. She died last March at the age of 83.

The renaming ceremony took place on a pleasant sunny Saturday afternoon on the 4th of August. About 40 people gathered there to enjoy a party-like atmosphere and to listen to various people talk about Minerva. Among the guests who spoke were Ben Rolston, former GMC president, and Frank Hinchey, Jr. from Cincinnati, Ohio, Minerva's nephew.

Ben came over from his job as supervisor of Wilgus State Park on the Connecticut River, saying he had attended the dedication and naming of the Lula Tye Shelter on Little Rock Pond, and he didn't want to miss out on this one. Lula Tye was also a secretary for the GMC a good many years ago.

Frank Hinchey spoke of his appreciation of what the club was doing in memory of Minerva.

A new sign reading MINERVA HINCHEY SHELTER was bolted on the front of the building, in place of the old Sunnyside Camp sign.

Mauri Winturri, who originated the idea of renaming Sunnyside in Minerva's honor, enjoyed the outing with a can of his favorite liquid refreshment in his hand, even while everybody else was drinking lemonade and eating crackers and cheese dip, courtesy of Carl and Nancy Schmidt.

It was a pleasurable outing, however brief, and a memorable one for those who were there.

MIDDLEBURY GAP TO SUCKER BROOK SHELTER

by Rachael Charland
June 9, 1979

After spotting our cars, nine hikers began a steep climb from Route 125 to Lake Pleiad Shelter. Carl Schmidt, KS president, indicated to the hikers the good maintenance work that had been completed on the trail we trod and how he hoped all hikers would join in such an endeavor to keep the LT so well groomed. There were three evidences of the trail being rerouted and these were well marked.

We didn't stop at Worth Mt. Lodge as we wanted to obtain the "spectacular view to the northeast" promised by the GMC guidebook -- needless to say, we were not that lucky as a heavy haze obscured the distant mountains.

The group was somewhat divided into the Fast Pacers led by Carl and the Turtle-Trotters led by this writer; however, we all met at Sucker Brook Shelter where we were greeted by hikers from the Big Apple.

After a refreshing rest, we mistakenly took a wide dirt road that wasn't the usual trail back to the location of our cars, but since it was such easy traveling we didn't mind being several feet from the regular entrance of the trail.

Before all departed, Barbara Tenny, a new hiker, invited us to accompany her to view the mountain pinks which were in bloom along Lake Griffith. This writer can vouch for the loveliness of those luscious pink blooms as I was the lone KS member who accompanied Barbara and her nephew on Sunday. That third grader certainly knew his short cut route to Lake Griffith. We had a difficult time choosing from the many picnic sites along the lake. Barbara has many excellent snapshots of the mountain pinks in bloom in this area that she would like to share with you. As an added treat of the day, as we talked over the day's journey in her doorway, we noted a double rainbow hovering over the brook that runs by her home. Thanks for the invitation, Barbara -- remember to tell us again next year when the mountain pinks are in bloom along that lake!

OLD BALDY

by Carol Chapman
June 17, 1979

Nine hikers met at the fire station on this hot, sunny day in June. A tenth hiker, Anne Taylor, a newcomer from Quechee, met us at the bridge in Bridgewater.

After making a preliminary scouting hike up Old Baldy from the South Woodstock side with Churchill Scott several weeks previous to the scheduled hike, I decided it would be better to take the familiar trail up the west side than to go bushwhacking through evergreens.

First we followed an old road and then a trail leading to an old stone wall. Along the way a couple of us spotted a doe running near the trail. Little toads were so numerous that we had to step carefully to avoid them.

By the stone wall the trail disappeared and left us wondering, but thanks to some scouting in opposite directions by Steve Pulling and Ray Catozzi, we found our way to the summit of the mountain.

Old Baldy may have once been treeless, but now is forested except for the very top. We picnicked there in an Indian paintbrush-dotted field with a magnificent view of the surrounding mountains.

Several streams crossing the trail helped us to quench our thirst on the way down. According to Steve's pedometer, the round trip was nearly seven miles, several miles longer than publicized. But we Killington Section members, being a hardy and determined lot, all made it to the top.

AMITY POND NATURAL AREA

by Roma Pulling
June 23, 1979

The skies were threatening when seven of us gathered at the fire station, but fortunately a storm never materialized. We enjoyed partial sunshine and comfortable temperatures throughout this 2 1/2 mile walk (as recorded on Mauri Winturri's pedometer). The leisurely pace we set allowed plenty of time for lingering at the tiny pond and the two shelters. The area's only view of distant mountains can be had from a knoll near the pond.

An unexpected bonus on this hike were large patches of luscious wild strawberries, where we proceeded to gorge ourselves. An accommodating workman had just mowed an open area, a bit of luck for us, as otherwise this feast would have been hidden.

The bugs which pestered me on a previous visit here were absent, but not mourned! We did spot numerous toads and one red eft. A patch of delicate white flowers which none of us recognized proved to be a one-flowered wintergreen, or one-flowered pyrola, depending on which book one consults.

Ironically, the most thrilling glimpse of wildlife that day was not in the "natural area." Five of us sighted two graceful does on the way back to Rutland and watched them several minutes, a most satisfying end to a delightful outing.

FOURTH OF JULY PICNIC

by Rachael Charland

On July 4th fourteen hikers drove to a country road leading to Silver Lake (near Lake Dunmore). It was a very long and stone-infested lane, but eventually we found the parking area. Mauri Winturri suggested this particular entrance to Silver Lake picnic grounds because the grade to climb would be gradual as the day was one of the summer's sunniest.

With so many side paths to investigate the temptation to several hikers couldn't be resisted, so for a while we wondered where George Reynolds, who was carrying our watermelon, had disappeared. When he did arrive at the picnic table -- oops! you guessed it, he tripped over something (his feet?) and the loud bang heard was our watermelon splitting into sections. Didn't spoil the taste at all as everyone who shared it agreed.

Three venturesome souls went swimming in the chilly waters; others climbed Mt. Moosalamoo and still another group went seeking the Falls of Lana where only a slight trickle of water could be seen struggling over the huge rocks. A darkening sky hastened our departure -- needless to say, the first Fourth of July picnic of the Killington Section could be called a success!

ROUTE 103 TO ROUTE 4

by Roma Pulling
July 6-8, 1979

Five regular Killington Section members led by Ray Catozzi along with 11 scouts of Boy Scout Troop #105 and their leader, Steve Pulling, hiked this section off trail the weekend of July 6th through 8th. The weather was perfect -- cool at night and sunny and warm but not hot during the days.

The outstanding flora seen on this hike were violet wood sorrels which were, almost literally, everywhere.

The view from the top of Beacon Hill was pretty, and we paused there to enjoy it. The hike between the lower and upper Cold River roads, paralleling two branches of the stream, was most pleasant.

The group, which had been split into several small ones, was reunited at Governor Clement Shelter for lunch. Here we regrettably lost two hikers -- an adult who was not feeling well and a scout who didn't want to continue. The rest of us proceeded, each at his/her own pace, to Tamarack Shelter for the night. The shelter was occupied by two other groups of hikers, so our party occupied the campground for a very restful night.

On Sunday, July 8, the most strenuous hiking behind us, we set a leisurely pace to Cooper Lodge. There we paused long enough for a short but steep climb to the summit of Killington. The vistas in all directions were fabulous and well worth the effort.

Between Killington and Pico Peaks the grade is easy but walking difficult because of the muddy and badly eroded condition of the trail with tree roots exposed. Our group was reunited again at Pico Camp for lunch and welcomed the prospect of the 2 1/2 mile home stretch to Route 4, all admitting to being slightly tired and sore but happy.

WHITE ROCKS SUPPER HIKE

by Churchill Scott
July 17, 1979

This quarter we tried something new on our schedule.

Tuesday, July 17, we planned an easy evening walk and cook-out at the White Rocks Picnic Area east of Wallingford. Over 30 people came along, and it was a special treat to have Mr. Bennett D. Bell, his wife, and two of their grandchildren. Mr. Bell was a former president of our section and a director to the main club.

After a good hearty meal, two short walks were conducted. A one-mile trip took us over the old Cliffside Trail to the White Rock Cliff overlook. A longer one, led by Ray Catozzi, followed the old Town Road via the Ice Beds Trail. At the sign describing the geological history of the area some of the more adventurous climbed up the talus slopes before returning.

It is hoped that during mid-summer while the days are long we may have more of these easy short outings.

MT. HANLEY

by Nancy Schmidt
July 29, 1979

On a very hot, muggy Sunday, twenty hikers trudged up an old logging road, around the front of Little Hanley and up over the top of Big Hanley to a rocky overlook which provided views of Bird Mountain and the Taconics beyond, as well as Route 4 and the Castleton River valley to the west. The views were somewhat reduced by the haze, but the outlook was a lovely spot.

Just as we finished lunch and were preparing to head down, six men appeared carrying hang gliders; they had come up another logging road on the north side of Mt. Hanley (in a 4-wheel drive vehicle). We all stayed and enjoyed watching them spread their wings and take off from the spot where we had just lunched.

The hike was more uphill than our experienced information sources remembered, and if the road had not been in shade the heat would have been miserable. We all agreed that this would be an excellent autumn hike with good foliage on the way up and a great view at the lookout.

Our youngest hiker was Russell Chance, five years old, and a really good hiker.

ROAD TO LIBERTY HILL

by Jim Frink
August 18, 1979

Seven people (Anna Nyiri, Kristin and Maria Theresa Nadler, Bev Davis, Rob Carey, Mauri Winturri, and I) left the fire station at 9:10 A.M.

We drove to the Colton Guest House just east of Pittsfield on Route 100 where the road to Liberty Hill commences. Mrs. Nyiri and Mauri left their cars a half mile up that road and waited for Rob Carey and me while we parked Rob's car 1/4 mile west of Route 100 where the Liberty Hill road crosses the White River. After returning in my car to meet the others, we all drove to the point where the Liberty Hill road starts up the mountain.

After an hour and a half of hiking uphill, we came to a beautiful mountain meadow with views of the Green Mountains to the east, Big Wilson to the south and Little Wilson to the north.

Mauri left us at the meadow and walked back to his car. Mrs. Nyiri and the children decided to complete the hike since Rob's car would hold the six of us.

When we got to the top of Liberty Hill we stopped at the house which previously belonged to my good friends, Joe and Eva Wintermute. The present owners are Ray Quillia and his wife, who greeted us and cordially invited us in to see how they had rebuilt the place. It was marvelous to see what they had done with that old house. Now it is a very beautifully built and perfectly furnished home with an added large fireplace and many other additions.

The end of the hike was just a mile down the road and we reached the car just when the raindrops commenced to fall.

THANKS TO THOSE WHO DID TRAIL AND SHELTER WORK...

Our thanks to all the volunteers who have helped us maintain the Section's heavily used trails and shelters. For much-needed work at Cooper Lodge, thanks to Gary Salmon and his state forest colleagues, Ray Auger, the GMC Southern Caretaker Supervisor, and campers from Camp Betsy Cox. Also we'd like to thank Suzanne Deemer, Cooper Lodge caretaker for the summer just past, for all the work she did.

AND A REQUEST FOR WORKERS AT PICO AND CLARENDON!

There are two work parties on the fall schedule for the purpose of fixing up Pico Camp and Clarendon. Pico Camp and its outhouse are in serious need of repair; bad weather has cancelled our last two attempts to work there. We are asking for a good turnout on Sept. 29 and Oct. 27 in order to get these shelters spruced up and clean again.

ADVICE TO NEW (AND EXPERIENCED) HIKERS

1. Hikers should always wear sturdy footwear and dress warmly according to the season; remember that the shaded woods or the top of a mountain can be much cooler than Main St. Park. Since small children will usually manage to get wet pretty soon during any hike, extra dry socks and clothing are a must, especially in winter.

2. Children and young teenagers should be in the control of parents or some other pre-assigned adult at all times. No hiker should wander far ahead of, or behind, the main group unless the hiker is thoroughly familiar with the area and informs the group of his/her intent. All hikers should carry whistles and use them immediately if disoriented with respect to the main group. And, if you give another hiker a ride, make sure that the hiker has return transportation if you decide to leave early.

3. Taking unleashed dogs into the woods is a bad idea. Even well-trained dogs will chase wild animals and get lost or get a noseful of porky quills. Most landowners strongly object to loose dogs roaming over their property.

4. Some hikers enjoy pleasant conversation and making new friends, while others most enjoy the quiet of the woods. Arguments, complaints, and loud discussions are seldom welcome. The best rule is (plagiarizing Thumper): "If you can't say anything nice, don't say anything at all."

A WHALE WATCH, ANYONE?

A sunny sky, a salty wave, accompanied this writer along with 81 other passengers June 16th on a sturdy boat which left Provincetown pier about 3 P.M. All eyes were glued to the horizon seeking the first glimpse of a WHALE!

Not many minutes passed when the cry "Thar she blows!" indicated at least one whale had been sighted. Cameras of many types clicked feverishly trying to capture the graceful monster's movements as he once more dived into the deep.

During the trip three species of whales were seen: the Right Whale, the Blue Fin Whale, and the Humpback Whale. Anyone who hasn't experienced this exhilarating trip should contact a member of the St. Albans Section for reservations on next year's trip.

A THANK YOU

A special "thanks" to Rob Carey for his efforts in trying to find the entrance to the trail to Davis neighborhood and the two short hikes he so patiently endured so I could gain additional mileage toward my End-to-End.

VOLUME 32, NUMBER 4 KILLINGTON SECTION, GREEN MOUNTAIN CLUB OCTOBER-DECEMBER, 1979

GMC BOARD OF DIRECTORS MEETING: STOWE, OCTOBER 13

Nancy Schmidt attended as alternate director for Section Director Ray Catozzi, who was unable to attend. Bob Hagerman's report in the November Long Trail News covered the actions of the board quite thoroughly, and it doesn't seem necessary to repeat any of his account here. However, there are three topics which were discussed before and after the meeting which are of considerable interest to the Killington Section.

(1) Proposed Relocation of Trail in Pico Area. This proposal has been dropped, and the trail will remain where it currently is in the Pico area, and will continue to cross Route 4 at Sherburne Pass.

(2) Appalachian Trail Relocation in the Killington Section. A Manchester surveying company has just begun surveying and center-blazing the Trail from Cold River Road to just below Pico. This is just the first step in a process that may take quite some time.

(3) Clarendon Gorge Bridge. After the bridge was rebuilt, the Killington Section agreed to maintain it for a time, and that time is now past. The bridge is currently in need of repair and needs a program of annual maintenance (which would not be too difficult or involved if done on a regular basis). An agreement was reached with GMC President Doug James that the Club would seek someone to "adopt" and maintain the bridge.

The next meeting of the GMC Board of Directors will be held at the Inn at Long Trail in Killington on January 12, 1980. GMC members are invited to attend as observers.

KILLINGTON SECTION ANNUAL MEETING

In accordance with the amendment approved by Section members at the January, 1979 meeting, the Killington Section annual meeting will no longer be held in January, when the weather is likely to make travel difficult, but in late March or April.

This year the annual meeting will again be held in the meeting room of the Pleasant Manor Nursing Home, 46 Nichols Street, Rutland. Date and time are Saturday, March 29, at 7:30 P.M.

The following positions will need to be filled: President, Vice-President, and Secretary-Treasurer (we certainly hope that Churchill Scott will continue in this last position); also there will be some director's positions to be filled. If you have suggestions, please make them to the nominating committee whose members are: Ray Catozzi, Rachael Charland, and Carol Chapman.

Section members who are interested in participating more in the workings of the club are invited to consider helping on the following committees: Trails & Shelters, Outings, Publicity, Smoke & Blazes, and Membership.

QUECHEE GORGE

by Roma Pulling
September 16, 1979

Webster defines a gorgé as "a narrow cleft with steep, rocky walls, esp. one through which a stream runs." The one named Quechee fits that description and enhances it. It is also picturesque, vast and awesome.

The eight of us who rendezvoused at the fire station on this day were joined at our destination by Mauri Winturri. Our first stop was the former railway bridge from which we gazed down at the water 165 feet below. Our trip along the Ottawaquechee River was more nearly a leisurely stroll than a hike. Nearly everyone seemed to enjoy it, though, and spent some time looking for crayfish in the shallow pools among the rocks, exploring or just plain relaxing on the rocks in the river south of the bridge.

Our last stop was a quick look at the falls on the north side of the road; then it was off for home.

GMC AUTUMN OUTING: MT. MEADOWS CAMP- GROUND, LINCOLN

by Rob Carey
September 21-23, 1979

Attendance of GMC members at the second Autumn Outing was down this year, probably due to the return of the Inter-sectional. However, all those who did come enjoyed the weekend. The weather was clear and cold again, with lows down in the 20's.

Mt. Abraham was the most popular destination with about 25 going. Some hiked to Camel's Hump while others worked on their end-to-ends. The most ambitious hikers again proved that it is a full day's hike from Lincoln Gap to Appalachian Gap. It was too cold for swimming in the campground pond this year.

A short hike to Bristol Ledges was enjoyed by many on Sunday, with spectacular views of the Champlain Valley.

WORK PARTY AT PICO CAMP

by Joe Dicton, Sr.
September 29, 1979

After an all night rain, there was a question of whether the Pico work party would be held. During the morning hours the rain did stop and all the signs said "go, go, go."

At the fire station that wet Saturday morning the following Eager-Beavers did sign up and were ready to go: Joe Dictons, Jr. and Sr., Al and Steve Pulling, Carl Schmidt, Randy Seifert, and the following Boy Scouts of Troop #105: Gary Ackerman, Pete Davis, Matt Malmgren, and Danny and Eric Palmer. As you can see, it was a good turnout for this much-needed project.

On our climb to Pico Camp, Al Pulling and Carl Schmidt, carrying their supplies, stopped for trail work that included cleaning out and installing water bars and trail clearing.

When we arrived at Pico Camp, we found seven hikers just arising from an overnight stay.

Steve Pulling, Assistant Scoutmaster of Troop #105, rebuilt the window and door which needed major repairs.

Joe Dicton, Jr., Randy Seifert and I replaced missing boards and a window on the side of the shelter. Steve Pulling and Joe Dicton, Jr. worked on the roof, nailing down wind-loosened metal roof sheeting and cementing the holes.

As Carl Schmidt and Al Pulling arrived at the camp, they decided to work on the sagging foundation. A good five-inch spruce was found and cut up for three new support pillars.

The Killington Section should be proud of the outstanding effort made by the Boy Scouts and the other volunteers in restoring this shelter to good condition.

SNAKE MOUNTAIN

by Ray Catozzi
October 7, 1979

The weather was cloudy, windy, and cold on Saturday morning, October 7, with only a fifty-fifty chance of sunshine by late afternoon, but five persons showed up for the trip to Snake Mountain in Addison. Another hiker was to meet us in Middlebury, and he did, but a meeting with more people at a road junction on Route 125 west of Middlebury, fizzled, so Roma Pulling and I headed for the mountain.

No cars were at the trail head, so we sat and waited and wondered what had happened to everybody else. After 10 or 15 minutes, I drove over to another approach to the mountain, thinking they had all gone there by mistake. No cars. Back to the first trail head on Mountain Road. Still no cars.

We decided to head up the trail after another short wait, figuring they'll come along eventually. Well, Roma and I climbed the mountain, enjoyed the view, ate lunch, and were one-third of the way back down when the rest finally came into sight on their way up. After greetings and explanations of what had happened to everyone, the second group continued on up the mountain. Roma and I took a side trail to a natural area, Cranberry Bog, where there are hundreds of pitcher plants, then headed for our car and home.

Snake Mountain is a long, low (1287 ft.) and ledgy mountain that affords beautiful views of Addison farm land and Lake Champlain. It was too bad we had mix-ups and had to climb it in separate groups.

KILLINGTON SECTION MEMBERS WEEKLONG HIKE

by Churchill Scott
October 14-20, 1979

My son, Kim, and two of his friends drove Rachael Charland and me to Davis Neighborhood on Sunday, October 14th. It was really snowing and it continued to snow on Monday and Tuesday. Parker Camp was made snug by plugging holes and a large gaping window with plastic, but we did miss the stove. There was already a good ground covering of snow and more was falling.

Around 5:00 P.M. we were joined by Mr. and Mrs. Surette of Sorel, Quebec, who began their hike at Route 242. On the higher spots of Laraway Mountain we found snow six to eight inches deep even before new snowfalls added another six inches. Hiking was very slow and difficult and the white blazes were impossible to spot because of the wet, falling snow and slippery downhill grades. Usually about 3:30 P.M. we would stop each day and two of us would pitch tents and two get the evening meals. On Monday night we pitched our tent under an enormous pine tree.

Tuesday we reached Coddington Hollow while Wednesday we shuffled through the deep snow with the Surettes to Route 15. That night we pitched out tent on the back lawn of a local tourist home.

Despite the sleet and driving rain on Thursday, we plodded on from French Camp over Whiteface. We were joined by a couple from New Hampshire who had started at the Canadian border and had been held up by bad weather around Jay Peak.

The open front shelter at Sterling Pond is a very big change from the old closed camp but equally beautiful unless seen through the mist.

We made it to Smuggler's Notch and down Route 108. As we rested at the side of the road, a couple of hunters informed us of the recent accident in Nebraska Notch. Such news dampened our spirits enough so we did not attempt the Mt. Mansfield LT. We made camp at a nearby campground and hitched a ride the next morning to Jonesville.

Ice cream cones were the order of the day and we repacked and hiked to Duck Brook for Saturday evening-- with the temperature rising from 24 to 60 - the 60 for the last day of our hike. A large hawk soared over our heads as we scaled the mossy rocks to Duck Brook. This was the spot where my Svea 123 (camp stove) gave up its ghost, and the explosion started a lovely campfire...some good came of it.

On Sunday Rachael hiked down a road to Jonesville and then southward to the entrance to the trail to Wiley Lodge where I met her with the car.

I learned that a tent and a Sterno stove and plenty of good nourishing food helped an otherwise foul-weathered week.

SAINT CATHERINE MOUNTAIN

by Roma Pulling
October 20, 1979

Jean and Ralph Caddell led this pleasant hike expertly. Fifteen people walked along the ledges above Lake St. Catherine, and although thick haze prevented us from seeing the mountains, it didn't obscure our view of the lake, which was lovely with some colored leaves still in evidence.

Following our hike, we enjoyed a barbecue at our leaders' lakeside home and were treated to rides in their rowboat and canoe, adding up to an altogether delightful day.

Thanks, Ralph and Jean, wherever you are!

WORK PARTY

by Joe Dicton, Sr.
October 27, 1979

On learning that the scheduled relocation of Clarendon outhouse had already been accomplished by a group of the Long Trail Patrol, we decided to return to Pico Camp to work on that outhouse.

On this cool October morning Roma and Al Pulling and Joe Dictons Jr. and Sr. signed in for the project. At first it seemed like too few helpers to carry all the necessary supplies up the mountain, but we accomplished it without mishap. On our way to Pico Camp there was a dusting of snow and a little frost on the ground.

Al Pulling started digging out a hole for the new outhouse location. Joe Dicton, Jr. replaced missing boards in the wall and floor. New sheet metal roofing was nailed on top of the old leaking roof. Roma Pulling was busy looking after the fire and getting our lunch ready.

After lunch, using an iron bar, we moved the outhouse to its new location.

This was another outstanding effort of club members working together to keep our Long Trail structures in good shape.

VALIQUETTE MEMORIAL HIKE

by Joe Valiquette
October 28, 1979

It was a hazy day but 13 hikers gathered for the annual Valiquette Memorial Hike to the top of East Mountain. When we reached the top we saw that the flag placed there last year was still intact. The view was obscured by the haze. We could not see the Adirondacks, but had a pretty good view of the immediate area of Rutland. We saw no wildlife but I am sure plenty of wildlife saw us! All in all it was a pleasant hike even if Old Man Weather did not provide us with the best day.

MYSTERY HIKE

by Churchill Scott
November 4, 1979

This time our Mystery Hike did not take us too far from home. We drove to the Whipple Hollow Road and began our walk up the familiar road to Mt. Hanley (so-called). Soon we reached a level stretch by the first brook crossing. Here the bush-whacking began with a request that everyone stay together and in sight of each other.

As we walked along a ridge to the south, each person learned a bit about the trees, ferns, mosses and plants growing underneath our feet.

In time for lunch we arrived at our destination, a gully between the two peaks of Little Hanley (so-called) where a large overhanging ledge with southern exposure was located.

After a bite to eat we continued south to a number of spectacular lookouts. At one point we watched an old steam engine and passenger cars move along the D&H Railroad Line to Castleton.

Here communications broke down. Some were so far ahead it was impossible to retrace our steps and we had to take the hard way down the steep slopes, rocky areas, and slippery leaves.

It was good to see Kim Faulkner with us again and also Glenn Tarbell, a brother of Susan Tarbell, an old time K.S. member.

COVERED DISH SUPPER AT CAMP SUNRISE

by Winnie Shambo
November 17, 1979

None of the 11 people attending this year's covered dish supper could possibly complain of a lack of variety in the dishes presented or the amount offered. We enjoyed everything from spaghetti in meat sauce to a variety of salads and vegetables to hot breads and mince pie and chocolate chip cookies. Calling our attention to how fortunate we were, Mrs. Dorothy Kirk asked if we would take a moment to remember the world's hungry, which we did.

After this great repast, the dishes were cleared away and we viewed two slide shows -- one presented by Carol Chapman and the other by Rob Carey. Carol's was of a canoe trip located north of Montreal that she and her mother took one weekend in July. The scenic shots as well as the price of the trip and what it includes has interested a few of us in also making the trip.

Rob's slides were mainly of the LT, although he had also taken quite a few of Pennsylvania. He had some fantastic shots, too many to mention individually, but I congratulate him and envy his photographic abilities.

Rachael and I came prepared to spend the night, which we did, and awoke to a beautiful sunny day. After breakfast and Rachael's housekeeping duties were completed, we hiked to the ridges surrounding Sunrise and were impressed with the beauty confronting us each time we stopped. We climbed one particularly steep hill (just to see the other side) and walked the ridge along a deer trace until we came to a most impressive sight, that being the two lakes, Sunrise and Sunset.

This short hike was enjoyable and we saw only two hunters while we were in the woods.

BIRD MOUNTAIN

by Churchill Scott
December 2, 1979

Fourteen hikers appeared at the fire station on this rather cold windy day of snow flurries.

The new trail, cut and blazed by a group led by George Pearlstein, was well marked except where some vandals had torn down signs, which caused some confusion.

Steep in spots and wandering a bit, the trail seems to end at the north summit of a gully where the old trail comes from the southeast. It then makes a right-angle turn to the south and 0.5 miles later you reach the real summit and ledge where there is a magnificent 180 degree view encompassing the Green Mountains to the east and to the west Lake Bomoseen and beyond that the Adirondacks.

VOLUME 33, NUMBER 4 KILLINGTON SECTION, GREEN MOUNTAIN CLUB JANUARY-MARCH, 1980

"STATE OF THE SECTION" REPORT

by Carl Schmidt - Pres.
Killington Section

FINANCES: For the second year (since the dues increase), we came out just barely in the black. This amazing accomplishment, in light of inflation, was largely the result of our Trails and Shelter Chairman, Joe Dicton, getting a huge amount of work done with minimal expenditures. With an income of $860.00 after paying out $3 per member to the Main Club, our major expense was Smoke & Blazes printing plus postage ($200), both of which will be increasing in 1980. THERE IS ONE WAY to avoid a general DUES INCREASE in 1981, and that is

THE KIRK FUND: We are slowly but surely getting to the $5,000 needed for the Fund to return interest income for trails and shelters. Please -- if you can spare a few extra tax-deductible dollars for the Fund, you will be insuring the future of the Section for a long time to come.

TRAILS & SHELTERS: At least 75% of the 26 miles of Long Trail in our section was gone over and is in excellent shape. The worst segment, between Governor Clement and Tamarack Shelters, is scheduled for relocation under the Appalachian Trail securing act. The Main Club is looking for an individual or group to take permanent responsibility for the Clarendon Gorge Bridge. The outhouse at Tucker-Johnson Shelter will be rebuilt this spring. All shelters were in acceptable shape at the end of last fall, including Minerva Hinchey (formerly Sunny-side) Shelter.

APPALACHIAN TRAIL SECURING RELOCATION: Preston Bristow will give an update at our Section's annual meeting. Landowner negotiations seem to be going well. Help should be forthcoming from the government and the Main Club, but the Killington Section will have its hands full for at least the next three years working on relocations. The Clarendon Gorge area will require substantial work as soon as possible for safety reasons. My initial impression is that in most cases the relocations will benefit landowners as well as hikers. The proposed relocation by-passing Sherburne Pass did not materialize.

MEMBERSHIP: Membership is down so far in 1980. I hope this is due to the later-than-usual annual meeting. We need working, contributing members now more than at any time during the last decade. If you haven't yet renewed, please do so -- and sign up a friend.

WINTER HIKES: Next year we might relocate them to Virginia or South Carolina, where most of the snow seems to have gone.

APOLOGIA: To those who attended this winter's Moonlight Hike, the weak hot chocolate was due to my assuming that one scoop of mix was the correct amount (rather than two, as stated in the label directions, which I read later); it was not a conscious effort to save money for the Section.

KILLINGTON SECTION ANNUAL MEETING

-- SATURDAY, MARCH 29, 1980

7:30 P.M. in the Meeting Room

at

Pleasant Manor Nursing Home

46 Nichols Street

Parking lot between the two buildings; meeting (dining) room is downstairs in building on the left (northernmost building).

Refreshments will be served.

Please pay your membership dues by March 29 (Annual Meeting) to assure that your name will be placed in the roster, to be published in the next issue of Smoke & Blazes, and to continue receiving this publication.

NOMINATIONS FOR DIRECTORS

The nominees for two Directors' vacancies are Rob Carey (3 year term) and Steve Pulling (2 year term). Ray Catozzi and Churchill Scott will be nominated for new three year terms. (Officers are elected by the Directors at the first meeting of the Board following the annual meeting).

The present Directors continuing to serve and the years their terms expire are as follows:

--Carol Chapman, Roma Pulling and Nancy Schmidt - 1981

--Joe Diction, Sr. and Harold Rogers - 1982

At this time we wish to express our deep appreciation to President Carl Schmidt for his dedicated service to the club. Under his able leadership we have succeeded in keeping the Killington Section "in the black." He and Nancy have devoted much time to developing and improving the club's relationship with Trail landowners. Although he will no longer be a Director, we hope Carl will continue his valuable participation in the Killington Section.

MINI HIKE ON THE LT AND AT

by Rachael Charland

December 15, 1979

On a clear, beautiful, wintry Saturday, six energetic hikers, after spotting two cars, began their trek from Gifford Woods to Route #4. We had at least two hikers with us who had never hiked this section of the LT and AT.

It was a gradual climb from Gifford Woods affording several unusual views. Icy rocks slowed the group down as we neared Route #4 but with talk of the hearty lunches that several members had packed, ice wasn't going to hinder these adventurers. All packed into one car and drove to Gifford Woods where we selected the sunniest picnic table area and enjoyed our noon repast.

PINE HILL

by Churchill Scott

January 12, 1980

Once again the lack of snow made this trip just a walk through the woods on Pine Hill.

We traveled the trails cut by the Rutland Recreational Center and which are described in the G.M.C. Day Hike Guide. We were pleased to have a total of nine hikers for this Saturday outing, among them Mr. and Mrs. Rosenthal of Whippany, N.J. whom it was a pleasant surprise to see once again.

While waiting for the fire get started and the water to boil, the Muddy Pond area was explored.

Returning via the road, we took a short side trip to the old stone crusher and the enormous boulder where Jim Frink explained its geological history and that of the surrounding area.

We are indeed fortunate to have such an enjoyable area easily available to us.

LT RELOCATION SURVEY

by Churchill Scott

Continued bare ground into the middle of January offered Preston Bristow an opportunity to hike over the Little Killington relocation with Joseph Dicton, Sr. and Churchill Scott.

Starting west of the bridge over the West Branch of the Cold River, the proposed new trail follows an easy grade past the Herb Haley farm and a short distance west of the Governor Clement Shelter.

Following along small mountain streams, the area is very enjoyable and pleasant. At last a steeper ascent begins and for 1/2 to 3/4 miles it passes a number of views, finally reaching the summit of Little Killington. Here the trail continues in a northeasterly direction to join the present Long Trail about 1/4 mile north of Tamarack Shelter.

Preston states that the paper work may not be completed until 1981, but the middle portion on State land may be cut, cleared and blazed this summer (1980). So it is hoped we can get a great deal of work done.

NEW ROUTE TO MINERVA HINCHEY SHELTER

by Rachael Charland
January 26, 1980

This day was to have been our first x-country ski and snowshoe trip on Lake St. Catherine. Needless to say, Mother Nature didn't cooperate with us. Seven adventurous souls ventured on a little known back road to Minerva Hinchey Shelter. We managed to miss the LT trail markers so bushwacked to the shelter. After a quick lunch period we departed in a northerly direction for Route #103. The wind whistled through the trees and whirled bits of snow as we descended the trail to Clarendon Gorge. Again icy formations on the rocks slowed our pace.

After crossing the Gorge bridge we entered the relocated LT area and found that not only was its approach rather steep, but dangerous if one didn't watch one's footing. This situation was reported to Harry Peet and we have been assured that this area as well as the descending pathway to Route #103 will receive some necessary attention from the Long Trail Patrol this summer. At the same time those problem boards of the bridge will be attended to.

QUARTERLINE ROAD

by Harold Rogers
February 10, 1980

Eleven dedicated hikers showed up for the hike on this pleasant but hazy morning. Because of poor conditions for snowshoeing and skiing, we left our cars at the junction of Quarterline Road and Boardman Hill Road and went on foot.

About a mile up the road we saw some interesting knurls or galls on some hardwood trees. Continuing south for about a mile, we then turned east up to Flat Rock for a view of Rutland city and Otter Valley to the north. We then zigzagged in a southerly direction down through some soft woods and apple trees to a log road that goes down to the Creek Road. There were quite a few wild turkey tracks in this area. We built a fire and had hot drinks as Churchill Scott had carried water and the "makings" for us.

On returning to our cars along the Quarterline Road we had a good view of West Rutland. In all we traveled a distance of about 4 1/2 miles.

HEALDVILLE OUTING

by Kathryn Whalen
February 16, 1980

Meeting at the 2 X 4 Restaurant in Healdville, we decided to cancel the planned hike around Lake Ninevah due to poor weather conditions. Instead seven Killington Section members walked to the Edward Whalen camp where we enjoyed a hot dog roast. Hopefully we can plan another trip to Lake Ninevah in the near future.

WINTER WEEKEND

by Roma Pulling
February 23-24, 1980

I was told by an expert that when hiking you should always be prepared for the unexpected. At Merck Forest the unexpected caught up with us when we found the road to the parking area blocked off, adding at least an extra half mile (groan) to carry our packs.

The caretaker was nowhere in sight and neither was the shelter we had reserved, but from a passing skier we learned of a shelter nearby that fit our requirements and moved in. Much later we located a Forest employee and found that we were in the right spot.

Four of us -- Jim Frink, Rachael Charland, Linda Lampert and myself, met at the fire station, to be joined later by Rob Carey, Steve Pulling and Becky Grady. Jim hiked with us on some of the nearby forest roads but could not be persuaded to spend the night. The rest of us slept comfortably with a wood fire and enjoyed more hiking the next day. Two people reached the top of Mt. Antone and were surprised to find up to 10 inches of snow but no visibility due to a layer of fog just below the summit.

We were sorry that our leader, Churchill Scott, was sick and couldn't be with us; but as usual, Merck Forest provided an unforgettable outing.

HYPOTHERMIA: WHAT IT IS, WHAT TO DO

(excerpted from "Tracks in the Snow," a pamphlet put out by the Prospect Ski Club, Bennington)

Hypothermia is subnormal body temperature due to the body losing more heat than it can produce.

Aggravated by cold exposure, wet, wind, hunger, fear, panic, and exhaustion.

It is the #1 killer of outdoor recreationists.

It occurs most frequently between 30 and 50 degrees Fahrenheit because people underestimate the weather.

Beware signs of hypothermia:

- (1) uncontrollable shivering
- (2) mental changes: i.e. apathy, listlessness, confusion
- (3) unconsciousness
- (4) freezing of extremities
- (5) death

* victim will deny he's in trouble*

Treatment: Get out of wind and rain. Remove all wet clothing. If victim is only mildly impaired, give warm drinks, get dry clothing on, and put him into a warmed sleeping bag near the fire. If the victim is semi-unconscious or worse, try to keep him awake, remove all clothing, and put him into a warmed sleeping bag with another stripped person. This victim is unable to generate his own body heat, therefore it must be externally provided. Get medical help immediately.

KILLINGTON SECTION ANNUAL MEETING

by
W. Churchill Scott

The annual meeting of the Killington Section was held Saturday, March 29, again this year at the Pleasant Manor Nursing Home. Twenty-six people were present.

President Carl Schmidt, with the aid of flip-charts, gave a detailed account of our Section. We have been holding our own financially, but with a projected main club increase in assessment next year we will have to examine our expenses. Section membership was down from 119 in 1978 to 107 in 1979.

The following reports were given:

•Treasurer's and Secretary's - W.C. Scott

•Trails & Shelters - Joe Diction, Sr. Joe reported that 75% of our section of trail was covered last year. Expenses were kept down due to Joe's efforts to economize in every way.

•Smoke & Blazes - Carol Chapman

•Outings - A written report was submitted by Rachael Charland. Possible bike and canoe trips were discussed.

•Main Club Directors - Rob Carey.

Carl expressed the section's appreciation to everyone for the fine work done during the past year. Rob Carey was elected to the Main Club's Board of Directors.

Raymond Catozzi and Churchill Scott were elected to the Board of Directors for three year terms. Steve Pulling and Rob Carey, respectively, were elected directors to complete the unexpired terms of Carl Schmidt (2 years) and Rachael Charland (3 years).

Preston Bristow, fresh from the New England Trails Conference, gave a very thorough account of the current Appalachian Trail relocation project. He noted that nearly three-quarters of the AT between Vt. 140 and the Connecticut River is slated for relocation during the 1980's. This includes substantial portions in the Killington Section, including a significant stretch between Governor Clement Shelter and the summit of Little Killington.

The Killington Section area is progressing well, according to Preston. Arrangements with landowners are expected to be completed by 1981, unless, as presently seems likely to happen, funding of the AT bill is cut by Congress.

The following officers were elected by the Board of Directors:

President - Nancy Schmidt
Vice-President - Roma Pulling
Sec.-Treas. - W.C. Scott

Once again the ladies served delicious refreshments, bringing an enjoyable evening to a close.

Everyone deserves credit for joining in and helping to make 1979 such a good year.

NOTE: See succeeding article for more recent changes in officers.

A FAREWELL

It is with much regret that we must inform you that the Killington Section is losing several of its most valued and active members.

For some time we had known that Rachael, upon retirement, was moving west to Flagstaff, Arizona.

In April the Schmidts learned that Carl was to be transferred this summer to the G.E. plant in Cincinnati, Ohio. Therefore, at the directors' meeting on April 26 Nancy announced her resignation as president and director. Rob Carey was elected as the new president and Winnie Shambo was elected to serve as a director to complete Nancy's term.

Nancy, Carl, and Rachael have all devoted so much of their energy, time, and spirit to the Killington Section that their departure will leave a big hole.

We all want to express our gratitude to them and to wish them Godspeed in their new ventures.

NEW ENGLAND TRAILS CONFERENCE

by Winnie Shambo
March 29, 1980

Saturday, March 29, happened to be a very busy day -- what with the annual meeting of the Killington Section, my adult education class field trip, and the 63rd Annual New England Trails Conference all scheduled for the same day.

After due consideration, and not being of a split personality, I opted for the NETC at Mount Holyoke College along with Rachael Charland. Because we were able to stay with my sister, Chiquita, who lives in Northampton, we were only about five miles from South Hadley where the conference was held.

We found the 50 or so people who attended very friendly and willing to share whatever information they had concerning trails.

The morning was devoted to trail condition reports. When the Green Mountain Club was called, Rachael gave an impromptu report and put forth a good presentation in our behalf. I'm not sure who was supposed to be representing the GMC, but Preston Bristow didn't arrive until the afternoon session. After some discussion, we both agreed that the Club should appoint someone to represent us each year instead of operating on a hit-or-miss basis. And even if the Main Club sends a representative, our own section might want to consider sending its own representative.

We were entertained by the showing of two slide shows. The first was a very interesting and informative presentation on the activities of the Dartmouth Outing Club. The second was George Ernst's vacation to Mount Rainier and vicinity. He had such beautiful shots of wildflowers and many excellent scenes of the Cascade Range. It was particularly interesting to see Mount Saint Helens looking so peaceful in these slides of last year, knowing of her recent activity.

The speaker of the day was a representative of Heritage Conservation Resource Service from the Department of the Interior. She spoke at some length on the legislation President Carter is trying to get passed, on the establishment of a National Trails System, and the funding available to us. She asked for feedback from the various clubs, so that the government would be better able to designate different areas for hiking, trail biking, rec-vehicles, etc. We found her to be well informed on her subject and an interesting speaker.

As hikers we were concerned with the problem of trail bikes and snowmobiles using the same trails as hikers and were told that the reality of life comes down to the sharing of trails with other types of recreation. This may well include trail bikers, etc. using hiking trails. You can well imagine our feelings on that point!

We felt this particular Saturday was well worth the trip to Massachusetts and hope more of "our" people will attempt to go next year. You'll find the Conference very interesting and you may learn of some hiking trails previously unknown to you.

A TRIBUTE TO MARTHA M. ADAMS Jan. 9, 1878 - Jan. 3, 1980

by Ellen B. Russell
(niece of Martha Adams)

When a person has lived almost 102 years, there is much to be said of their years of interests and activities. Martha M. Adams was one of those persons. Her death occurred January 3, 1980, just six days short of her 102nd birthday. The Killington Section lost its oldest member on that date. Naturally her advanced years with frailty of limb prevented active participation, but her interest in those who found enjoyment and exercise in "tramping the woods" remained keen almost to the end.

One of Martha's (Aunt Mat to many people) interests was the wildflowers, ferns, and shrubs of the Vermont hills. Born on a farm in Shrewsbury (the Long Trail crosses Route 103 in East Clarendon at the railroad crossing by the road which leads up the hill to the Anthony Adams farm), she learned early to love the treasures of nature. She spoke often of walking the area and of the thrill of standing on the Fox Lot to look off to Rutland and the valley beneath the hill where Route 7 now runs.

She moved to Rutland in her early teens to be able to pursue a formal education. One of her instructors, a Professor Snow, had a great influence upon her. From him she learned the business skills which she later applied in positions in the law offices of the late Charles Howe, at one time a Probate Court judge. Also, at the same time, she was bookkeeper for the late Charles G. Noyes, a building contractor. Many will remember her as a life-long business woman.

Neighbors on Roberts Avenue (Rutland) will remember that she arose at dawn many mornings during the summer months to tend her flower garden. She took much pleasure in raising flowers which she could cut and share with others. She developed a near professional knack of floral arrangement and arranged flowers for her church for many years. When her garden could not produce the necessary blooms, she knew where to search in the meadows or nearby hills to find the needed flowers. It was fortunate that her relatives continued to have farmlands from which she could pirate.

She was active in several organizations, both civic and fraternal, and in her advanced years took pride in being honored on several occasions for being their oldest living member.

It was appropriate that the words, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help....." be recited at the memorial service held in remembrance of this fine lady.

IN MEMORY OF ELEANOR WALKER

by

W. Churchill Scott

Once again this spring the Killington Section has lost a longtime member who always enjoyed our section's activities to the utmost.

Eleanor Walker will always be remembered for her cheerful smile and willingness to help others, whether it was assisting at a social affair, preparing food for work parties or telling a story about our early trips.

For many years she was instrumental in obtaining the CVPS rooms for our annual meeting and the cafeteria for our always delicious refreshments.

In later years her health did not permit Eleanor to be active in our outings, but whenever we met we could count on many entertaining stories about the section.

All of our longtime club members will remember her more than 15 years of service as Secretary-Treasurer.

I know we will all miss Eleanor very deeply.

SUGAR-ON-SNOW PARTY

by Roma Pulling

March 8, 1980

Apparently sugar-on-snow parties had been held in private homes sometime in the past, and this year, for economic reasons, we resumed the practice.

Twenty-one people, including a reporter from the Rutland HERALD, delighted in the main course boiled down to perfection by Janet Martin. This was supplemented by pickles, doughnuts, and coffee.

It almost became sugar-sans-snow, but at the last moment Cynthia Pulling saved the day by dashing out in the rain and filling containers with snow from the back yard. Fortunately, a fresh supply had fallen the night before.

The writer can't speak for the guests, but from the hostess' viewpoint, the party was a huge success.

HIGH POND MYSTERY HIKE

by Stephen Pulling

April 13, 1980

For you who don't remember, April 13th was a perfect spring day for a mystery hike. Sixteen people, including two Scouts from Troop 105, should remember that day very well.

After driving through one section of very muddy road, we parked the cars before attempting a second mudhole and walked to Half Moon State Park where the hike actually began. After walking a few hundred yards down the state park's main road, we turned north and hiked along an easy, well-marked trail to High Pond. At this point we stopped, ate lunch, and enjoyed the gorgeous day and lovely view across the pond. When lunch and a short siesta were over, we walked leisurely back to the cars.

BRANDON GAP TO MIDDLEBURY GAP

by Roma Pulling
April 19-20, 1980

This backpacking trip was originally scheduled as a hike over Glastenbury Mountain. But after receiving reports of heavy snow remaining in that area, we decided to undertake something less ambitious. In spite of some initial disappointment at the change, we had a fabulous weekend.

Rob Carey, Lee LaVictoire, Anne Mausolff and Steve Pulling met at the writer's house Saturday morning, and the five of us headed for Brandon Gap. The weather was perfect. We encountered patchy snow and less mud than would ordinarily hamper the hiker at this time of year. With a pace that allowed plenty of time to stop and enjoy the scenery, we arrived at Sucker Brook Shelter, delighted to find we had it all to ourselves.

After a pleasant evening around the campfire, we slept comfortably and awoke to another good day, marred only by some light rain toward the end of the trip. The highlight of our second day was locating Worth Mountain Lodge, which apparently few hikers have seen.

After a quick visit of Lake Pleiad, with evidence of beavers at work, we reluctantly left for home.

TUCKER-JOHNSON WORK PARTY

by Joe Dicton, Sr.
April 27, 1980

Our thanks to all the volunteers who helped us repair and relocate the Tucker-Johnson outhouse. It was a fine effort and a good job done by Linda Butler, Rob Carey, Carol Chapman, Joe Dictons, Jr. and Sr., Ann Mausolff, Edward Morse (Medford, Mass.), Anna Nyiri, George Reynolds, and Winnie Shambo.

A large deep hole was dug for the new location of the outhouse. A metal front with a new door was installed as well as a metal replacement for a missing side.

Following our work most of the group stayed at the shelter for a well-earned lunch. A hike up to Deer's Leap brought the day's outing to a most pleasant conclusion.

CLARENDON GORGE WORK PARTY

by Joe Dicton, Sr.
May 3, 1980

The Clarendon Gorge trail relocation was accomplished by installing a switch-back trail up the steep bank off Route 103.

At the foot of the Clarendon Bridge the trail was moved away from a hazardous area.

These outstanding tasks were performed by Stephen Pulling, George Reynolds, Bob Badger, Roma and Al Pulling, Becky Grady, Joe Minard, Gary Ackerman, Sue Smyer, Joe Dictons, Jr. & Sr., Anna Nyiri, Scott Ferguson, and a friend of Scott's.

As you can see, this was a fine turnout for this important project.

Once again, the Killington Section is grateful to the above volunteers.

GREEN UP

by Roma Pulling
May 10, 1980

It was interesting to note that the bureaucratic runaround is exercised even in planning a trash pick-up. We were shuffled among the city clerk, district highway engineer, the woman behind the desk at the Highway Department, the town clerk, two selectmen and the Rutland Town road commissioner before completing plans for Green Up Day.

Only four persons took part in this effort -- Joe Dictons, Sr. & Jr., Al Pulling and myself -- but we collected about 35 bags of trash from North Grove Street and Bittersweet Lane, including a box of returnables which netted us $2.55 for the Kirk Fund. Thanks go to Joe Dicton and Al Pulling for use of their trucks. Besides the inevitable bottles, cans, paper and rags, we found these more unusual items:

- a dead cat
- 2 sneakers (not mates)
- a lady's fashion boot
- a car gas tank
- a golf club (9 iron)
- a loaf of French bread

Those who spent this beautiful spring day in the mountains or at the lake couldn't really be blamed, but the writer returned home with a feeling of accomplishment and a renewed appreciation for Vermont's bottle law and the ban on flip-top cans, without which our job would have been much harder.

MENDON PEAK BUSHWHACK

by Rob Carey
May 17, 1980

Nine ambitious bushwhackers -- Steve Stergerwald, Roma Pulling, Audrey and David Baker, Tom Cunningham, Karen Unsworth, Arnold and Glen Goodman, and myself turned out for this hike. We hope to see these new people again.

The weather cooperated perfectly. Friday night was cold, slowing down the bugs. Saturday was cool at first but not cold. It stayed clear all day. This was a repeat of the weather the last two times we hiked Mendon Peak in 1972 and in 1960.

We took a new route, following the old road along Eddy Brook, from Brewers Corners, until it crossed the brook after about 1 1/2 miles. Then we bushwhacked up the ridge at 180° for about 1/2 mile after which we turned to 150° and the summit. In theory, this course would keep us in the hardwoods and out of the thick spruce and fir until we were almost to the top. As it turned out that is exactly what happened. The view from the summit was spectacular, especially to the south and east.

Someone had placed a register on top two years ago. Only about 50 people had signed, most of them from out of state.

APPALACHIAN TRAIL WALK-THROUGH

by Carol Chapman
May 18, 1980

In spite of almost steady rain that day, eight club members participated in this GMC statewide activity. President Rob Carey organized our group, sending pairs out to hike different sections of the trail.

Joe Diction, Sr. and Rob cleared the trail from Lower Cold River Road to Gov. Clement Shelter. They found the trail to be in good shape except for a few wet spots.

Al and Roma Pulling, covering the stretch between Route 103 and Minerva Hinchey Shelter, found it in relatively good condition. They came upon several blowdowns which Al and Joe have since cleared out. The shelter is in good repair with the outhouse still standing! Al and Roma picked up and returned a sack of bottles and obtained $1.65 for the Kirk Fund.

Steve Pulling and Becky Grady encountered three blowdowns on their section of trail from Route 140 to Minerva Hinchey Shelter. They cleared out one, rerouted the trail around a second, and recruited Al and Joe to clean up the third with a chain saw on the following weekend.

Mrs. Anna Nyiri and Carol Chapman hiked between Lower Cold River Road and Route 103. They discovered several long muddy stretches, two new blowdowns and two signs which need repainting or replacing.

In summary, the Walk-Through was a success and a good way to make us aware of our trail's condition and needs.

APPRECIATION EXPRESSED

Roma and Al Pulling recently received the following letter of appreciation:

At its regular meeting May 12, 1980, the Board acknowledged the fine job you and the Green Mountain Club did in the North Grove Street area on Green-Up Day. The roadside looks terrific!

Thank you very much for your efforts.

Sincerely,
BOARD OF SELECTMEN

JUNE SECTION DIRECTORS' MEETING

by Rob Carey, President

Counting Churchill's telephone conversation, all Directors were present.

Ray Catozzi made a membership committee report. Ideas generated included wider postings of our schedule, special introductory hikes, and a presentation at the Rutland Free Library. The last could be made in fall or spring.

Trails & Shelters - Thanks to Joe Diction's efforts the Trails & Shelters Committee, with help from dedicated workers, has covered the trail well. The relocation from Upper Cold River Road to Killington is progressing well. This relocation is part of the plan for permanent protection of the Appalachian Trail required by the federal government. Troop #105, under the direction of Steve Pulling, has cut at least half of the portion on state land. They will be continuing soon.

The recent bulldozing of the old LT down to Clarendon Gorge was discussed. It was felt that any action should be left up to the Main Club, Preston Bristow, or the Vermont Fish and Game Department.

As a result of the trash at Cooper Lodge in spring for the past several years, the Directors voted to recommend conversion to an open-front shelter without a stove. The shelter would still be available for use by hikers, but would be less appealing for spring parties. It is expected that approval from the Main Club and the state will be forthcoming to allow the work to be done next summer.

SAWMILL HILL LEDGES

by Jim Frink
June 1, 1980

For some time Churchill Scott and I had been seeking new and interesting places to explore each Wednesday. On one of these trips we learned that each of us had long had a desire to climb to the top of the high cliffs which border the east side of Route 30 from Wells, Vt. up past the whole length of Lake St. Catherine.

Shortly thereafter, we drove down to Wells and sought a trail leading to the top, but we found no indication of any such trail leading up from the south where we figured a trail ought to be.

After driving up a dirt road on the east side of the cliffs and parking in a small meadow, we bushwacked straight up the almost perpendicular east side to the edge of the cliffs. There was a north-south trail along the cliff edge which we explored well to the north. The view was beautiful, taking in the town of Wells, all of Lake St. Catherine, and the country to the west including the three Granville towns. We turned back south figuring that this would be the trail down to the road that connects Route 30 to Route 133 to the east, but we came to a high ledge of rock which seemed to have no exit, so we bushwacked down the east side again to the car.

This is all we knew about the ledges and the trail until it came time for me to lead the scheduled hike there on June 1. There were about 18 in our party. (Churchill couldn't go since he had started his fire watch on Killington for the summer.) Not knowing any better, I led the group up the steep east side -- short, but quite a climb!

After we had explored the ledges as far north as we wanted to go, a hiker who was familiar with the area told me there was a trail which ascended the ledges from the south. On going there again, I discovered that I had not looked close enough to the cliff edge. This time, however, we spotted some almost vertical steps in the rocks descending about 12 feet to a really steep trail south. It did not go all the way to the connecting road, however, but by turning east near the bottom we were able to cross some fields and come out a little south of where we had parked.

I think everyone enjoyed the experience.

MYSTERY HIKE

by Ray Catozzi
June 15, 1980

Even though they knew not where they were going, 13 adventurous hikers assembled at Main St. Park this fine June day, willing to give it their best. They found out eventually, and enjoyed it immensely, they said; but just for fun, for our readers who didn't go, let's prolong the mystery and make it a guessing game:

Four miles east of Rutland on Route 4 we parked our cars, and started hiking up a gravel road which ran between apple trees. Three-fourths of a mile up we left the road, went down a short path, crossed a well-known brook that flows through Rutland, and entered the path again for a short distance until it joined an old logging road. A short, very steep trail led up to the left and onto a rock ledge.

From this ledge there is a splendid view of Rutland, especially of a shopping center.

After an enjoyable lunch on the ledge, during which the leader served cheese, crackers and wine in honor of all hiking fathers (June 15 being Father's Day), we returned to the logging road and continued south for awhile. Then we cut down another old road to the west, recrossed the same brook mentioned earlier, and followed up its left bank to a beautiful, though small, waterfall.

Continuing up the brook, we reached the path where we had crossed the brook

coming in, and then returned to the gravel road. But instead of going back down, the leader led the group further up the road, even though it had started to rain. A treat was in store for them, especially the country house lovers. At the end of the road was a stone house, built like a miniature castle over 40 years ago by the man who started one of the first ski areas in the northeast U.S.

Because of a downpour, we huddled in the shelter of a large tree, while the leader recounted the house's history to the group.

The rain let up after a few minutes, so we headed back down the gravel road to our cars and then home.

O.K. What brook (1) did we cross, recross, and travel up? What ledge (2) on what mountain (3) did we climb? What home (4) did we visit? Who (5) started what ski area (6)?

Answers: (1) Tenney Brook (2) Snake Ledge, also called Wonder Ledge, or Mystery Ledge, very visible from NE Rutland (3) East Mountain (4) Mead Castle (5) Brad Mead (6) Pico Peak.

TEXAS FALLS

by W. Churchill Scott
June 26, 1980

Many recollections of past good times were made when the Killington Section had a mid-week picnic supper at Texas Falls.

There was a mixture of new faces and old, including the entire Shambo family, oldtimers like Ray and Lou Catozzi and the former Louella Green who backpacked with Craigie and Mary Perkins' daughters in the 1930s and '40s.

After a bit to eat, most everyone enjoyed a tasty treat from the Shambos' garden of fresh Swiss chard.

Last of all, we took a short walk over the nature trail and visited the impressive gorge cut through the rocks over the past millions of years. Here we told tales of cold water swimming in various pot-holes way back before the area was developed by the U.S.F.S.

It would be good to have more half-day outings like this one that whole families could enjoy.

LT BACKPACK

by Rob Carey
July 5 & 6, 1980

Five backpackers, including myself, met at the fire station. We had a long first day planned, up the South Pond Trail to the LT, then north to Logan Shelter. The only significant climb is up to South Pond, but there are a lot of minor up-and-down stretches on the Trail.

We found the South Pond Trail and followed it to the pond with no trouble, thanks to Al and Roma Pulling who had checked it out the week before. The guidebook, my memory, and Ray's memory all agreed that the LT was located right near the pond. It wasn't. After lunch, we spent over an hour looking for it. We finally followed a gravel road east without much hope. Eventually the road crossed the LT, and although we didn't know it then, we were about one quarter of a mile from Rolston's Rest. This meant we had added almost two miles to the hike!

By the time we got to Logan Shelter, it was starting to rain and the shelter was about full. Luckily we had tents and a tarp to eat under.

While we were eating, Lou Catozzi came up the New Boston Trail with some beer which did not last long! (Thank you, Lou.) He also stayed for the night. We were looking for Steve Pulling and several friends to join us, but they got a late start and only made it to Sunrise Shelter.

By morning the weather had cleared and we had an easy day. The trail mostly followed old woods roads along the mountains and down to Brandon Gap.

COOPER LODGE TO PICO CAMP WORK PARTY

by Joe Dicton, Sr.
July 13, 1980

Our many thanks to all the volunteers who helped us restore the Section's heavily used trail from Pico Camp to Cooper Lodge.

Al Pulling picked up lift tickets at Killington Base Lodge for a gondola ride to the top of Killington Peak.

Trail clearing from Cooper Lodge to Pico Camp was accomplished by Ray Catozzi, Roma and Al Pulling, Joe Dicton, Jr., Anna Nyiri, Krissy Madler and Milly Kramer. Randy Seifert decided to work the Short Route, coming down Killington Peak.

Winnie Shambo and I hiked up to Pico Camp with supplies to do some necessary repairs on the Shelter and outhouse. After we finished our chores and lunch, we started clearing the trail from Pico till we met up with the group working from Cooper Lodge.

Everyone should see the super job done by the above volunteers in putting this trail back where it belongs--as one of the best. As Ray Catozzi said: "This trail should be in great shape for the next four or five years."

MYSTERY HIKE

by Ray Catozzi
July 19, 1980

It was a hot day in July when a party of eight headed south on Route 103. Parking our cars in the lot south of the railroad crossing, we proceeded north on the Long Trail to Clarendon Shelter, where we took a breather.

After the rest stop, we left the LT and continued up the old abandoned town road to the Lottery Road, climbing steadily all the way. Here Mauri Winturri called it quits, said "so long" and headed back down.

Turning north on the Lottery Road the group resumed hiking, bearing left at a fork, in a north westerly direction. Soon we came to a trail leading to the left and going in a westerly, and then southerly direction we soon broke out into an opening on top of the ridge, a place known as Fox Lot! What a wonderful view of the Rutland Airport down in the foreground, Rutland City to the north, and thousands of loaded raspberry bushes right in our midst! Many had berries for dessert that day. One picked a quart in half an hour!

After the return trip to the cars, the leader and Millie Kramer from the Bronx, N.Y. went down to Clarendon Gorge for a swim and weenie roast. This was supposed to be part of the mystery hike, but its mention got left out of the Herald article so only those who knew about it ahead of time were prepared. Too bad the whole group didn't make it 'cause it was an enjoyable ending to an enjoyable mystery hike. Right, Millie?

CORN ROAST

by Roma Pulling
August 2, 1980

As a means of raising money for the Kirk Fund, this event was not very successful. Only five people turned out -- Rob Carey, Roma and Al Pulling, Ray Catozzi, and Mauri Winturri. Mauri's plan was still a good one, and his contribution of corn greatly appreciated.

Mauri and Al went to Hinchey Shelter early and replaced some broken panes of glass. Rob built a fire, and after learning from experience that burying corn ears in a hot fire is not the best way to roast them, we roasted the rest on the grill -- several people ate corn exclusively -- and pronounced it delicious.

While we were eating, the hot, humid afternoon produced a heavy shower, which we watched from inside the shelter. The rain stopped in time for us to hike back to our cars near Spring Lake Ranch.

ABBEY POND

by Robert Badger
August 9, 1980

A finer day was never found in Camelot for the hike into Abbey Pond in Middlebury. Trip leader Piñon Badger (black Labrador) led a group of five hikers -- Bob & Kathy Jacob, Roma Pulling, and Rob & Carolyn Badger -- along the Forest Service trail into the pond.

The trail climbs moderately over the first mile and a half through hardwood forest following the cascading outlet brook. The final 3/4 mile crosses relatively flat land to the small glacial pond. There are no manmade desecrations to disfigure the landscape, not even a trail around the pond, although numerous beaver trails lead from the woods to the water's edge. There is abundant evidence of recent cutting, but no beaver came out to pay us a visit.

Piñon went for a swim and the rest of us worked our way around the pond traversing from raspberry patch to blueberry patch. After lunch on a sizeable glacial boulder at the SW corner of the pond, Piñon led us back down the trail to some ledges with an overlook of the Champlain Valley. Of note, we encountered no other hikers along the trail or at the pond -- we had it all to ourselves.

The group next drove about two miles north where we climbed to the Cobble Caves. These are two dolomite caves up a steep grade just a few minutes walk from Route 116. Both are easily accessible with wide openings that would not even bother the claustrophobic. One has two openings connected by a crawl space, the other tapers to a crawl space before opening up again to a small room.

Had we the blueprint for the day, we surely would order up another right off.

1980 INTERSECTIONAL

by Rob Carey
August 16-23, 1980

About 100 members and guests including nine K.S.'ers came from as far away as Steubenville, Ohio, and Maryland for this week-long event. Some stayed only a day or two.

There were hikes every day, usually at least one on the Long Trail. Several of these were in our section of the Trail.

Non-hiking activities included trips to Hubbardton Battlefield, Fort Ti, and a nature photography workshop. Canoeing was popular, with several river trips of varying difficulty and on Lakes Sunrise and Sunset right at the camp. The lake was used for swimming a lot, especially on warmer days. Coming from Maryland was not enough distance for John and Andrew Howard, so they swam, with several others and a boat, across the lake and back.

Evening activities included a square dance (lots of fun), slides, an auction, a campfire, movies, and a supper. One of the most popular pastimes seemed to be just visiting with friends not seen since the Annual Meeting or last year's Intersectional.

EXCERPTS FROM A LETTER FROM RACHAEL CHARLAND DATED JULY 6

The whole trip across country was really like a dream -- no trouble of any sort with my car (wasn't I lucky?). People were so nice when I asked directions. Gasoline is very expensive; paid as high as $2.38 a gallon.

On the fourth of July I was pleasantly surprised by a trip to Walnut Canyon, a short distance from Flagstaff. Just imagine last 4th of July when you met me - at Silver Lake near Dunmore. Some difference! Here I stood amazed at the sight before me: a national monument to the Sinagua Indians who more than 500 years ago inhabited the place. It is 400 feet deep and along the walls are various indications of the homes of the tribe. Lots of protection from the enemies with those dwelling places. There was a 3/4 mile paved trail around the section shaped like a walnut, from which the canyon gets its name. There were about 242 steps altogether en route, but what scenery! I just stood in awe of its structure, its depth, its flowers, its brilliance of color in the sunlight. We were advised by the rangers to take the walk slowly going down and returning. Good reason - the altitude is hard enough to get used to without pushing it!

The climate has made a change in my mode of living. Everyone seemed to move so slowly; NOW I KNOW WHY! It isn't the heat as we often had temperatures in the 80's in Vermont, but it is the altitude! The doctor told me it takes about three to four months to get used to it here. I had to go to the mergency room the first Sunday morning I was here because I awakened with such a piercing, splitting, penetrating headache. People sleep longer hours here, even the ones who have been here for years. Not only the older people take naps in the afternoon, but young ones do also.

It is such a great change from anything I have ever experienced -- it is so vast -- so lush in colors.

The forest fires have been near Flag, but good fire fighters have kept them from the city. All across the U.S.

from the city. All across the U.S. I saw signs: "Do Not Drive Through Smoke." It seems grass fires are easily started and driving through dense smoke has caused accidents so one is supposed to turn on headlights and proceed with a great deal of caution.

Dust is the main thing here. Never had to wash my hair so much! Cars are dusty, not rusty! All rusty cars are definitely Eastern owned. Lava cinders are used on the icy roads here, not salt. Must have my carburetor adjusted to compensate for the altitude -- doesn't start well and stalls which is symptomatic of Eastern vehicles....

God bless you,
Rae

MARIAN DICTON'S CINNAMON ROLLS

(Ed.s Note: Several of us have enjoyed this delicious sweet bread which Marian shares with us here. They're easy and fun to make.)

2 packages of yeast
1 cup warm water
2 tablespoons sugar
4 cups sifted all purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 lb. margarine or shortening
2 eggs

Sift flour and salt, cut in margarine as for pie dough. Add eggs and blend together. Dissolve yeast and sugar in the warm water and let stand to rise about five minutes. Add the yeast mixture to the flour mixture and mix into a soft ball.

Turn out on floured board and knead for about 5 minutes. Dough tends to be a bit sticky. Use floured hands in kneading. Divide dough into four parts, cover with Saran Wrap, and allow to rise about one hour.

Roll each piece into a 9"x12" rectangle. Brush with melted margarine up to about one inch from edge.

Mix 1/2 cup of sugar and two teaspoons of cinnamon together and sprinkle on the dough. Moisten the 1" edge with water and then roll up pinching ends and the long seam together. Place all rolls in a large shallow roasting pan, ungreased, and again brush all the rolls with melted margarine.

SMOKE AND BLAZES STAFF

Bake in preheated 375 degree oven for about 25 minutes or until nicely browned. Let cool in pan before taking out as they will break up if handled while hot. When cool enough, loosen with spatula and lift out to finish cooling on racks. They also can be wrapped in Saran Wrap and frozen for later use if desired.

GMC AUTUMN OUTING - MOUNTAIN MEADOWS CAMPGROUND, LINCOLN, VT.

by

Roma Pulling

September 12-14, 1980

This year the fall outing was plagued by bad weather, but at least seven KSers turned out. We set up tents Friday evening under clear skies, but by Saturday the clouds had moved in. Hikers formed into various groups and headed for Mt. Abraham, Bristol Cliffs, the Green Mt. Audubon Center and even a few ambitious ones for the long trek from Appalachian Gap to Lincoln Gap.

That night the rain began. We viewed slides in the recreation hall and then repaired to our camp sites. Some were able to enjoy a camp fire by huddling under Rob Carey's tarp, but few enjoyed a good night's sleep. Two escaped from our tent after being thoroughly drenched and finished the night in our cars. By Sunday morning everybody had had enough. All activities were cancelled, and everyone headed home, some even before breakfast.

BIKE HIKE

by

Cynthia Pulling and Randy Roberts
September 13, 1980

On a cool and windy day in September five bikers met at the College of St. Joseph the Provider in Rutland. Trip leader Ann Mausolff led the group on a 35-mile excursion through Rutland, Clarendon, and Shrewsbury. Included in the group were Ann and Bob Badger, Chuck McDonald, Cynthia Pulling, and Randy Roberts. Chuck, who is 12 years old, biked over from Castleton to join the group.

Starting from Rutland, the group headed south into Clarendon along Dorr Drive, then east into Shrewsbury, where we stopped for a picnic lunch at Pierce's Corner Store. After lunch, we headed down Lincoln Hill Road to Route 103, then back through Clarendon and into Rutland. The route taken was the most challenging of five which Ann had carefully planned to accommodate a wide range of biking skills. The group voted unanimously to take this route, which was distinguished by quite hilly terrain in the Shrewsbury area. No one had mechanical difficulties and the trip went very smoothly. We all enjoyed the trip and hope that bike hikes can become a regular part of the Killington Section schedule.

ICE CAVE TRIP

By

Jean Davies

September 27, 1980

About 27 people knew that this obviously was a great day for hiking to the Pittsford Ice Cave. With an autumn nip in the air, you could dress warmly enough for the hike and for the inside cave.

Trip Wescott of Pittsford, who leads the rockclimbing trips in the summer for Camp Betsey Cox, was in charge of leading the group down into the Cave. The most energetic and enthusiastic of the hikers set off with Trip to get the rope and candles set up in place. The rest of us sauntered up the trail at a more leisurely pace admiring the views, lichens, ferns, and mosses. About two-thirds of the way there, we realized that the climbing rope Trip needed was accompanying our section, which was no great harm except that it meant waiting around after we got to the Cave entrance so that the route could be set up and lighted. There was no complaining, since sandwiches and other nourishment popped out and talk flourished.

Everyone was eager to know what the cave was like, but they still wanted to go in in spite of the following description:

You first see a round hole about six feet in diameter over which is a six inch log. You shinny over the log holding firmly onto air above and below until the ladder on the far side is gained. Going down it about 20 feet, you keep right around the corkscrew to avoid going over a cliff. Then you continue through the lemon-squeeze and on to a kind of a talus slope going down to the ice on the cave floor.

Slightly-built folk, such as children, could squeeze through a lower opening, and not have to cross the log, and led by Tom Shambo, several took that route.

Comments from those emerging from the cave ranged from exclamations about the state of their clothes, to the fact that it was really neat! It was quite different from what most expected, and the consensus seemed to be that the trip was well worth it.

Dave Ferris spent some time trying to figure out how the ice happened to be in the Cave this time of year, but not in the winter. He had some good theories, although none were proved.

The Pittsford Historical Society holds title to the 50+ acres of the Ice Cave land. The Nature Conservancy working with local people and Youth Camps helped secure the property, and it is maintained now by Youth camps in the area, principally Camp Keewaydin, Camp Sangamon, and Camp Betsey Cox. If you have a favorite area of land worth preserving but can't imagine how to even attempt it, the Nature Conservancy might be a logical and helpful way to start.

So after a bit of history, food, exploring, etc., the group headed down to a high meadow to share coffee, courtesy of Roma Pulling.

PICO TRAIL WORK PARTY

by Joe Dicton Sr.

October 18, 1980

Due to the all night rain, only Al Pulling and I signed up to clean out the water bars on Pico Trail. The rain stopped during our scheduled leaving time and we decided to head for Pico.

After about two hours of work in which we managed to clean out 23 water bars, it started to rain and rain heavy. We headed back down to our vehicle and decided to finish the work another time.

Three days later on Oct. 22 Al and I headed back to the Pico Trail to finish cleaning out the remaining water bars.

I am pleased at the work we accomplished and am sure that the Killington Section is grateful to Al Pulling for his splendid effort in putting our trails and shelters in good order.

LT SOUTH TO GRIFFITH LAKE

by Rob Carey
November 1 and 2, 1980

I inherited this hike, so the destination was changed from somewhere in the National Forest to a loop hike. Only three individuals, Roma Pulling, Steve Pulling, and I (along with Roma's dog, Wonder) made this enjoyable backpack.

The hike started and ended at the Long Trail at USFS Road 10. We went south on the LT about one mile and then took the Old Job Trail. This is a nice trail, mostly old logging road providing easy going. At the site of the logging camp there was a huge pile of sawdust that we photographed. We rejoined the LT at Griffith Lake.

After checking the Peru Peak Shelter (it was full), we returned to the lake to set up camp. We found an excellent site on the west side of the pond. The evening was a bit cool, but we enjoyed the campfire. Sunday's hike out provided views from Baker Peak.

COVERED DISH SUPPER

by Winnie Shambo
November 22, 1980

On Saturday, Nov. 22, twenty-three people gathered in the lodge at Camp Betsey Cox in Pittsford for the Section's annual covered dish supper.

We enjoyed a varied menu of delicious foods, including a quiche even Ernie Royal would have been jealous of.

This is one of the few outings some of our older members are able to attend and we were very happy to have these people with us.

We appreciate the hospitality of Jean Davies, who had a huge fire burning in the lodge fireplace from noon on. And we appreciate Barb Tinney's sharing her slides with us.

Jean was also kind enough to show some of the participants of the evening around the immediate grounds by the light of the full moon. Had more of us been prepared with the proper clothing, we would have joined them.

LITTLE ROCK POND

led by Piñon Badger
December 7, 1980

December 7th arrived as a crystal clear 10° gem of a day, ordered up special for the trip into Little Rock Pond via the Homer Stone Brook Trail from South Wallingford. We had an excellent turnout considering the season - Roma and Steve Pulling, Churchill Scott, Rob Carey, Harold Rogers, Barbara Tinney, Bob Jacob, Dave Hadley, Rob Badger and Piñon (black labrador).

A scant half inch of snow over frozen ground provided an excellent hiking surface over the first mile and a half up to the crossing of Homer Stone Brook. The crossing proved amusing as all the rocks were glazed with ice, making very poor stepping stones. A log provided an adequate, somewhat tense, but uneventful crossing, and the hike continued up a fairly steep and icy half mile to the pond.

Such a gorgeous pond, even in its frozen state, sheltered between Green Mountain to the west and Homer Stone Mountain to the east. So different from when most of us have seen the pond in warmer seasons, and we were the only souls present to disturb the tranquility.

A fire was built at the tenting area along the southeast shore of the pond, and water put on to boil. While others warmed themselves by the fire and began lunch, Bob Jacobs and Rob Badger donned ice skates and had a pond-long game of hockey.

After lunch we had another short game of hockey, this time with more participants sans skates. Several hikers crossed the ice to the island and all of us, despite some initial fears as to the strength of the ice and slippery footing, walked the length of the pond to the northern trail head and started down. On the steep downhill, several of us found it more convenient to sit down on the longer stretches of ice and slide -- a great ride, better than the Alpine Slide! I'll let you know how it was on the backside tomorrow.

At the stream crossing, Barbara decided to go for a swim. Despite her insistence that it wasn't really all that bad, the rest of us could not be enticed into joining her.

By the end of the day skies were rapidly clouding with a feel of snow in the air. A perfect day to (perhaps) end the year's hiking.

EXCERPT FROM A LETTER FROM
RACHAEL CHARLAND

Can't seem to make these people understand the fun of hiking -- even two women alone as I try to relate to them our Green Mountain trail. Oh, I'll have to tell you I got quite a negative reaction from Harry Peet when I wrote to him suggesting that the LT be renamed the Green Mountain Trail more in keeping with our guide book and giving more recognition to the state.

Am going to a meeting of the Flagstaff Hiking Club. Finally got the assistant director (of the Adult Center) interested in starting a hiking club for seniors.

No waters near here for canoeing. And no one interested in it enough to do it. People in my age bracket still huddle near the fire and watch the "boob tube" instead of being outside.

Weather has been very warm the residents say for this time of year. Low in the teens in the A.M., but then warms up to 50 or 60 about noon.

RELUCTANT WRITERS

Hike leaders who prefer not to write the report for Smoke and Blazes should ask someone who participated in the hike and is willing, to make the report. Most writers find it much easier to write the report immediately following the hike rather than several months later when one's memory of and enthusiasm for it may have grown dim.

Two outings on the last schedule were cancelled due to inclement weather. They were the Otter Creek canoe trip and the Valiquette Memorial Hike on East Mountain.

No hike report was made for the September 7th hike to Killington Peak. More than 20 people made it to the top where Churchill Scott let everyone who wished view the surrounding countryside from the fire tower where he was on duty.

A WINTRY MILE

by Grace Noll Crowell

I know that my work is waiting,
I know how long it will take,
But I shall walk a wintry mile
For my own spirit's sake.

I shall lift my face to the blowing
Of the clean wind down the land,
I shall dig by a tangled tree root
With a quick exploring hand,
To find the new green mosses
Blanketed warm and bright.

I shall break the ice at the stream's edge
To see the emerald light
Of a three-leaved clover lying
Tender and green as spring;
My cheeks shall gather the roses
That wintry winds can bring.

Then I shall go back to my labor,
To the tasks so hard and long,
With my heart as light as a bubble,
And on my lips a song.

A TRIBUTE TO "DOC" HOWARD

by
Churchill Scott

On December 16, 1980 Dr. James H. Howard died suddenly. He had been a resident of Pleasant Manor Convalescent Home for many years and was confined to his bed for the last few years. Nevertheless, he had many tales to tell about his various trips with the Killington Section.

A couple of his favorites follow. One was about the hiker spending the night at Sucker Brook Lodge who drank a fifth of liquor a day and was carrying a week's supply. Another time while on his End-to-End one-shot trip, he was all set to bet he had the lightest stove (a 7 1/2 oz. Sterno in a #10 can) with a hiker at Taft Lodge. Seems that this hiker had a 5 oz. Sterno in a salted peanut can.

The writer met Dr. Howard during the mid-1960s when Herb Ogden replaced the bunks at Governor Clement Shelter. Since that time, "Doc" was one of the most avid members of our section. He served on the Board of Directors, the Outing and Trails & Shelters Committees, and was best known for his sturdy, well-built outhouses.

After the 1973 flood destroyed the suspension bridge over Clarendon Gorge, Dr. Howard had all plans finalized to replace the structure. But at the last minute the main G.M.C. took over which resulted in a 300 % increase in expenses.

Dr. Howard will be missed by all of us in the Killington Section and by his many friends throughout the Green Mountain Club.

A HIKER'S PRAYER

God give me hills to climb,
And strength for climbing!

MOONLIGHT HIKE: TUCKER-JOHNSON SHELTER

by Joanne Valente and Judith Hall
December 20, 1980

This beautifully clear, crisp night (10 to 15 below) was perfect for our hike. About 10 of us began the hike at the end of the Robinwood Development in Mendon; four skiing and the rest walking.

(Since this was our first hike with the group, and we did not realize we'd be asked to write this article, we are unable to recall the exact names of the participants. However, the group consisted of "locals" and out-of-staters, which made a good blend.)

We sort of "blazed" the trail to the shelter as the skiers followed behind. The snow was over our knees in some areas and not packed down, which made the walking challenging. The star-speckled sky, moonlight shadows through the trees, and good friendly conversation made the walk very enjoyable and memorable.

At the Shelter we were greeted by two fellows who had gone ahead earlier to fetch and cut wood for the warm fire. Hot beverages were distributed as we "hopped" around the fire, sang Christmas carols, exchanged hiking experiences and checked out the stars.

We know a great time was had by all and are looking forward to another Moonlight Hike. (Next time we'll bring the marshmallows!).

UPPER COLD RIVER TO TAMARACK NOTCH

by W. Churchill Scott
January 4, 1981

This was the kind of day that separates the "fair weather hikers" from the dedicated K.S.'ers. However, no person in his right mind would be caught dead outdoors on such a day. The thermometer ranged all the way down to a minus 25 degrees.

After leaving the car at the junction of "Alcohol Spring," Upper and Lower Cold River Roads, Winnie Shambo, Steve Pulling and I walked through Brown Bridge. Turning north following an old town road well packed by the snowmobilers, we met a lone rider with her dog.

At the old Parker Homestead we had the choice of crossing Cold River, visiting the Tamarack Notch Camp area or following the trail north. At the Kirk Bridge we hated to make the decision of no fire, no coffee and no lunch, but it was just too cold. We followed the Rousseau Road back to the car, visiting the Wilkins Cemetery and passing the Colvin farm on the way.

The cold weather was just the same as that on the aborted trip the K.S. had up Mt. Hanley in the mid-70's. Cold and windy, but beautiful sun and blue sky.

The leader had five inquiries about the hike so a goodly number of people would have gone. It is hoped that they will all come out with us when the weather moderates.

DANBY QUARRY TO EMERALD LAKE

by Harold Rogers
January 17, 1981

Ten of us met at the fire station along with Bob Badger's dog, Pinon. We were late getting started and were further delayed by waiting for the owner of a private garage at Emerald Lake to give us permission to leave a pickup in his lot. A grain truck stuck on Danby Quarry hill made us still later.

Three of the group traveled by cross-country skis, while the rest of us walked and wallowed although the snow was only about knee deep. We didn't see the skiers until we got to the natural bridge area. Roma led the walking group and she didn't have any pity on the old men of the group -- she set a fast pace and it was uphill all the way. But it was quite cold and a nice sunny day so we didn't mind.

We built a cold fire (it didn't want to burn!) at the natural bridge and had a quick coffee and lunch before it got too cold.

The skiers went back down the road to the quarry the way we had come. Bob Jacobs took a bad spill and broke his skis.

Churchill Scott and one group went down to Emerald Lake one way and I led another group down another road. It was an enjoyable hike and would be fun to repeat in the summer.

WINTER WEEKEND AT MERCK FOREST

by Roma Pulling
January 31 - February 1, 1981

The weather for our Merck Forest outing was ideal with bright sunshine and temperatures in the 20's. A strong wind started blowing, causing considerable drifting, about lunchtime of the second day; but we were leaving, anyway.

Saturday morning four people -- Carol Chapman, Churchill Scott, Harold Rogers and myself -- left for Rupert from the fire station to be joined soon after our arrival by Rob Carey and later by Steve Pulling and Lou Catozzi. Carol, Churchill and Harold skied briefly, ate lunch and then returned to Rutland.

The overnigheters skied and hiked out Old Town Road and returned to Spruce Lean-to for supper. This shelter, accommodating up to seven people, was constructed last year and impressed us with its comfort and roominess. We spent a restful night warmed by a wood fire which your reporter, being a light sleeper, kept stoked.

Sunday forenoon the four of us skied and hiked to Clark's Clearing out Mt. Antone Road and returned via Schenk and Old Town Roads. It was another fantastic weekend. Merck Forest, you did it again!

GOVERNOR CLEMENT SHELTER

by Rob Carey
February 14, 1981

Six people (three hikers and three cross-country skiers) came out for this hike. We parked at the "triangle" and followed the road. There was just enough snow for the skiers but not too much for the hikers. Except for one icy spot near the yellow camp the walking was good and the skiing satisfactory, considering there was no snow in Rutland.

We reached the shelter early and got a fire going to heat the water and toast sandwiches. Since it was still early, after lunch we followed a new logging road beyond the shelter. This gave us good views of Mendon, Little Killington and Shrewsbury Peaks as well as a good run for the skiers.

On the way back the skiers went faster, especially as the hikers stopped at the shelter and had another cup of coffee. On the return to Rutland we checked out the starting point for the next hike and also the Wade property at Clarendon Gorge.

NORTH SHREWSBURY TO ROUTE 100

by Steve Pulling
March 1, 1981

If this was the first Green Mountain Club outing that you've ever attended, you probably thought it was sort of disorganized. But as usual everything ended up as planned. The weather forecast didn't scare too many people away as there were eleven hikers and "skinny skiers" who braved the predicted foul weather.

Being the hike leader, I should have met at the fire station to help organize the day's events, but Rod Carey, Lou Catozzi, and I were already in Shrewsbury as we had camped out the night before with Boy Scout troop #105 in that mountain town. As Rob, Lou, and I arrived at the Northam parking lot where the hike was to begin, we found only two people, Roma Pulling and Clay Palmer. Roma and Clay informed us that Churchill Scott had taken most of the skiers over to West Bridgewater to start in from that end.

After hiking approximately three miles our group met up with Churchill's group which included: Bob and Sue Dunn, Ken Stellwagen, and Sue Smyser on skis and Kayleen Gorman hiking. At that point the skiers kept skiing westward to eat lunch at the Stone House while Kayleen and Churchill joined our group as we hiked eastward into Tinker Brook Shelter for lunch. We shared the shelter with six snowmobilers who had also stopped there for lunch. Amazingly, all eleven of us arrived at the cars in West Bridgewater at the same time. Perfect timing! So ends another successful Green Mountain Club outing. Which way is north? Rob? Lou?

A LETTER FROM NANCY SCHMIDT

Greetings from the Schmidts, who now live in a suburb of Cincinnati. The city is right across the Ohio River from Kentucky, and only about 20 minutes from Indiana.

We've had a cold winter, for Cincinnati, and a good bit of snow, but the snow doesn't stack up high enough to do much in the way of winter sports. Carl takes a ski run in the back yard whenever it snows, and has skied twice at a nearby park (where he impressed everyone with his cross-country skill), but it's not quite the same. We've not been hiking at all yet.

We miss Vermont. But, Carl is very happy with his job, and we're very pleased with the school the children attend. And we've enjoyed being able to spend time with Carl's family in Cincinnati and mine in Tennessee.

It's starting to feel like spring here! We intend to get outdoors and explore the countryside soon. We'll send a report on the Buckeye Trail when we find it; we came upon the southern terminus, which had a sign instructing us to follow the blue blazes, but there were none to be seen.

Keep Smoke & Blazes coming!

DUES ARE DUE

If you have not already sent in your 1981 dues, please do so immediately. You may pay them at the Annual Meeting, or mail them to W. Churchill Scott - Sec.-Treas., 132 Maple St., Rutland, VT 05701. This is the last issue of Smoke & Blazes that will be sent to the 1980 members. Dues are listed on the membership form.

PROPOSED BY-LAWS CHANGE

Current By-Laws are printed in the April, 1980 Smoke & Blazes. The proposed change is in Section 8, relating to election of Director(s) to the Main Club. It is a housekeeping measure to bring our By-Laws in line with changes made to the Main Club By-Laws several years ago.

The Directors shall elect from their number ~~two Trustees~~ Directors to the G.M.C. as allocated by the G.M.C. By-Laws. In the event that Director candidates for the office of ~~Trustee~~ G.M.C. Director are found lacking, the Directors may seek candidates from the general Section membership.

THE GEORGE L. KIRK FUND

Recent Killington Section members sometimes ask "What is the Kirk Fund?" or "Why should I contribute to it?"

Mr. Kirk was a newspaper reporter and editor in Rutland for 57 years. An active hiker, he was a man of wide interests -- among them weather observation, botany and ornithology.

Mrs. Dorothy Kirk, Mr. Kirk's widow, established the George L. Kirk Trails and Shelter Fund in January, 1977. Over the past five years Mrs. Kirk has made several substantial donations which when added to the contributions of club members presently total $4,973.19.

After reaching our goal of $5,000, the interest earned will be used for the maintenance of our section's trails and shelters. With constantly increasing expenses, our section is barely achieving a balanced budget. Therefore, the Kirk Fund is vital to enable us to meet our responsibilities.

Your contribution to the Kirk Fund is an investment in the future of both the Long Trail and the Killington Section.

HIKING COMPANION WANTED

Winnie Shambo is seeking a hiking companion for a planned nine day trip on the Long Trail from May 16 to May 24. She is hoping to cover a 96 mile section of the LT. If interested, Winnie may be reached by calling (802) 773-9330 in the A.M. or by writing to her at 142 Dorr Drive, Rutland, VT 05701.

ARIZONA HIKING

by Rachael Charland
(excerpt from a recent letter)

I have been hiking some; mostly these people aren't too hepped on hiking; my AGE GROUP, THAT IS. They'd rather watch TV and EAT! It shows too! Went on a hike with the Sedona Westerners; along the Verde River, which, as you may remember, rises between the towns of Jerome and Winslow and ends up in the Bay of Azar near the Pacific Ocean. It is about 200 miles long and I am sure that today it must have more water in it than when I first saw it a month ago. We drove about 37 miles south of Sedona; took an ungodly, rough road, full of gulches; up and down for about eight miles of that stuff (was really glad I had not taken my car) only four-wheel driven vehicles would have made it, parked cars; then the Trail Boss (hike leader to us) announced Pit Stop with the men going ahead of the female crowd (there were about 27 of us in all) while we attended to our needs. (That is the only way one can do this here as the trees are not that high or numerous to hide behind.) We caught up with the men; journeyed down a dry river bed and over ground that was dry as a bone, littered with cacti (prickly pear variety as well as mesquite -- how that stuff hurts when a hand or arm hits it) to another river bed and finally along the Verde River. I was amazed to see so little water in it. I inquired as to the extent of the Falls that we had come to view and was told about 10 feet. I think I must have misunderstood but I think I heard the Trail Boss say 10'-- it was really more like six to ten inches instead. We sat on dirty, blackened lava bed rocks to eat lunch; stared at an embankment across the river that only had low vegetation; complete with what we had come through-- more cacti and mesquite with a barbed wire fence running down to the river to help keep the cows in from the river.

Another hike was along the Oak Creek near Sedona; as long as I didn't look up I would think I was in Vt. as the ground was covered with oak and aspen leaves ... there were some interestingly shaped rocks! So many rocks surround that area; and I THOUGHT ALL OF THE ROCKS WERE IN MAINE AND VT. It was a seven mile hike; we did look over the fire-ruined cabin that once was owned by Zane Grey and his partner. That was that.

About two weeks ago we did have 3" to 4" of snow and tried to ski; had to travel about 50 miles and up another 1,000 feet in order to find a Forestry Road that we could attempt to ski upon. If we were careful and watched constantly we wouldn't be tumbled foreward by CINDERS that, of course made up the road bed. We went about four miles on FLAT LAND and returned into the North wind that was something to take.Some place, Flag. Wouldn't trade one inch of Vt. for 1 acre of Az.

KILLINGTON SECTION ANNUAL MEETING, MAR. 28

by Rob Carey

Over 35 people attended the annual meeting of the Killington Section, Mar. 28, at the Vermont Achievement Center in Rutland. The officers' reports were given. Financially, the most important item was the reaching of the goal of the Kirk Fund. We greatly appreciate the generosity of Mrs. Dorothy Kirk in making this possible. As far as operating expenses were concerned, the club did slightly better than break even. All of the Trail was covered and, with our shelters, is in good shape. A special thanks is in order for the excellent work done by Trails & Shelters Chairman Joe Dicton Sr. Outings attendance held steady with evening events, supper and moonlight hikes proving very popular.

The Club's Wilderness policy was discussed, as well as other political activity by the Club and the Section. No action was taken in any of these areas.

Roma Pulling and Winnie Shambo were reelected as Directors. Rob Badger was elected to a three-year term to replace the retiring Carol Chapman. After a brief Directors' meeting at which all officers were re-elected, there was a fascinating slide program presented by Lou Catozzi featuring mainly shots on the Long Trail. They were organized from South to North as if hiking End-to-End. Everyone enjoyed the refreshments during the show.

NEW CARETAKERS

by W. Churchill Scott

It has been noted in the current Long Trail News that Killington Section members are active in main G.M.C. work.

Mr. & Mrs. Brian Fitzgerald of Middletown Springs are caretakers at Little Rock Pond area, one of the more popular and busier spots of the Long Trail system.

Philip Woodbury of Perkinsville is the adopter of Old Job Shelter, located on the alternate trail from U.S.F.S. Road #10 to Griffith Lake.

GMC ANNUAL MEETING

by Ray Catozzi

The annual meeting of the Green Mountain Club was held Saturday, May 23, at the Mendon Methodist Church in Mendon, Vermont. Originally scheduled to be held at the Tamarack Notch Camp in Mendon, with both meetings and camping all in one spot, the Connecticut Section, sponsors of the annual meeting, did some fast and efficient scrambling when both approach roads to Tamarack were dangerously washed out due to recent heavy rains. Campers were transferred to Gifford Woods State Park.

Present from the Killington Section were Rob Carey, Roma Pulling, Winnie Shambo, Carol Chapman, Sue Smyzer, Mauri Winturri, George Reynolds, and Ray Catozzi.

Of interest to the Killington Section is the formation of a committee to plan a celebration of the 50th anniversary of the completion of the original Long Trail. This celebration will, in all probability, take place during the GMC Intersectional at Camp Plymouth the last week in August.

Our own Rob Carey, incidentally, is one of the members of the Intersectional coordinating committee.

Nothing new has developed about the former Wade property at the LT/AT crossing of Route 103 at the head of Clarendon Gorge. The Killington Section announced that it will take over the trail relocation and signing, but more remains to be done about cleaning up the remaining property.

The GMC budget is back down under $100,000, but it's not due to a sudden savings in the running of the club, but to the cutting back in Forest Service contracts to do trail work in the National Forest.

Jim Wilkinson, retired Vermont Forest & Parks supervisor, is our new GMC President. Preston Bristow, former GMC treasurer, and National Park Service representative on the AT/LT preservation project, is our new Vice President.

At the end of the general membership meeting, and during the afternoon directors' meeting, the Stowe Rescue Squad delivered a talk about their work, displayed their equipment which included mountain climbing gear, and explained its use. 'Twas very interesting.

A sumptuous dinner was put on by the ladies and gents of the Mendon Methodist Church. Of the roughly 125 attending the meeting, over 100 were at the dinner.

In the evening the members and guests were treated to two slide shows. One was presented by the Vermont Audubon Society about Vermont's endangered species, both flora and fauna. The other was a slide presentation of the GMC expedition to Scotland last year. Both were very enjoyable and well received.

Sunday found hikers heading off in several directions for various hikes. One group climbed Pico; some went up the Bucklin Trail to Killington and visited Churchill Scott. A large group motored to Cavendish and walked down, both through and above, the beautiful Cavendish Gorge.

And thus ended another memorable GMC Annual Meeting, with all the greeting of old friends, the camaraderie of fellow hikers and campers, good eating, fine evening entertainment, and enjoyable hikes the next day. It's too bad more KS members didn't attend, especially when it was held so close to Rutland.

SUGAR-ON-SNOW PARTY

by Roma Pulling
March 14, 1981

The 23 sweet-tooths who gathered at the chairman's house this year were welcomed by sunshine and seasonable temperatures in contrast to last year's dismal snow and rain.

Carol Chapman and I drove to Turnpike Road the forenoon of the party and half-filled a 30-gallon plastic bag with clean snow.

We are truly grateful to Janet Martin for working her magic at the stove again, and the product was done to perfection as usual.

With doughnuts, pickles and coffee to complete the menu, we enjoyed a delicious treat while the fireplace added a cheerful note.

MOUNT AEOLUS (GREEN PEAK) AREA, DORSET

by Robert Badger
April 5, 1981

April 5th. Can one not recall the radiant sunshine, sparkling blue skies and warm spring breezes of that glorious April day? The singing of the birds, fragrance of wildflower buds bursting forth and long dormant plants springing to life? Not likely; certainly not in Dorset, Vermont. On April 5th it rained. It rained all day; and, at least in Dorset, it never let up.

Seven amphibious souls and one soggy dog showed up to have a go at searching through the fog for the summit of Mount Aeolus. Robert and Cathy Jacob, David Hadley, Winnie Shambo, Roma Pulling, Robert and Carolyn Badger and Pinon started the trip by hiking a mile north along the east flank of the mountain into the old Freedley Quarry. From here the hike was to continue uphill to a ridge and south along the ridge to the summit of Mount Aeolus, named after the Greek God of the Winds.

Freedley Quarry is cut into the side of Mount Aeolus, providing an extensive underground cavern. It is truly one of the most impressive abandoned quarries in the state, used in summer for swimming and winter for skating. On April 5th, Freedley Quarry was used as shelter for seven soggy hikers and a wet dog.

A roof over our heads, a fine bottle of wine and good company, we had a delightful morning. The quarry penetrates a good 300 feet into the mountain with a ceiling of 50 feet or more. A portion of the area underground was quarried to considerable depth and is now filled with water. When frozen, this makes for magnificent ice skating, there being a roof overhead to protect the smooth black ice from inclement precipitation. On this day the ice was still strong enough to support daring souls, though it cracked ominously. We were all impressed -- this was terrific, well worth a trip to Dorset. When the wine was gone, and all corners of the quarry explored, the unanimous decision was to forget Mt. Aeolus. We couldn't have found it in the pea soup fog anyway.

We hiked down the old incline railroad bed, where marble blocks were once transported, to the old county road which led back to our cars. Not being wet enough, we decided to hang in there and hike another mile south along the east flank of Mount Aeolus into the old Folsom Quarry, of which I had pictures showing its operation in 1885. We found the quarry by spotting its waste pile, and actually stood right in the middle of the old quarry without knowing it. The fog was so thick, that only by finding the quarry wall and walking around it could we realize we were walled in on three sides.

By now we were thoroughly drenched and getting cold, so we returned to Rutland in search of a warm fire, warm drink and dry clothes. This trip will be attempted again shortly, hoping for better weather. If you like steep climbs and old quarries, be there; you won't regret it.

COX MOUNTAIN, PITTSFORD

by Steve Pulling
April 12, 1981

Twenty-six people showed up on this clear, sunny Sunday to scale Cox Mountain in Pittsford. There were many welcome new faces on this hike thanks to the weather and especially to Bob Badger who fielded many Vermont Marble employees with their families. Many old regulars made it also including one who left Milford, N.H. that morning after, I repeat after, the space shuttle lifted off at 7:30 A.M. to meet at the fire station on time to go hiking. Rob, the speed limit is 55 M.P.H. in case you forgot.

After leaving the cars on the Sugar Hollow Road we proceeded gradually but steadily upward for approximately 1 1/2 miles with some nice views to the north and east. When on top of Cox Mountain it took us a few minutes to find the advertised good views, but thanks to Bob Badger and Steve Pulling we found them just in time for lunch and the Badger wine and cheese that ages well in Bob's pack. In little protected pockets we ate lunch to escape from the cold, strong wind which developed on top of the mountain.

After lunch we found the best lookout of all overlooking the Route 7, Florence, Otter Creek Valley. A leisurely walk back to the cars completed a very enjoyable hike. How is your pet snake that you found on this hike, Tom Shambo?

CLARENDON WORK PARTY

by Joe Dicton Sr.
April 18, 1981

In Spring we always focus on our duties of putting the Long Trail (Killington Section) back in shape for the coming hiking season.

On this cool Saturday morning nine volunteers signed up for the Clarendon Shelter repair and clean-up. Missing boards on the north side of the shelter were replaced by George Reynolds, Ray Catozzi, Joe Dicton Jr. and John Lind.

The clean-up consisted of picking up the trash, broken bottles and raking up the shelter area. This work was done by Roma Pulling, Anna Nyiri, Becky and Steve Pulling and Joe Dicton, Jr.

Special thanks go to the above volunteers for their generous effort in putting Clarendon Shelter back in good order.

The outhouse at this shelter has been completely destroyed. A new metal outhouse will be installed at a later date.

PROCTOR HIGH LEDGE

by Roma Pulling
May 2, 1981

Saturday, May 2, dealt another blow to the credibility of weather forecasts. Partial sunshine had been predicted but was preempted by a light, steady drizzle.

This time we tried an afternoon hike for the benefit of those who think nine o'clock is early. Only one such person showed up; possibly others were discouraged by the rain.

After parking cars in the lot by the defunct Otter Valley railroad in Proctor, eleven people visited the High Ledge via a gradual climb starting at the end of Cain Street and following an old carriage road. In one place we had to stand aside for a workman who was busy felling trees with a chain saw and dragging them down the road with a large log skidder. We looked for May flowers along the way and found only a few but were able to identify early saxifrage, wild ginger, wild oats and red trillium.

At the height of land by the pole with its weatherbeaten U.S. flag, we sat, had a snack and enjoyed the fine view of Proctor, Otter Valley and the mountains beyond, then returned to our cars by the same route.

BLUE RIDGE MOUNTAIN

by Rob Carey
May 16, 1981

In spite of cloudy skies we had a good turnout of nine hikers. We parked at Tall Timbers Camp and went up the Cauty Trail. Many wildflowers were out, most of which were identified. As we neared the summit, we got into the fog or cloud, depending upon your point of view. During lunch at the top there were a few sprinkles and we had excellent close-up views of the inside of a cloud.

The sun came out on the return trip, warming things up and bringing out the black flies. Apparently they don't know they aren't due until June. Does this mean they'll be gone early?

AT WALK-THROUGH

by Rob Carey
May 9, 1981

Becky, Steve, Alfred Pulling and Winnie Shambo cleared the Trail from Route 140 to Minerva Hinchey Shelter. Everything was in good shape, with just a couple of blowdowns that were taken care of. Roma Pulling and Anna Nyiri checked the trail from Route 103 to Minerva Hinchey. This section of trail was also in good condition. These two crews took six bags of trash out from the shelter.

George Reynolds and a friend covered the Lower Cold River Road to Route 103. They reported some wet spots just south of the Cold River Road. There had been reports of blowdowns between the Cold River Roads so the Joe Dictons, Jr. and Sr., both attacked that section with a chainsaw.

Rob Carey and Sue Smyser did the section from Route 4 to Pico Camp, including Pico Loop to the summit. This trail was also in good shape, although there was some clipping done on the Loop. The wildflowers, particularly trout lilies, were in full bloom.

FIELD TRIP TO KILLINGTON PEAK

by Carol Chapman
May 6, 1981

On May 6, a balmy spring day, six excited 8-to-12 year old children and four adults from the Vermont Achievement Center headed toward Killington. We were on our way to visit Killington Peak's fire warden, Churchill Scott.

The ride up the chairlift, a new experience for some, took us over small patches of snow where only 12 diehard skiers were coming down that day.

The short hike up the nature trail to the summit proved that the warm jackets, mittens and hats that the teacher had insisted upon were unnecessary.

Soon Churchill came into view with a friendly wave to us all. He welcomed us into his living quarters and told the children briefly about his work there.

Then it was time to visit the fire tower. One of the boys, who later admitted his knees were shaking, was so curious to see what was up there that he didn't need any urging to climb the stairs. Trying to site a fire and locate it on the map, looking through binoculars and going through the trap door were some of the attractions there.

Lunch was eaten at a nearby picnic table. Running around and playing on the rocks was fun for all and the teacher was glad there was no fragile alpine tundra to protect.

Finally Churchill showed us some of the electrical equipment stationed there by various radio stations, the police and others.

Too soon it was time to head back down the slope. What a delightful day we all had!

KILLINGTON SECTION INFORMATIONAL MEETING AT THE LIBRARY

by Winnie Shambo
May 27, 1981

A year ago the directors of the Killington Section toyed with the idea of a membership drive. Although there was much discussion, not a great deal was accomplished so this writer volunteered herself and Carol Chapman to co-chair this endeavor and we were underway.

Over the course of the ensuing months Carol and I met several times to outline just what should be brought forth at a "drive" and in what order. It occurred to us that we might need to offer something special as a program bonus in order to have any kind of a "turn-out." We discussed where such an event should be held and how it could best be advertised. Various people who could help in presenting the program were contacted, and then winter came upon us.

Both of us were involved with out winter schedules and so the project was left to simmer on a backburner until early spring of this year when we realized time was running out if we wanted to reach those who might enjoy Spring/Summer hiking.

Putting ourselves into second gear, we made arrangements with the Rutland Free Library through a lovely lady by the name of Debbie Ramage, who finalized May 27th as our debut. I arranged to have the Main Club's slide show of New England's Alpine Areas delivered and we arranged to have various GMC articles and pamphlets on hand. The speakers were recontacted to make sure all were still able to help. We met at Carol's to go over the time elements involved and for input from the participants. We passed out posters which were done by Carol and me which several of us placed in shops around the city. Press releases were sent to both the Mountain Times and the Herald.

Finally, May 27th arrived. Present at the meeting, not counting known Section members, were at least 35 people. None of our speakers were professionals but everyone did a fine job for a first time out. Our slide show was beautiful and if anything could have been improved it would have been a better sound system for the tape.

I'd like to thank Roma Pulling for handling refreshments and our outing book. Our thanks go to the following for their contribution: Steve Pulling (GMC History and Killington Section Programming); Joe Dicton Sr. (Trails & Shelters); Rob Badger (Storyteller and equipment display); Ray Catozzi (day hike equipment needs) and Churchill Scott (membership, dues, Kirk Fund).

All in all, we counted the evening a success and hope to see some of those who attended on our summer hikes.

UNSCHEDULED WORK PARTY

by George Reynolds

June 6, 1981

On Saturday morning, June 6, five hikers, Al and Roma Pulling, Winnie Shambo, Joe Ciccarelli and I met at the Long Trail parking lot on Vt. Route 11. Despite threatening skies, the crew drove up to Mad Tom Notch via the ranger's cabin at Hapgood Pond.

We cleared the trail south to Vt. 11 where there were many blow-downs. We cleared out most of them, leaving only some low ones to impede trail bikes and one which was too large to take out. It was a pleasant surprise to find no trash either on the trail or at the shelters. The trash bags will keep for another trip.

We found that Mad Tom Notch Shelter had been moved from its old location north of the Mad Tom Notch Road to a new spot about two miles south of the road. The shelter has been rebuilt using some of the old boards. We found the outhouse to be rather unique. The throne is a new metal one set on a large wooden platform in its own clearing with probably an excellent view of the west when it isn't foggy. I assume that the Forest Service will soon put a building around it. The Spring was a shallow pool with no obvious movement of water, but it tasted good.

Bromley Camp was in good shape with only one cracked pane which had been patched with gray duct tape.

It was a good trip although it would have been nice if the fog had cleared while we were on top of the Bromley tower. The five-state view was limited. This work trip was the result of an appeal from the main club's Trails and Shelters Committee.

LONG HOLE

by Ray Catozzi

June 7, 1981

Long Hole is a section of Lake Brook, not far downstream from the outlet of Griffith Lake. It emerges from the woods and flows placidly in a 300-yard long straight line through a long, open grassy meadow before entering the woods and tumbling downhill again. It was here that we ventured this day to view the June "pinks" or mountain azaleas.

To arrive at this unique stretch of mountain brook, we took a very circuitous route by car to enable us to walk in easily with very little climbing. After traveling south to Manchester, we turned east on Route 30 to Peru, north in Peru, then west on the Mad Tom Notch Road, and finally north on an unnumbered National Forest Road that dead-ended about $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles from the southwest shore of Griffith Lake.

It was well that we chose to go by the lake en route to Long Hole because it was only around this highest body of water on the Long Trail that we found any "pinks." Not a single plant or bloom along Long Hole. It was interesting exploring down along this unusual stretch of wilderness water. We even scared up a few wild ducks.

After viewing Long Hole, we returned to the lake, followed the LT south along the eastern shore of the lake, and then $\frac{1}{2}$ mile beyond to Peru Peak Shelter, where many had a second lunch. (Our first lunch was on the western lake shore on the way in.) Winnie Shambo, diligently working on her LT end-to-end award, talked three others into going out by the LT south to Mad Tom Notch, about $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles. The rest hiked back around Griffith Lake and returned the way they came in. It was an enjoyable outing in spite of threatening rain.

MIDDLEBURY GAP TO LINCOLN GAP

by Rob Carey

June 13-14, 1981

This backpack trip was changed from the Devil's Den Area to the Long Trail between Middlebury Gap and Lincoln Gap. Five hikers used this opportunity to work on their End-to-Ends, covering about 16 miles.

Unfortunately, there are no shelters near the halfway point. Accordingly, we took tents and planned to camp along the trail. The weather cooperated, giving good views at several overlooks.

We enjoyed a long break at Skyline Lodge on Skylight Pond. This is a beautiful spot, but the Lodge is showing its age. In order to reduce Sunday's mileage, we decided not to camp at Emily Proctor Shelter.

We found excellent tent sites on the trail at the junction of the Clark Brook Trail. One of our group had gotten ahead and stayed at Mt. Roosevelt, but the rest of us camped at the Clark Brook site. There was water a short distance down the trail.

Sunday's hike was uneventful until the end. We spread out and not everyone stayed on the trail on the last mile, resulting in some confusion at the road, but we all got back together eventually.

WORK PARTY BETWEEN GOV. CLEMENT AND TAMARACK SHELTERS

by Joe Dicton, Sr.

June 28, 1981

The work party originally scheduled for June 20th to do trail work between Gov. Clement and Tamarack Shelters was rained out and re-scheduled for June 28.

On this beautiful Sunday morning eight volunteers signed up for this task.

It was decided that we would work in two groups. Group A which included Rob Carey, Sue Smyser, and Anne Mausolff worked the lower part of the trail. From the very beginning at the logging road Group A was busy clearing the buffer zones and painting the white blazes.

Group B had five members: Ray Catozzi, Joe Dicton, Jr., Joe Dicton, Sr., Al Pulling, and John Hughes. Group B hiked ahead about one mile and started clearing and painting the white blazes on the buffer zone.

This section of our trail system hasn't been worked on for years and therefore both A & B Groups had to work hard putting this trail back into good shape again.

At the higher elevation evergreen growth was closing in on the trail and had to be cut back.

On hiking back down the trail, one could see all the necessary clearing and blazing done by both groups.

BOILING SPRING

by Harold Rogers

June 27, 1981

Thirty two trustworthy people met at the fire station to venture into the wilds of Chittenden. Thanks to Mr. Lawrence Copeland who led me to the spring and showed me how to find it, we didn't get lost.

We had the usual mix-up in deciding on who was driving and who was riding with whom but everybody got there and back.

We parked the cars at the junction of the Jeep road and the New Boston Trail, signed the book, counted heads and started.

It was a nice day and the start was easy walking. We passed through an area where the gypsy moths had worked extensively. After that, the road got steeper, wetter, and bushier.

We crossed brook number one and then brook number two as we were supposed to do. We started to follow an old logging road and I left the group and went bushwhacking to brook number three which is the run-off from the spring. I followed the brook up to the spring and yelled to the hikers who met me there.

The spring was not boiling as much as the first time I saw it. I have heard that it sometimes dries completely up. It was quite a disappointment to me but the other hikers seemed to be fascinated watching the shifting sand.

We ate lunch and returned to the parking area.

My feet were quite wet and I believe a few of the others had the same problem. It was an expected hazard and no one complained.

No one got lost and I believe everyone had a good time.

FALLS OF LANA

by Churchill Scott
July 9, 1981

Twenty-one hikers attended our third annual supper hike on July 9.

The evening started off with a down-pour which stopped our caravan near Otter Valley Union High School for a while.

The Shambo family, already back from the hike, soaked to the skin, met everyone at the parking area.

It was a short hike up the penstock to meet the road and then on to a vantage point overlooking the Falls of Lana and nearby Lake Dunmore.

Already plans are being made for next year's supper hike to Rocky Pond, Muddy Pond, and the remains of the Hermit's shack. Please plan to join us then.

MYSTERY HIKE - THE FLUME IN CHITTENDEN

by Sue Smyser
July 19, 1981

Ten people showed up for the mystery hike on this sunny Sunday. We parked our cars at the East Pittsford Power House and Clifford Bassett figured out that we were hiking the pipeline to Chittenden Dam even before the leader could find the trail there.

In season raspberries grew along the first part of the pipeline. We soon arrived at the only steep part of the trail where a handy steel cable was used for pulling ourselves along. At the top of this short but steep pitch the pipeline levels off. Now we had the option of either walking beside the three-foot diameter pipe or on top of it. With foot-bridges over the streams the line seemed like it was made for hiking.

As we neared the dam there were sections of wooden pipe. These wooden parts had leaks in many places, but enough water must still reach the power house for electrical generation.

At Chittenden Reservoir we found a sandy beach which made a nice lunch spot. The watermelon that was brought on the hike made a tasty dessert. Roma Pulling showed off her fishing skills by catching a fish in her bare hands. Being less than one inch in length it was under legal size so she put it back. After lunch we returned along the same route.

WORK PARTY - LOWER COLD RIVER ROAD TO VT. 103

by Joe Dicton, Sr.
July 25, 1981

The originally scheduled work party from Lower Cold River Road to Vt. 103 turned out to be a double affair.

First it was decided to move the trail from the Clarendon Gorge bridge to Vt. 103 back to its original location by the railroad tracks.

At this re-location, trail clearing and blazing were done by John and Emma Hughes, Roma Pulling, Joe Dicton, Jr., Winnie Shambo, and Anna Nyiri.

Re-setting the trail and parking signs was done by Al Pulling, John Lepinski, and Joe Dicton, Sr.

After the above trail work was completed in about 90 minutes, it was time to start on the scheduled work party.

The workers were divided into two parties. Group One, which included John and Emma Hughes, Roma Pulling, Anna Nyiri, and Krissy Nadler started their work at Clarendon Shelter going north. Their work consisted of trail clearing and re-blazing which continued until they met up with Group #2 which was heading south from Cold River Road.

Group #2, John Lepinski, Winnie Shambo, Al Pulling, Joe Dicton, Jr. and Sr. drove around to the Lower Cold River trail location. New signs were made and the trail was re-blazed there. Stepping stones and puncheon were installed on wet sections. Good use was made of the chain saw in clearing the many fallen trees.

Both groups worked hard to accomplish the necessary trail work so that other hikers can enjoy our trail system.

SHREWSBURY PEAK

by Bob Badger
August 9, 1981

We had a terrific turnout of 21 people for the hike up Shrewsbury Peak. Two visitors from Kansas City joined us, one newcomer just moved from Virginia, plus three from Ludlow and one from Burlington. If you really believe Rob Carey lives in Milford, N.H., we had quite a nationwide showing. We also had three members, a sizeable percentage, of the pharmacy team from Rutland Hospital. A really delightful group of people.

The hike started from the Northam Picnic Area in North Shrewsbury. We traveled along at a good clip over moderate terrain until we crossed the boundary into Coolidge State Forest, at which point the trail steepens considerably to the south peak of the mountain. The good views, as noted in the Day Hiker's Guide to Vermont, to the southeast of Mt. Ascutney, Mt. Kearsarge and Mt. Monadnock and views to the south of Mt. Okemo, Bromley Mountain, and Stratton Mountain were not to be had as we were fairly socked in by fog. Occasionally Smith Peak, less than a mile to the east, emerged from the clouds, but otherwise we had to use our vivid imaginations to visualize the surrounding peaks and top-notch views. Churchill Scott had promised to signal us with a mirror from his lookout tower on Killington, two miles to the north, but needless to say with no sun and low clouds, there was no signal to send and none to receive.

After lunch on top, we hiked north a few hundred feet to a sag where the trail branches. Straight ahead, a trail joins the Long Trail in about 1.5 miles and then reaches Killington Peak. We took the trail to the right, dropping down to a lean-to and spring in about $\frac{1}{4}$ mile, and then continuing along old logging roads lined with raspberries until we reached the lightly traveled dirt road that led back to the Northam Picnic Area, thus completing the circle.

MOUNT EQUINOX

by Ray Catozzi
August 22, 1981

This mountain climb, originally scheduled for Aug. 15, was rained out and the leader thought he wouldn't have to report it. But thanks to our Veep, Roma Pulling, it was revived during the first weekend of the GMC Intersectional.

Roma, Ray Catozzi, Bernice Grumm and Greg Bostock drove to Camp Plymouth, picked up a fifth member, John Howard from Maryland, and headed for Manchester and the Burr and Burton Trail. After 2.9 miles of trail and 3,000 feet of vertical climb we knew we had been laboring, but after breaking out into the clear at Lookout Rock it was all worth it. It was a perfect day and we had a gorgeous view of the whole Manchester village and valley.

We lunched at the rock and then ambled another 0.4 miles to the hotel on the summit. Did a little slumming and hobnobbing with the motoring tourists and then we headed back down the same trail. We stopped at a beautiful, cold, clear, gushing spring half way down, about 150 feet off the trail, to fill our radiators.

John drove Bernice and Greg back to Rutland in his pickup truck, while Roma and Ray returned to Camp Plymouth for a most enjoyable campfire of songs, stories, awards and refreshments.

A very rewarding and memorable day!

INTERSECTIONAL

by Rob Carey
Aug. 22-30, 1981

About 116 GMCers and guests including 10 KS'ers attended the Intersectional at Camp Plymouth and stayed from a few hours to nine days. Other than one big thundershower, the weather was satisfactory, allowing for many Long Trail and outlying hikes. Other day trips included canoeing and caving. Popular evening programs included campfires and the auction run by Frenchy Garfield.

END-TO-END BACKPACKING TRIP

by Winnie Shambo
September 5-6, 1981

Six people took part in the scheduled End-to-End outing on the weekend of Sept. 5-6: Al and Roma Pulling, Ray Cattozzi, Rob Carey, Lily Landerer, a member of the ATC from New York City, and myself.

We might have had a problem with transportation had it not been for Ted Shambo who took all of us in his wagon to the Arlington/West Wardsboro Road after we had spotted both Rob's and Al's cars at Rte. 11/30. We appreciate his help.

It was 10:30 a.m. when we began our hike. The weather was holding nicely and the trail was so gradual a climb it seemed like a pleasant walk in the woods. We arrived at beautiful Stratton Pond at noon where we had lunch and pleasant conversation with the caretakers of the Stratton Pond Area. From the pond to William B. Douglas Shelter, where we spent the night, we hiked the recently completed relocation. This portion of the trail also was in fine shape with easy going.

We shared the shelter with four persons from Massachusetts and a gentleman from Maine. Supper was an occasion we all looked forward to, each of us having something different. Lily had brought a large potato for baking and eating... eventually she was able to do so.

Al had built a large fire which lasted long into the night. Although it was lovely to watch while awake, it was breaking all rules of camping to let it continue to burn. Ray finally got up in the wee hours to extinguish it because the smoke was getting thick within the shelter. We had no animal visitors during the night of any sort, but I did hear an owl hoot in the distance once camp was quiet.

We began to stir around 7:00 A.M. and finally broke camp at 8:50. Our first destination on this lovely, sunny day was Prospect Rock with lovely, although hazy, views of Dorset Valley and Mount Equinox. From there we hiked on to Spruce Peak for a view of the Taconic Mountains with the town of Manchester in the foreground. Climbing back down to the LT we had lunch before beginning the last leg of our journey to Rte. 11/30. Some of us reached the cars at 1:30 P.M. while the rest of the group showed up an hour later.

Everyone agreed that a stop at Friendly's Ice Cream Shop in Manchester was in order before our car trip back to Rutland.

We hope Lily will have pleasant thoughts of the Green Mountains and the Killington Section after this, her first backpacking trip.

OUT OF THE FRYING PAN AND INTO THE FIRE

by Roma Pulling

When your Board of Directors learned late last year that Tract 214-03, formerly owned by Chuck Wade, had been purchased by the United States Government as part of their Appalachian Trail protection project, we were elated. Hooray! A chance to return the trail to the direct route from the Gorge! Ample space for an off-road parking area! Right?

W-e-l-l-l, yes. These goals were realized soon after confirmation of acquisition, in July, but at the same time certain other realities had begun to sink in. The Green Mountain Club had been designated to decide what to do with "improvements" on the property and to protect them until such a decision was made, and in this area the Green Mountain Club is us.

Word of U.S. Government ownership spread fast, aided by an April 6 article in the Rutland Herald, and those from the "we are the Government" school of thought descended on the place. Not all of these were responsible, boy-next-door types, and every tour of inspection revealed damage done to the building and trash dumped in the Gorge area. When some of the windows were broken, your Vice-President made a frantic call to your Trails and Shelters Chairman, Joe Dicton, Sr., who went to the property, boarded the windows (with boards left behind by Wade!!) and nailed the door shut. Some of the boards have since been pried loose and had to be secured again, and this sort of thing will continue. Joe was assisted in this effort by Al Pulling. I have called the State Police and the Shrewsbury town constable to please help watch the place, but neither seemed concerned or interested. Now we tread water until the main club gives us their recommendations for use or disposal of the structure.

Then there was The Bus. To distinguish it from a better-known vehicle of that name, perhaps we should designate ours The Bus II. TB II is an ancient Reo which in its declining years was parked in the gully south of the Wade house and used as a residence. When Preston Bristow, of the Appalachian Trail Project office in Woodstock, reported acquisition of the property, he advised that we should dispose of TB II. This has not been as easy as it sounds.

Having very limited acquaintance with junk dealers myself, I recruited Al to contact some for me. One wouldn't take it at all; another would take it if we paid to have it towed. We thought we had hit pay dirt when a third offered us $40 if we hauled it out of the gully to the parking lot, which we have done. At this writing we are still waiting for him to make good.

I must conclude with a word of appreciation to Joe and Al for the many hours spent on this project. These things take time, but eventually our main goal -- that of protecting the scenic Clarendon Gorge from encroachment -- will be realized.

Killington Section's Anne Mausolff, one of our more expert hikers and leader of last year's successful bike trip, is now also the subject of a front page story. An interview by reporter Dick Andrews, complete with picture, appeared on Page A of the July 1 issue of the Green Mountain Tribune, a weekly paper circulating in the Ludlow-Chester area.

In it Anne recounted her experiences on a two-month, 600-mile Appalachian Trail backpacking trip from which she had recently returned.

Anne's goal is to complete the entire 2100-mile length of the trail, and she says that on the whole this journey went well. One exception was the time in Snowden, Virginia, that she stopped to pick up her food package at the post office and found it had closed. By spending her last dollar, she acquired enough food to get her to the next cache. Mice could be a problem too, not only stealing food but also chewing holes in tents and sleeping bags. Anne carried a package of D-Con.

Larger animals seen or heard were deer, bears, snakes and people, who were of the friendly persuasion and not like those who killed two hikers near her starting point in Pearlsburg, Virginia. She remembers with great pleasure meeting three Vermont women, including Marion Holmes, of Middlebury, and Shirley Strong, a former president of the main club.

In spite of the satisfaction of a project completed, Anne recounts little annoyances that are foreign to us here: the trail maps which were of no use; carrying quantities of water because of the lack of fresh water along the trail; sore feet from walking long distances on pavement; and the heat, which eventually became unbearable. Anne is quoted as saying: "I became conscious of how much we have here in Vermont."

GOSHEN GALLOP: KS'ers DON RUNNING SHOES by Winnie Shambo

The Killington Section was well represented at the 3rd Annual Goshen Gallop held on August 8 at Blueberry Hill with five brave souls daring to appear on the starting line among 117 runners for this grueling 6.5 mile race.

I entered this contest with the idea that I'd go as far as I could and no one would think less of me if I were to quit somewhere along the route.

I have no idea of what should be going through the mind of the runner as he/she goes along, but for the first three miles

I swore at myself as I kept gasping for breath and wishing for the pain to ease in my lungs; mentally kicked myself those first miles for getting myself into a situation such as this; debated whether to quit and return to Blueberry Hill each time I saw the slightest incline.

Going past Camp Thorpe I remember thinking, almost in tears, that I couldn't go any further. I tried to comfort myself with the thought that no one would care whether I finished or not. No one, that is, but me. At this point I was passing the half-way mark (Time: 36.6 minutes), mentally thinking, "the point of no return."

As I started down the hill, trying to keep the same pace as going uphill, I resolved to finish this race if it was the last thing I ever did. From that point on I blocked everything from my mind, concentrating on putting one foot in front of the other.

Eons later I arrived at the Monster Hill. I ran as long as I could along the paved portion of the roadway, which was only as far as the first curve, before sheer exhaustion forced me to walk.

When I reached the four corners and realized there were less than two miles left, I also came to the realization that I could actually finish this race. I could see another woman about my age quite a way ahead of me and was determined to overtake her. About 7/10 of a mile was left now and with a final burst I passed the woman and crossed the finish line three minutes ahead of her. I finished 113th with a time of 1:16:33. Ironically, the winner finished at 36.6.

Kind of far back in the pack, you say? Kind of took my time, you say? Believe me, I did much better than even I expected to do for a first-time runner.

The other members of the Killington Section to enter and finish were: Joe Dicton Jr. and Sr., and Carolyn and Rob Badger. Ask them their stories of the Goshen Gallop. Better yet, if you enjoy pain, enter the race yourself next year.

NOTES FROM ARIZONA: A HIKE IN THE GRAND CANYON

by Rachael Charland

It was about 10:30 A.M. when a group of five individuals started descending Hermit's Trail. For the first few yards it was brick paved and rather wide for trails in this locale. Then you wouldn't believe it until you actually saw it -- a path, a trail -- not as wide as a cow-path and a good Holstein would be insulted if one should say she made such a narrow pathway. Gingerly, I plodded down this narrow space, hoping I wouldn't slide on the cinders and pitch down the embankment that didn't have one tree to stop my fall -- only mesquite and cacti. We only made 1,000 feet in an hour so you can see even the hikers who are used to this canyon area do not take chances. It leveled off for only a few feet and then upward.

The trail was infested by weeds and begging squirrels -- Ponderosa type with a bushy tail that stood taller than the animal itself as it stood up on its hind legs. Those squirrels seemed to like to eat most anything and packed all they grabbed in each pouchy cheek.

We were en route to Dripping Spring and indeed it did "drip" -- one drop per hour it seemed as we gazed at it. The fact that there was any water was a big miracle as water is not usually found in that part of the Grand Canyon.

The whole hike was only three miles in its entirety but 3,000 feet into the Canyon was felt by all when we started on the return trek. Can you imagine it was over 100° at about 3:30 P.M. when we began our ascent? Needless to say, I had a very difficult time trying to breathe -- my legs were fine, but gasping for breath took its toll on me. Female and male rangers very efficiently monitored my blood pressure every so many feet of elevation. They were finally convinced that my blood pressure elevation was due to the effort I was making to climb upward and out of the canyon. I literally crawled in many places -- my breathing was so labored. Yes, it was frightening, but there was nothing to do but try as quickly as possible to get to the topside. Though wearing a hat and a long-sleeved shirt I still burned the back of my neck (didn't know this at the time as the Ranger kept cold neckerchiefs around my neck). Rested at last for about 30 minutes when I reached the car. Then we all tried to go to Bright Angel Snack Bar for refreshments, but couldn't get near the area because of tourists! Went to Babbitt's Grocery Store and I purchased a pint of lime-flavored sherbet. Boy, what that did for my parched throat and general disposition!

I took only three hours to make the trip out of the Grand Canyon but you would have thought that was the very "end" -- But, sweet helpful ranger let them know (for once I was too exhausted to fight) that all hike leaders should acquaint their group beforehand concerning the proposed trail for the day's hike so that such pressure would not be brought upon those out-of-state hikers who are not used to the elevation here in Arizona. She really let that hike leader have it, and if I had not been so weary I would have enjoyed a real good bellylaugh.

A NOTE OF THANKS

We are very grateful to F.W. Webb Company, of Randbury Road, Rutland, for their generous donation of three lengths of stovepipe and an elbow to replace the worn pipe at Minerva Hinchey Shelter in Shrewsbury.

Thanks go also to Steve Pulling, who teased the parts into position, inserted the damper and leveled the stove, and to Al Pulling, who assisted him.

Those of us who remember the loss by fire of the old Sunnyside Camp at this location in 1967 are dedicated to taking "a stitch in time."

THE GEORGE L. KIRK FUND

On September 1, 1981 the George L. Kirk Trails and Shelters Fund totaled $6,702.25.

In January of 1981 the first $5,000 fund reached its goal and according to the terms of the agreement, interest earned will be used for trails and shelter maintenance. Therefore, our overall financial standing should be much brighter in 1981.

OTTER CREEK CANOE TRIP

by Steve Pulling
September 12, 1981

Have you ever heard the old saying, "If you don't like the weather in Vermont, just wait ten minutes?" Well, this example of Vermont wit and humor surely held true on the second annual Killington Section canoe trip on Otter Creek. With the gracious help of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Davies and Camp Betsy Cox our canoe trip was a great success.

Starting at the covered bridge just off the Florence truck route, we proceeded north with four canoes and twelve miles to go. At first, the pace was quite leisurely because we had some inexperienced paddlers with us including one individual who had never before set foot in a canoe. As the day wore on, however, the pace picked up considerably and before we knew it it was time to find a place to dock for lunch.

If you have ever canoed on Otter Creek, you know it's difficult to find a place to dock because of the muddy, steep, slippery river banks. Thanks to Sue Smyser and Rob Carey we found a near perfect place to stop and eat lunch just south of the village of Brandon. While eating lunch we heard a thunderstorm approaching, so we ate fast and quickly started paddling again.

It wasn't quick enough!! The skies opened up and we were caught in a cloud-burst thunderstorm. Luckily, we had just canoed under a covered bridge, so we made a U-Turn, docked the canoes, and stood inside the bridge to wait out the storm. We received lots of funny stares from cars passing through the bridge, but who cares, we were semi-dry.

While boarding the canoes after the storm, Carol Chapman was determined to go swimming, but she changed her mind after she got in up to her waist. Like I said previously, the river banks were slippery especially after a storm, right, Carol?

Soon after we left the bridge the sun reappeared and there wasn't a cloud in the sky. The remainder of the trip was just perfect in every aspect as we followed the Creek along Route 73 to a fishing access where Charles Davies met us and drove us back to Florence.

Canoe trip participants were: Rob Carey, Rob Badger, Sue Smyser, Sue Tumlin, Roma Pulling, Carol Chapman, Steve Pulling and Audrey ("Dizzy") Whiteside from England. See you all on next year's trip.

AUTUMN OUTING - LINCOLN, VT.

by Winnie Shambo
September 18-20, 1981

Joe Dicton, Sr., Ray Catozzi and I represented the KS at the 1981 Autumn Outing held at Mountain Meadows in Lincoln.

Upon our arrival Friday afternoon there were plenty of sites to choose from. We opted to use the same site and had our tents up and were settled in in short order.

Ray's goal for the weekend was to visit Cantilever Rock. According to the guidebook: "Cantilever Rock is a horizontal obelisk-like rock 60 feet above the ground and wedged into the vertical face of a 100-foot cliff. It is 40 feet in length, 31 feet of which extend beyond the cliff." Ray's last visit to this unusual sight was with a group of Boy Scouts some years ago. Joe was there to enjoy whatever was offered and my major goal was to hike a portion of the LT from Appalachian Gap to Birch Glen Camp in my endeavor to complete my End-to-End.

Some of the scheduled hikes had no established leaders so there ensued discussion regarding which hikes would actually take place. With some compromising, hikes were arranged and I joined Ray and four others as Keith Edson led us to Cantilever Rock on Saturday. An impressive sight which could have been improved had there not been a half dozen youngsters upon it who refused to descend so that others could explore and had the weather been a bit brighter. At this point we had to don our rain gear and decided to hike to the top of Mansfield which we found a bit windy and chilly. The ranger, when we encountered her, was wearing her winter hat, scarf and mittens as well as her parka. Many other individuals and groups were also visiting Mansfield that day. the fog and drizzle cleared off enough for us to have a blurred view of the surrounding landscape.

Back at the campgrounds, our neighbors, Andy Squires and his wife, Carlene, invited us over for AA (attitude adjustment) hour. It turned into an impromptu potluck supper with someone donating meatballs in sauce, another some bread, and, of course, the wine and cheese and crackers. Good company and conversation passed the time quickly.

Before we knew it, it was time for the evening program. Slides and commentary of the GMC expedition to Yellowstone were presented and very well received. A great bonus before the slide show and during "intermission" were hot mulled cider and a variety of cookies, courtesy of the Burlington Section.

Sunday, Joe and Ray joined a group to Snake Mountain before heading back to Rutland; I enjoyed beautiful sunshine while doing my little section at App Gap.

Although the total number participating in this year's Autumn Outing was small, we shared the fellowship of a common interest.

It is hoped the 1982 Outing can be held in Central Vermont with more club members from both north and south taking the opportunity to participate in one of the few events where everyone shares hiking information and experiences.

OKEMO MOUNTAIN

by Rob Carey

About 10 people turned out for this six mile hike. The air was hazy and the weather threatened showers but held off. Too bad we couldn't have had the clear day that I had when I checked the trail.

We followed the route from Healdville as described in the Day Hiker's Guide. The trail was fairly well marked with orange diamonds most of the way. Although Okemo is not a high mountain, we climbed almost 2,000 feet. As a result, some of the group did not go all the way. At the top the haze restricted the view, but we all climbed the tower anyway. Due to the wind we had lunch on the ground. On the return trip it looked like we were going to get wet, but other than a few sprinkles the rain held off.

GMC DIRECTORS' MEETING

by Rob Carey

October 17, 1981

The major item of interest to the Killington Section was the Clarendon Gorge (Wade) property. The Board approved the same general plan as the Section has recommended, except the Board would like to put a caretaker and information center in the building next summer. The Section has reluctantly recommended removal of the building. Both agree on the need to designate a parking area and restrict vehicles to it, and to keeping the site clean. Any suggestions would be appreciated.

The proposed power line in the Rutland area was discussed. The Board made a general policy recommending use of existing corridors and visual impact softening techniques where practical. In this case it supported the Route 4 corridor.

Your mind and body can take more than you think. Don't cheat yourself by giving up -- in mountaineering, in life.

PICO WORK PARTY

by Joe Dicton, Sr.
October 10, 1981

Because of rain the scheduled work party was postponed until Oct. 10, which turned out to be an ideal day. Necessary repairs to Pico Camp as well as work on the trail leading to Pico were accomplished.

Trail crew work consisted of cutting back the growth and cleaning out the many water bars leading up the mountain. The above work was carried out by Roma Pulling, Anna Nyiri, Bernice Grum, Al Pulling, and Rob Carey.

Carrying the repair supplies needed for Pico Camp and the outhouse was done by Mark Krebs and Joe Dicton, Jr. and Sr. We were fortunate in having Mark, a professional woodworker, doing most of the repairs on the Shelter caused by porkies to the door and bunks. A broken window on the north side of the Shelter was temporarily closed with sheet metal.

To our big surprise, we have never seen so many hikers both on the trail and making use of Pico Shelter. It was a pleasant surprise to know that our trails and shelter are being put to good use.

GRANDPA'S KNOB

by Harold Rogers
October 11, 1981

With the best weather possible, 27 hikers set out on this easy and enjoyable fall hike. One of those who completed the hike was a very proud Mauri Winturri.

Thanks to Roma Pulling we had obtained the necessary written permission to hike the mountain. We hiked slowly up the road which passed mostly through woods and was not very steep.

At the top there was some wind but the sun was warm and bright. On our arrival it was a little bit hazy but it cleared off before we left providing fine views of the surrounding countryside. Although we could see Killington and Pico, Churchill didn't flash us any signs.

We had an uneventful walk down to the car. Using a topographical map we estimated that we had walked about one and a quarter miles with a rise in elevation from about 1100 feet to about 2100 feet.

STAR LAKE, BELMONT

by Anna Nyiri and Krissy Nadler
October 24, 1981

On a crisp Saturday morning thirteen hikers, among them Judith Paul Kypragoras and son Andros, three and a half, on a visit from Cyprus, parked near a field with a view of Star Lake and a backdrop of Mendon, Pico, Killington, and Shrewsbury Peaks and Saltash Mountain to gladden the eye and the soul.

We walked a loop of approximately three miles on a snow-sprinkled country road, to Route 155, and up another country road back to the village and a cottage porch warmed by the sunlight, where we ate lunch.

A memory to store in our brain computers -- the view, the day, the walk, the company.

VALIQUETTE MEMORIAL HIKE

by Joe Valiquette
November 1, 1981

On Sunday afternoon, November 1, a group of 25 hikers met on South Main Street by the Fire Station for the annual Harold Valiquette Memorial Hike to the top of East Mountain.

We parked the cars on the Wheelerville Road near the Powers and Gillespie Camps.

It was a fairly nice day. We hiked up the old logging road past Dyers Meadow. When the logging road ended we bushwhacked it from there to the top. From the summit we had a very good view of the city of Rutland, although it was a bit hazy.

The remains of a red flag placed there a year or two ago could be seen in one of the trees.

After a good rest, we started down the mountain. There was a bit of surprise when Harold Rogers stepped in a fox trap. No damage was done except for a scratched boot and we proceeded down the mountain to the cars.

Some stopped on the way back to Rutland to view McLaughlin Falls.

WHITE ROCKS CLIFF AND CANDLELIGHT SUPPER

by Ray Catozzi
November 7, 1981

The comments about this outing at the beginning, as we started slipping and sliding our way up snowy Keewaydin Trail, compared to those spoken around our cozy campfire at supper, were as different as the weather that day compared to the weather we should have had. Now that's a profound statement, but it covers the situation.

What should have been a reasonably seasonably fall day with bare ground and possibly some sunshine turned into the area's first winter storm. Fourteen winter hikers showed up (minus skis or snowshoes) and off we went to Wallingford, and up into the Green Mountain National Forest, for an expected beautiful view of the upper Valley of Vermont. Most of the gang made it all the way to the cliff top, and braved a bitter northwest wind out there in the open, to look out into a near whiteout. Even the tree tops at the bottom of the cliff were nearly invisible. Comments: "Should have stayed home"; "What are we doing out here in this weather?", etc., were heard.

But hiking and climbing is invigorating and we were all well dressed for it. By the time we arrived back at the picnic area, with Churchill's fire burning brightly, we were all in good spirits and looking forward to an evening's winter picnic.

An inch of snow was on our picnic table, but we hardly bothered to brush off the table and benches. Nearly everyone cooked and ate while standing around the cheerful campfire. Only three left without supper. Comments: "This is fun!"; "Why don't we do this more often?," etc., were sprinkled among the busy supper chitchat.

Candle lanterns made from plastic gallon milk jugs, brought by Anna Nyiri, were a big hit. What a nice glow two or three of these give out.

So, what could have been a miserable, cold, wet outing, turned into a warm congenial, neighborly gathering in the dark pine grove at White Rocks.

The Cadells, Jean and Ralph, with us for their last outing of the year, were leaving for Florida the next day. Even after much joking about their leaving us up here in the cold while they bask in Florida's warmth, they seemed sad in leaving us as they said their goodbyes.

The weather that day reminded me of a mystery hike I led up Nickwackett Mt. on Oct. 8th three years ago. That year we got a heavy early winter snowstorm the night before. So, folks, if you see my name listed as leader of a hike in the fall in the future you can mark that day on your calendar as the first day of winter. But come, anyway, we are going to have fun!

COVERED DISH SUPPER

by Sue Smyser
November 21, 1981

Twenty-seven people attended the covered dish supper which was held in the Rotary Cabin at Tamarack Notch Camp. When we arrived a light snow was falling, but the advance party had warmed the cabin with a blazing fire in the wood stove. I don't think that anybody was uncomfortably cold.

With everybody bringing a different dish we had a great variety of food. There was plenty of good food plus enough for seconds.

To top off supper we had two beautiful slide presentations. John Lepinski showed us slides he had taken on the Long Trail, at Mesa Verde, and at other locations in Colorado. Mark and Nancy Krebs also showed slides taken last summer when they hiked the LT north to the Canadian border.

Rob Carey, Ray Catozzi and I brought sleeping bags. We spent the night in the cabin and cleaned up the next day.

ENJOY A LANTERN

Note: After seeing these lanterns on the White Rocks outing, several people asked Mrs. Nyiri to share directions for making them.)

1. Make a lantern using a plastic milk or cider jug and a candle.

--remove cap and cut a 3" x 4" (or so) flap in the side of the jug

--thru flap attach lighted candle to bottom of jug candle drippings.

2. Make a bottom-up one with a jug, candle, 5" x 5" x 1" (or so) piece of wood and a 2" nail

-- cut a 2" round hole in bottom of jug...hammer jug cap to wood so that nail protrudes on inside of cap i.e. thru wood first - spike candle on nail - light - screw jug to bottle cap - stand or use handle to hold.

THE LOAFER AND THE GOOD CITIZEN

If a man walks in the woods for love of them half of each day, he is in danger of being regarded as a loafer. But if he spends his day as a speculator, shearing off those woods and making the earth bald before her time, he is esteemed an industrious and enterprising citizen.

KILLINGTON SECTION ANNUAL MEETING

This year's Killington Section Annual Meeting will be held at 7:30 P.M. on Saturday, April 3rd, at the Vermont Achievement Center.

VAC is located on Park Street, north of the Rutland Fairground. Park your car in the parking lot in front of the playground and enter the door on the far left (the Pediatric Convalescent Unit). Signs inside will direct you to the meeting room downstairs.

Make plans to attend this important meeting at which three Directors will be elected and current issues discussed.

Following the meeting refreshments will be served and a program to be announced in the Rutland Herald will be presented.

GLEN LAKE WALK

by Mark Krebs
December 5, 1981

This report is a little late, and I don't know how much I can remember, but as I recall it was a rather cool morning as 19 eager fellow hikers gathered together for a quick jaunt around Glen Lake.

The first 3/4 mile was on a gravel road and made quick footing. Then the trail split off to the left into the woods toward the lake, mostly on old logging roads. Just beyond the Moscow Pond cutoff we all paused for a break and soon were joined by Churchill Scott and two other fellows, making our group a total of 22.

Shortly after noon, and after losing the trail only twice, we found a decent spot for lunch and we all scurried around looking for a place to sit. Several of the group took off up the hill in the woods to eat their lunch by a frozen water flow. A fire was soon started, and a kettle of water was put on to boil for some hot drinks, which was a nice treat!

After lunch we headed on through the woods at a pretty good clip, taking time to eat some wintergreen berries that Winnie Shambo brought to our attention. The rest of the trail around the lake was easy and everyone seemed to enjoy the pleasant four mile walk.

On the way back to the cars, Churchill Scott pointed out an interesting old slate mill just off the road in the woods. Nice to have so many observant people on a hike!

MOONLIGHT HIKE

by W. Churchill Scott
December 12, 1981

On a bright moonlit night in December the Killington Section had its annual "moonlight hike" with over 35 people participating.

A quick trip by some to cut firewood followed cross-country ski tracks from Willard Gap to our destination, the Tucker-Johnson Shelter. Around 6:45 P.M. everyone arrived to find a group of skiers bedded down for the night. Soon a good fire was going, hot beverages served all around and our differences regarding the use of the shelter resolved to most everyone's satisfaction.

As we raised our voices in Christmas caroling, the clouds parted and the full moon peeked through for a minute or two.

It was enjoyable to see folks of all ages get together for a few hours to enjoy each other's company, talk over old times, and, despite the cold hands and feet that had to be endured for a short time, carry on this annual KS tradition.

FREEDLEY QUARRY ICE SKATING PARTY

by Robert L. Badger
December 20, 1981

Freedley Quarry is an old marble quarry cut into the side of Dorset Mountain, creating an underground cavern sheltered from the elements. During winter, the rooms that are flooded--two adjoining rooms to the left of the main entrance and one large room on the right--become covered with a crystal clear glassy layer of ice unperturbed by wind, and free of snow. By late winter the ice becomes cluttered with small rocks dropping from the ceiling and chunks of ice from broken icicles; but in the early winter the ice is perfect for skating.

On December 20, ten of us skied, snowshoed or walked the 0.9 mile from Dorset Hill Road to the abandoned quarry. A new snowfall and clear day made for a perfect trip in. Once inside the quarry entrance, most of us inspected the ice surface by foot testing for ice thickness and marveling at its clarity. A lantern, brought by Steve Pulling, was placed in the darkest room within a clump of ice stalagmites, formed by water dripping from the ceiling. This created an intriguing pattern of light and shadows reflected off the ice. After assuring ourselves the ice was plenty thick, the skaters in the party--Sue Tumlin, Steve Pulling, Sue Smyser, Rob Carey, Carol Chapman, Chris Salinder, Carolyn Badger and Rob Badger, donned skates and tendered our versions of Dorothy Hamill, Bobby Orr and Bonzo, the chimp.

Several times as we glided around our natural underground skating rink, the ice gave out great vibrating quakes as water, expanding during its transformation to ice a few inches below our feet, caused the ice to crack. While we skated, our two non-skaters, Roma Pulling and Ray Catozzi, built a fire so when lunch time rolled around we had a place to cluster, roast our hot dogs, and try to stay warm.

During our lunch, 25-30 members of the Manchester-Dorset Snowmobile Club motored in, set up camp outside the quarry entrance north of our own encampment, built a huge fire with charcoal and gasoline, ate a quick lunch and roared off into the afternoon, hopefully never to be heard from again.

After lunch we skated a bit more, trying to fend off the cold, before heading down the mountain.

This was a terrific trip, one that I have always wanted to do, and voted by Ray Catozzi as the most unusual outing of the year. I may well lead it again next winter.

UTLEY BROOK CROSS COUNTRY SKI TRIP

by Robert L. Badger
January 2, 1982

The Utley Brook Trail was cut by and for cross country skiers during the mid-seventies across Green Mountain National Forest land and private property in the towns of Peru and Landgrove. The trail begins in Landgrove on the east side of Utley Brook, follows the brook for a while, then climbs very steeply to skirt along the west flank of a ridge, drops steeply to cross a small stream, then rises moderately to a ridge cleared during a lumbering operation about 10 years ago. From here there are good views to the west of Peru Peak and Styles Peak. After the clearing, the trail returns to follow Utley Brook until it encounters an old road, maintained for fire access, that crosses Utley Brook and joins Forest Road 10. Here the trail enters the woods and goes through several long uphill with accompanying long winding downhill. The trail ends on the west side of Utley Brook about two hundred yards away from its beginning, after covering a distance of approximately nine miles.

Four of us - Joan Tomasi, John Lepinski, my wife, Carolyn, and myself set out on a perfect cross country day of green wax and sunshine. Six inches of new snow the night before resulted in perfect conditions, and conveniently one skier had preceded us, breaking trail.

Skiing along at a brisk pace to keep warm, we finished the trail in a little under four hours. We then set off on a short tour at the other end of Landgrove on a trail that passes the lone outpost of the Landgrove & Northern Railroad. Along this trail we found a beech tree with bear claw marks climbing at least 20 feet up the tree. But the bear was gone, and shortly so were we after a fantastic day of skiing.

PINE HILL PARK

by Sue Smyser
January 10, 1982

On this beautiful sunny day, seven people (five hikers and two skiers) showed up for the hike in spite of below zero temperatures. We started at the Evergreen Road entrance. Because the trail had been hardpacked by snowmobilers, the hikers could easily keep up with the skiers. The route crossed frozen Rocky Pond and overlooked Muddy Pond. The outlet stream from Muddy Pond wasn't frozen so we made a detour over Muddy Pond to get to the other side. We stopped beside the waterfall to build a fire and eat lunch.

During the entire trip we saw no other skiers, hikers, or snowmobiles. Ray Catozzi was in the area during the day, but we didn't see him during our outing.

Conditions were very good for skiing with little or no wax and the snow was hard enough for good walking. We had to keep moving to keep from getting cold so we arrived back in Rutland before 1:00 P.M.

BIRD MOUNTAIN (ALMOST)

by Sue Smyser
January 23, 1982

This proved to be not a very good day for climbing Bird Mountain. Even with blizzard conditions Churchill Scott, Rob Carey, Steve, Becky, and Roma Pulling and I decided to attempt the hike. It was when Rob's Rabbit got stuck in a snow-drift that we decided to turn around. We spent the rest of the morning eating cookies and drinking hot chocolate in front of a blazing fire at the Pulling homestead.

NEW BOSTON AREA

by Steve Pulling
February 7, 1982

Due to technical difficulties, the original schedule had to be changed from a weekend of skiing and hiking at Merck Forest in Rupert to skiing and hiking in and around the New Boston area of Chittenden. The hike leader did his homework and found that there was no loop trail negotiable in New Boston with the exception of a trail around Chittenden Dam.

If you can remember, Feb. 7 was a bright, clear, sunny, COLD day. After some slight confusion in spotting cars, we started our hike at the Mountain Top Inn and headed down the road toward New Boston. Thanks to the snow machines packing down the snow, we didn't need skis or snowshoes to make the going easier.

Lacking four of our original group of 14, who went on their own little hike (Churchill, Harold, Olga, and Virginia), we proceeded around the Chittenden Dam at an unusually fast pace in an attempt to combat the cold breeze. At noontime we stopped, built a fire, and had the usual Green Mountain Club winter lunch huddled around the fire.

Soon after lunch we came upon the dam at Lefferts Pond and then we followed the fishing access road out to the cars that we had spotted on the Chittenden Road.

So ends another chapter of the Killington Section's Winter of '82.

TAMARACK NOTCH TO BROWN BRIDGE

by Steve Pulling
February 20, 1982

Before I start describing this hike, I would like to recognize one of the participants. Mrs. Dorothy Kirk, an old-time Killington Section member, a friend of us all, and founder of the Kirk Fund which supports the maintenance of the section's trails and shelters, was present today. Mrs. Kirk hiked with us until lunch and showed great courage and determination to attempt this feat. Thanks for joining us and showing your support to our section. It was nice seeing you again, Mrs. Kirk.

We parked our cars at the Tamarack Notch Church Camp and leisurely walked down the road toward Shrewsbury's Brown Bridge as Churchill Scott showed us points of interest along the way. With his atlas and topo map Churchill showed us where old buildings, farms, and school houses had been scattered around the countryside. All but deserted now, the area was once a small community.

Passing by many old hunting camps and receiving occasional lessons in tracking from Jim Griffin, we found our way to Brown Bridge. By following the North Branch of the Cold River we made it back to the Quirk Bridge which completed our loop. From there it was only a short walk back to the cars. Thank you again, Churchill, for your interesting commentary.

POSTPONEMENT

Due to scheduling complications, the Merck Forest weekend originally planned for February 6 and 7 will now be held March 27 and 28. The same conditions apply. Participants will meet at the Main Street park at 9:00 A.M. on the 27th and those spending the night should be prepared for backpacking. Day hikers are welcome either Saturday or Sunday. Reservations must be made in advance by over-nighters by calling Roma Pulling, 773-6997.

PUFFING, STRAINING, AND BIGHORN SHEEP

Several hikers have been overheard discussing the best pace to set when backpacking, and a member of the staff of Smoke and Blazes decided to do some research. Following are three quotations which may help to shed some light on this subject:

The Sierra Club's guide to backpacking called Walking Softly in the Wilderness (1977) has this to say:

"Usually the members of a group hike at different rates-- some go faster, some slower. Should the slower hikers puff and strain, or should the faster ones slow down? It's important to have some agreement, not necessarily explicit, among companions. It can be miserable to be the one slow member of a group that is moving at racing speed; the only one who can't take time to look around and enjoy. So sort things out in advance."

From the lovely Joy of Nature (1977) published by the Reader's Digest Association:

"At the start of your hike, set a moderate pace that will allow the slowest (youngest, oldest or least experienced) member of your group to keep up without undue exertion. About two miles an hour is a good pace for the average hiker. A moderate pace also means you will have to make fewer rest stops."

Finally, Colin Fletcher, author of The New Complete Walker (1978), which has been referred to as "The Hiker's Bible," says:

"Even on trails, two miles an hour is good going. Over really rough country the average can fall below half a mile."

So, in summary, the experts seem to advise a pace comfortable for everyone in your group, not more than two miles an hour, and time for appreciation of the "joy of nature" or, as Fletcher says, "conversations withbighorn sheep," if that is where your interest lies.

CONGRATULATIONS

You are blinded by a sudden brilliant flash of light. You fumble in your pack for your colored glasses. But no, it wasn't the sun. And you are sure it wasn't lightning. What....? Ah yes, there--on Sue Smyser's left hand. A sparkler that wasn't there on the last hike!!

All best wishes to our President Rob and Sue at this very important point in your lives. And when you desert us for that foreign country east of the river, in 1983, don't forget us. Come back and visit us often.

MAURI WINTTURI

It was with sadness that members of the Killington Section learned of the death of Mauri Wintturi on January 18th. An article about Mauri will be included in the next issue of Smoke and Blazes. A donation to the Heart Fund was made in his memory by the section.

Also Mrs. Dorothy Kirk purchased a $500.00 certificate of deposit at 12% enabling the second $5,000 fund to reach $1,669.95.

The next Smoke and Blazes will contain a complete financial report.

LOVELIEST OF TREES, THE CHERRY NOW

One of the loveliest of the spring poems, written by A.E. Housman about Shropshire in his native England but just as apt for Rutland County:

Loveliest of trees, the cherry now
 Is hung with bloom along the bough,
 And stands about the woodland ride
 Wearing white for Eastertide.

Now, of my threescore years and ten,
 Twenty will not come again,
 And take from seventy springs a score,
 It leaves me only fifty more.

And since to look at things in bloom
 Fifty springs are little room,
 About the woodlands I will go
 To see the cherry hung with snow.

KILLINGTON SECTION ANNUAL MEETING & STATE OF THE SECTION REPORT

by Ray Catozzi, President

Rather than repeat, or compete with, a very fine article written by Churchill Scott on our annual meeting, which appeared in the May issue of the Long Trail News, I am going to attempt to add highlights, reflections and analyses of that meeting, blending these with how we are doing and where we are headed.

This is the third year that this annual affair has been held in the spring, as a result of a change in the Killington Section by-laws. This was brought about by very low attendance at our last two January annual meetings, caused by snowstorms. In spite of the change to spring our attendance at these meetings remains low, running in the mid to low 20's.

But when one compares our membership of 140 in 1972 to less than half that number this year, the attendance is probably good, percentagewise.

Some good news was reported by Outing Chairman Roma Pulling, though, and that was that in spite of much lower membership, the attendance on our 1981 outings was up 40% over the previous year.

This is due, I feel, to several reasons. First, we now have greater variety of outings than we ever have had. The committee has been working very hard to get balance in length, interest, and degree of difficulty. Second, our publicity has been interesting, very inviting, and very widespread due to the untiring efforts of Winnie Shambo, our publicity chairman. Winnie has gotten news releases published simultaneously in the Rutland Herald, the Mountain Times, the Rutland Shopper, and the now defunct Rutland Calendar, as well as getting announcements of our outings on both local radio stations.

Thirdly, and this may not be nearly as much a deciding factor as the first two, is the stabilization of inflation and therefore gas prices. For quite a long time now we have scheduled our outings close to home to save gas, but we are now traveling further more often. This also makes for increased interest.

It is felt that this increase in attendance can't help but improve our membership, as many of these persons attending are not members, but could easily be if we all do our part in talking up the benefits of membership in the Killington Section. At this time I would, as your president for the coming year, ask each and every member to try to sign up a new member. Invite your friends on our hikes, get them to see the pleasures of the great outdoors that we enjoy, and remember that, even though we advertise that membership is not required to attend, we shouldn't be bashful in asking them to join.

Thanks to a most wonderful job done by Joe Dicton, Sr., our Trails and Shelters Chairman for the past three years, plus all the many hours of trailwork done by our relatively low membership, the 21 miles of Long Trail assigned to us is in good condition. Some work is yet to be done on the trail this year and some shelter work remains, but, all in all, the chairman's job inherited by Mark Krebs for the current year shouldn't prove to be a burdensome one.

The Kirk Fund for Trail and Shelter maintenance has matured and is now providing the necessary funds for the job to be done each year.

Interest and a sense of duty is running high in the active membership of our section aside from taking on hike leadership. The GMC Intersectional, in August, and the GMC Autumn Outing Weekend, both club-wide activities, are to be chaired this year by KS members. Rob Carey is heading up the Intersectional and Winnie Shambo is making the plans for the Autumn Outing, to be held at Otter Creek Campgrounds in Danby. Incidentally, the Intersectional is also being held near Rutland, at Camp Thorpe in Goshen.

All in all, I feel we, as a section of the GMC, are in good shape with prospects for the future even better. You will note, in looking over our summer schedule of outings (last page of this newsletter) that we have planned more outings than ever. In the past the average number of outings per month was 2+. This summer, due to the high interest in the hard core of our membership for wanting to lead hikes to new, unusual, and distant places, we have left very few weekends untouched.

Finally, I want to thank Rob Carey for his excellent leadership as president of the section for the last two years, along with all the other hard working section members. You have made my job for the coming year much much easier. Onward and upward we'll go!

MAURI WINTTURI REMEMBERED

The thing I remember best about Mauri is the very strong feeling he had about the correct way to blaze a trail.

"It should always be possible to see two blazes in front of you and two behind you. Each blaze shall be as high as possible and exactly two inches wide by six inches high and never, I repeat, never on both sides of the same tree for this tree may die, blow down, get hit by lightning or otherwise disappear."

And that is good advice from a professional.

--Churchill Scott

To some people Mauri was the paunchy, red-faced man with a cigarette in one hand and a bottle of beer in the other; but he was more than that. Mauri was sensitive, astonishingly well-read, and appreciative of flowers and everything he found in the outdoors that he loved.

Mauri would stop in for a chat whenever he was in the area; and as I was usually busy in the kitchen, he was content to perch on the kitchen stool while we talked. Often he passed on reports of repairs needed at one of the shelters, either from personal observation or from conversations with other hikers. The last time I saw him, in October, he had pored through a collection of old VERMONT-ER magazines in a used book store and found three with articles on the Long Trail and Green Mountain Club. He was as pleased as a child at Christmastime and wanted to share his find with me. This is a pleasant memory to file away.

--Roma Pulling

One of the many things I remember about Mauri is paint blazing. He did it with great attention to detail. Of course this means he couldn't do it very fast, but when criticized about speed, or lack of it, he'd say: "It's better to paint one good blaze than ten lousy ones. I don't do lousy ones." And he didn't.

He'd go out with a two-inch brush, paint scraper, brush clippers and paint. It would take about five minutes per blaze. Mauri picked his trees very carefully, making sure it could be seen easily from the direction he was painting for. This might require clipping several branches. Then he would scrape the bark smooth where the blaze would go. Next he'd take his two-inch brush and measure off a 2" x 6" rectangular blaze, making sure to get the corners neat and square as he painted. Most housepainters aren't as careful drawing around trim as Mauri was painting a blaze on a tree! Any unnecessary blazes were scraped off, while ALL blazes to be kept were repainted, not just the ones wearing out.

It took a lot of patience to go blazing with Mauri, but no one can say the work wasn't top quality. He really gave the trail his all.

DASHING THROUGH THE SNOW

by Roma Pulling

March 6, 1982

Actually our dash was nearer a crawl with frequent rest stops, there were two horses instead of one, and the vehicle was what, in former days, we called a sledge. So much for romanticism, but would you believe the seven people who went on this unscheduled outing had a great time? Krissy Nadler, the only representative of the junior set, even got to drive Jim and Judy, the Belgian horses. Some people held that the best part of the ride was the hot chocolate and homemade cookie session in the cozy kitchen at the Bruce farm just before we left for home. A perfect way to end a winter outing!

We tried to organize a sleigh ride last year and found only a man who could take three people at a time and another who wanted $100 and could take 20. The difficulties of getting 20 people together via phone calls sank that plan. A short while ago a wistful comment by Sue Smyser and an ad in the Rutland Herald set things in motion again. Ginny Young helped with the calling, and we were on our way.

Incidentally, before these spur-of-the-moment activities we try to call everyone we think might be interested. If we missed you, just call your chairman (773-6997) or any of the numbers at the top of your hike schedule and ask to be included. Please excuse the oversight.

NORTHAM TO ROUND TOP

by Harold C. Rogers

March 7, 1982

In spite of rain and wind, eleven hikers turned up at the park. Things started to go wrong on the drive to Shrewsbury as I drove into a water hole and my pickup stalled. We had quite a few mechanics with us. Bernie Donahue did the dirty work. Rob Carey was the one who found the trouble which was soon fixed and we were on our way.

When we got to Shrewsbury the roads were slippery and we couldn't drive as far as we had planned.

After we had walked about a half hour we came to a fork in the road. The left road was our intended route to the ski area and Route 100. The right hand road was a dead end road that headed toward Saltash Mountain. There was a wood pulp and logging operation down this road about one quarter of a mile which we wanted to check out. We intended to bush-whack back to the left to the other road which was possible because two weeks earlier Churchill Scott and I had walked it. But this time we walked in a circle and got lost in a way, because in about 10 minutes we were back at the pulpwood pile. At this time the hike leader felt very foolish because anyone who can't go two hundred yards in a straight line isn't very smart. Then we decided to backtrack to the original road.

After we arrived at a lunch spot, we decided to build our fire under softwood for protection from the rain. The trees were heavily covered with snow and we built a real hot fire. The coffee water heated quickly but the heat melted the snow on the trees which, combined with the rain, got us very wet. We found after lunch that it wasn't raining very hard out in the open.

Our original destination was Magic Mountain Ski Area on Route 100 but as we were drenched we decided to quit and come home.

The trip back was fast and uneventful.

SUGAR-ON-SNOW PARTY

by Roma Pulling

March 13, 1982

We met again at the VP's house--
The third year in a row--
To feast on coffee, doughnuts, pickles, and
Of course, sugar-on-snow.

In number we were twenty-one.
Ray was late again!
Outings Committee, what shall we do
To make the schedule plain?

Now we owe a vote of thanks
To two Martins, Jan and Jack.
Your syrup was unbeatable!
We hope you will come back.

Thanks also goes to Dexter Shoes
For granting us the right
To park our cars across the way
In a convenient site.

Outside it rained; we didn't care.
The fireplace spread its glow.
The food was good, friends gathered 'round;
So let it storm and blow.

There were a few who never yet
Had partaken of this treat.
I'm sure they will agree with us:
This party can't be beat.

JUGGERNAUT TRAIL

by Ray Catozzi
March 20, 1982

A perfect sunny winter day greeted nine hikers this March day as we met in Main Street Park. Then off we went to the trail head on the Hadley Hill Road in Bridgewater, two of us skiing, one snowshoeing, and six just walking. Snow conditions proved ideal for all as we climbed higher and higher up the eastern approach to Killington Peak.

By lunch time the Juggernaut Trail had disappeared, or rather was swallowed up by a new downhill ski trail on Sherburne Corp.'s new Bear Mountain Area. So we backtracked to a little clearing beside the trail and got a woodfire going for hot water. Soon all were engrossed in an enjoyable lunch hour with the usual friendly and humorous flow of conversation.

On the way back down the trail the two skiers had numerous good runs scattering the foot hikers with shouts of "Track." A great day, a grand outing!

QUIRK BRIDGE TO MCLAUGHLIN FALLS

by Churchill Scott
April 3, 1982

On Saturday, April 3, we again drove to the Tamarack Notch Aitken Forest area. This time after hiking past the old swimming hole in Cold River North Branch and over the Quirk Bridge we turned north toward McLaughlin Falls. Under darkening clouds we passed the barway to the Quirk Farm and Fritz Gould's last residence on the mountain.

The walking conditions were not too bad for snowmobiles had packed the snow, but, sure enough, as we stopped for lunch a bit short of the falls the rain began. A good hot fire soon had our hot drinks ready and this time we knew enough to build our fire in the open. The old coffee pot is always welcome especially at this time of the year.

After a last look at the falls, a spectacular sight, winter or summer, we headed back on the Wheelerville Road. We passed by an old lumber road leading to the tarpaper shack of a Polish immigrant who watched over the many summer camps in the area and who relied on the writer's father, Dr. Scott, to doctor him in return for a nice catch of trout or field strawberries, blueberries or raspberries in season.

At the end everyone felt that this hike was not quite as wet as the recent Northam one.

WORK PARTY

by Joe Dicton, Sr.
April 17, 1982

On this cool spring morning 12 volunteers signed up for the first work party of 1982. Harold Rogers, Churchill Scott, and Mark Krebs blazed and cleared the trail from Route 103 to Minerva Hinchey Shelter. The going was very difficult as there was still plenty of snow on the ground.

Winnie Shambo, John Lepinski, and Joe Dicton, Sr. drove to the trail head on Route 140 to start their task of clearing and blazing to Minerva Hinchey Shelter. With all the snow on the trail a snowshoe hike would have been more appropriate.

Marie Roby, Roma, Al, and Steve Pulling, Bernie Donahue, and Ray Catozzi took over the big task of cleaning up the Minerva Hinchey Shelter and surrounding area. Repair work on the shelter was also done by the above volunteers.

WILDFLOWER WALK

by Jan Martin
May 8, 1982

Nineteen people gathered for the Wildflower walk in Aitken State Forest led by Jan Martin. Due to a mix-up on starting times with the Physical Fitness Group, Roma Pulling volunteered to wait at the park for anyone who might arrive at 10 o'clock. Unfortunately no one showed up and Roma ended up hiking home instead of having a pleasant walk in the woods...for which the leader is very apologetic! Dedicated individuals like Roma are what keep the Section going.

Because of this starting time mix-up, the group spent the first hour walking around Tamarack Notch Camp where we saw painted and red trillium, windflowers, wild oats, and blue cohosh among other flowers.

After waiting for Roma and deciding something went wrong and leaving her a note, we proceeded up the Bald Mountain Trail. The side of the mountain was literally carpeted with spring beauties with occasional adder's tongue, four or five different kinds of violets, and Dutchmen's britches and squirrel-corn (growing together so we got a good look at the differences in their blossoms). There were plenty of flower guides on hand to verify our findings and to keep the leader on her toes. Most of the group made it to the first ledge where lunch was eaten and some with afternoon commitments returned home. About seven continued on up the mountain, over the first summit, made a brief stop at the bog, and went on over the second summit to the Rutland lookout and back down to the camp. On the second summit a clump of arbutus was finally located that was still in bloom.

It was a beautiful day and apparently much enjoyed by the participants. We had picked the right weekend for a wildflower walk which can be a tricky business as the arrival of spring can vary two to three weeks from year to year.

WALK THROUGH

by Joe Dicton, Sr.
May 15, 1982

We couldn't have asked for a more beautiful day for this annual event. Six volunteers signed up for this task and were assigned to their sections.

Ray Catozzi and Mark Krebs took over the big job of repairing Governor Clement Shelter. The center support beams were damaged due to the heavy snow this past winter. After about five hours of hard work the Shelter was made usable again.

Emma and John Hughes cleared the trail from Route 103 to the Cold River Road. Winnie Shambo and John Lepinski took over the task of cleaning up the Clarendon Shelter and vicinity. Every spring this area requires a thorough cleaning.

Yours truly started trail clearing from Cold River Road to Governor Clement Shelter. Work on this section of the trail was light as there weren't any blowdowns.

TRIBUTE TO RUTH MULLIN

by Churchill Scott

It is with a great deal of sadness that we learned of the death of Mrs. Ruth LaBrake Mullin. A long-time member of the Killington Section of the Green Mountain Club, she was especially noted for her bountiful vegetable gardens and beautiful flower gardens she managed to cultivate each year.

She was born in Florence on March 14, 1897 and graduated from the Elliot Community Hospital in Keene, N.H. For many years she practiced at the Proctor Hospital, then private duty and finally as a receptionist for Dr. J.J. Tomasi, Sr.

Many members will remember her as a gracious hostess at the family's camp on the Fire Hill Road and the many enjoyable outings we had there.

A donation has been made in her memory to the Vermont Heart Association.

CONGRATULATIONS

Congratulations to Nancy and Mark Krebs on the birth of Joshua, born May 6.

NEW HOSTEL FOR HIKERS

On May 23rd the Sherburne Pass Hostel was opened. Owned and operated by Mark Krebs, this resting place for the weary hiker will accommodate 18 people. It is located 100 yards off the Long Trail in the yellow building directly across from the Inn at Long Trail. Kitchen facilities and two showers are available.

Fees are: $4 per night, $3 per night without use of kitchen facilities, $1 use of shower only.

On June 19th there will be an Open House with day hikes in the surrounding area. Bring a dish and come to enjoy a pot luck supper.

We wish Mark every success in this new venture.

LETTER FROM SALT LAKE CITY

by Rachael Charland

Our hike to the East Rim of Deer Creek Canyon got underway about 8:30 a.m. at the parking lot of the Shriners Hospital. I met two people who knew of the state of Vermont and had actually been in the state. The first one had gone to visit the Joseph Smith Monument in Sharon and the other one had lived in Brattleboro and Newfane.

Cars were finally moved from the Shriners parking lot to a very steep down-grade, where we parked with wheels turned inward to sidewalk....Access to the trail (actually a deer track) was through the backyards of some very expansive and expensive newly built homes--very odd shapes and sizes and many of them empty.

A dry creek loomed up before us which turned into a mad running Wet Creek! It was either scramble to the left and right of it through thickets of stunted scrub-oak or walk in the water. After we reached the 5,000 foot level, a short, short rest period was taken. Only two of us were in the "60's" group, the leader, Carl Bauer, and myself. He admitted to me that it had been years since he had made this particular climb -- sound familiar???

Most of the group made a wrong turn and as we reached the rim we could see them sunning themselves near Little Black Mountain whereas they should have been with us on the rim of Deer Creek. It didn't take them long to get to us; they had had their lunch so waited for us to have ours. The scenery was a mixture of more scrub-oak lined mountain area and snow! A German girl was quick to point out that the scenery wasn't much as she remembered around Sharon, Vt. Sitting and eating on the rim was very enjoyable because the wind ceased for a while -- actually received my first wind-sunburn (today it smarts - last night it burned!). About 15 in the group -- they seemed concerned for my welfare as I was new to the group. The altitude again mastered me on the climb -- the actual rim was a little over 6,000 feet (two thousand more than where I live in SLC).

Five yearling deer carcasses were spotted as we stomped along in the stream that finally gave out at the rim. My inquiry as to the reason for the carcasses brought the reply "the winter was fiercer than usual" (the worst in 30 years the papers proclaimed) "making forage for the deer, mature or young, impossible to find because of the deep snow." If you could see the area we hiked in, you'd agree and still wonder just how the deer manage to feed during the summer months.

Tufts of grass helped us climb the mountain; no leaves on the scrub oak yet; spring beauties very, very small, mostly pink; mustard varieties just visible and some type of lily that resembles Vermont's trout lily. Most of the hikers were only interested in climbing up and getting down, not interested in nature. We trekked through a small patch of snow toward the jeep road that we were to use going down the mountain (you never saw a jeep road like it) and the leader and a couple ahead of me disappeared from view (probably when I took a tumble down the graveled, lop-sided road) so I continued by myself toward the sidewalk I could see as I went sliding down the road. Managed to reach my car ahead of everyone although the paths they took were supposed to have been shorter. The whole trip was a little over six miles. Returned home, after giving the leader a ride home, about 2:30 P.M., somewhat smarting from the sunburn and the scratches from the thickets (through my long-sleeved flannel shirt!) but mighty happy I had made the effort. Before the next hike, however, I'm going to question the leaders as to the altitude jumps and terrain.

SOUTH AFRICAN TRAILS

by Roma Pulling

From a pen pal in South Africa, I received several booklets and mimeographed sheets describing hiking trails in that country's national parks. The booklets are well-illustrated and all language is English and Afrikaans, the country's two official tongues.

Trails bear such interesting names as "Springbok, Otter, Klipspringer*, Rhebok*, Mountain Zebra, Wolhuter, and Nyalaland. (*According to INTERNATIONAL WILDLIFE ENCYCLOPEDIA, species of small antelope.) Day hikers are shown on grasslands observing elephants, white rhinos and a hippo but on these trips are accompanied by a guide with a rifle. Trails for backpacking seem to be in hilly terrain or along the seashore.

Overnight accommodations are called "huts" and in one picture resemble a Long Trail camp like Bromley. Another group is pictured cooking a meal outside an open shelter with a thatched roof.

Distances of some typical hikes run up to 17 km (10.2 mi.) a day and seem quite structured, with the route, overnight stops, and number of hikers specified. Fees are charged. Hikers are warned to boil water and are cautioned that a trail is exhausting at one point "because of its undulating character."

Sound like a lot of fun? Excursion Committee of the GMC, take note!

McGINN BROOK FLUME

by Ray Catozzi

May 23, 1982

It was a cloudy, cool, and rain-threatening day when 20 hikers showed up at Main Street Park. Soon after we parked our cars at the trail head for the Griffith Lake Trail, and walked back down the road apiece to enter the woods on a short stretch of logging road, it started to rain. (What else! with this ill-weather-fated leader in charge!). But hikers don't readily give up when it rains; they just keep plodding along towards their goal, hoping it will make up for the discomfort.

Our goal, this day in late spring, was a 100-foot high cascade on McGinn Brook in Mt. Tabor, as pretty a cascade as you will find anywhere in Vermont. It's a small brook, one most hikers can easily step or jump over in the summer-time, but in the spring run-off, going over this high rocky ledge, it is quite a sight! A few scaled the ledge to view the cascade from the top while the rest tried to find shelter from the light rain while eating lunch. Some left for the return trip without bothering to eat.

The hike into the cascade was short, as hikes usually go, probably about three quarters of a mile with very little climbing, so the hike was listed as EASY. However, a few found the footing difficult, as we had no established trail to follow over the leaf-covered, rock strewn ground. To these few, I apologize for the EASY labeling, with a promise to be more accurate on future hike descriptions (I shall not guarantee the weather, however).

CHATEAUGUAY

by Sue Smyser

June 5, 1982

Even with the cool, damp, wet weather, seven people showed up for the hike. We wound our way through the back roads of Chateauguay until we reached the Appalachian Trail. It was a short hike up the trail to a small man-made pond. Since last year beavers had taken over the pond. The water level was up about a foot and a half. This made the walk around the pond very soggy. We didn't see any beaver, and because of the cold nobody swam around hunting for them.

We hiked up the mountain where on a clear day there are good views of Pico, Killington and Chateauguay. We only saw the inside of a cloud.

Back down from the mountain, we ate lunch at a lean-to shelter near the pond. We returned to Rutland slightly damp.

ROUTE 9 (WOODFORD) TO WILLIAMSTOWN, MASS.

by Al Pulling

June 11-13, 1982

Our party consisting of Roma Pulling, Sue Smyser, Steve Pulling, Ray Catozzi and myself left Rutland Friday about 4:00 P.M. Rob Carey met us at Woodford. We spotted two cars in Williamstown and started down the trail from Rte. 9 about 6:20.

When we arrived at Harmon Hill, we decided it was too late to make it to the primitive camping area mentioned in the guide book as planned; so we set up camp on Harmon Hill. There was a very good view of Bennington, and we watched the stars and the lights in Bennington until about 9:30 P.M. The porcupines must have known we were going to be there.

They hung around our tents -- at least this writer's tent -- all night. Needless to say, I got very little sleep.

Anyway, next morning (Saturday) we were up and on our way at 7:30 a.m. With a nice, warm day and a good trail, we made it to Seth Warner Shelter at about 2:45 p.m. We decided to stay there for the night. Some people were tired, had sore feet, and so forth. It was a nice shelter with a good water supply nearby. We had an early meal, then some of the group played cards. Steve had some popcorn, and that was a good after-supper treat.

Sunday morning we were up about seven and started our day -- breakfast, repacking backpacks, and so forth. Actually, we were on our way by 8:15. After a few "knobs" to go over, we arrived at the state line at 10 a.m. After a little break and some picture taking, we continued on to our destination, soon arriving at the Pine Cobble Trail and down, down, down to our cars.

We all enjoyed the hike and are looking forward to the next end-to-end hike in September.

BICYCLE TOUR -- CLARENDON AREA

by Rob & Carolyn Badger
June 19, 1982

If anyone remembers June, they will remember that it rained almost the entire month. But the leaders prearranged for the rain to hold off on June 19, and we had a delightful ride. Seven of us -- Rob & Carolyn Badger, Randy & Cynthia Roberts, Patty Stanley, Paula Stanley, and Barb Linnehan -- met at the parking lot of the College of St. Joseph the Provider. From there we peddled to West Rutland, down Route 133, then followed Walker Mountain Road to Clarendon Springs where we stopped for a respite and drink from the old spring house.

Resuming our ride, we made the long gradual ascent over Walker Mountain, then the very steep descent to Creek Road. Here we made a unanimous decision to skip out to Clarendon Gorge at its intersection with Route 7B where we stopped for lunch. Not a good day for swimming so we had the gorge to ourselves. We didn't swim either.

After lunch we peddled back through Clarendon to Creek Road and followed it back to our point of origin.

MT. INDEPENDENCE

by Roma Pulling
June 26, 1982

Rain was almost a sure thing the day of my hike. Ray wasn't there (!), but it had rained every other day that week; so why not? Even so, seven other people showed up; and one lady was even heard to remark that she liked walking in the rain. This has been her year!

I was happy to see Bob West, editor of Rutland in Retrospect, who went as the sole male member of our group. All historic questions were relayed to him.

In Mill Village we were detoured around the tragic double auto fatality, which had occurred just minutes before, but reached our destination without further incident.

At the Mount we were met by Tony Soper, this season's guide, who seemed to be just arriving even though it was already 11 o'clock. He passed out brochures, and then we were on our own. Of the three trails, I chose to start with the orange-blazed one (2 1/2 miles) as the most interesting with a large marker at the site of Horseshoe Battery, possibly erected (the battery, not the marker) by Kosciuszko, the famous Polish patriot, and with a tall obelisk near the Lake Champlain shore erected by the D.A.R. There is a lovely view across the lake to Fort Ticonderoga from the battery. We ate our lunch, in the rain, on a rock outcropping at the foot of the obelisk.

When we returned to our starting point, some people had had enough walking without attempting the Red and White trails (see Day Hiker's Guide to Vermont) so we stopped for a brief look at the S.A.R. marker erected in 1976 near the entrance and returned home.

As luck would have it, on the way home the sun came out!

DEER LEAP

by Rob & Carolyn Badger
July 6, 1982

July 6 was hot. Very hot in Rutland. Hot and humid. A good excuse to climb a mountain in search of cool air. This evening hike was led by Pinon Badger with fourteen homo sapiens trailing behind: Rob & Carolyn Badger, Roma Pulling, Ray Catozzi, Dave Hadley, John Blittersdorf, Olga Laird, Jim Griffin, Sue Thomas, Mike & Martha & Bernard Donahue, Mary Jane O'Horn and John Gillespie (all the way from Ontario just for this hike!). We were delighted to meet the elusive John Blittersdorf, attending his first hike after three years as a GMC member.

We hiked north from Sherburne Pass along the Long Trail for 1.3 miles to where the Deer Leap Trail branches off to the southwest. This trail ascends to pass near the summit of Big Deer Leap, then down into a small valley, then over Little Deer Leap summit before descending to the ledges overlooking Sherburne Pass. Here we had dinner and watched the setting sun, a great glowing red sphere through the hazy atmosphere, augmented by volcanic dust from Mexico's El Chichon volcano.

Contrary to the Rutland Herald's editorial of that morning, we did not encounter any oil exploration drill rigs, nor did we find a seismic exploration station on top of Deer Leap. All we found was a good trail through beautiful hardwood forest, refreshingly cool air, and a brilliant sunset.

As soon as the last sliver of our closest star disappeared behind the western horizon, we headed down the steep trail that descends below Deer Leap's rocky face to Sherburne Pass. Several of us stopped along the way to look at some small caves, but did not hesitate long as darkness was rapidly approaching.

At the pass, we all paid a visit to Mark Krebs' new hostel for hikers and bicyclers. Great to have a hostel in Vermont, especially on our section of the trail.

BIRDING WALK -- WEST RUTLAND MARSH

by Roy Pilcher
July 10, 1982

By the second week in July the expectant days of spring have yielded to the lazy contentment of summer, the frenzied pace of bird breeding activity has slackened, and the territorial ring of bird song has given way to intermittent fledgling feeding calls. Nevertheless, sixteen members of the Killington Section of the Green Mountain Club gathered at 7:00 a.m. to explore the West Rutland Marsh area for any signs of avian activity.

Even before leaving the Grand Union parking lot a family of killdeer had been identified and an American robin and a starling were seen gathering food for their young while a pesky English sparrow hopped around taking advantage of whatever edibles parking lots yield.

A brief ramble down an old road presented the opportunity of listening to several American goldfinch flying overhead and giving their courtship song. The bushes and trees nearby yielded a pair of concerned common yellow-throat, a blue jay, a pair of song sparrows, a flicker, and a house wren, while a pair of Eastern phoebe were seen nesting in an old pump house.

After viewing an abandoned black-billed cuckoo nest we were lucky enough to both see the bird and hear its peculiar call. We also viewed a yellow warbler nest and a northern oriole nest, seeing both male and female of the former species. Other birds identified included the warbling vireo, gray catbird, red-winged blackbird, and several cedar waxwings busily hawking insects over the marsh, a pair of nesting kingbirds, swamp sparrow, long-billed marsh wren, least flycatcher and two or three glimpses of a least bittern as it flapped from one feeding area in the reeds to the next. A Virginia rail responded to a recording of its call but not sufficiently close for us to see. A red-tailed hawk, however, gave us an excellent object lesson aerodynamics as it gracefully and garrulously spun spirals in the thermal overhead. On another occasion a platoon of chimney swifts put on a fine display of formation flying, and while at the Route 4 rest stop, a family of blue-winged warblers was identified along with a rufous-sided towhee and a field sparrow.

A wood thrush, a veery, a black-and-white warbler, and a chestnut-sided warbler were heard only and not seen, while a waterthrush (northern) was seen and heard but only briefly. Several barn swallows were seen contentedly sitting on a sagging telephone line, reminding us that it would not be long before they would be gathering up their recently fledged offspring and heading south for a rewarding respite.

FOX LOT/ CLARENDON GORGE

by Ray Catozzi
July 17, 1982

Two years ago on the 15th of July a Killington Section mystery hike ended up on Fox Lot in Shrewsbury. This open field, straddling a low ridge top near Clarendon Shelter and overlooking the Rutland Airport, is a delightful spot with views all the way from the south around to the west and north to Rutland City. Another delight that day was the discovery of large patches of raspberry bushes, with ripe red berries there for the taking. Thus was born the idea of a berry-picking hike there this July.

To allow more time for picking, I led the drivers to the extreme north end of the Lottery Road and parked in the yard of an abandoned tumbled-down farmhouse, only about half a mile from Fox Lot. Most of the eight who came to pick (and eat) berries got about one quart apiece before we left for Clarendon Gorge for Part II of the day's activities.

Back down to the Long Trail crossing on Route 103 the group, with the late addition of Rob Carey and Sue Smyser, making 10 in all, parked at the Wade property, hiked west along the top of the gorge's wall, then descended into the river bed. There we all had a refreshing swim in the Mill River and ate supper to the merry tune of the rippling river, while basking in the late afternoon sun. It was a 90 degree plus day -- a little warm for berry picking, but perfect for the supper-swim.

Two footnotes to this outing: (1) On our Pine Hill Supper Hike four days later, a number of hikers agreed to a second berry-picking expedition the following Sunday. But we did our picking around some old cellar holes just 200 yards from our parking spot. Everyone picked in excess of a quart of berries each. (2) Your writer subsequently made six or seven trips back to the same berry patch and ended up with about 20 quarts in all, half of which have been frozen to enjoy next winter.

PINE HILL

by W. Churchill Scott
July 21, 1982

About 14 hikers began our third annual mid-week supper outing the destination of which was decided at the 1981 meeting. Leaving our cars at Evergreen Avenue, we proceeded on an easy road walk to Rocky Pond where Mr. & Mrs. Donahue gave a very interesting history of the short-lived swimming area. Passing Muddy Pond we continued on a trail which led to the end of McKinley Lane where at one time Mr. and Mrs. Fostman frequently hosted Killington Section outings.

There was a bit of confusion as we went toward McKinley Lane, but then the correct wood road was located and soon we arrived at our eating spot, a nice ledge with large pine trees, plenty of rocks to sit on, and no bugs.

A vote was taken that decided no fire and no coffee. Even before our lunch bags were opened, John Hughes and Sue Smyser had found the remains of the hermit's home built in the 1930's.

A cistern with water pipe, much cement work, and a fireplace were still standing after all these years.

The group broke up at Muddy Pond. The drivers went for their cars to pick up the hikers at the country club so they could return by a different route.

P.S. - The writer learned that this hermit is still alive in California, studying at Hanover for the summer. His local friends said that if he visited Rutland he would contact me but as yet I have not heard a thing.....well, what can you expect from a hermit?

STOVE PIPE CITY

by Sue Smyser
August 1, 1982

During the early 1950's there was an extensive lumbering operation to the west of Killington. The logging camp was called Stove Pipe City because of the many stove pipes in the lumbermen's shacks.

We talked with a landowner in that area who remembered when Stove Pipe City was in operation. He told us about Reggie Birmingham from Bridgewater and his Maine lumbermen who lived in tarpaper shacks in Stove Pipe City. Reggie and his men were rather rough characters. The landowner's camp was burned down by drunken lumberjacks returning from a night off in Rutland. The logging operation lasted for three years and landowner waited until the lumbermen left before rebuilding his camp.

On August 1, 1982, ten hikers from the section went looking for Stove Pipe City's remains. Starting at the Wheelerville Road at Brewer's Corners, we followed an old logging road, noticing several log loading areas along the way. We came upon a pile of "coal logs," logs that weren't good enough to use. The logs had a diameter of two to two and a half feet. If lumbering operations were going on today, they would have value. Right after the "coal logs" we found our first and only stove pipe. Also in the area were parts of a shack, truck parts, refrigerator parts, beer cans, pipe, chains, a mug and a peanut butter jar still containing moldy peanut butter.

One half mile further we found the remains of a large building. This was probably the mess hall. Beside the mess hall was the dump. They must have subsisted on coffee, Dinty Moore stew, and beer.

Further on, there were several one or two room shacks still standing. We even found linoleum and window screening in some of them.

Of the ten who started, six intrepid explorers decided to try to find the log slide which can be seen from Killington and try to signal Churchill. After some bushwhacking through heavy spruce we found the slide and started up. Before we reached the top of the slide we saw the firetower. This is the most primitive view of Killington. The only man-made structures visible were the firetower and some radio antennas. We signalled with a mirror and an electric camera flash. Churchill signalled back with a mirror. Three continued to the top of the slide where we found sundew, an insectivorous plant. Coming back down we avoided the spruce, then returned the way we came.

FRANCONIA RIDGE BACKPACKING TRIP (WHITE MTS.)

by Mark Krebs
August 6-8, 1982

First of all we encountered fantastic weather during the whole trip, so eat your heart out Ray! We had a total of three people show up for the hike including Rob & Carolyn Badger and myself, small but full of energy! Leaving Rutland at 5:00 P.M. we drove to Kinsman Notch, N.H. where the A.T. crosses Rte. 112, and hiked 0.2 miles to Beaver Brook Shelter where we spent the night.

In the morning we drove another 20 minutes to Franconia Notch and again picked up the A.T. and headed up to Liberty Springs Campsite. After setting up camp we headed out to climb Mt. Liberty where we sat for a couple of hours eating, resting and soaking up the bountiful sunshine. While looking at maps we then decided to hike over to the Flume, another 1.2 miles away. On the summit we again just laid around taking in the view and talking to other hikers before heading back to camp. After supper we gathered on a huge rock with about 20 other hikers from the camp and exchanged various stories as the sun set silently behind the Kinsman Range. Just beautiful!

The next day we rose fairly early, ate breakfast, packed up, and walked along the Franconia Ridge to the summit of Mt. Haystack where we broke above timber line. The skies were clear with only a small layer of clouds over the summit of Mt. Lafayette, which cleared by the time we arrived there. Crossing the open ridge we walked on the trail which was bordered on both sides by a curb of rocks, similar to those in a groomed rock garden. The trail above timber line in the Whites is marked by stacks of rocks, usually about three to four feet high, called cairns. These cairns are spaced close enough together so one could find his way over the ridges in dense fog and snow. There were also many varieties of alpine plants that only grow in altitudes above 4800 feet. We ascended Mt. Lincoln (5089 ft.), then crossed a bit more ridge before the final ascent of Mt. Lafayette (5,281 ft.), the high point of the Franconia Ridge. A spectacular view surrounded us: the Kinsman Range to the west, Cannon Mountain with its 1000-foot vertical wall, Mt. Washington and the other Presidentials to the east, Mt. Moosilauke and hundreds of other peaks in the wilderness of the White Mountains.

From the summit of Lafayette we descended to the A.M.C. Greenleaf Hut where we managed to consume a few leftover pancakes and sip on hot coffee.

From the hut we followed the Old Bridle Path down to Agony Ridge (a very steep ride indeed!), then continued down the trail back to Franconia Notch where we had Rob's car spotted at the state park. The view from the Notch looking at Cannon Cliff was awesome! Cannon Cliff is climbed by hundreds of expert rock climbers from all over the U.S. and is considered to be one of the toughest climbs in the East. High on one side of the cliff is a rock projection that resembles an old man's head, which gave the rock its name "Old Man of the Mountain," New Hampshire's well-known symbol. New Hampshire, don't take it for Granite!

ORIENTEERING

by Steve Pulling

August 15, 1982

"I don't see that on my map!"

"How do you read my compass?"

"What arrow on this compass did you say I should follow?"

"I can't follow that bearing, there is a tree in the way!"

Now, how would you like to be lost in the woods with thirteen people asking you questions and making statements like the above. Actually it wasn't all that bad, and if you were going orienteering with a group of first-timers, August 15th was the perfect day weatherwise to do so.

The Killington Section fielded a great bunch of interested outdoorsmen to try their hand at orienteering. This event took place at Tamarack Notch which ended up being a perfect place for such an activity. The morning was spent getting familiar with topographical map symbols and compass needles, etc.

Directly after lunch we started out bushwhacking with compass in hand. We never did arrive at our destination which was Bald Mountain outlook, although everyone was on the right track when John and Emma Hughes found a summit labeled Bald Mountain. However, after some discussion we decided it wasn't actually the summit we wanted.

At this point everyone was kind of tired so we called it a day.

"Miller Time!"

MERCK FOREST

by Carol Chapman

March 27-28, 1982

Icy arctic winds, white birches against a deep blue sky, the comforting warmth of the wood stove, the slap, slap of cards being discarded, a bright starry sky, and the laughter of friends are some memories of this year's weekend at Merck Forest.

Bitter March winds swirling and drifting the snow made it seem that this must be the originally scheduled Winter Weekend (postponed because the shelter wasn't available in February).

After leaving the parking area we hiked or skied the 1 1/2 miles uphill to Spruce Shelter where we found that someone had kindly built a fire in the wood stove. Four came just for the day: Jim Griffin, Olga Laird, and Jack and Greg Crowther who left soon after lunch. Five others came prepared to spend the night: Roma Pulling, Ray Catozzi, Rob Carey, Sue Smyser, and I.

That afternoon we made several trips out for firewood and hiked a short distance up a road beyond the Lodge until snow, which broke through to our knees at every other step, forced us to turn back. With the wind chill factor undoubtedly around 0° we decided to retreat indoors where we spent some pleasant hours playing Crazy 8, Casino, and Canasta while snacking on shared goodies.

Before bedtime Ray did such a good job of stoking the fire that when Rob got up to refuel it at 1 a.m. it was roaring and there was no room for more wood. By morning there were still hot coals, but the cabin had cooled off enough so that Ray's milk had frozen and there were little paths of snow that had blown through the few cracks that weren't stuffed with newspaper.

On Sunday morning Rob, Sue and Roma set out in 11° temperature to climb Mt. Antone. It was a fine, sunny, clear day which allowed for excellent viewing of the Taconic and Adirondack ranges. Ray and I stayed at the cabin where we relaxed in the warmth of the stove and were entertained by the chickadees feeding on a stump outside the cabin window. Besides a group of friendly black caps there was one boreal chickadee (brown head, reddish breast), rare in the area. When the hikers returned at 11:30, we had lunch and headed back down the hill.

Though a novice at backpacking and winter camping, I found this to be a most enjoyable outing and recommend that you sign up early if you'd like to share in the fun of next year's Winter Weekend at Merck Forest.

(Ed. Note: My apologies to those of you who looked for this report in the June issue. After a reminder from Roma, I found it buried deep in my Smoke and Blazes drawer where I put it last March.)

1982 GMC INTERSECTIONAL

by Carol Chapman

August 21-29, 1982

Thirteen Killington Section members attended a day or more of this year's Intersectional, very conveniently located at Camp Thorpe in Goshen. The excellent facilities at the camp -- cabins, a field for tenting, a dining hall, available kitchen, showers and a swimming pool -- and its mountain location made it an ideal site for this event.

KS members participated in hikes to Silver Lake, Middlebury Gap to Brandon Gap, Chittenden Brook Campground to Brandon Gap, Sucker Brook to Brandon Gap, and exploring the caves in Bristol and Weybridge.

The latter hike was an adventure for those of us unfamiliar with spelunking. At the Bristol Flat Rooms Cave in order to enter a deeper cave with a high dome it was necessary to squeeze through a 20 foot long tunnel on your belly. Spooky! No bats were disturbed, but a couple of mice scurried to find safety from the giant invaders.

One highlight of the week was the annual auction with entertaining auctioneer French Garfield. Hotly contested items were homemade jams and jellies and Pat Howard's dried flower arrangements.

Other popular events of the week were the square dance and the excellent dinner of ham, corn on the cob, salad and watermelon prepared by the Meade brothers.

Our thanks to Rob Carey and all the others whose efforts made possible this grand finale to summer vacation.

SECTION MEMBERS ARE HIKE LEADERS

The Killington Section is recognized--justifiably so--as the authority on hiking and the Long Trail in this area. We have received two requests recently to recommend Long Trail hikes for groups of non-hikers and to act as guide.

On July 12 Al and Roma Pulling led a group of 23 Italian students who were visiting and studying in the area plus their hostesses and adviser to Deer Leap via the circle route. Amid the babble of Italian, one fellow was heard to say in English that he was enjoying it very much; and a subsequent thank you note from the adviser said it was spectacular, a "worth suffering for" experience.

On August 9 Carolyn Badger led a group of about 16 Girl Scouts and their two leaders, all inexperienced hikers, up

Killington Peak via the Bucklin Trail.
Their leaders' instructions to wear sun hats and not too short shorts were not applicable on this rainy day; however, one girl dutifully showed up with sun-hat. At Cooper Lodge the group lunched and listened to trail pointers given by a man passing through on the Appalachian Trail. Pinon, the Badgers' dog, found it a worthwhile hike as he flushed at least a dozen partridge during the day. The girls descended by way of the Long Trail, a rather long hike for first time hikers, but they arrived back at the cars tired but undaunted.

MR. PRESIDENT?????

Has a KS member ever entered public service? We have had a pol or two who have joined the club, but now Rob Badger (KS board member and hike leader) is a candidate for public office for the first time. Rob will be unopposed on the September 14 Republican primary ballot for the Vermont House of Representatives from Rutland Town and will oppose the Democratic candidate in the November general election.

Good luck, Rob! We need a person with your concern for the environment in Montpelier.

ARLINGTON-WEST WARDSBORO ROAD TO ROUTE 9 BACKPACK

by Rob Carey
September 10-12, 1982

Six Section backpackers, Sue Smyser, Roma, Al, and Steve Pulling, Ray Catozzi, and I made this trip. We spotted cars Friday night and hiked into Story Spring Shelter. The faster hikers made it just before dark, planning to pick tent sites, expecting the shelter to be full. We were surprised to have it all to ourselves, saving us from setting up tents in the dark!

Thanks to Roma's wake-up call we got off to an early start. We had nice hiking, with mostly moderate uphill. We reached Glastonbury Tower about 3:00 p.m. and enjoyed the view for an hour before heading to Glastonbury Shelter. Here some stayed in the shelter, while others tented.

Sunday's hiking had several good views, including one at a powerline crossing, and a lunch stop at a stream. We also descended the extensive footway improvements put in when this section of trail was relocated.

KILLINGTON PEAK BY WAY OF THE CARRIAGE ROAD

by Ray Catozzi
September 18, 1982

This mountain climb was originally scheduled to follow the Juggernaut Trail up the eastern flank of Killington, starting in West Bridgewater. On a winter outing up the Juggernaut a winter or two ago, we only got as far as the new Bear Mountain Ski Area and ran out of hiking trail by merging with a new ski trail. This fall our intent was to see if more or all of the Juggernaut was obliterated by a still newer ski area put in by the Sherburne Corporation.

John and Emma Hughes came up with an that sounded better and so we abandoned the Juggernaut (in more ways than one -- it's now officially abandoned by the GMC). The Hughes have done a tremendous amount of hiking all over Vermont on their own time, and on two separate trips they pinpointed the old carriage road going to Killington from Wheelerville, a road that serviced the mountain hotel on Killington before World War I.

So we switched routes from the east to the west. After going out of Brewers Corners to the south on a well-traveled camp road, we swung around to the east, following a brook and going past a camp or two.

Soon we left the brook and started climbing up on to the ridge. The road got rougher and fainter in places, and we lost our way a couple of times, but John scouted on ahead and found it again. Further up on the ridge, the trail swung around over onto the north slope, and for a stretch of probably a mile or more the road was in almost perfect condition, covered with evergreen needles and grass. A delight to walk on.

The last mile or so before the road joined the Bucklin Trail was washed badly and many, many fallen trees blocked the route, causing us to detour constantly around or over or under them.

At Cooper Lodge we met Bob and Carolyn Badger who started later, came up the Bucklin Trail and arrived ahead of us. As a matter of fact, they had already been to the top, visited with Churchill in the fire tower, and had come back down to Cooper. Some ate lunch at Cooper; some waited until they were at the top.

After a very pleasant, but crowded visit with our secretary-treasurer in his summer hut atop Killington Peak, we moved back down to Cooper where a decision was made to return by the Bucklin Trail, which ends (or starts) right where our cars were parked. By contrast the Badgers went down the Carriage Road.

The lunch and visit in Churchill's cabin turned into a birthday party as Sue Smyser pulled a cake and candles out of her pack. It just happened to be your leader's 39th birthday that day. But we also saluted two other Virgos whose birthdays had just recently passed -- Rob & Sue -- and two to come in the next few days-- Olga Laird and Churchill. We all thank you, Sue, for the pleasant surprise.

WEDDING SHOWER FOR ROB CAREY AND SUE SMYSER

by Carolyn Badger
September 19, 1982

On the lovely fall day of Sept. 19th, we gathered to celebrate the up-and-coming wedding of Rob Carey and Sue Smyser.

Sue arrived expecting to help staple together the Smoke and Blazes, and was surprised to find herself instead at a shower in her honor. Rob, on the other hand, knew of our plans for a shower for Sue but was not expecting to be included in the festivities. Surprise to you both!

The buffet was a delicious affair and we ate with relish as hikers will. We certainly thank Ilse Vergi for hosting the event at her home. It was a delightful afternoon shared with good company--truly a celebration.

Following is the recipe for the carrot cake served at this shower. Recipe is originally from the Hardy House Restaurant in Reno, Nevada.

Sift together: 2 cups sugar
3 cups flour
1 tbsp cinnamon
1 tbsp baking soda
1 tsp nutmeg
1 tsp salt

Add & mix well: 1 cup oil
1 1/3 cup crushed pineapple
1/3 cup chopped walnuts

1 large grated carrot
6 beaten eggs

Bake at 300-350° for about 1 hour

Frosting: Let soften to room temp., then beat together 1 stick of butter and 6 oz. cream cheese. Add 1 tsp. vanilla and 1 tsp. lemon juice. Add powdered sugar a little at a time to taste, being careful that it does not get too sweet and lose the cream cheese flavor.

AUTUMN OUTING -- OTTER CREEK CAMPGROUND

by Ann Reynolds
September 24-26, 1982

For the less than 20 people who turned out for the annual fall outing at the Otter Creek Campground near Danby on Sept. 24-26, the weekend was a total success. For all of you who stayed home, eat your hearts out!

The weather was absolutely superb, despite Ray Catozzi's dire warnings that any event he was connected with was bound to be accompanied by rain. Thanks go to Ray for stepping in at the last minute to coordinate the event, when the original coordinator had to bow out.

Not only did he make sure everyone got the accommodations they wanted, etc., he led a hike Saturday up Dorset Peak, for the four people who were feeling especially ambitious. For the rest of us, a much easier, but no less satisfying, hike to Little Rocky Pond was led by George Reynolds. We especially enjoyed meeting the caretakers, who had only recently arrived after hiking on the AT all the way from Georgia. They seemed mighty glad to take time out from their journey to enjoy autumn in Vermont.

When the hikes were over Saturday afternoon, one polar bear in the party insisted on going in the campground's new in-ground swimming pool, with its lovely view of mountains to the west. Everyone else sat around the pool soaking up the sun, while the swimmer shivered! That night Sanborn "Sandy" Partridge came down from Proctor with his slides of rafting on the Colorado River, accompanied by fresh cider and lots of homemade cookies provided by Killington Section members.

Sunday morning found two of the fairer sex out paddling a canoe on the Otter Creek while the mist still hung over the water. Later on, six of us rode in the Pooles' van to a road south of Danby, parking the vehicles at the entrance to the trail leading to Baker Peak. Ray again was our guide, directing us to an unmarked lookout which afforded a spectacular view in nearly every direction. (We did not climb Baker Peak.)

None of those still around by early afternoon wanted to leave, knowing that another weekend such as this was not likely until next summer, if then.

MOUNT MOOSALAMOO

by Rob Carey

October 2, 1982

Driving to this hike pointed out the importance of staying with the leader, even before the hiking starts. One car took a different route to the start of the hike, without telling the leader. This resulted in the leader driving to Mt. Moosalamoo Campground to look for the other car. Finally both cars were at the parking lot for Silver Lake and Mt. Moosalamoo, across from Branbury Beach. We all got together near the Falls of Lana. Then we were ready for the real climbing.

At the first, and for some only, lunch stop at Rattlesnake Ledges, we realized that fall had arrived. It was cool, bordering on cold! There were good views from there, especially to the south, including Silver Lake. We continued on toward the summit, and found a good view to the east just before the top. By that time the sun had come out, warming us up and improving the view.

On our way back, we detoured to Silver Lake. Here we met several others, hikers and fishermen, but not swimmers. For the return to the cars we took the short, steep route by following the pipeline, and all eight returned safely.

KILLINGTON SECTION'S MARVELOUS ALL-GIRL CANOE EXCURSION

by Roma Pulling

October 9, 1982

Robert Burns said "the best-laid schemes....gang aft a-gley," and ours started going that-away two days earlier when our leader, Steve Pulling, came home with all the symptoms in an Alka-Seltzer commercial: fever, chills and that ache-all-over feeling. He took two Extra-Strength Tylenol, or something, and went to bed but two days later was still in no condition to go canoeing in the rain.

And it did rain, but not soon enough. A pre-investigation showed that the water in Tinmouth Channel, our hoped-for destination, was too low to chance launching our canoes there. We headed for Chittenden Reservoir instead, and Jean and Charlie Davies, who are good enough to let us use their canoes, met us there.

This was the first outing I remember where all the participants were women. The one fellow who registered failed to show up, but all seven of the girls put in an appearance: Sue Tumlin, Johnna Jackson, Kim Faulkner, Carol Chapman, Peppin and Ilse Vergi and myself. Our plan was to circle the reservoir, but for some reason Kim and Peppin headed for the boat landing in more of a semi-circle. Were you tired, girls, or just wet? By that time we had made a stop on the island and explored it and beached our canoes near Lefferts Pond, walked around and had our lunch.

As we were out of the water earlier than expected, several of us walked over the dam and went for a short distance on the opposite side of the reservoir, admiring the cottages, which were mostly closed for the winter. In spite of our somewhat dampened condition, it was declared a good day as we hurried home to dry out.

WORK PARTY

by Mark Krebs
October 16, 1982

This party consisted of Al Pulling, Joe Dicton Sr., Joe Dicton Jr., and myself. We drove up to Gov. Clement Shelter, and noticed that one of the three posts that holds up the roof in the front of the shelter was gone. We had to cut down a small tree for the new post and used a smaller limb as a lever to raise the roof while putting the new support post in place. I thought I had forgotten the nails, so we managed to pull a few out of the roof to nail the post into place. However, I did find them in my Scout after we finished. After that repair we packed up and worked on removing several blowdowns on the way to Tamarack Shelter. The weather was cool and drizzling and turned to snow as we approached Tamarack Shelter. When we arrived at the shelter area there was about an inch of snow on the ground.

We all gazed at the new ski trails put in by the Sherburne Corp. in the vicinity of the shelter. Not a pleasant sight, but what can you expect nowadays?

We ate our lunch at the shelter, then packed up and headed back down to our car. On the trip down we met three backpackers on their way to Cooper Lodge. Good to see people using the trail as it was intended to be used!

MYSTERY HIKE

by W. Churchill Scott
October 23, 1982

This mystery hike was a mystery even to the leader for about 15 years ago the route was easy (as I remembered), but they say time dims all memories.

Well, anyway, on a beautiful fall day more than 25 of us drove to the Silver Bridge in Mt. Tabor, picking up Barbara Tinney on the way. A number of handicapped persons from area group homes also went with us.

We all started up the original road to the Town of Griffith. Soon it became apparent that due to high water and erosion the route was too difficult for many.

Thanks to Barbara's suggestion, a number of hikers decided to return and hike an old road north of the Silver Bridge. This was an easy walk, slabbing up the grade and coming out near the Big Branch Picnic Area.

The rest of us went upstream, crossing the stream a number of times, struggling all the time. At every crossing were remains of the cement bridges spanning the river before the 1927 flood.

Time ran out so we built a fire, had a bite to eat, and retraced our steps, but not before Sue tried to go swimming.

Upon our return the other group told all about the enjoyable trip they had on a road that this writer never knew existed.

The next time a hike listed as easy will truly be an easy one even if it means going over it alone beforehand. Thanks to everyone who helped to make this hike a success.

HALLOWEEN HIKE -- DEVIL'S DEN

by Rob and Carolyn Badger
October 31, 1982

Having spent the entire week bushwacking, I was tired of having branches in my face so had an alternate plan for hiking an old road from Weston to the Devil's Den. This idea was agreeable to hikers Roma Pulling, Rob Carey, Sue Smyser, Winnie and Ted Shambo, Jerry Meiskey and Jean Lloyd. We left two cars at Devil's Den and drove around to Weston to the end of Trout Club Road. From here we began our hike.

Several farms and a small mill were once located along this road; a school house was not far away. Largely abandoned by the early part of this century, as sheep farmers moved west to flatter, more tillable land, the area is now mature hardwood forest. One old farmhouse not far from here had been bought by my grandfather in 1910 to be used as a hunting camp. During the late 1920s and early 1930s the government purchased all of the land in this area for the Green Mountain National Forest.

A good walk on moderate terrain, we found ourselves too soon on Forest Road 10, and not at the Devil's Den. Winnie and Ted had noticed what looked like an old road branching off to the north about a mile back, so we retraced our steps and found the road we sought. This road was quite overgrown so we got our promised bushwacking, perhaps two miles worth, coming out at the Devil's Den.

In pairs of two we climbed into the Den, a small cave that leads back to a stream which is the origin of Utley Brook. The rock is dolomite (magnesium carbonate), a frequent host for caves, with quartz veins and crystals which have been the pursuit of many mineral collectors.

Next we climbed down the steep west bank of Forest Route 10 to an overhanging glacial cirque known as the Devil's Horsesheds. I will not recount the ghastly story that took place at this site 191 years ago on Halloween night that led to the naming of the mysterious cave and precipitous rock cliffs after its onetime-rumored occupant, the Devil.

VALIQUETTE MEMORIAL HIKE--EAST MOUNTAIN

by Ray Catozzi
November 7, 1982

A pleasant fall day, and once again a large crowd turned out for this annual easy, but enjoyable outing. And once again the leader lost the route (temporarily). Joe Valiquette himself did it last year -- I did it this year. But, of of course, the roads we are supposed to follow on the east side of East Mountain, as we approach the ridge line south of the peak, are faint and hard to follow.

Our party had stretched out in a long line half way up and, because we were out of sight from each other, three different routes were eventually used that day by three different segments of our group.

But we all made it to the top where we found the spotting flag still flying in its treetop. Many had brought along snacks, or even lunch, in spite of the fact that it was an afternoon outing, so there was much munching going on with the viewing of Rutland, and talking with fellow hikers.

All in all, a very pleasant hike with a very congenial group.

COVERED DISH SUPPER

by Roma Pulling
November 20, 1982

If there hadn't been any other reason to gather at Tamarack Notch that evening, viewing Mauri Winturri's slides would have been enough. They were stupendous. Mauri may have been an amateur in the sense that he didn't get paid for what he did, but his slides are of professional quality. He had the skill of an artist, the ability to recognize the most picturesque subjects and to position his camera and tripod at the right angle to portray the subject at its best. When Mauri willed his slide collection to the GMC, we acquired a valuable asset.

I may have relegated the supper to second place, but it was definitely not second rate. The 13 members and four guests who showed up brought a variety of delicious foods topped off by Jim Griffin's popular contribution of ice cream. We even gained a new member -- Nancy Sugarman. Welcome to the gang, Nancy!

With a warm fire started early by Churchill Scott and plenty of wood donated by Al Pulling, there was only one complaint: lack of room. After squeezing between tables all evening and ducking to avoid being doused with cups of hot coffee, one dreamer longed for money enough to build our own place. Long Trail Lodge II??

FIFIELD POND

by John & Emma Hughes
December 5, 1982

It was cloudy when we left Main Street Park and it started raining lightly as we parked our cars on the jeep road to the pond. The sixteen hikers didn't take long to get to the pond. The ground was bare when we had expected to have snow by this date. You could see an old beaver dam and an old boat which had fallen apart by the shore.

On the next part of the hike we ran into a swampy area so we turned around to take a different route. A little later we found out that Steve Pulling, Rob & Carolyn Badger and Harold Rogers had decided to keep on going and were not with us. At this time we didn't think that we would see them for lunch. Just as we were coming to the place for lunch Pinon came running up and we knew that they would soon be with us. Churchill Scott had made some trail markers to show the others which turns we had taken. We had lunch on a hill with a clearing, but the clouds cut the view.

Then we hiked a short distance to Wallingford Pond. You can see only part of the pond because it has different sections hidden by the peninsulas along the shoreline. As we returned to our cars it seemed good finally to see the sun peek through the clouds.

SIX WEEKS AT STRATTON POND

by Winnie Shambo

My stay at Stratton Pond, Sept. 3rd to Oct. 17th, was of too short duration, six weeks plus a few days, and I'm sure my arrangements of time spent away from the pond were quite different from those of other caretakers. My first day off I got as far as Bondville, collected my mail, which was being sent General Delivery, and picked up what few supplies I needed from the small grocery store located across the street from the post office. Then I called Rutland to see how "things" were, called a friend who was able to come for a visit and was back at the pond by mid-afternoon the same day. My next day off and most others were spent in Rutland, catching up on laundry, supplies and much-enjoyed showers. My supervisor, Ray Auger, filled in during the Autumn Outing, which worked out fine, as I didn't feel well that weekend and spent it in Rutland, rather than camping and hiking.

Having been used to taking baths in small amounts of water during the "lean years" of childhood, I found it not a problem to do so at the end of most days, especially so after checking out a length of trail or cutting blow-downs (I only had to do two during my stay). Hair care was not a problem either. I used pond water -- well away from the pond -- and it was cold going and hard to work up a lather, but if one is determined, anything is possible.

My duties were curtailed due to the time of the year. I did not have to clean water bars or ditches which were continually filling in with falling leaves. My assigned trails were: the Stratton Mt. Trail to Webster Shelter, the LT to Story Spring, the LT to Winhall River Bridge, and the Lye Brook Trail to the Wilderness boundary. I made loop hikes out of these assignments with mileage ranging from 10.8 to 12.5 miles. I found I was able to hike these distances in three to four hours, not including stops for lunch, views, or a swim at Bourne Pond. Of course, the only steep portion I had to cover was the last mile up Stratton Mountain to the tower. I did what little maintenance was required along these trails; mostly "brushing" about a half mile of trail to Story Spring. The dedicated work of the two young men, whom I replaced, made my time at the pond so much easier and more enjoyable. I thank them. I cleaned out shelters and privies after each heavy weekend use, and continually checked the tenting area for "bootleg" firepits. Few were found.

The most important aspect of being at Stratton was personal contact with hikers. I feel that, on the whole, I had fantastic people to deal with, whether they were passing through or staying overnight. The first week of my stay, there were eight people who either forgot their money or refused to pay. Of that number, half eventually did send payment. Other hikers more than made up for any unpleasantness by giving more than they needed to, which meant I must have been doing something right or they appreciated the work GMC does to maintain the trails. I never felt people were asking questions "for the sake of asking questions." They really wanted to know about the trail, the area, and my reason for being at Stratton Pond. It was surprising how many knew little or nothing of the Caretaker Program. I never tired of talking with day-hikers, new backpackers, "old hands" and the AT/LT thru' hikers. So many personalities! So many walks of life! The encounters were all special and interesting.

A TRIP TO MOUNT KATAHDIN

by Jake Sherman

August 5-7, 1982

(held over from last issue)

The summer of 1982 was the time I was finally able to fulfill a desire to hike Mt. Katahdin. It involved over two full days of driving through the wilds of Maine to climb one mountain, but there's no question it was worth it.

Via the Maine Turnpike you can get to Katahdin, which is located about 90 miles northwest of Bangor, in about eight to nine hours. This, however, is a fairly dull ride, and my companions, Peter Osterhoudt and Dick Adams of Shrewsbury, who have started up a logging operation, preferred the north woods route.

We reached Roaring Brook Camp at the eastern base of Katahdin at 5 p.m. on Aug. 6 and settled into a lean-to for the night. Reservations are essential, by the way, and you must pay in advance by mail for your bunkspace. Before reaching the campground, we spotted charging off into the woods what at first appeared to be a rather clumsy horse but proved to be the first and only moose we would see on the trip.

Next morning at 6:30 under a clear blue sky we were off to the summit. The Helon Taylor Trail brought us in two hours to tree-line at the 3200-foot level. Continuing up a rocky ridge over reddish granite boulders, we reached in another hour and a half the top of Pamola Peak, the mountain's easternmost point.

From this summit, which according to legend was the abode of the Penobscot Indian god Pamola, the view is exceptional. To the north stretch the mountains of Baxter State Park while to the south is a seemingly endless expanse of forest and lakes. What takes the breath away, however, is the mighty rock wall to the west. This face, about a mile distant, makes a sheer plunge of about 2,000 feet to the floor of South Basin. This wall is the eastern side of Baxter Peak, to get to which it is necessary to traverse the famous Knife Edge. No wonder legend had it that Pamola was jealous of his home!

Being a bit afraid of heights, it was with some anxiety that I ventured out onto the Knife Edge. This narrow, up-and-down trail is 1500 feet above South Basin on one side and the valley of the Penobscot West Branch on the other. Good footing is the key, and as long as good weather prevails there should be no problem. Trail signs sternly warn hikers not to attempt the trail in bad weather.

Gray skies, breezes, and some rain did in fact sweep in as we approached the summit. Here, congregated about the sign marking the northern end of the AT, were dozens of hikers, lunching, snapping photos, or donning raingear. From this vantage point, the Knife Edge appeared a succession of jagged teeth, while to the west was the gently sloping "Tableland," across which Thoreau came in 1847 and AT hikers, on their last mile, do today.

It was down the Cathedral Trail, which drops 2300 feet in 1.7 miles, that we made our descent, often inching on our backsides over rain-slicked boulders. It was distressing to find at this hour of the afternoon a lot of young people, clad only in sneakers and light clothing, heading up to the top through the rain, obviously unaware of the steep going ahead. No wonder accidents happen!

At Chimney Pond, which is set in the heart of South Basin, we stopped awhile to appreciate the semi-circular mountain before us, then returned to Roaring Brook Camp.

We would like to thank everybody for the shower and gift. Both of us were very surprised that it turned out to be a shower for the two of us. After all, who would expect Carol Chapman to fib about a "Smoke & Blazes" collating session.

We are planning a spending spree at EMS with the gift certificate. We'll check to see if they have any "Jesus' boots."

Carolyn Badger's carrot cake was delicious. Those cookie feet hiking together were cute.

Thanks for a great party.

VOLUME 36, NUMBER 1

KILLINGTON SECTION, GREEN MOUNTAIN CLUB

JAN.-MAR., 1983

FROM THE PRESIDENT: THE STATE OF THE SECTION

As we near the vernal equinox and the reawakening of mother earth in these northern parts, it is a perfect time to look back on the past year, to reflect on our accomplishments, our problems and goals, and to consider our approach in the future.

All in all, 1982 was a good year for our Section. Not a vintage year, but a good one. There was an increase in scheduled outings, the activity designed to carry out our club's purpose -- to make the mountains and the outdoors play a larger part in the lives of the people. In many months outings were scheduled every weekend, and even though the average attendance dropped a little per outing, the overall attendance was up.

Many new mountains were climbed and new locations visited. Canoe and bicycle trips are increasing in popularity. We are doing more backpacking -- mostly on end-to-end quests on the Long Trail. A bird watch outing was a first last year. All this is to the good, and to the credit of those many members who work to keep the schedule so varied.

Our shelters have been getting our attention where needed most and most of our assigned 21 miles of the Long Trail is in good hiking condition. Many member and non-member hours were spent last year in these endeavors, for which we are all grateful.

Our outings, and our "innings," as I like to call our indoor activities, have been getting good timely displays in the Rutland Herald. We know that many folks, especially non-members (new people) look forward to seeing these notices, and getting people out is the name of the game.

Our financial picture, which is detailed elsewhere in this issue and will be presented at the annual meeting, is not the rosiest, but neither does it present real thorns. We would be just about breaking even between our normal income and expenses, but the presence of the two Kirk Funds for Trails & Shelters maintenance takes the pressure off an area where we have been known to spend several hundred dollars in a year. Fortunately, the last two Trails & Shelters chairmen were men who hated to spend a nickel when they could use scrap and make-do.

Therefore, at a time when we have a special fund to amply take care of these costly needs, we have ended up spending mere pennies. Shelter insurance is an item that is now included in Kirk Fund disbursements, and because of that, and because maintenance costs now are separate from our normal section expenses, our unrestricted cash balance is now on a healthy upswing.

In conclusion I wish to extend my thanks to all the directors for the various jobs they are doing so well, and for all those others who have worked so hard at their assigned tasks. Many have contributed their time over the years, and for this we are grateful. It has all gone towards making a friendly and successful year for the Killington

Section in 1982.

May we all continue on this course for 1983, changing and improving our image and impact on the outdoor and hiking community.

DIRECTORS' MEETING

by W. Churchill Scott
March 2, 1983

Present at a Board of Directors meeting at the Pulling home at the beginning of March were Rob Badger, Rob Carey, Ray, Steve, Winnie, Mark, Roma and myself. Guests were Carolyn Badger and Sue Carey.

Outings Chairman Roma Pulling reported members have responded well to her request for more hike leaders which in turn allows more outings to be scheduled.

Landowners in our Section were recently polled about continuing on the Smoke & Blazes mailing list. We have felt that this helps with public relations and are pleased to report that 21 out of 27 said "yes" and a number added favorable comments.

The new Killington Section "End-to-End" certificate was on display and will be available at the annual meeting, March 26, for those who have earned it.

A chain saw purchase was turned down. The stove has been removed from Minerva Hinchey Shelter again and the possibility of an open shelter was discussed. Mark Krebs reported on Trails & Shelters. Pico and Tamarack Shelters are in good condition, while Cooper has some skier trash. The main club has recommended that the Wade property building be removed. A number of offers to remove it for lumber have been made but cleanup is questioned.

The Kirk Fund was discussed. A caretaker at Cooper was suggested at a minimum cost of $300. Rob Carey is to contact the main club office for information and possible financial help.

Pres. Catozzi offered a number of possible by-law changes but no action was taken. A membership drive brochure, library informational meeting, and slide collection were discussed. Members should be reminded of $1.00 rebate for signing up new members.

The tarpaper building astride the trail relocation near Gov. Clement Shelter is to be removed and the Pullings will explore this later.

It is with regret that we learned that John Lepinski, a director, is resigning. Also director and Trails & Shelters chairman Mark Krebs has an employment offer out of state and we are sorry that he too will leave us soon. We will miss both of these individuals and appreciate the help they have given us. Olga Laird was elected by the directors to fulfill the remaining two years of John Lepinski's term.

Winnie Shambo was appointed to head the nominating committee. At the Annual Meeting positions for three directors need to be filled and Olga's election approved.

IN QUEST OF LIEUTENANT SMALL: A CLIMB OF SALT ASH MOUNTAIN

by Jim Frink
December 9, 1982

I just had an interesting experience that I thought might be of interest to the Killington Section.

Mr. Sanborn Partridge has a copy of a letter written by Lieutenant John Small to General (Lord) Jeffrey Amherst in 1790 regarding his journey with troops from Fort #4 on the Connecticut River in New Hampshire to a point about several miles short of the Great Falls of the Otter -- what we know as Sutherland Falls, the falls behind the marble company in Proctor. In this letter he is not too explicit about his path through the mountains on this journey and Sandy remarked to me that he would like to climb Salt Ash Mountain and search out the possible routes through the mountains and take pictures from the summit. I said I'd like to go with him, so we did it on Tuesday, Dec. 9 -- a beautiful sunny day.

We drove to the Pierce Country Store in North Shrewsbury and discussed what route we ought to follow to the summit. (Neither of us had been on this mountain before.) With the knowledge of Mr. Pierce we plotted a route up to the abandoned Sugar Bush Venture, and then bush-whacked to the summit.

If your car is in front of Pierce's Store and facing toward the north (past the gas tank), take the first left turn, follow the road past the Herb Farm - down the hill to the bridge where a sign says "Road Closed."

We parked on the road at the short branch which goes up to the abandoned and torn down buildings of the Sugar Bush Venture.

We could see the summit so we bush-whacked straight up through some pretty rough territory. We passed through many long lengths of sap tubing which had been left on the trees. The summit is 3200 or 3600 feet (I can't remember which), and the top is so covered with spruce and balsam that no decent photograph of the surrounding country can be made. We traveled all around the summit looking for view points but found none good enough to the north where the passes lay - one of which the lieutenant had taken his troops through.

Sandy did not want to give up so he climbed a tall spruce tree on the north side and took several pictures, all of which were too much obscured by the branches of other trees.

On the way down, while we were still close to the top, we found some fine viewpoints to the north and Sandy got the pictures he wanted.

He brought along two fine special compasses, one for each of us, and two very accurate altimeters, measuring every foot of our climb.

On the way down we found the remains of a faint trail which we followed until it petered out. Then we got to the sap tubing once again and came out on a road (a lot higher than the one on which we had parked the car). We figured that the road would take us to the car eventually if we went to the right, but decided that if we went to the left, the distance might be shorter. We came out on the road we had come in on, about 200 yards from the car!

It was a tough climb for me since I had not done any climbing for a long time, and I developed some very painful leg cramps on the way home, and again after I got home, but a hot bath and rest soon cured me.

Maybe some of your young ambitious climbers might want to try it!

MOONLIGHT OVER MINERVA

by Ray Catozzi

December 30, 1982

The weather bode well for this next to last night of 1982, with a 50-50 chance that we would see a nearly full moon on our annual holiday trip to either Tucker-Johnson Shelter or Minerva Hinchey Shelter. This year Minerva's camp was our choice, and 17 of the faithful walked in the short half mile from the parking lot above Spring Lake Ranch.

Your leader went in early, alone, in the daylight hours of mid-afternoon, to clean camp, gather firewood, and to build fires, one in the outside fireplace and one in the boot-leg stove inside. The Killington Section has opted to remove all stoves from their camps, and after Steve Pulling removed what we all thought was the old, worn-out regular stove from the camp last fall he discovered, on closer examination, that he had removed a newer replica of the old one. Someone didn't like this idea of no stove, so they brought in a second one, made from a 55-gallon drum. A lot of good work went into this second boot-leg stove, but it nevertheless had to come out....after we used it for that night, of course.

Clouds moved in during the darkening evening, but a slight breeze kept clearing the sky. I was fortunate enough to be tending to the outside fire when the moon popped up over the hill to the northeast of camp. A wonderful, never-ending thrill.....

As the darkness deepened and the time approached when the gang would be arriving, I stoked up the outside fire and put lighted candles in the window to make a warmer welcome. I know I hate to approach a dark, cold and empty shelter on the trail at night.

It wasn't long after their arrival before they all settled down, either around the outside campfire, or around the table and on the bunks inside. A party atmosphere soon prevailed as cheese, crackers, cookies, cakes, dips, candy, breads, and home-made and store-bought wine were spread over the entire camp table and on the large bunk platform.

Sue Carey had brought copies of Christmas carols and winter songs, and while many were still smorgasbording a few girls started singing. Others continued to join in as they paused between snacks, or as soon as they got their courage up. The fact that it was five days past Christmas didn't seem to dampen their enthusiasm one bit.

All that is, except Steve Pulling and Rob Badger. I don't know which it was, their dislike of singing Christmas carols after Christmas, or the fact that neither one of them can carry a single note (my guess), but the two of them disappeared from the area, not coming back to the shelter until long after the festivities were over and many had left for home. It was revealed that they had hiked in the full moonlight north to Spring Lake Clearing and back, about a 1 3/4 mile walk. Can't really blame the lads, though, with mild weather and a bright moon. I envied them, in a way...

But even after they returned, the remaining six or eight of us stood outside the camp in the moonlight, and talked, and talked, and talked. Like an hour, it seemed. It was so pleasant and peaceful, with congenial folks, we all hated to go home. All good things must come to an end, they say, and so they did, as we slowly walked back down to our cars, and then home.

....AND THE EXTRACURRICULAR OVERNIGHT TRIP

by Sue Thomas

After the more intelligent club members had finished their hot chocolate and gone home to their nice warm beds, six of us, Rob & Sue Carey, Rob & Carolyn Badger, Piñon and I settled in to spend the night. We opted not to use the bootleg stove due to the smoke, so we retreated to our sleeping bags fairly early.

Room service arrived early the next morning (Steve & Becky Pulling with donuts and coffee!) and found us still in our bags (shame, shame) but we redeemed ourselves by hiking out via the Long Trail instead of the road, after first enjoying the donuts and dismantling the stove.

On the way out Rob Badger spotted an ermine, all white except for the end of his tail, so he stood out with no snow on the ground. He seemed as interested in watching us as we were in watching him, so we observed each other for quite a while, (and I hope he wrote up a more interesting report than this on the incident!). All in all, it was well worth the colder moments.

PATCH HOLLOW

by Harold Rogers
January 9, 1983

As usual it was a good hike after we got organized. I called Roma on Saturday, the day before the hike, for the coffee pot but she said she didn't have it. I thought whoever had it would probably bring it with him on the hike. No such luck. We decided we needed one so I took Roma home and she donated a cooking pot to heat water.

In spite of clear and warm weather, we only had thirteen hikers. After our late start, we left the cars above Spring Lake Ranch near the barns and the road that goes to Spring Lake. We had a slow, enjoyable walk to Patch Hollow.

While the group was looking over the sights of an ice-covered swamp in the woods, Churchill and Virginia started collecting wood for a fire. I looked for water, but couldn't find any so we decided so we decided to backtrack down the road about one half mile to a small open stream. We heated a small amount of dirty water and had hot drinks with our lunch. We ate by an old log road on the side of a hill in open hard woods with a small frozen stream down below us.

The ground was bare in Rutland but snow-covered where we had lunch. The weather was crisply cold but pleasant with no wind.

After lunch seven of the group went back to the cars, while the others returned to Patch Hollow and headed west up an old steep log road for about a quarter of a mile. We then bushwhacked north until we came to a logging operation and followed log roads back to the Long Trail. We guessed we had walked about five miles on this part of the hike. The others were still at the cars, having taken some short side hikes and watched the sheep and pigs for a while.

It was a short hike but an enjoyable one.

FREEDLEY QUARRY, DORSET

by Rob and Carolyn Badger
January 15, 1983

Repeated by request after last year's successful skating party, we again had a great day skating at Freedley. The original outing had been scheduled for December, but warm weather resulted in thin ice, so we rescheduled and am glad we did. Ten days before our trip I visited the quarry, driving in on the still bare ground, and found quite a few rocks on the ice from kids throwing them on to "test the ice." I left a sign requesting that no objects be thrown on to the ice since some of us skate on it, but upon returning for our party, we not only found more rocks, but also my sign on the ice. But no problem, as there is a back room to the quarry that is not accessible except across another section of ice, and this was smooth and clear.

We placed a lantern in the center of the ice and skated around, dodging a few ice stalagmites. Without the lantern, the room is almost totally black, but with the weak light emanating from a Coleman, an eerie light is reflected around the room and through the ice that enhances the atmosphere considerably. We had a great time that hopefully will encourage the three newcomers who joined us to come with us again. Skaters were Sue Tumlin, Richard Van Marten, Anne Kohler with her daughter Karin, Sue Thomas, Nancy Sugarman, Sue Carey, Carol Chapman, Dave Hadley and Rob and Carolyn Badger. Roma Pulling built the fire with help from late arrivals John and Emma Hughes.

After lunch, we skated a bit longer, then headed out from the quarry to find the winter's first major snowstorm in progress.

PINE HILL PARK: RUTLAND TO PROCTOR

by Rob Carey
January 22, 1983

This trip was planned as a snowshoe hike exclusively. Since we weren't going to follow snowmobile trails or old roads it wasn't planned for walkers or skiers. However there wasn't enough snow for snowshoes, so all 10 of us walked.

We followed the road up to Rocky Pond. As we crossed the ice of Muddy Pond there were ominous cracking sounds and wet spots, but no one fell through. Then we followed a compass heading of 320° Magnetic.

Just before reaching the ridgeline we stopped for lunch. There wasn't any water or much snow to melt, but we found some ice and melted that. After lunch we came onto an old road and followed that down to Proctor, where cars awaited to return us to Rutland and coffee at the Careys.

NORTHAM TO ROUND TOP

by Steve Pulling
February 6, 1983

This trip was a second attempt by the Killington Section to climb Round Top Mountain in less than a year. The first attempt, led by Harold Rogers, was "mysteriously" rained out while the group was eating lunch. I don't think anyone on that hike will admit he knew where the rain came from!!

The morning of the second attempt saw no rain, but it was a cold and crisp day. To speed things up a bit, ten people packed into the back of a pickup truck and experienced a cramped, bumpy drive up the Great Roaring Brook Road to the intersection of the Saltash Road, where shouts of joy were heard as all unplied out of the truck to stretch and rub their sore rear ends. Not so for the twofortunates who were up in the front, right, Steve and Anna!

The hike started out to be uneventful as we walked up an old logging road among beautiful large spruce trees and plentiful animal tracks. Then we came to the treacherous ice-covered river crossing. After the leader made the maiden crossing and declared it semi-safe, everyone else made the slippery crossing, one at a time. Luckily no casualties were suffered and we gave ourselves a cheer.

As we progressed up the logging road we surprisingly came upon a little village of ski chalets and condos, not on any map, mind you! After walking through this village we found the ski trail and hiked to the summit.

After lunch and some great views to the north of Killington Peak and the Route 100 valley, we returned to Northam in the reverse fashion of that just described.

HALF MOON POND STATE PARK

by Carolyn and Rob Badger
February 12, 1983

At Half Moon Pond we were blessed with one of the few weekends of this winter that had really good snow conditions. The sun was shining and all were ready to enjoy some of the season's best. An advantage of Half Moon State Park is that it has something for everyone at this time of year. Some skied, some snowshoed, and others hiked. (And, I suppose, if there had been no snow, we would have had the entire pond to skate on). The unplowed road around the park is fun for all levels of skiing ability and great for snowshoes. One long downhill is a favorite of many, especially since it has a long runway at the end if out of control. We climbed this several times to make another run.

After playing on the roads and pond, we ate lunch at a lean-to site complete with a dry picnic table and warm fire thanks to Jim Griffin whom we were glad to welcome back after his recent heart attack. Joining us also were Roma Pulling, Olga Laird, Anna Nyiri, Rob and Sue Carey, Carol Chapman, Nancy Sugarman, George Reynolds and Sue Thomas.

Afterwards, the adventuresome went on a trek to High Pond. It was a bit more technical, but well worth the climb.

WINTER WEEKEND AT MERCK FOREST

by Ann Reynolds
February 26-27, 1983

"It beats staying home and mopping the kitchen floor," declared Roma Pulling, as the group mushed in (or slid in) to Spruce Shelter on a cold, blustery Saturday morning.

By afternoon the wind had abated, the sun was shining brightly, and a weekend at Merck Forest and Farmland Center in Rupert beat not only mopping the floor, but most anything else one could think of.

Veterans of former winter weekends, including three at Merck Forest, declared this to be the best of all, with the largest participation by far. The stalwart crew included Roma and her son, Steve, Carol Chapman, Sue Thomas, Ray Catozzi, Rob and Sue Carey, Rob and Caroline Badger and George and Ann Reynolds, plus Churchill Scott, who came for Saturday daytime only. And there was also our mascot, the Badgers' dog, Piñon, who carried her own food supply in miniature saddlebags.

The weather was not conducive to either skiing or snowshoeing, as the snow had melted, then frozen over, making the going somewhat rough in spots. The Careys, however, were on skis most of the time -- that is, when they weren't sliding downhill on them. Everyone else relied on hiking, and hike we did -- at different times, in different combinations of people, and on many different trails of the miles that Merck has to offer.

Although we met several groups, mostly skiers, on our way to the shelter, we saw very few of these people later, because the forest and shelters are so spread out there is little chance of meeting anyone. We were glad, however, to be occupying a cozy shelter with a glass front, rather than one of the open lean-tos, where we saw bright orange tarps hung across the front as windbreaks.

Shortly after our noontime arrival at the shelter, we had a good fire going in the stove, and everyone had more or less staked out their territory" for sleeping and stowing gear. With seven bunks for 11 people, there was a bit of jockeying for position. Roma and Carol quickly claimed the two upper bunks, knowing that heat rises. Rob and Sue, the newlyweds, shared one of the wider bunks, while Steve and the Badgers ended up sleeping on the floor. Several threw logs on the fire during the night, but we all admitted it was COLD in the morning when people began to stir around 7:30. Someone confirmed that it was 12° outside.

A hike to the sugar house occupied most of Saturday afternoon, and on Sunday morning quite a few made the climb to the summit of Mt. Antone. But the best hike of all, some thought, was Saturday night, in full moonlight. What started out as a "little walk" took us to Clark's Clearing and back. On the way we spotted distant lights and tried to guess where they were. Some said Granville, some Whitehall and others Glens Falls. A talk with the caretaker, Beth Tucker, next day confirmed that we were indeed seeing the lights of Glens Falls.

In between hikes, several brave souls tried out George's toboggan on the slope in front of the shelter.

One of the best parts of any outing, of course, is the EATING, and club members once again proved that individual tastes vary greatly. When we started to prepare supper, out came everything from Roma's can of spaghetti to the Badgers' tempting concoction of rice, mushrooms, etc. -- or was that the Careys'? Ray shared with us a bottle of his homemade elderberry wine, vintage 1979 (a very good year, Ray), and the Badgers provided popcorn before we turned in.

On Sunday morning, which dawned very bright and clear, everyone packed up after eating, then took off in various directions, as mentioned before, for one final hike. By noon, we were all headed back to our cars and our scattered destinations.

All agreed we should make reservations at once for next year, and hope that our positive experience will encourage even more people to come out another year -- though we might have to make more room on the floor!

SIX WEEKS AT STRATTON POND

...I also enjoyed the time spent alone, for then I could really listen to nature. Even the rainstorms were exciting! I listened to the rain pounding on the tent while the wind, like a bellows, moved the tent walls in and out, sometimes with great force. When the wind abated I listened to the slap of the water against the shore. I had one very spectacular thunder and lightning storm! When there wasn't rain -- when the night was still -- I'd listen to the spring as the water flowed from the pipe or I'd hear the Barred Owls calling to one another or hear other creatures as they walked through the forest near the tent.

Unfortunately, from early morning to late afternoon, I could also hear heavy equipment and chain-saws of the two logging operations in the area.

Known and sighted animal life in the Stratton Pond area were: a magnificent moose (who appeared the evening of Labor Day and was sighted at various locales throughout September and October); two baby coons; two pairs of beaver who lived in the pond; numerous chipmunks, red squirrels and chickadees, a hermit thrush, woodpeckers, one grouse, kingfishers, hummingbirds, great blue herons (along Deerfield Brook), flocks of geese taking a rest on the pond from their flight south for the winter, and one male loon whose cry was exceptionally touching, especially when combined with one of Stratton's beautiful sunsets. And although I never saw him or her, there were bear tracks about 20 feet from my tent. One hiker from Bourne Pond reported seeing a snowshoe rabbit being chased by what he believes was a fisher.

I hope I represented the GMC and Killington Section well while at Stratton Pond. This was my first experience at such an endeavor and I thoroughly enjoyed my stay.

Morning temperatures ranged from 42 to 58 degrees. Toward the end of my stay, they were dropping down into the low 30's. Pretty chilly and I sure could have used some handwarmers (and feet warmers!). To cap this adventure, my last weekend was cold, wet and blowy. During the night of Oct. 16, the rain turned to snow and by morning we had a good covering, making it difficult to dismantle the tent. My last action, before packing out, was to walk to the west end of the pond for a final view of Stratton Mountain swathed in snow and clouds.

A person can become very possessive after spending so much time at one place and I'm no different. I refer to Stratton as my pond. It's such a lovely area and I hope to return as Fall Caretaker again in 1983, God willing.

A MORE FITTING TRIBUTE TO MAURI

Many of you out there in Killington Section land knew Mauri Wintturi quite well; some of you not so well, and some are wondering just whom I'm talking about. From Fitchburg, Mass., where he worked, Mauri came to Vermont nearly every week-end for years on end, even spending much of his vacation time up here in Vermont, his adopted state. After his heart attack, he restricted himself to just the good weather, staying home during most of the bad winter weather. But his heart was here, as always, even if his body wasn't.

Mauri has been gone up in the greener hills of heaven for a year now but he is not forgotten, not by a Long Trail mile he isn't. Many a Killington Section outing saw his smiling face and his paw wrapped around a can of cool liquid lunch. I'm sure that members of the Worcester, Pioneer Valley and the Ottauquechee Sections saw him often also. Mauri, believe it or not, was a member of four sections, the GMC itself, as a member-at-large, as well as belonging to the Appalachian Mountain Club.

It was at Mauri's suggestion that our former Sunnyside Shelter was renamed in honor of long-time GMC secretary Minerva Hinchey. This shelter was one of Mauri's favorites. Also a favorite of his was the Gulf Shelter on the Appalachian Trail north of Woodstock. That was in his last year or two when he couldn't hike very far, and the Gulf Shelter was within sight of his parked Volkswagen.

As Mauri more or less adopted the Gulf Shelter as his own, a movement is now afoot to have this Gulf Shelter renamed in his honor. In a letter from a member of the Pioneer Valley Section to Preston Bristow of the Ottauquechee Section, which Preston passed on to me recently, this suggestion came forth. Preston answered her letter by saying that since Mauri was a member of four sections, we all should be consulted about this renaming. Many folks in the Green Mountain Club have voiced this idea and now it seems that it will come to pass.

At a recent Killington Section board meeting this idea met with favorable reaction. I shall also bring it up at our annual meeting. This is a good idea, this renaming in honor of Mauri, one that should be done expeditiously by whoever is empowered to carry it out.

But what this story is really about is that Mauri was more to us in the Green Mountain Club than just placing his name on a wooden structure in the forest. Much has been written about him since his death, and much of that was because he became such a pleasant surprise to so many after he was gone, leaving a tremendous and completely unique legacy for the club to enjoy.

Oh, he was irascible to many who came in contact with him; an irritant at the annual meeting and board meetings. He seemed to be the devil's advocate to many. But Mauri really had a heart of gold, would do most anything for anybody (well, almost). His lack of tact in dealing with people was really just that he couldn't or wouldn't find the words to hide the painful truth of a matter, as he saw it.

And because Mauri meant more to all of us who knew and liked him, more should be done. As Preston Bristow said in his letter there has been talk of a more fitting memorial other than the naming of a shelter.

One of Mauri's bequests to the club was hundreds of excellent, professional quality slides. I'm sure much has been thought of along these lines; to make several slide shows to be available for GMC publicity, and indelibly stamped with Mauri Wintturi's name.

Another idea that has come to my mind, which must be somewhat kept secret, due to the nature of my idea (not to gain notoriety or dubious publishing rights -- heaven forbid!), involves a request for me to carry out. Some will probably guess what I'm up to, but if they do, I hope they have the good sense to keep it to themselves.

What I am requesting is a good copy of a color print or color slide of Mauri arguing a point at a meeting, or wherever, or one of Mauri drinking his favorite drink, or both. The results of this request I would like to present to the club members and officers at the GMC annual meeting in Northfield this May. The nature of the finished product is what I hope to keep secret.

These are still somewhat inconsequential ideas to be carried out in Mauri's honor. I'm sure others have thought of some, and it is hoped that they will come forth with them. Someone, I can't remember who, suggested that we erect a full size statue of Mauri on the top of Mansfield, holding his permanent can of beer and greeting all the future climbers to reach that summit. Maybe it's not such a bad idea at that.

--Ray Catozzi

MINI END-TO-END CERTIFICATE

For those of us who set our sights on something less ambitious than hiking the whole Long Trail from end to end, an alternate goal could be to hike the 21 miles of trail for which our section is responsible (between Routes 4 and 140). To reward those who accomplish this goal, Winne Shambo has designed a certificate. If you are eligible and would like to receive one of these certificates let Churchill Scott or Ray Catozzi know before the annual meeting on March 26.

HIKING COMPANION WANTED

Wanted one or more hiking companions with car to hike on Long Trail south of Arlington-West Wardsboro Road or north of Middlebury Gap after black fly season. Have two man tent, stove and car which I will share. Interested in day or overnight trips. Hiking speed about 5 to 7 miles per day with full pack. If interested, please contact George Reynolds in the evening at 885-5416 or write to 8 Hillcrest Road, Springfield, Vt. 05156.

ACHIEVER

Why has one of Killington Section's quieter members and not one of our more outspoken types been in the news again? I think that question can be answered in one word--ACHIEVEMENT.

In July, 1981, Anne Mausolff, of Andover, was the subject of a story in the Black River Tribune after completing 600 miles in two months on the Appalachian Trail.

More recently she was honored in the Rutland Herald of December 28, 1982, as the owner of Ski Tours of Vermont. The article describes a typical cross-country trip led by Anne lasting a total of four days with five nights spent in country inns.

Good luck, Anne!

EAST MT. VIA TENNEY BROOK AND THE DUG WAY

by Ray Catozzi
March 6, 1983

If you were looking for an article on skiing or snowshoeing from Bellevue Ave. Ext. to the Post Road, you will have to wait a year or so. The mild winter we've all enjoyed has melted what snow we needed for such a venture, so the scene was shifted to another area close by, but one that your leader knew would be more picturesque.

As it turned out we were walking in crusty snow, and following some other previous hiker's frozen footsteps most of the trip up til lunch time. It was a morning of brilliant sunshine (can't figure my luck on this one) and warming temperatures.

Starting from a point on Rt. 4 east of Rutland, and opposite Santa Land, up a road leading to the so-called Mead Castle, we all enjoyed easy bare road walking. A short side trip brought us in sight of the castle built by Janet and Brad Mead in the late thirties, just before they started the Pico Ski Area, and gave birth to their daughter Andrea Mead (Lawrence), as many of you will remember, became the first American girl skier to win 2 gold medals in Olympic Skiing in 1952.

Continuing along a flat below the castle, through which flows Tenney Brook, we picked up the Dugway Road which wound its way steeply uphill, above a sharp steep cut in the mountain slope. Below, in the cut, Tenney Brook takes a spectacular splashy tumble in the summertime. But even though the valley below was bare and warming, up there winter ice blanketed and muted the falls.

Above the cut, the brook and road leveled off and wandered slowly uphill, in a now southerly direction, on the east side of the ridge. The walking in about 4 inches of snow became very easy and most enjoyable.

At the point where Tenney Brook and its adjoining wood road started bearing south-east, we turned right onto another wood road that soon led to the crest of the ridge, with a limited but nice overlook of the northern half of Rutland. Here we built a fire and had a very enjoyable lunch, sitting on bare logs and rocks in the warming sun.

Soon a few started back, while your leader led the rest further up the road, and up the ridge looking for a certain large boulder he had spotted up on a knob on a lone trip last November. We never found it so we returned and soon caught up with the first bunch. Along the way out we picked hobble-bush to force the bloom at home, a first for a few of the group.

Going on a different road from the flad below the castle, we soon came out on the Town Line Road. Coffee, donuts, and pleasant conversation awaited us at the Pulling's house. A great day with a good group of people.

SUGAR-ON-SNOW PARTY - A DIARY
by Roma Pulling - Coordinator/Hostess

Tues., March 8, 1983 - It rained yesterday and is forecast to rain off and on for the next few days. I got uneasy about gathering snow for our sugar-on-snow party set for Saturday, the 12th, as the ground is bare here. What will several days of rain do to the snow cover even on the mountain? Alfred and I drove to the end of Robinwood, filled three plastic bags with snow and stored them in our freezer. The snow was crusty but still quite deep.

Friday, March 11 - It has rained some every day, but the forecast for tomorrow is for a cold blustery day with snow flurries. Shouldn't be too bad either for getting here for the party or for parking.

Sat., March 12 - What a shock when I got up to see the ground blanketed with snow and heavy snow still falling! Churchill hiked over from Chasanna Drive to deliver the two gallons of syrup. The driving on the road past our house was pretty bad for a while in the morning with a bus and several cars temporarily unable to make the grade. Probably city slickers with summer tires! Janet got here at 11:30 and started boiling syrup. A little past 1 p.m. Rob and Sue arrived to help set up chairs and tables and fold napkins. With all the fresh snow outside, we decided not to use the stuff from the freezer, and the Careys filled the plastic boxes with the new snow.

I was pleased that 17 people (counting ourselves) actually got here. By afternoon driving had improved, but we were disappointed that Carol got stranded in Rutland. Ray was late again but had an excuse this time. He skied up over the track he would have used for the March 6 hike - if we had had the foot of snow a week earlier.

The food was delicious. Lao Vang, a guest of the Martins, had his first sugar-on-snow and seemed to like it. Rob Badger showed us slides of Mt. Katahdin and a few added attractions - an unexpected treat.

Sun., March 13 - In retrospect, I think the party was a success. We really appreciated the help, especially Janet's with the boiling and Rob's entertainment. That added a new dimension to the program. I'm already looking forward to next year's party.

NEW BRIDGE OVER COLD RIVER

During the "Walk-through" those who hiked the section between Governor Clement Shelter and Lower Cold River Road found that to cross the stream it was necessary to get at least one foot wet. Consequently the recommendation for a bridge was made.

Anxious to resolve the problem and not finding any other volunteers for the job, Trails and Shelters Chairman, Steve Pulling, and Al Pulling did the work themselves on Sunday, June 5.

Three cheers for you, Steve and Al! When we cross the bridge we'll think of you and thank you for our dry feet.

GLEN DAM

by Virginia Young
March 20, 1983

On a nice bright Sunday morning about a dozen members of the Killington Section and friends walked up the penstock to Glen Dam. Next we came to one of the early reservoirs used for the city water supply.

Nearby was a larger body of water used as a reserve while the main water supply dam was being cleaned. Finally we came to the present reservoir which was a beautiful sight in a beautiful spot.

A side trip took us up Mendon Brook to the chlorine house and to where we could see the bridge on Meadow Lake Drive.

From here Pres. Raymond Catozzi, having spent many years camping, hiking, picnicking, and fishing in this area, led the group.

Following one of the pipe lines we continued cross country to a lunch spot. From there we passed the town dump and the ball field and soon returned to Chasanna Drive.

Again it was good to see a number of new faces.

KILLINGTON SECTION ANNUAL MEETING

by Ray Catozzi
March 26, 1983

This once a year gathering of the membership was held in the Methodist Church, with one of the largest turnouts we have had in years, 33. All were members with the exception of five guests.

Guests included Preston Bristow of the big "O" section in Woodstock, along with his wife and child, Ann Reynolds of Springfield, who wrote such a nice Rutland Herald article of our winter campout in Merck Forest, and Harry Peet, GMC's executive director from Montpelier. Harry is a member of the Killington Section, but we treat him like a guest. It's no big deal -- he's a member of all the GMC sections!

The usual reports of Treasurer, Churchill Scott, 23 years at the post, our director Rob Carey, and all the other committees were presented. Committee chairmen had been doing great work in their particular areas: Roma Pulling for Outings, Winnie Shambo for Publicity, Carol Chapman for Smoke & Blazes, and Steve Pulling for Mark Krebs on the Trails & Shelter Committee.

Of particular interest was Roma's report of increased overall attendance on our outings, due partly to the larger number of outings scheduled now; one nearly every weekend. We think this also is reflected in our increased membership, which now stands just short of 100. It's been many years since the KS has numbered more than 100.

The KS Slide Collection was mentioned, its whereabouts pinpointed. This collection has had many personal additions by Janet and Jack Martin, the most recent collection caretakers. A committee will be formed in the near future to update and round out the collection, making it suitable for public showing.

Some recent changes in KS directors were announced and confirmed by the membership. According to KS by-laws, vacancies in directors are filled by the remaining directors subject to approval by the membership. John Lepinski's and Mark Kreb's resignations left two openings which were filled by Olga Laird and John Hughes.

Sue Carey is our new Long Trail

News reporter.

Harry Peet brought us up to date on the negotiations between the GMC, the Sherburne Corp., and the National Park Service concerning an easement for a relocated Long Trail section between Gov. Clement Shelter and Cooper Lodge. Preston Bristow also added his comments on the same theme as well as other developments in his job as Park Service Coordinator in the Appalachian Trail Preservation Project.

Three directors were re-elected to 3-year terms, Churchill Scott, Ray Catozzi, and Rob Carey, and during a recess of the regular meeting the directors elected Ray Catozzi President, Rob Badger Vice President, Olga Laird Secretary, Churchill Scott Treasurer, and Rob Carey GMC Director.

During the refreshments which followed the meeting's adjournment, some people renewed acquaintance with each other after a year's absence.

MYSTERY CAVE TRIP

by Rob & Sue Carey
April 9, 1983

We went to Nickwacket (Old Bat) Cave, located on the northwest slope of Chaffee Mountain in Chittenden. Despite no advertising in the newspaper, fifteen people came on the trip including several new people. We hiked about a mile to the cave along an old dirt road. This cave is unusual for a small cave because it has three entrances. Inside we split into 2 groups to make exploring easier. Everyone (including Piñon Badger) went at least partway into the cave. Those who continued on their bellies through a moderately tight crawlway were rewarded by seeing some excellent flowstone (water-deposited limestone). There were several other interesting tight squeezes and hands and knees crawlways. Besides the occasional human and canine visitors there are some real cave dwellers. We saw several bats hanging upside down from the ceiling and daddy-long-legs crawling on the walls.

It was still early after we had explored the cave and eaten lunch so most of us climbed Chaffee Mountain. It was a steep bushwhack to the top and seemed steeper on the way down. From the top there were good views of Killington and Pico Peaks.

If there is continued interest in spelunking in the club perhaps we could schedule a fall trip to one of the larger caves in our area.

WORK PARTY

by Becky Pulling
April 16, 1983

"Here goes!" eleven GMC members exclaimed as they set out on the foot path to Minerva Hinchey Shelter.

Armed with rakes, saws, hammers, and chisels, garbage bags, and shovels, all were intent on cleaning up unwanted debris around the shelter.

It had already been determined that having woodstoves in the shelter carried a danger of fire burning the wooden structure itself. The first decision was to merely remove the stove out of the shelter. Well, folks, three stoves later, it was decided that the best way to stop the mysterious person from putting the stoves there was to dismantle the cinderblock chimney. The chimney had many cracks which made it hazardous. Various calls could be heard by Rob Badger and Steve Pulling, such as, "Cinder block, anyone?" "Going once, going twice." "Look out below...!" "Timber!" "Crash!"

The leaves and dead wood were raked into a pile and burned. A human chain was formed to load up the cinder blocks onto a four-wheel drive truck to be hauled away. Saws could be heard cutting the bigger logs into smaller sizes to be taken to the fire. The doors of the shelter were removed to discourage vandalism.

After all the hustle and bustle was through, someone hollered, "Lunch time, you guys, anyone hungry?" Upon surveying the site, one could conclude that the shelter and its grounds were as close to being "squeaky clean" as dirt and grass could be. All eleven sat down to what I'd say was a well-deserved lunch.

MAURI WINTTURI MEMORIAL HIKE

by Stephen Pulling
April 24, 1983

We all know how much time Mauri spent in the Gulf Shelter - Luce's Lookout area of North Bridgewater, but I think even Mauri would have stayed in his yellow Volkswagen on the day of this hike. However, the cold temperatures, heavy rain, fog, and knee-deep wet snow didn't stop seven brave (?) hikers from trying to wallow up to Luce's Lookout.

Because of the weather, I was very surprised to meet four other people at the fire station ready to hike. Rob and Sue Carey, Winnie Shambo, Anna Nyiri, and I piled into Rob's car and rode to Woodstock where we met Bob Cochran and Janet Farley from the Ottaquechee Section. The ride from Woodstock to the A.T. was the last we saw of any dry clothes.

The short walk to Gulf Shelter wasn't bad although we were all pretty damp. After scaling Cobb Hill we encountered knee-deep wet snow which only devoted hikers would push themselves through. After sloshing down the back side of Cobb Hill we came upon a plowed dirt road which we followed for about 200 yards until the trail turned off to the left. We stopped to make a decision about climbing Luce's Lookout and not seeing any view because of the fog and rain, or returning to Gulf Shelter for lunch. Of course we made the latter choice and returned to the shelter for lunch and fellowship.

So ends a wet, soggy saga. Let's schedule this hike later in the season next year.

NORTH POND

by Roma Pulling
May 7, 1983

From the time I saw North Pond in Chittenden on the topo map, it held a kind of mystique for me, as though North and South ponds were a set and my exploration wasn't complete until I had seen both of them.

I had first seen South Pond twenty years ago. Then on May 7 I was able to satisfy my curiosity when I hiked to North Pond with seven other people. The day was a real rarity in this season of gloom -- a warm, sunny interlude.

On a brief stop at South Pond after climbing the trail from Lefferts Pond, someone asked if we wanted to see a "$150,000 house". This had to be a joke, right? WRONG! They led us to a place just up the hill from the pond that must have been really lovely once but has been abandoned by the owner and trashed by squatters. It was really sad to see such senseless destruction.

North Pond is slightly smaller than South Pond but picturesque and quiet. Ice lingered on one side the day we were there. Our leader, Mick Shortsleeves, and Steve Pulling tried fishing, without success. In spite of its location, seemingly remote from established trails, the usual litter showed that the world had beaten a path to its shore.

After lunch at the pond, we took a different route on the way back which seemed a little easier than the "extremely difficult" approach, although with my terrible sense of direction I wouldn't be able to find either one again. With a little luck, I can join another guided tour to this spot, because it really does warrant repeating.

MOUNT INDEPENDENCE HIKE

by J. E. Griffin
May 15, 1983

Despite the early morning rains, a small group of enthusiastic hikers turned out: Rob and Sue Carey, Sue Thomas, Anna Nyiri, and myself departed from the Fire Station and picked up Ruth Gibbud and her neighbor's son, Steve, in Fair Haven.

We began our hike along the western ledge of Mount Independence and made one or two stops at locations where Indians had quarried the quartzitic and flint-resistant rock for the forming of projectile implements. A lot of chips were observed and young Steve did find one good projectile point.

We continued our hike along the northern ridge and came down to a small bay. Along the way the ladies found many varieties of wild flowers and we also observed a dead cow and one other animal which none of us could identify.

At the northern-most tip of Mt. Independence we looked across the lake to Fort Ticonderoga and then hiked along the eastern perimeter of the mountain looking at some of the historic markers, trails, and encampment foundations.

KILLINGTON SECTION WALKTHROUGH

by Stephen Pulling
May 21, 1983

If I had to sum up the 1983 Killington Section walkthrough in one word, it would be "fantastic". The weatherman predicted rain for the weekend (what else is new?), but he was wrong for once, thank goodness. You people of the Killington Section pulled through and did a great job cleaning up our section for the onslaught of hikers to come.

Most hikers don't appreciate the hard work it takes to maintain a section of trail such as ours. I know you people that made the effort to go out and saw limbs, prune branches, toss brush, tug on heavy logs, and haul garbage from our five shelters are the people who cherish our lovely section of trail. From deep down in my heart I want to thank the 17 people who gave up a little of their time on this one nice weekend to help accomplish this important task.

Here is a list of the people and the section of trail they cleared: George Reynolds and John Daily, Route 140 to Minerva Hinchey; Sue Thomas, Becky and Steve Pulling, Minerva Hinchey to Route 103; Carol Chapman, John and Emma Hughes, lower Cold River Road to Gov. Clement; Al and Roma Pulling, Gov. Clement to Cooper; Rob and Carolyn Badger, Cooper to Route 4; Rob and Sue Carey, Pico Camp to Route 4.

My very special thanks go to brand new members Ira, Irene, and Lorraine Hawley who cleared from Route 103 to the lower Cold River Road earlier in the week. Ira even made a special trip to clean out our neglected garbage can near the Lottery Road.

We also should recognize the Sherburne Corporation for free passes up their chairlift. Roma, Al, Carolyn and Rob Badger rode the chairlift to the summit on Sunday, May 22nd. This saved many hours of hiking time that we used as trail clearing time. It is really nice being the Trails & Shelters Chairman for a super bunch of people. You are the ones who made this walkthrough so successful.

BEST SUPPORTING ROLE

by Jack Crowther

Trivia Question: Who won the academy awards for best supporting roles in 1972?

Answer: Cloris Leachman for "The Last Picture Show" and Joel Gray for "Cabaret".

Question: Who should have won?

Answer: In my opinion, the award for best supporting role in a dramatic production should have gone not to a person but to a tent -- our tent.

On a night in early June 1972, our blue and yellow umbrella tent withstood the storm that flooded Rapid City, South Dakota, the worst flood in the U.S. in over 30 years in terms of lives lost.

Frankly, our intrepid tent didn't keep my wife and me dry. Rain swirled in around the flap like attacking hornets and doused us. But blown and battered by everything mother nature had to offer, our tent held its ground and gave us a measure of protection.

We had been stranded in Custer, S.D., about 30 miles southwest of Rapid City near the Wyoming border. We were headed leisurely back to Vermont after a camping vacation as far west as Colorado when the timing gear on our car broke. Until then, I didn't know such a part existed. And it's not the sort of item stocked by your local mechanic in a place like Custer, which had a population then of around 1600.

My recollection of the place is of a short main street with a few businesses and an Indian who would ride his horse up and down the road listening to a transistor radio.

I considered us lucky to find a mechanic who was able to diagnose the problem. But sending away for a part and having the work done involved a wait of a few days.

We were staying in a place called Flintstones Bedrock City & Campground, inspired, if you could call it that, by the Stone Age characters of Fred Flintstone and family. You might describe it as mock primitive camping. Despite the prehistoric theme, the place had showers, flush toilets, a playground and hookups for trailers. But when the storm broke, there wasn't much civilization between us and the elements. Thunder, lightning, wind, rain battered us in an elemental outrage.

I think we would have been more comfortable in the campground showers, even with the showers turned on. But our car was gone and I think we wanted to stay with our gear and keep it from blowing into the next county.

We survived the night and so did our tent, and I'll always be impressed that it held up under the stresses of the night. Since then, we haven't done much camping -- one night at Half Moon State Park with the kids. We erected the tent once in the back yard and loaned it once to friends.

You might say the old tent made its last tough stand in Custer -- and won.

GMC ANNUAL MEETINGBOARD OF DIRECTORS MEETING

by Rob Carey

May 28, 1983

At least five section members attended part of the annual meeting in Northfield. Members enjoyed the opportunity to purchase books from Mauri Wintturi's collection at very reasonable prices.

The club's financial position is stable. Last year ended with a $132 surplus. The budget for this year is over $112,000.

The Sherburne Corporation negotiations were discussed for about an hour. No action was taken. No one is satisfied with the Park Service agreement that the GMC helped negotiate, but Harry Peet, Jim Wilkison (then GMC president) and the Executive Advisory Council all feel it was the best that could be arrived at. No other organizations volunteered to help with legal costs for an appeal of the Act 250 permit for the ski trail at Tamarack Shelter. The agreement allows eight ski trails 35 feet wide to cross the Long Trail in 1.2 miles. A lift crossing 200 feet wide as well as other development are also permitted. Some members of the Board of Directors incorrectly interpreted the action taken in September as requiring final approval of any agreement by the Board.

A draft of the Long Trail management plan was presented. Input can be made until August 1st. It will be acted on by the GMC Board in September.

Preston Bristow was elected President and Neil Giroux was elected Vice President. An auditor has not yet been hired.

JUL.-SEPT., 1983

MT. ASCUTNEY VIA THE WEATHERSFIELD TRAIL

by Ray Catozzi
June 4, 1983

Six stalwarts showed up on a rainy Saturday morning, June 4th, ready to hear of a cancellation of the day's outing. Your leader was determined to go, however, rain or no rain 'cause he wanted to see the Cascade Falls on this trail.

Off we went, Steve Pulling, Rob and Carolyn Badger with their dog Piñon in the younger group, and Anna Nyiri, Bev Davis and your leader in the older group, hereafter referred to as the junior and the senior groups.

The rain had almost stopped as we started out of the parking area at the trail head, just off Vt. Rte. 131. The junior group soon left the senior one far behind, as they bolted for the top of the mountain. The seniors like to think they enjoyed the climb much more than the juniors, because they went real slow to observe all of Mother Nature's reawakening on the forest slopes. Admit it, kids, you didn't really stop along the way and smell the flowers, did you?

Crystal Cascade on Ascutney Brook was one of the reasons for taking the Weathersfield Trail, and we weren't disappointed. Billed as an 84 foot high waterfall, I conceded it, indeed, was a wonderful sight coming over the lip of a sheer cliff, even if the water free fell only about 50 of those 84 feet. The rest was cascading over rock breakdown to the pool at the bottom. Well worth visiting and photographing, which we did.

Before the senior group was three fourths of the way up, the junior group had reached the top, eaten lunch and were on their hurried way back down. See you next trip, kids!

We three seniors finally found the top of Mt. Ascutney blanketed with clouds, with its small clearing almost completely filled in with TV towers and metal buildings. Beyond the installations should have been views of the Connecticut River Valley to the east and the Green Mountain Range to the west, but nothing could be seen -- a whiteout. Even the tallest TV tower's top disappeared into the soup above.

After a quick lunch and look around, we started back down.

Many, many wildflowers in bloom made the misty day a great success. Starflowers, purple and painted trilliums in abundance, violets, and hobblebush in lush profusion near the top of the mountain were all admired and enjoyed. Bad weather, or good, early June is a pleasant time of the year to be in the woods. It was particularly nice in that there were very few bugs out to bother us on this climb of Mt. Ascutney.

PROCTOR-PITTSFORD BICYCLE TRIP

by Rob & Carolyn Badger
June 5, 1983

Rain in the early morning cleared by our 10 A.M. departure time, but not soon enough to cause potential bikers to make other plans for the day. Who wants to bicycle in the rain? So we were joined by only one other bicyclist, Mary Jane O'Hara, who drove up from Ludlow to be part of our Pedal Power contingent.

Our meeting place was the parking lot of St. Joseph the Provider, which allowed us to start our trip avoiding Rutland City traffic. From St. Joe the Pro, we headed along Clement Ave., crossed Route 4, then had a leisurely ride along West Proctor Road. In Proctor we stopped at the Vermont Marble Exhibit where my connections got us in free.

After a nice respite we left Proctor along North Street taking a route to Pittsford that crosses two covered bridges, Gorham Bridge and Cooley Bridge. From Pittsford we turned left at Keith's Store and down Depot Hill. The covered bridge at the bottom of Depot Hill is closed to vehicular traffic due to structural problems, but the weight of our bicycles did not make a sway as we pedalled through our third covered bridge of the trip.

We passed through Florence and down Creek Road to Hadley Farms where we stopped for lunch. Dining in the back yard, we were joined not only by Dave Hadley, occasional attendee at GMC outings, and his girlfriend Iben Steinsvik, but also by Edgar the lamb and Cita the baby goat.

A long lunch in the sun made us reluctant to leave; it also caused us to stiffen up a bit. But we climbed back on our bicycles, returned to Florence along Creek Road, then took the Florence-Proctor Road. A long uphill along this stretch reminded us that "Vermont ain't flat," but it was also along this uphill that we saw several Baltimore orioles.

From Proctor we had planned to travel Route 3 back to Rutland, but this was the day of the Frank Crowley Memorial Road Race which takes place along Route 3, so we returned via West Proctor Road, the more scenic and less traveled route.

Pedal Power forever!

NATURE HIKE

by Carol Chapman
June 11, 1983

"Would you say the stem is hairy or hairless?"

"Will I get sick from eating all these wood sorrel leaves?"

"It doesn't seem like any plant should be called false something else. It should have a name of its own."

"If this cherry branch gives off cyanide, then why are we smelling it?"

"What would people say if you told them 'This is skunk currant jelly'?"

These were some of the questions raised on our nature hike on Shrewsbury Peak.

The shared knowledge of all the participants and an assortment of field guides helped us in our quest to identify the plants and animals we observed. Several unseen birds were recognized by their songs: the white-throated sparrow, the oven bird ("Teacher, teacher!") and the black-throated blue warbler ("I am lazee!").

Sue Carey, hike co-leader, passed around a hand lens so everyone could examine a variety of insects and a tiny brilliant red spider. Sue has a broad fund of information about insects and other living things which made our hike a learning experience for us all.

Some insects, however, were not so welcome. The black flies, as you know if you hiked this spring, hatched out in swarms. We couldn't decide whether Off, Old Woodsman's Jungle Formula, or Citronella was their favorite. Anna Nyiri with her bug net seemed to be the only one left in peace.

More than 20 flowering plants were identified. Gold thread, sarsaparilla, rose twisted stalk, dwarf ginseng and jacks-in-the-pulpit were a few. At that elevation spring beauties and other flowers usually seen at an earlier date were in bloom.

The hike, listed as an easy one, proved not quite so easy for the six who decided to continue on to the summit. Clusters of painted trillium and views of Killington and Mt. Ascutney made the climb well worth the effort.

The nature hike brought satisfaction to all -- both those who like to inspect things along the way and those who were out for the exercise.

CAMEL'S HUMP BACKPACK

by Rob Carey

June 17-19, 1983

There were six members on this hike. Roma, Al and Steve Pulling, Sue Thomas, and Rob and Sue Carey. Difficult but fun was the universal assessment of this 20 mile section of trail, especially with the heat and blackflies. I also discovered the curative powers of chicken soup.

We got an early start Friday evening and stayed at Birch Glen Camp which we had to ourselves. On Saturday we hiked about eight miles to Montclair Glen Lodge. We shared the shelter with the caretaker, the caretaker's friend, and a strong smell of creosote put on a month earlier by the Annual Meeting work party. After the heat and humidity of the day, the evening thunderstorm promised clearer views on Sunday.

We had ten miles to hike on Sunday including going over Camel's Hump and Robbins Mountain. We had excellent views from the Hump, but didn't linger with a long day ahead.

I didn't feel just right when I woke up, and got sicker as we hiked from Camel's Hump. Roma was similarly affected. I don't know if we drank contaminated water. Fortunately, Thomas' Pharmacy was well stocked. I took two Pepto Bismal tablets at Honey Hollow and started to feel better. We took an hour's rest at Wiley Lodge. The combination of rest and chicken soup from Thomas' Pharmacy really cured me. By Robbins Mountain I could even enjoy the view! From now on, we'll always carry chicken soup!

DEER LEAP

by Rob & Carolyn Badger

June 29, 1983

The second annual (?) Deer Leap hike left from Sherburne Pass on a very pleasant Wednesday evening, after one of those perfect summer days that we all long for and enjoy. In attendance were hikers Winnie & Ted Shambo, Rob & Sue Carey, Sue Thomas, leaders Rob, Carolyn & Piñon Badger, and Kay Story, who drove all the way from Warren just to join us.

Steve Pulling, Churchill Scott and Virginia Young joined us in the parking lot, but only for a visit. Steve was still working, the dedicated traveling salesman always with just one more client to see, and Virginia was bringing Churchill down from the mountain for the evening.

Leaving the parking lot, we headed up the Long Trail, passed the Appalachian Trail junction, and hiked on to the junction with Deer Leap Trail. This trail led us over the south peak of Deer Leap Mountain, around the west side of Big Deer Leap, and finally down to the ledges overlooking Sherburne Pass. Here we had dinner, tried to identify the surrounding ridges, and watched the sun set behind the Adirondacks.

A warm day turned chilly quickly, so as soon as the sun was down, we climbed the steep descent to the pass. Along the way several of us went into the small cave at the base of Deer Leap ledges. Sue Carey, alias Cavewoman, followed the cave through a narrow constriction, emerging from further down the base of the ledges in the woods below the trail.

This is the last trip Carolyn and I (and Piñon) will be leading for the GMC, at least for a few years, as we head off to Virginia. I like mid-week evening trips; a nice way to end a summer day. So the question is, will there be a 3rd annual Deer Leap trip?

WHITE ROCKS SUPPER HIKE

by Churchill Scott

July 6, 1983

On Wednesday, July 6, our annual summer supper outing almost turned into a bust. First of all the threatening weather and possible thundershower held the attendance down to about a dozen.

Next when we arrived at the White Rocks picnic area Winnie and Ted informed us the whole area had been closed that day for the protection of the young falcons being raised again on the cliff area.

However, Winnie and Ted led the group upstream to a series of falls and cascades just a short distance off the Kee-waydin Trail.

Returning to the picnic area we enjoyed a good hot supper over a fire already kindled by our guides.

Next we took a walk up the Cliffside Trail overlooking the White Rocks and tumbled talus slopes. A short distance beyond the overlook our guides again explained the process of raising the falcons and pointed out their homes and even some movements. To tell the truth this writer could not see any, but I will take the others' word for it.

Thanks, Ted and Winnie, from all of us for making this outing so enjoyable and informative.

WORK PARTY

by Rob and Sue Carey
July 9, 1983

On Saturday, July 9, seven Killington Section members gathered for a work party. The work party was originally scheduled for Pico Camp, but we forsook the Pico Camp outhouse for the Bucklin Trail. With tools freshly purchased not more than an hour before, we started at the Wheelerville Road and worked our way up the trail. The trail was cleared and reblazed up to Cooper Lodge. Several people went to the top to visit Churchill. The view from the summit was spectacular with Mt. Washington visible in the distance.

The work party participants included Joe Dicton, Joe Dicton, Jr., John and Emma Hughes, Jake Sherman, and Rob and Sue Carey.

BELMONT AREA

by Krissy Nadler
July 10, 1983

The day couldn't have been better. Twelve enthusiastic hikers under the leadership of Anna Nyiri set out under a clear blue sky with a cool breeze blowing and warm sunshine.

First we went up a shady dirt road. The continuous trees lining it were most welcome as a shield against the blazing sun. About three-fourths of a mile up this road, we came face to face with a herd of curious cattle. There were about 15 of these cows, and most of them came right up to the fence to be petted and fed. It was also here that we discovered that this was the end of the road.

So we all turned around and met back at the Nyiris' summer cottage. Outdoors we relaxed and ate lunch, enjoying the beautiful view of Mendon, Little Killington, Killington, and Shrewsbury Peaks to the north of Star Lake as well as Salt Ash Mountain which can be seen to the northeast.

After a leisurely lunch, all 12 of us started out on a second hike. This time we went in the opposite direction. We walked about a mile on a paved road, then, taking a turn to the left, continued on a dirt road. Someone said we walked about two miles, but I don't think it was that much. After a few feet on the dirt road, it became obvious that a couple of the little ones wanted to turn back. So Jake Sherman, his two young daughters, Deborah, 7, and Rebecca, 4, and Peter Nadler, 4, and I turned back. We spent the remaining time catching toads, frogs, and pollywogs.

All in all, this proved to be an excellent hike. The weather was superb and so were the people. Others who participated were John and Emma Hughes, Shirley Parker, Sue Thomas, Mary Jane O'Hara, and Bernard Donahue.

MOUNT MANSFIELD BACKPACK

by Rob Carey
July 16-17, 1983

Three hikers, Sue Thomas and Rob and Sue Carey, took this hike. This was originally planned as a 20 mile trip leaving on Friday night. We found out that it really would have been a 23 mile trip (there is a misprint in the guide-book) and we were unable to leave until Saturday morning. Accordingly we shortened the trip to twelve miles making it a very relaxing, enjoyable hike.

On Saturday by the time we climbed to the Chin, the morning clouds had dissipated giving us excellent views. With the ranger's binoculars and a little imagination we could see Montreal. We saw Killington easily with just our eyes, but could not see Churchill.

We were disappointed to find the summit station closed having looked forward to ice cream during the climb. After some interesting trail including several ladders on the Forehead, we reached Butler Lodge by supertime. The Careys made shepherd's pie for the main course and Sue Thomas supplied dessert in the form of strawberry shortcake. From the lodge we had good views of the sunset and the lights of Burlington. We enjoyed talking with the caretaker and were her only guests that night.

Sunday's hike was pleasant and uneventful. We passed several beaver dams but did not see any beaver. The backpack ended at the Lake Mansfield Trout Club. We stopped for ice cream at a restaurant with a view of the profile of Mansfield. Afterwards I had time for a nap while Sue and Sue walked the road through Smuggler's Notch for their End-to-End.

There were two other groups of section members on the Trail this weekend. George Reynolds and Roma and Al Pulling finished a week of hiking. Also, Rob and Carolyn Badger took a long weekend hike.

CHIPMAN POND

by Harold Rogers
July 23, 1983

I was surprised that so many were interested in this hike. The weather was good, clear and cool with a light breeze. Maybe that was why 20 people showed up.

About a week beforehand I had gone up and checked out the area. I got permission to park the cars near the old Rogers' farm. My request to walk up a lane to a high hill in back of Tinmouth Pond for a view of the Tinmouth area was denied because of horses in the pasture. I had expected about three cars for our transportation, but there were seven.

After we arrived at the parking area, we proceeded down a very steep stony road for about one quarter of a mile to Chipman Lake (Tinmouth Pond). The roads don't continue completely around the lake so I had asked a couple of residents if we could walk around the lake on private property and they said we wouldn't have any trouble.

Most of the hike was in woods and everyone seemed very impressed by the number of camps on the lake as well as by the quietness and solitude of the area. We also noticed that very few of the camps were for sale so everyone was satisfied with the area and human population, mostly Vermonters.

After we got around the lake about half the group decided to return to the cars for lunch. For extra mileage, the rest of us walked out the access road to the west which joins the Danby Four Corners-Tinmouth Road. We arrived back at the cars about 12:30 P.M. and had our lunch. We were in back and above the lake but we couldn't see it, however we did have a good view of the mountains to the west. It was a very nice area for a picnic.

The experts (GMC members) guessed that we walked about four-and-one-half miles.

In spite of my pessimistic thoughts before the hike, it turned out to be a very enjoyable hike.

PLYMOUTH CAVES

by Sue Carey
August 6, 1983

Sixteen people showed up for this outing including several new faces and three children. It was a short hike from the cars to the caves. The first cave was very small--about 100 yards long. It contained several rooms and some crawlways. The second cave was even smaller. The most challenging part of the second cave was getting in and out of it. The kids really seemed to have a good time and anybody else who liked to crawl around in dark places enjoyed it too.

We got out of the caves around 11:30 and decided to visit Plymouth Five Corners. I had heard that there was an abandoned asbestos mine in the area. Supposedly the mine could be reached by following a path along a stream. We checked several maps and found no indication of any quarries in the area, but tried following some paths anyway. We had no luck finding it so we walked to the old cemetery. Along the way we passed through a field of blueberries. They were delicious. While driving out of Plymouth Five Corners we saw a blue-blazed trail that may lead to the asbestos mine. We'll have to return there and explore some more.

KILLINGTON PEAK

by Stephen Pulling
August 14, 1983

For the second year in a row the Killington Peak Hike, the Carriage Road Hike, the Go-See-Churchill Hike, or whatever you want to call it, was a great success. Some old familiar faces along with a few new ones walked up the surprisingly easy Carriage Road from Brewers Corners to the summit of Killington Peak.

The second annual Carriage Road hike required a scouting mission by John Hughes and Steve Pulling a few weeks in advance to mark the beginning of the road which is quite difficult to find. After finding the road it is easy to follow although it was overgrown with brush. For this reason a few of us carried saws and pruning shears to open the old road up a bit.

Led by Sue Carey, alias "Clippers," Rob Carey, John Hughes and Steve Pulling cleared a path so everyone else could follow at a leisurely pace. Before you could believe it we had cleared a path right to Cooper Lodge where we found some hooting partiers having a grand ole time. At the summit we found an onslaught of flatlanders carried up by the gondola wearing high heels and their Sunday best.

After soaking up some of Churchill's hospitality, a few of us ventured up the fire tower while others were satisfied to stay on the ground and enjoy the great views. As the day was relatively clear, we could enjoy a panoramic 360 degree view of southern Vermont, New Hampshire, New York, and Massachusetts including Mounts Washington, Monadnock, Ascutey and others.

As soon as a short photographic session was completed we broke up into three groups to descend the mountain. One group took the Bucklin Trail, others went back via the Carriage Road, while another group took a ski trail to Tamarack Shelter, the Long Trail to Cooper Lodge and the Carriage Road to the cars.

I hope everyone who went on the hike enjoyed it as much as I did.

MAURI WINTTURI SHELTER DEDICATION

by Jake Sherman

August 21, 1983

About 50 GMCers turned out on a sunny afternoon a few weeks ago to mark the dedication of the Mauri Wintturi Shelter. This will be the official new name of the former Gulf Shelter, which is located on the Appalachian Trail about two miles west of Route 12 north of Woodstock.

Two contingents joined forces to make up the party attending the ceremony. The first consisted of people who drove in from Vt. 12, lugging the refreshments the half mile or so up from the cars. The second group consisted of about 18 GMCers --mostly individuals attending the Inter-sectional at Camp Goshen-- who hiked over the AT from Stony Brook Shelter.

Rob & Sue Carey and this writer, representing the Killington Section, were part of the hiking group. We had perfect weather for the 8-mile eastward trek which began in a now-defunct settlement known as No Town. Highlights en route included the warm juicy blackberries, the wildflowers (identified by the encyclopedic Henry Budgen) and the views from Luce's Lookout. Here from north-facing rocks below an abandoned fire tower our eyes could follow vast sweeps of both the Green and White Mountains.

At the shelter, following some reviving lemonade and cookies, thoughts turned to Mauri. Incoming GMC president Preston Bristow introduced Doug Teschner who offered a moving recollection of this long-time GMCer who died in January of 1982. Mauri's first loves, said Teschner, evoking smiles, were hiking, hikers, the state of Vermont, and beer, not necessarily in that order.

As to Gulf Shelter, it had become one of Mauri's favorites particularly after his heart attack forced him "to learn every shelter in Vermont one mile from the highway." In his legendary yellow bug with the missing passenger seat he would often drive up from Fitchburg to spend the weekend. For although, said Teschner, Mauri had scaled all the major mountains (often spending hours waiting for just the right light for a photograph), he was also at home in "this more subtle terrain" and liked to keep a six-pack chilling in the nearby brook.

A swig of beer in a paper cup provided an appropriate toast to Mauri. More fitting, however, is that his name will now be permanently part of the AT system and of the state he affirmed was "God's country."

A FOND FAREWELL

by Rob Badger

With fear and trepidation, Carolyn and I embark upon a new chapter of our lives. In August, we will be moving to Blacksburg, Virginia so that I can pursue a PhD in geochemistry at Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

The past 4 1/2 years in Vermont have been terrific, enhanced considerably by hikes with the Green Mountain Club. Our first GMC hike was just two weeks after moving east, when we accompanied Carl Schmidt and crew on the moonlight hike to Minerva Hinchey Shelter (still Sunny-side at that time) in December, 1978. Since then we have hiked into and around ponds, up and down mountains, crawled through a few caves, backpacked in sub-zero weather, and generally experienced the outdoors in places and at times we would not normally have ventured on our own.

The essence of an outing club is for its members to share in the enjoyment of its outings, to learn of new places and to try new endeavors (winter backpacking!). In each category the Killington Section of the GMC excels. It has indeed been a pleasure to be associated with this group of people, and we eagerly hope to be associated with a similar outing club in Virginia. Blacksburg is only 25 miles from the Appalachian Trail, so if any of you are down in southwestern Virginia or hiking through on the AT, give us a call and pay us a visit. We'll be in the phone book.

Our farewells are not final. I am leaving the door open to return to Vermont Marble/OMYA upon completion of the PhD in four years. Even if we do not return full time, we will always have family ties that will bring us back and give us chance to once again join you on a hike.

Happy Trails.

HELPING HANDS

by Al Pulling

About a month ago, plans were made to relocate the outhouse at Gov. Clement Shelter. My son Steve and I went down with all the necessary tools. We did not need jackets, for sure, that day!

We encountered several good-sized rocks while digging. They had to come out, or at least we thought so. While we were tugging on two good-sized ones, two hikers came along and very graciously helped us. With the four of us, we got them out. These hikers' names were Joe Pugana, from Pawtucket, Rhode Island, and Tony Parise, from Attleboro, Massachusetts.

Thanks again for your help, Joe and Tony!

PADDLING AND PORTAGING

by Carol Chapman

I had often thought I'd enjoy an Outward Bound experience. This summer's GMC excursion, a canoe trip in Ontario's Quetico Provincial Park, was a close second. The prospect of eleven days of canoeing through this wilderness of big lakes and spruce woods was more than I could resist.

Early in the morning of July 30th 24 excited GMC'ers set forth from the Essex Junction Amtrak station for the first leg of our journey. We ranged in age from 31 to 65 and represented a variety of occupations, among them secretaries, a plumber, teachers, a doctor and nurses -- people brought together by a mutual love of the outdoors and canoe camping.

The train ride gave us the opportunity to get acquainted and to view the scenery from the Vista Dome car. Our anticipation grew as we passed lakes Ontario and Superior and vast expanses of forests and lakes with ducks and loons the only visible inhabitants.

Two days after leaving Vermont as we paddled across French Lake, our put-in site, we were greeted by a bald eagle who swooped low overhead and a pair of loons who swam nearby before disappearing into the water.

Two days of canoeing and portaging convinced us we needed to separate the "men from the boys." Eight of the more ambitious and stalwart members of the group chose a longer, more difficult route.

I was relieved that we wouldn't have to keep pace with them. The remaining 16 of us traveled a loop of about 60 miles and made 15 portages.

Even though I had spent the month of July trying to get into condition with push ups, aerobic exercise and several canoe outings, I found the portaging very difficult. In studying the map before the trip, those little "P's" (portages) dotted along our route looked so insignificant, but in reality they were a challenge. My portaging practice on a smooth, dirt road on Burton Island was a far cry from the rocky, slippery, muddy, uneven ground of the portage trails.

When one of the men offered to carry my canoe at the first portage I gratefully said "yes." Even so, the job of carrying our packs was a formidable one. The food packs, which gradually lightened, started out at 60 to 70 pounds.

Once, because I couldn't see the corduroy road beneath the mud, I sank in up to my knee. My canoe partner had to take off my pack before I could extract my leg from the mire.

One weary man, carrying a heavy load, commented "How much are we paying to do all this work?"

But the rewards were there to compensate....The families of loons swimming close enough to photograph, the tasty pickerel caught just before supper, lake water pure enough to drink, blueberries ripe and ready for picking, the colorful carpet of a variety of mosses and lichens, day after day of sunny blue skies, frequent swims to cool off, evening song-fests with readings of Robert Service's poems, a spectacular display of northern lights, and the camaraderie with others who share a love of nature.

By the tracks and droppings we knew that moose and bear were present. One determined man who arose at five and paddled to a clearing was rewarded by seeing a cow moose, the only one sighted on our trip.

Mosquitoes, however, were not so elusive. You could set your watch every evening by the arrival of the 8:30 battalion.

The cooperation of everyone in the group was vital in portaging, cooking, and clean-up and in selecting campsites -- the last causing the most controversy. It wasn't always easy to find the required number of tenting spaces and we learned to be less fussy about the slope and rockiness of the ground.

On August 11th, the final day of our canoeing, there were mixed feelings as we paddled back across French Lake. We were eager for a glass of ice water, a cold beer, ice cream, a hot shower and a comfortable bed, but sad and reluctant to give up the beauty and peace of the lake country, the joys of simple living close to the earth, and the warm fellowship we had shared.

TACONIC CREST TRAIL IN VERMONT, N.Y. & MASS.

by Ray Catozzi
June 26, 1983

This is the first time in all the many years of leading hikes that I have started out from Koltonski Fire Station all alone. That's what I said -- all alone! I was the sole entry this day for the Killington Section.

So what options does a hike leader have when there are no hikers to lead? Well, he could cancel out, or he could go it alone, or he could be lucky as I was. I had invited members of the Bennington Section to join us on this hike as we would be right in their territory, and on the night before I called one of them to find that two of them were eager and ready to go.

So off I drove to Bennington and then to North Pownal, where Donna Kirk of Hoosic Falls, N.Y. and Holly Wilson of No. Bennington pulled in by the country store just as I did. Leaving one car at the Hoosic River, we proceeded to Petersburg Pass, doing most of our climbing this day by car.

The Taconic Crest Trail runs about 30 miles from No. Pownal, Vt. to Berry Pond, Mass. We were doing the northern 7.8 mile segment, with the northernmost 1 1/2 miles in Vermont.

The trail had very few ups or downs as it followed the ridge north, and many views were to be had along the way. One to the west overlooked Petersburg, N.Y. on N.Y. Rte. 22. To the east views of Mount Greylock, Massachusetts' highest mountain, and the greyhound racetrack in southwest Vermont were enjoyed.

A short side trail led down the east slope to a sink hole at the base of a ledge. Called Snow Hole, it really did have snow still, way down at the bottom.

But the biggest and most delightful surprise of the whole trip was coming down off the ridge into Vermont, where we hiked through 3/4 of a mile of head-high mountain laurel in full bloom. A most beautiful sight, one not to be easily forgotten.

So folks, you missed a real good one, all that is except one from the Killington Section and twice that from the Bennington Section.

MYSTERY HIKE

by Ray Catozzi
July 31, 1983

About 20 hikers showed up for this one, which was 19 more than on my Taconic Crest trip. I guess a lot of folks still like a little mystery in their life. Even two visitors to Vermont that week joined us for the day. Florence and Phil Weiss said they belonged to a hiking club in New York City but not the G.M.C.

Where did we go? Over to Sherburne on Route 100, then up the Doubleday Mt. Road, rather steeply for one half mile or so. Then onto an abandoned development road that led, at rather easy grades in most places, to just under the summit of Wolf Hill, an outlying mountain of modest height of about 2500 feet.

At a couple of switchbacks near the top of the road, we had nice views of Killington and Pico Peaks, just as we crossed over the town-county line into Stockbridge of Windsor County. This line goes right over the top of Wolf Hill.

Berry picking, mostly raspberries, was an extra treat, both going up and coming down after lunch. Some even picked enough to take home, for pies no doubt.

An afterthought to this one is that we should have more mystery hikes to get the folks out!

POEMS ON FIREWOOD

by Jack Crowther

Some of you have probably seen this poem by Celia Congreve, but it's a nice one to reread every now and then. Informative too.

FIREWOODS

Beachwood fires are bright and clear
If the logs are kept a year.
Oakens burn steadily
If the wood is old and dry.
Chestnut's only good they say
If for long it's laid away.
But ash new or ash old
Is fit for a queen with a crown of gold.

Birch and fir logs burn too fast --
Blaze up bright but do not last.
It is by the Irish said,
Hawthorne breaks the sweetest bread.
But ash green or ash brown
Is fit for a queen with a golden crown.

Elm wood burns like churchyard mould,
E'en the very flames are cold.
Poplar gives a bitter smoke,
Fills your eyes and makes you choke.
Apple wood will scent your room
With an incense-like perfume.
But ash wet or ash dry
For a queen to warm her slippers by.

When this was posted on the bulletin board at work, a few of the poetically inclined added their own wooden verses (pun intended) as follows:

Wood wet or wood dry
Does it matter to I?
Just as long as it is wood,
You bet your booties, it burn good.

This one was titled "Paeon to Trees," but it has a grudging note to it:

Oak, pine, fir, beech, birch, poplar, elder, alder/ Maple, elm, apple, cherry, dogwood, redwood, peach/ Plum pear, cedar, hemlock, hornbeam, linden, hickory
You can burn every (expletive deleted) one of them.

I'd like to give credit to the authors of these lines, but for some reason none signed his name.

MYSTERY CANOE TRIP

by Steve Pulling
September 10, 1983

For those of you who don't know me, I am a sales representative for a local concern. Last week we had a sales meeting which was comprised of many different subjects, one being a poorly disguised pep talk. During this talk our area manager told us, "You have to enjoy your job to be good at it, but you must love your job in order to succeed."

I've related that statement to our canoe trip: you'd have to love canoeing before you could enjoy the trip we took!

Actually the canoe trip wasn't all that bad, but the weather forecast scared some people away.

Sept. 10th was a chilly day, but nine of us braved it out and drove to Wallingford where we launched our canoes in Otter Creek and headed for Rutland.

I had figured that the heavy rain the night before the trip would raise the water level for some good canoeing. WRONG! The water was shallow! We did almost as much pushing and poling as we did canoeing.

The shallow water did a number on our time schedule. We had to pull the canoes out of the water at 4:30 P.M. only half way to our destination.

For the nine of us that went (six Killington Section, two Breadloaf Section, and one member-at-large), we had a good time laughing about the real shallow parts and the log jams we had to work through.

The panorama included waterfowl, good views of Pico and Killington Peaks, large schools of fish, and two crows which were noted to be pestering a poor old owl.

All in all it was a fun trip despite the obstacles and chilly weather.

This year, although 14 people had signed up to go, only nine showed up in the end. It took a lot of unnecessary time, planning and arrangements to transport the extra canoes. For next year's canoe trip it'll be required to pay in advance to reserve the canoes so that we may spare any one person an inconvenience.

ABBOT POND AND COBBLE CAVES

by Rob Carey
Sept. 25, 1983

Six hikers came out for this double attraction trip. We hiked up to the pond at a fairly steady pace, but stopped at a bridge with a view of a cascade for a while. The first part of the trail was all uphill, while the last part was mostly level. During our leisurely lunch at the pond we heard other hikers. When they arrived I recognized them as Burlington Section members. They too were on a section outing. After hiking back to the cars we were ready for the caves.

Cobble Caves are a short steep climb up from the road. The Flatroom caves were almost high enough to stand up in. Bristol Cave had several small crawlways to work through. Only one person got stuck and we were able to get him out. We could go far enough in to be completely in the dark when all lights were turned off. On the hike down we had excellent views of the surrounding area. Caves are a lot of fun to visit, but I would not like to live in one.

GREEN MOUNTAIN

The weather was cloudy and misty when the group of nine hikers met at Main Street Park. We drove to the Long Trail parking lot on U.S.F.R. #10 in Mount Tabor.

The trail to Little Rock Pond is much used and we saw other hikers and fishermen along the way. We went along the east side of the pond to the outlet on the north end. A small foot bridge crosses the outlet and the trail is marked by blue blazes for the rest of the way.

The climb to Green Mountain starts here and becomes steep. In some places there are open ledges which give views to the north and east. We had lunch at one of these areas. Cloudy weather dimmed the usually bright colors of the autumn leaves. After lunch we continued the climb to the top. The views were to the east where the ledges are. The trail then gradually descends down the other side through thick softwood trees.

I think this part of the trail was not very old and was very well cleared. The blazes seemed far apart when we reached the hardwoods and I had to look for them even though Rascal seemed to know the way. There was one more clearing near the end of the hike which offered a good view of Mt. Tabor.

The hike turned out longer than estimated and Ira Hawley had a pedometer which recorded a few extra miles which I hope were enjoyed by all.

DORSET PEAK

by Harold Rogers
October 9, 1983

The weather looked discouraging on the morning of the hike. We would probably have had a much larger turnout if the sun had been shining. Seven of us left the fire station soon after nine in the morning. I picked up two teenagers in Clarendon, one of whom was my grandson. Bob and Sue Carey joined us in Wallingford making a total of eleven for the hike.

We drove to Dorset Hollow which is south of Dorset Peak. We left our cars near the end of the road.

The first part of the hike was easy walking on a log road with very little incline for about three-quarters of a mile. We were in a wooded area, but the leaves hadn't turned at all.

The road got rougher and steeper. The loggers had bulldozed a road nearly to the saddle from which we could look north and see Danby Four Corners. This was very steep walking. The cool, cloudy weather was good for walking but poor for visibility. At the saddle there is a road down to Danby Four Corners and another leading east to Dorset Peak. We followed the steep Dorset Peak road from which we had some good views of Danby Four Corners.

When we came to a small board with an arrow burned into it, we turned to the path to the peak. It was well traveled so we had no trouble following it. We were in an area of stunted evergreen trees with no view.

When we reached the top the sky was still cloudy. We had hoped to be able to signal Churchill Scott on Killington, but the weather did not cooperate. The sun did break through for a minute, but Sue Thomas got to it first and used it all. The top of the peak has trees on it, but there are some good views of other mountains on a good day.

While we were on our way down the sun finally did come out to stay and we enjoyed some good foliage views. About half way down we had a good look at the rock or mud slide which lies to the west of the road. The slide is still bare near the top but has some growth near the bottom.

After seven hours we arrived back in Rutland at 4:00 P.M., having walked about five and one half miles and climbed to a 3700-foot elevation.

A nice hike and lots of fun.

LAKE MANSFIELD TO JONESVILLE BACKPACK

by Rob Carey
October 15-16

Seven members enjoyed this moderate two day hike. They were Roma, Al, Steve and Becky Pulling, Sue Thomas, and Rob and Sue Carey. We planned it as a last trip of the fall and the weather confirmed those plans. Saturday started out cool, almost downright cold with the wind at Lake Mansfield. Fortunately we had a steady uphill to start to warmup. By the time we reached the Long Trail at Taylor Lodge it was time for a snack.

During the afternoon's hike we passed several areas of beaver activity, but didn't see any beaver. We did get some good views, including one excellent view of our starting point at Lake Mansfield. By our afternoon stop at Puffer Shelter it had turned colder. So much so that it was starting to snow and stay on the trees! We pushed on over the top of Bolton Mountain and then reached the recent relocation. Good tent sites are non-existent due to the rough ground at that elevation, but we found a usable area at about 5:00 P.M. Maybe we got less fussy? Although Al got a fire going, it was too cold and smoky to sit around it long, so we all went to bed by 7:30 P.M.

Sunday morning was cool but comfortable for hiking. At Harrington's view it was warm enough for some to take off their long johns. We made good time all morning as the trail was almost all downhill. We stopped for lunch in a field at the Bolton Notch Road. With the sun out it was warm and pleasant. Sue

Thomas brought out the bottle of champagne that she had carried to celebrate Steve and Becky's anniversary. Steve was amazed that she had carried it all that time. It was too cold to have it Saturday night.

Later Sunday afternoon we had spectacular views of Camel's Hump and Robbins Mountain. There was still some foliage at the lower elevations. We stopped at one viewpoint for about 3/4 of an hour to fully enjoy it.

Fall is definitely a good time for backpacking, just take along an extra sweater.

SLACK HILL--PLYMOUTH

by Ira and Irene Hawley
October 22, 1983

It was a clear crisp 25 degrees when 17 enthusiastic hikers met at the park. Forty-five minutes later all were fitted with packs to start a walk which was not billed as having spectacular views. At a clear stream Churchill Scott filled two gallon jugs which he toted for future hot chocolate and coffee.

At midday we reached a picnic area complete with tables and grilles. Soon a small but hot fire was burning. A near casualty occurred as the wood handle on the teapot caught fire. It appeared the walk had sharpened appetites and good conversation followed.

It was all downgrade from here. As we arrived back at our cars all agreed it had been an enjoyable and interesting day. Not too long and not too short.

CHATEAUGUAY TO RIVER ROAD

by Churchill Scott

October 30, 1983

It was a good day to hike on the A.T. and almost 20 folks took advantage of the typical fall weather.

The road above Briggs looks much different after a lapse of many years, so it took us a bit to find the A.T. parking area. A good early start enabled us to reach Stony Brook Shelter shortly after 11:00 P.M. At this point we had come just less than two miles and 4.1 to go.

After negotiating a log crossing of a small ravine and after several of the party nearly got themselves lost, we reached the top of the last ridge where we found a good spot to lunch. During the final downhill stretch of the hike we enjoyed good views of Kent Pond and later of Pico and Killington Peaks, the latter already snow covered on the upper trails.

At the end of our trip on the River Road, while waiting for our cars to be picked up at Chateaugay, was perhaps the only uncomfortable part of the day, for with the sun going down and the north wind increasing it had grown rather cool.

COVERED DISH SUPPER

by Roma Pulling

November 19, 1983

Finding something different to write about the recurring events on our schedule, or perhaps a different way of writing it, is always a challenge for the reporter. But that's what inspires us to return year after year, isn't it? The familiarity of it all.

We returned to Rotary Cabin at Tamarack Notch for our annual supper. We need a larger place but have none in mind and are grateful to the Congregational Church for making it available.

The first step on arriving at the cabin is to get a fire built in the stove. We're indebted to Steve Pulling for going up early to attend to this chore and for furnishing some of the wood.

The food, contributed pot luck style, was delicious as always. After eating we recognized some people celebrating November birthdays and an anniversary and got comfortable for the slide show. Ted and Winnie Shambo showed pictures of their trip to Katahdin and some of their hikes in Vermont, a most excellent presentation. Thanks, Ted and Winnie.

See you all at next year's supper.

EXCERPTS OF A LETTER FROM RACHELCHARLAND

I went on my second and last hike in Utah this month on August 16th. A young Mormon couple and their fifteen month old daughter, Ember, accompanied me for 1.5 miles on the steep side of Timpanogos, a 12,000 foot snow-capped mountain. It's name means "rock river."

Any hiking beyond the 6,000 foot level is at one's own risk and hikers must have special equipment because of the numerous small glaciers that look lovely but are treacherous. Two hikers had to be rescued from the top last Saturday. Many legends are told regarding various parts of the mountain.

There are three caves connected by man-made tunnels. The first cave was discovered by Martin Hansen in 1887. Believe it or not, he followed a cougar into this cave. The other two caves were not found until 1921. Three hours are needed by the best of hikers on a PAVED route. The caves are 1,000 feet above the canyon floor. So people are really standing and "ahing" at 7,000 feet as they wind their way assisted by a volunteer guide throughout the caves.

You'll have to ask Rob Carey about those ice-like shapes that hang from the roof of a cave and also come up from the floor. There were clusters of ice-like formations also. As we started early, by noontime we were down at the base where we enjoyed a lovely picnic lunch.

Editor's Note: Rachael wrote a longer, detailed description of the geology of the cave. If you would like to read it, please call Carol Chapman.

In her latest letter Rachael tells us that she has moved to Duluth. Guess you were homesick for Vermont's cold and snowy winters, huh, Rae?

OUTINGS COMMITTEE MEETING

by Roma Pulling, Chairman

Several people have expressed ignorance of our method of planning hikes; so perhaps a report of a typical meeting will clear this up.

The Outings Committee of the Killington section of the Green Mountain Club held their regular quarterly meeting at the home of the chairman at 7:30 in the evening on November 29, 1983. Thirteen people were present.

Rob and Sue Carey offered to lead a mystery hike with four to five miles of moderate hiking. This was set for Saturday, January 14, 1984, at 9:00 A.M. at their request.

Steve Pulling arrived late, but volunteered to lead a hike on Clark Hill in West Rutland on Saturday, Jan. 21. This trip was estimated at seven miles; so it was decided to rate it as difficult because of the high mileage and to start at 8:00 A.M.

Churchill Scott's contribution will be a hike in the Pinney Hollow area of Plymouth, ending at Crooked Shelter. This was deemed to be four miles of easy hiking and scheduled for January 29 at 9:30 A.M. When it is convenient for the leaders, we try to alternate Saturday and Sunday hikes to accommodate as many hikers as possible.

Next, the chairman announced two outings that were arranged before the meeting. Our winter week-end is an annual event and has been held at Merck

Forest in Rupert for several years. This was arranged by letter and phone for the weekend of Feb. 4 and 5. On February 11 we welcome a new hike leader, Krissy Nadler, whose grandmother, Anna Nyiri, has led several hikes for us. Krissy will start near her home in West Rutland and follow a power line to the West Proctor Road. Snowshoes are recommended for this easy three-mile hike.

John and Emma Hughes volunteered to lead a six mile hike up Wilder Mountain in Wallingford on February 18, starting at 9:00 A.M. This is a moderate hike for snowshoers only.

On February 26 Ray Catozzi will attempt the easy, two-mile hike from Bellevue Avenue Extension to the chairman's house that had to be abandoned last year because of wet conditions. He will start at 1:00 P.M. and will climax with refreshments at the chairman's in front of the fireplace.

Harold Rogers' offering is a moderate, 6 mile hike, starting at Rte. 103, passing Clarendon Shelter and on to Fox Lot in Shrewsbury, returning the same way. This was set for March 10 at 9:00 A.M.

March 17 was set as the date for another of our annual events, the popular sugar-on-snow party. This will be held at the chairman's house with Janet Martin boiling the syrup again. Sorry--Members Only!

The last date on the winter schedule will be for the Killington Section annual meeting, being held at 7:00 P.M., March 31 at the Methodist Church on Williams Street.

All the hikes will be for hiking, skiing or snowshoeing unless otherwise indicated and as conditions permit.

Their work completed, the members enjoyed hot beverages and freshly baked brownies before dispersing.

We welcome new hike leaders at any time, also suggestions for activities may be made by calling 773-6997. The next meeting will be held February 28, 1984, same time, same place.

A BELATED THANK YOU

Oops, I goofed. When I wrote the article in the last issue of Smoke & Blazes about relocating the outhouse at Governor Clement Shelter, some names were omitted.

Rob and Sue Carey came down Sunday morning and very graciously helped us with the "refreshing" part of the job. Thanks to you, Rob and Sue, for your help also.

THE HIKES THAT WEREN'T

If anyone is looking for reports on Stratton Mountain, Dorset Cave or the Valiquette Memorial Hike, you will not find them. This is not because of negligent writers but rather the bad weather which caused all three to be cancelled.

A Note About Numbers

Smoke and Blazes started in 1948 as a monthly publication and continued so until about 1959 when it became a bimonthly. In about 1967 it switched to quarterly publication. Occasionally issues were skipped, especially in 1970 and 1971.

In general each calendar year was assigned a new "Volume" and "Numbers" were assigned consecutively from "1" through each year.

There is some lack of consistency in the months of publication, and there are some out-and-out errors in the numbering.

The following Table of Contents lists the issues in this binder showing the Volume, Number, and Date as printed, and, where different, what the Volume, Number, and Date probably should have been.

Dedication

This set of copies of Smoke and Blazes is donated to the Rutland Historical Society in memory of my parents, Mary and Craigie Perkins and my aunt, Vera Perkins. They conceived the idea for a Killington Section newsletter in 1948 and served as editors and publishers for the first several years of its existence, cutting stencils, and running mimeograph copies in our living room. They continued as frequent contributors to the publication and as active members of the Club for over a half century. Fortunately, Dad had a pack rat proclivity which I seem to have inherited. By combining his collection of Smoke and Blazes with mine, I have been able to put together this complete run of the publication.

VOLUME 37, NUMBER 1

KILLINGTON SECTION, GREEN MOUNTAIN CLUB

JAN.-MAR., 1984

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE: STATE OF THE SECTION

Killington Section Annual Meeting time is upon us, and once again it is time to take stock of ourselves as a public hiking, recreational and service organization.

There are many areas of operation to touch upon and a few that require a bit more reviewing and commenting.

Things are going great in the outing scheduling, the availability of many leaders, and a very busy and varied schedule. Our publicity is getting almost legendary, it has been so consistently there, good, and on time.

Financing the section's many activities is still progressing smoothly, due largely to the Kirk Fund which pays all our trails & shelter expenses. Because of this fund, our other income is more than matching our remaining expenses, a fact that could keep our dues rates from rising for a long period of time.

It is in the area of trails and shelters of the Killington Section that the greatest amount of activity is taking place. Aside from our responsibility for 21 miles of Long Trail between Vt. 140 and U.S. 4 with its shelters, and the connecting side trails, (which we feel we respond to adequately with our limited person power) there are all the recent past changes and the near future changes going on. Massive relocations of many miles of our section's trails as well as one shelter have given some cause for concern among our membership, especially the projected relocation over Little Killington, and across possible new ski areas of the Sherburne Corp.

Negotiations for easement through this new area were conducted by both the Green Mountain Club and the National Park Service, and we understand it was a long tough process to arrive at the easement contract. However, many individuals, and wilderness and environmental organizations, have expressed their dissatisfaction over this settlement.

Even the Killington Section, through its board of directors, has discussed at length and finally come to a stated position regarding this controversial issue. (See Killington Section Position Statement elsewhere in this issue.) While many of us in the section regret having to disagree with our parent organization on this issue, we feel it is our duty as protectors and maintainers of this, our section of the Long Trail, to take this stand.

GMC officialdom, as well as other sections of the club not directly affected by this settlement, may find it difficult to understand why we have taken this position, but this has taken place in our section, and on the mountain that is our section's namesake. We are directly involved.

We want to see it stay as wild and unchanged as humanly possible and we as a section are going to work together toward that goal.

Other trail relocations that are less controversial and in keeping with the Scenic Trail Act mandates are also listed in the Killington Section Position Statement. Most are good improvements.

Also the former Wade property at the Route 103 Long Trail crossing is going to be further cleaned up and dressed out more like an organized parking lot.

So, all in all, things look good for the Killington Section for the near future, in spite of our jumping onto a controversial bandwagon, so to speak.

Once again I want to express my thanks to the board, the committee chairmen, the hike leaders, and all those who worked so unselfishly on all the various activities that have made 1983 such a successful year

CRAIGUE PERKINS

One of Killington Section's longest standing members, Craig Perkins, has partially come out of political retirement. In the town of Mendon where he now lives, he assisted a group of concerned town citizens to inform the electorate of the facts concerning Sherburne Corp.'s request to build more ski areas in the Parker's Gore East area of Mendon. (It is through the Parker's Gore West area that the controversial relocation of the Killington Long Trail is supposed to take place.) Although only an advisory vote, it went decisively against the Corp. by a margin of 239 to 163.

We have also discovered, by perusing Killington Section's oldest record book, that Craig and his wife, Mary, joined the section as members 50 years ago in January, 1934. Congratulations, you two! May you continue to enjoy your faithful membership in the Green Mountain Club and to hang tough for our fragile wilderness.

INMAN POND

by Rob Carey
December 4, 1983

This hike was different because it was led by a Committee of the Whole, the whole being the 11 people and one dog who were not deterred by the forecast of sleet and freezing rain. Churchill had thoroughly scouted the trip and gave us written directions and a map.

We found the start of the hike at the Fair Haven chlorinator station with little difficulty. Soon we reached the first of several junctions that were not on the map or in the directions. We took the right fork, and soon decided it wasn't right. After some discussion and 12 opinions we followed Rascal's advice. He had started off down an earlier fork that proved to be correct.

Reaching our destination before 11:00 a.m. resulted in another problem. Start a fire for lunch or hike around some more? By this time it was snowing steadily and the wind was blowing harder, resulting in the early lunch faction winning. Once we got the fire going, it burned like a blowtorch because of the wind. After lunch the hike back was uneventful. By then there was enough snow for some to consider skiing after they got home, and at least one person did.

YOUNG'S CAMP

by Virginia Young
December 10, 1983

There was a bit of snow, just enough to make a hike in the woods enjoyable, when about a dozen of us took a walk to Virginia Young's camp on Blue Ridge, "Camp Kno-Deer."

Parking off Meadow Lake Drive we climbed easily for a short distance on one more big wide development road. Next we were on a more typical abandoned town road with a pretty brook on one side and a ledge on the other.

About a mile of gentle hiking got us to our destination. At that time a big decision was settled and the ambitious ones hiked on to Sam Young Jr.'s where a westerly view took in the Taconics and Adirondacks, while the older folks stayed behind, built a fire and warmed up the water.

The return trip was made along another lumber road past "Sheet Iron Flats," and over a narrow 4"x4" beam. Fortunately everyone was able to navigate this with ease.

We were glad to see everyone and only wish that more had come out with us.

MOONLIGHT IN VERMONT

by Sue Thomas

December 17, 1983

The weather was somewhat windy and cold on Dec. 17, but a good-sized crowd turned out anyway for the annual moonlight hike, this year to Clarendon Shelter. This was my first attempt at leading a hike, and I did a truly inspiring job of it, missing the shelter completely. Those stupid enough to follow their leader might have turned ugly about the time we reached Killington had not Steve Pulling reeled us in as we passed.

Despite a lack of firewood in the area, we soon had a comforting fire and water a-boil for hot drinks, and goodies donated by several hikers. After Christmas caroling around the fire, most returned to their nice warm beds, leaving the usual nuts (the Fanatical Four??) to brave the cold overnight. All survived, however, and it was well worth it for the roasted pineapple provided by the Careys in the morning. On the way out, we stopped to admire the view at a hunting camp, then went to inspect the camp the club recently acquired.

All in all it was a great weekend, the campfire, Christmas carols and cocoa all hit the spot and made it a very warm evening, no matter what the thermometer said! (I may even lead another hike... someday.)

MYSTERY HIKE

by Rob Carey

January 14, 1984

About seven hikers met the leaders in Wallingford for this moderate hike. We were about evenly divided between snowshoers and walkers. We parked just off Rte. 140, about 1 1/2 miles west of the light in Wallingford. After passing several houses we started bushwhacking south. At this point several people said they had guesses of where we were going, but they didn't say where. The light snow falling blocked out most of the views of White Rocks, but made the woods beautiful. We had several chances to practice the graceful art of crossing old fences while wearing snowshoes. After we crossed a nice stream, we turned east and downhill. By then several hikers were sure of the destination. It was our house, where we had coffee, lunch, homemade cookies, and fondant.

CLARK HILL

by Stephen Pulling

January 21, 1984

COLD! was the word of the day. When we started hiking Churchill's thermometer read 0°F and his wind gauge read 7 m.p.h. Figure it out for yourself, I don't want to know what the wind chill factor was. I'll just say cold!

After spotting a vehicle on what I call East Bird Mountain Road we drove up the Clark Hill Road in West Rutland to where the town stops plowing and only log trucks could pass. I'm sure everyone had second thoughts about getting out of their cars but nine hearty (crazy) souls accomplished this feat and met the frigid air head on.

Rob Carey made a suggestion to leave our snowshoes in the cars because the road was hard-packed by snow machines and it was a unanimous decision. Thanks, Rob, good idea. At this point we started walking along the edge of a field, past an active log landing and finally into the woods where the trees cut the wind. We walked around Clark Hill, around Herrick Mountain, and up over a pass on the logging road to a hunting camp I knew about. I didn't plan on getting to the camp until noon, but because of the cold weather we hiked much faster than expected and it was only 10:30 a.m.

I didn't hear any complaints about getting inside and starting a warm fire in the stove. A very leisurely two hour lunch was consumed because we didn't want to face the cold air again. I knew we had to leave eventually so we put on our heavy coats and packs and hiked down the pass to the East Bird Mountain Road. Thank you nine Eskimos for making this hike a memorable one.

PINNEY HOLLOW

by Churchill Scott
January 29, 1984

On Sunday, Jan. 29, about 20 of us hiked in the Pinney Hollow of Plymouth. The weather was very enjoyable and the walking easy while we were on the snow-mobile paths. Voting to take a short side trip to an open-face granite quarry, we soon ran into unbroken snow. Luckily it was only a short distance to where we had a bit of a view. Retracing our steps we were soon back to the main road and continued up toward Crooked Shelter. Passing the Ayers brothers' hunting camp, the fellows gathered some water and once again we broke trail.

At the shelter thanks to Harold's ever-present saw we had a beautiful fire and hot water for lunch. A number of G.M.C. subjects were discussed along with possible new hikes for our next schedule.

Being downhill all the way, we enjoyed the return walk even though no one visited Whetstone Brook Shelter which we caught glimpses of through the trees.

Back at the cars there were pros and cons about whether it was an easy or moderate hike. Of course all of us old-timers voted for easy, but some of the new hikers, all of whom we were glad to see, said "No way."

WINTER WEEKEND

by Roma Pulling
February 4-5, 1984

"Don't tell anyone you were too warm down here because they won't believe you." This was typical of remarks heard at our annual Merck Forest week end, and for the most part we were too warm inside. The stove with dampers that we used in Spruce leanto last year had been replaced with one with no controls. We either had no heat at all (when we wanted to boil water) or more than we needed. Sleeping bags went unzipped, and the foil blanket carried along for extra warmth remained folded on the side of the bunk.

Nancy Sugarman and Sue Thomas left Rutland Saturday morning and met Rob and Sue Carey at the forest entrance. After backpacking approximately a mile to our leanto, they had lunch and went for a long hike between Clark's Clearing and the pond.

Meanwhile, Steve, Becky and Roma Pulling and Rascal left Rutland in mid-afternoon on Saturday and arrived at the leanto at suppertime. Following our meal we played Scrabble, read or just relaxed with a snack until time to turn in.

Sunday morning after breakfast we headed for the northeast corner of the forest, an area not previously explored by our group, and visited Stone Lot leanto. It is situated on a bank above a stream in a very pleasant location and seemed like a good destination for a future overnight trip.

On returning to Spruce, all had a quick lunch before backpacking out to the cars and starting home.

The more heavily traveled trails were very icy and were traversed only with extreme care. The early arrivals tried skis and a plastic toboggan but because of poor snow quality eventually abandoned both in favor of walking. There was some rain Saturday morning but generally good weather until Sunday afternoon, when we found we had not started home too soon. Snow had begun to fall, and driving conditions deteriorated during the afternoon. Nevertheless, all campers arrived home safely and ready to do it again next year.

WEST RUTLAND TO WEST PROCTOR ROAD

by Krissy Nadler
February 11, 1984

On Feb. 11 at 9:00 A.M., ten ambitious hikers set out for West Rutland to climb a mountain. We started on Pleasant Heights, crossed a field, and started going up, up, up. We were following a snowmobile trail and the walking was quite easy since the snow was packed down. But when we got a little farther, it became slippery and even I had trouble getting up. But we managed. Once we reached the open space a beautiful view was visible. But we continued on up 'till we reached another field. Then we crossed that and came to a barbed wire fence.

After finding an opening we crossed another field where we met two German shepherds. The kids started throwing snowballs

up and the dogs would catch them in their mouths. But someone threw one snowball up and both dogs jumped for it. They both missed it but that snowball set off a fight between the dogs. They tore and ripped at each other's throat and soon drops of blood began spotting the snow. We were all wondering what would make them stop, when something must have attracted their attention because they ran off.

We then walked down to the road to satisfy Churchill Scott who wanted to go to the very end.

Then we walked back to the Nadlers' house and ate our lunches there. Coffee, tea, cookies, and popcorn were provided.

WILDER MOUNTAIN, WALLINGFORD

by John and Emma Hughes
February 18, 1984

It was cloudy and raining when four hikers left Main Street Park. We met two more hikers in East Wallingford. We parked the cars and walked on a road for two miles.

The rain turned to snow which stopped later. We started on the snowmobile trails which had become soft and a little slushy.

John pointed out several trails which led to ponds and other roads. When we passed a large swamp area leaders John and Emma got wet feet. We had to make a little detour to get away from the water.

As we started to climb up Wilder we had a hard time stepping into deep snow and also a lot of sliding in the slushy snow.

We reached the top and had lunch just as the fog started to come down. It was getting damp. We returned on the same trails, because the snow for side trips was too deep.

BALD MOUNTAIN

by Ray Catozzi
February 26, 1984

Twice planned, twice flooded out! The ski-snow-shoe hike tour planned for Bellevue Avenue Ext. to Pullings' house on the corner of Post Road and Woodstock Avenue has fallen victim to Mother Nature again. The first time it was scheduled for March 1983. A thaw wiped out our trail which runs through a frozen marshy area. So we put it back into February for '84, thinking it couldn't possibly thaw enough to stop us this time. You all know, and enjoyed, no doubt, the beautiful two weeks of spring weather we just had!

But nobody was complaining! - We climbed Bald Mt. instead, on a crisp, clear 20° day, all 18 of us. Going up the short way from the top of the Notch road, we followed a wide open tote road for half a mile, mostly on the level, and then hit a lesser road that started climbing. Soon we intersected the west loop of the Bald Mt. Loop Trail and proceeded to the top, gathering there just 50 minutes later.

We then moved on down a tenth of a mile to a lookout facing south and southwest. Bare and dry, the lookout afforded beautiful views of Round Mt. and Salt Ash to the south, Dorset Peak to the southwest, and a closer view of the Rutland Airport. It was so warm and windless at the lookout that everyone hated to leave even though it was past time to head back to the cars. Then nearly all proceeded over to the Pullings' house for coffee and cookies.

The plan, calling for an afternoon outing starting at 1:00 P.M., met with considerable favor with some hikers that we haven't seen very often, so we are scheduling another afternoon hike on Saturday, June 30, to White Rock Ice Beds, with a box (or day pack) supper up on the little White Rocks Lookout.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS' MEETING

On Tuesday, January 17 the Board of Directors of the Killington Section met at the home of Rob Carey.

On Rob Badger's written recommendation Sue Carey was unanimously elected to complete his unexpired term.

A statement prepared by Rob Carey on Killington Section's position regarding our section of the Long Trail was presented for discussion. Amendments were proposed and discussed. After much discussion it was unanimously voted to accept the recommendations as amended. The position statement follows. Amendments suggested at the 1/17/84 meeting are enclosed in parentheses.

Killington Section Management

The Section is concerned by past and future reductions to Trail quality by development, especially at higher elevations. The Long/Appalachian Trail was relocated to the west side of Snowdon Peak to avoid ski trails. The Jugger-naut Trail was abandoned as a result of extensive ski trail and work road construction. The planned Little Killington Relocation will take the LT/AT away from Tamarack Shelter and its spring. The development permitted in the easement will result in degradation of Trail quality. The Shrewsbury Peak Trail is crossed by ski trails and more development is planned in that area, further threatening trail quality.

Our Section of LT/AT consists of two parts with distinct characteristics. The part from Rt. 140 to the Upper Cold River Road is low to medium elevation. It is primarily hardwood forest. Traditionally this area has been used for multiple uses including rural housing, farming and selective cut logging. There are frequent road crossings which limit the wilderness quality of the Trail but also provide through hikers with access to supplies.

The Section of Trail from the Upper Cold River Road to Rt. 4 has no road crossings and traditionally was not developed. As a result it had a high wilderness quality as a high elevation spruce-fir forest. This remoteness has been reduced by ski development.

Trail protection takes two forms, continuity and quality. Continuity requires a marked path that does not cross land closed to hikers. Quality is somewhat subjective, but generally requires infrequent encroachment by development, such as roads, houses, ski trails and lifts, and logging.

Specific Recommendations

RT. 140 TO MINERVA HINCHEY SHELTER. The Section approves of the proposed relocation to the west of the existing LT/AT. We do not want the Trail to follow Rt. 140 for more than one quarter mile. Sufficient parking should be provided to avoid traffic and landowner problems.

MINERVA HINCHEY SHELTER TO RT. 103. The Section supports the current acquisition of the existing route.

RT. 103 TO BEACON HILL. The Section supports the proposed relocation to the north of the present route to Clarendon Shelter. (Section sees no reason to move the Shelter).

BEACON HILL TO GOV. CLEMENT SHELTER. This rural section passes through many private landowners. Final route selection will be difficult and must be done with concern for individual landowners. Either proposed route appears acceptable. (Any move would be good.)

GOV. CLEMENT SHELTER TO LITTLE KILLINGTON PEAK. The Section prefers the relocation as surveyed over the relocation proposed by Harry Peet passing over Mendon Peak. Although Mendon Peak is a scenic attraction this route would add several miles of waterless trail. Also the ridge from Mendon Peak to Little Killington borders Sherburne Corp. land, bringing the probability of development close to the Trail even with protection on state land. There should be no ski development on the Trail in this section of State Forest. A shelter and/or camping site is needed on the Trail in this section of State Forest. (Support route as surveyed.)

EASEMENT ACROSS SHERBURNE CORP. LAND (TRACT 212-01). This easement will result in degradation of Trail quality due to numerous wide ski trail crossings. (And other impediments such as ski making equipment, warming huts, glading trails, picnic tables, etc.)

COOLIDGE STATE FOREST BOUNDARY (COOPER LODGE) TO RT. 4. The existing Trail quality must be preserved. No new development should be allowed in the Trail Corridor. Although there is extensive development a short distance from the Trail, there are no crossings and only one section (about 150 feet) of LT/AT following a ski trail. Let's keep it that way. The Section will support the proposed reroute near Ramshead to put the Trail on state land if there are permanent written assurances from the state that there will be no development within 200 feet of the Trail. This permanent protection is also sought for all hiking trails maintained by the Killington Section on state land. We feel that no further expansion by the Sherburne Corporation onto state land in the area of hiking trails is warranted due to the existing and proposed extensive development on state land and land owned by Sherburne Corp. crossed by the AT easement.

Side Trails

BUCKLIN TRAIL. This Trail is primarily on State Forest Land. It must be fully protected. Minimum protection is written assurance from the State that there will be no ski trail crossings or ski trails within 200 feet. A wider buffer is preferred.

SHREWSBURY PEAK TRAIL. Trail continuity must be preserved between the LT/AT and Northam Picnic Area.

LAMB - ROGERS

Happiness is just three months away for a longtime KS member and hike leader and former member of the Board of Directors.

Harold Rogers will be married June 23. His bride will be Mrs. Alberta Lamb, proprietor of Lamb's Yarn Shop on Kendall Avenue, where they will be making their home.

We all wish this couple the very best for their life together.

CONGRATULATIONS

We offer congratulations to our friends who completed their End-to-End during 1983: Section members, Winnie Shambo, Audrey and David Barber and At-Large member, Ben Florczak.

HIKING PARTICIPATION STUDY

President Ray Catozzi has made an in-depth study of the 1983 hiking habits of KS members and friends and compiled a chart which will be available for examination. It shows that 140 individuals took part in 44 different KS activities.

Each participant is listed on the chart individually with the number of activities in which each took part. No one was able to turn out for every event -- some of us tried! -- but Sue Carey takes the honors for most with 35 followed by Rob Carey with 34 and Sue Thomas with 33.

This type of analysis should help us to improve our program and appeal to more people.

CONGRATULATIONS

to Rob & Carolyn Badger on the arrival of their new hiking partner,

Daniel Brewster on Jan. 19

at 7 lb. he should easily fit in the pack, right between the extra socks and the gorp!

GMC ANNUAL MEETING HIGHLIGHTS

by Ray Catozzi
May 26, 1984

Attendance was noticeably down this year, for whatever reason one could come up with, and with only two camping out on the Norwich Ski Slope compared to a dozen or more last year. It was agreed that we all need a change in location next year, following three successive years at Northfield, Vermont.

The meeting itself was interesting, fruitful, and finished on time, with President Preston Bristow keeping things moving nicely.

The Green Mountain Club is sponsoring and hosting the 25th biennial meeting of the Appalachian Trail Conference, to be held at Green Mountain College in Poultney, Vermont, August 3 to 10, 1985. Attendance at these get-togethers runs between 750 and 1000 outdoor enthusiasts from all over the eastern half of the nation. A week long affair, it consists of workshops, lectures, symposia, slide shows, eating, and many many outdoor activities taking place all over our area here in Rutland County and elsewhere. The Killington Section, being the closest to Poultney, has been asked to help in any way it can in the many indoor activities, providing person power, if nothing else, but most of all the ATC committee is looking to us for outdoor activity leadership, i.e., hikes, overnights, museum trips, etc. Let's rally to the cause early, while we have the year to do so with ease, and make the GMC proud of the Killington Section once again....

The Long Trail News needs bolstering, and its staff is looking for more articles from the sections, or anyone for that matter, to beef up its pages.

The GMC may take on the responsibility for running the state-owned Ski Dorm in Stowe, Vermont, as an inexpensive lodging and eating place for hikers in the summer and skiers in the winter.

Next year is also GMC's 75th birthday and that is coinciding with the 25th ATC Conference. More committee work is envisioned here. Also there is talk of the week-long ATC conference also being used, and called, as our 1985 Intersectional. So you can see much committee help is needed, and it will be easy to sign up for it now with the committee work preference form which was enclosed with the May issue of the Long Trail News.

A book of Long Trail topo maps, called "End to End," has been published with the cooperation of the publisher and the GMC. Also a history of the GMC under the authorship of Jane Curtis of the "O" section in Woodstock is due to be completed, and out, by the 75th anniversary.

GMC DIRECTORS' MEETING HIGHLIGHTS

by Ray Catozzi
May 26, 1984

President Bristow got this meeting started right on time at 3:00 P.M. and immediately announced many good things that have been accomplished, or completed in the last few months.

Three thousand acres have been purchased to protect the Appalachian Trail from the Massachusetts border to Norwich, Vermont, with about 2,000 left to be obtained.

The squatters' area north and south of the Clarendon Gorge bridge may possibly be patrolled by Fish & Game personnel to keep out the summer-long campers and keep down the trash and vandalism. The Vt. Fish & Game Department is owner of most of this land adjacent to Mill River where it enters the upper gorge.

The GMC is opposing a proposed LT foot race from Route 108 to Sherburne Pass, stating it is against its trail management plan.

Heated discussion (and otherwise) surrounded the forming of a real hard-working ATC conference committee with a dedicated chairperson, ready to put in a lot of work in the next year. He was voted $10,000 for all reasonable expenses incurred in organizing the conference.

Once again, it was asked of the Killington Section to provide expertise and leadership for the conference, for GMC annual meeting (also to be possibly held at Green Mountain College), the 75th GMC birthday, and the 1985 GMC Intersectional.

Three of our group decided to bush-whack down the front of the mountain directly to the cars. They beat us back.

The rest of us returned by the original route except that we detoured west from the road to see an interesting burial plot with two headstones near the location of the old Adams farm foundation.

On our way back down we saw where a deer had followed us up the road. His tracks were in ours for about a quarter of a mile, but we didn't see him. There were quite a lot of deer tracks all along the area.

Thanks to all the hikers for helping to make it a very enjoyable hike.

ROUTE 103 TO FOX LOT, SHREWSBURY

by Harold C. Rogers
March 10, 1984

The weather was supposed to be very cold that day and quite a few people said we were crazy to go out on a day like that, so I was surprised when fifteen hikers showed up and completed the hike.

The weather was clear, but not too cold for walking, as there was very little wind. The snow was frozen enough to make easy walking.

We left the Wade parking lot about 9:30 A.M. and arrived at Fox Lot around noon. I did not know where the open viewpoint was but Ray Catozzi found it for us. The weather was clear so we had a good view of the valley south of Rutland. We could look down on the western part of Rutland, but trees obstructed our view of the eastern part of the city.

There was a light wind blowing and with the temperature a little above zero we decided to build a fire and eat our lunch back in the shelter of the trees. We were quite comfortable there. After eating we went back out on the brow of the hill to enjoy the view again.

SUGAR-ON-SNOW PARTY

by Roma Pulling
March 17, 1984

While its timeliness may not have been appreciated by some, the late winter storm of March 13 brought snow for the party right to my doorstep. And it was free. Wouldn't it be wonderful if the syrup were delivered free, too?

Well, it was!!! Ira Hawley, our good neighbor and one of the newer members of the KS, donated a gallon of freshly-boiled (1984) syrup for the party, and Irene and Lorraine delivered it. This gift enabled us to thumb our nose at inflation and serve sugar-on-snow, doughnuts, pickles and beverage at the same price we charged in 1980. Your generosity was deeply appreciated, Ira.

The weather was ideal in contrast to last year, when the storm and the party collided. Sixteen people signed in. Following the feast, which was prepared in her usual expert manner by Janet Martin, there was a sing-a-long in front of the fire with music provided by Sue Thomas and her guitar.

KILLINGTON SECTION ANNUAL MEETING

by W. Churchill Scott

March 31, 1984

On Saturday, March 31, the annual meeting of the Killington Section of the Green Mountain Club was held at the Methodist Church in Rutland with about 30 persons in attendance.

Among the guests were Harry Peet, executive director of the GMC; Preston Bristow, GMC president, and Roger Sternberg, a representative of the Appalachian Mountain Club.

Due to President Ray Catozzi's auto accident, Steve Pulling presided. Reports were heard from the secretary and treasurer as well as committee chairmen. All were thanked for carrying on the work of the section. This year's committee heads included Winnie Shambo, publicity; Carol Chapman, Smoke & Blazes; Roma Pulling, outings, and Steve Pulling, trails & shelters. It was noted that the section is sponsoring more outings than ever before even though average attendance has declined slightly.

There was a note from Ray reminding us that members can lower the amount of their dues by enlisting new members. A deduction of $1.00 will be allowed for each new member obtained.

Rob Carey reviewed the main club board of directors' meeting. Leading items of discussion at that meeting included the controversial LT/AT easement agreement recently negotiated between the Sherburne Corporation and the National Park Service together with the GMC and the upcoming 1985 Appalachian Trail Conference to be held at Green Mountain College in Poultney.

Janet Martin presented a proposal pertaining to the Kirk Fund which had been worked on by Bob Badger. This proposal involves a declaration of Trust to make the legality of the fund more binding. Janet also explained the proposed Girl Scout End-to-End one day walk on the LT. She asked for help from K.S. members with regard to various aspects of the project.

Debate then ensued on the question of whether a Killington Section life membership should be set at a cost of $150 or a higher amount.

President Bristow spoke about new directions of the main club: the possibility of the AMC taking over the running of the Ski Dorm in Stowe, the GMC 75th anniversary in 1985, the Catamount Trail Association (a cross-country ski trail system similar to the Long Trail), Killington Section relocations, the difficulty of trying to protect the trail from ski developers, and finally, the relocation of Tamarack Shelter.

Roger Sternberg urged section members to become active in a trail monitoring program sponsored by the ATC. He asked individuals to volunteer to cover short sections of the trail on a regular basis, checking out conditions, picking up trash, and reporting any vandalism, illegal logging, or other misuse.

The new members of the section's board of directors are Roma Pulling, Rob Carey and Winnie Shambo. The meeting recessed during the election of officers. The following were elected: Rob Carey - President; Steve Pulling - Vice-President; Olga Laird - Secretary; and W. Churchill Scott - Treasurer.

Back at the main meeting the life membership issue was settled with a majority voting for $150. Dues for an organizational member of the section such as a Boy Scout troupe was set at $25.00.

Again, as always, the meeting ended with the ladies furnishing the most enjoyable refreshments. Each year it seems that they can get no better, but yet they always do. Thank you, ladies. A brief slide program of recent section hikes presented by Sue Thomas also proved enjoyable.

MT. HANLEY, WEST RUTLAND

by W. Churchill Scott

April 1, 1984

On Sunday, April 1, about a dozen members of the Killington Section visited Mount Hanley again. The weather was just perfect. Our walk started on bare ground, but as we went higher a bit of snow was encountered. Soon the ridge appeared and after hiking south a short ways we came to the hang glider take-off point.

As lunch began the "no hot water" crowd" won the argument. The rest wished that Harold Rogers had been there.

Perhaps the leader misunderstood, but he believed Steve was going to show us a road the hang gliders used so we could return by a different route.

With apologies to Mrs. Nyiri, we again descended a rather steep long side hill returning to the old wood road and our cars.

NEW BOSTON TRAIL, CHITTENDEN

by Winnie Shambo

April 7, 1984

Few of us assembled at Main Street Park on a chilly, liquid sunshine April 7th morn, but as the "mist" did not increase, we decided to head out for Chittenden and the New Boston Trail with Ray Catozzi, Carol Chapman, Sue Thomas, John Hughes and our puppy, Toby.

We left John's and Ray's cars on the wayside as the road beyond Mountain Top Inn became rougher and muddier; and so piled into Ted's 4 X 4 pickup. By the time we reached the old trailhead, the rain had stopped (by the way, the beginning of the trail has been relocated up the Forest Road a bit with a new sign designating it as the New Boston Trail).

We hiked through snow most of the way with Toby running exuberantly ahead, then dashing back to be sure Ted and I were following. Lunch at David Logan Shelter was a welcomed treat topped off by a sip of wine supplied by Ray. (Watch it Ray! You're going to gain a reputation!)

The trip back to the truck included a stop to pick an armful of hobble bush to be forced into bloom once put into water back at our homes. Sue and I examined a couple of old cellarholes, remnants from the New Boston settlement of a bygone era.

Packed into the truck with a wet puppy who seems intent upon climbing over or laying on everyone is not a comfortable way to travel. Ted took care of that very shortly when he found a soft spot on this superhighway and plunged the truck in mud up to the door on the passenger side. Once he stopped "revving" the engine and we all climbed out, he backed out with no trouble whatsoever. Three of our group opted to walk the remaining distance to the cars, no longer confident in Ted's driving abilities; but then, we are a hiking club, aren't we?

(Ed. Note: During lunch Winnie entertained us with readings from the diary of an old inhabitant of New Boston that she had obtained from the Chittenden Historical Society.)

SPRUCE PEAK

by Steve Pulling

April 15, 1984

Who can remember what the weather was like on April 15th? I personally know of five people who could probably remember if they tried hard enough. The thing I can not understand is why four of those five even showed up at the park to go hiking. They must be real diehards or something! I was the fifth person and I had to put in an appearance because I was the leader.

The weather was cold, rainy, windy, foggy, and definitely unsuitable for hiking. I talked Roma Pulling, Sue Thomas, and Winnie and Ted Shambo into not going hiking which didn't take much talking I might add. Thanks for showing up anyway, you four.

BEAVER MEADOWS TRIP

by Anne Mausolff

April 21, 1984

On April 21, thirteen hikers drove up into the Green Mountain National Forest to trek by the Beaver Meadows. We left the cars part way up the Forest Service road because the rest of the way was still snow-covered.

We started at 2100 feet and followed the old road up to a height of 2400 before descending slightly to the Meadows. On the way up, we passed three old cellar holes and the remnants of old apple orchards. Although the snow was a foot or more deep, it had been so well packed by snowmobiles that the walking was quite easy. Also, the day was cold and clear.

At the large beaver dam, the water was surprisingly low, so we crossed without trouble. Then we stopped for lunch among the hemlocks for a strong, cold north wind was blowing. Several of the men managed to get a fire going so everyone could enjoy a hot drink.

Along the Meadows we saw many signs of beaver activity and the fresh tracks of a fisher. The day before, Anne and Phil Woodbury had checked out the trail and found at one point that a bridge of logs was floating and uncrossable because the water was so high. Therefore Anne had come prepared with rope and saw to build another bridge. It turned out, however, that all this was unnecessary. The water had gone down considerably overnight, so everyone just jumped across -- more or less "dry shod."

After a three-mile descent at 4:00 o'clock, we reached the cars we had spotted.

OWL'S HEAD

by Ray Catozzi

April 29, 1984

Beautiful 75° summer weather greeted our hiking group this day, two months ahead of schedule. Nobody was complaining though, except for the early appearance, also, of those infamous, pesky black flies. Our destination was Gilbert's Lookout, a small rock ledge on the steep southwest slope of Owl's Head in Dorset.

This trail is the southwesterly end of a lengthy loop connecting Owl's Head, Green Peak, Dorset Peak, and a few other peaks in between. About 12½ miles long, its northwesterly terminus comes down into Dorset Hollow. George Gilbert cut this trail, many parts of which are now overgrown, about 50 years ago.

We followed town roads over half of the distance, and then soon after getting onto the trail proper we came upon an abandoned marble quarry. This made a nice rest stop especially for the photographers with us. The trail then swung around the south slope of Maple Hill, climbing steadily, and soon we were in a saddle between Maple Hill and Owl's Head.

At a huge boulder, towering over our heads, the trail suddenly shot up a short but steep and rocky slope for a vertical climb of 500 feet, coming out on the rock lookout. Here most of the group had lunch. Beautiful views of Mt. Equinox, Mother Myrick Mt., and a panorama of peaceful Dorset Village was spread out before us, as we munched our lunch. All of us, that is, except a few who decided the steep climb was too much, and had their lunch down below near the saddle.

A discussion of the lengthy Dorset Loop Trail was held during lunch, and your leader is going to check it out for a possible future LONG day hike, or an overnighter of a sort. Watch for it!

LONG TRAIL FROM MAD TOM NOTCH TO RTE. 11

by Rob Carey

May 6, 1984

This was a very enjoyable spring hike attended by four hikers. We left one car at Route 11 and drove up the Notch Road to start hiking by 10:00 A.M. Since the leaves were not yet out, we had several views not enjoyed by the summer hikers. The relocated Mad Tom Shelter has excellent views of the Taconics which we enjoyed until we got chilled.

As we continued we reached some patches of snow and were glad not to be backpacking. It was still clear when we we got to the summit, but the wind did not encourage lunch on the tower.

On the way down to Route 11 we saw trout lilies and dug a few wild onions.

KILLINGTON SECTION WALK THROUGH

by Stephen Pulling

May 12, 1984

Ole Mother Nature didn't cooperate with us too well on May 12th. Heavy rains again dampened things along with our spirits. Lucky for us again this year Ira, Irene, and Lorraine Hawley plus Al and Roma Pulling did some early mid week hiking and covered from Route 140 to the Upper Cold River Road. No major work to be done was encountered by either party. Winnie and Ted Shambo covered from Upper Cold River Road to Governor Clement Shelter finding nothing major either.

Thanks to the Sherburne Corporation's free passes up to the summit, Ray Catozzi and Carol Chapman hiked from Cooper Lodge to Clement Shelter finding 51 large blowdowns and two feet of snow (as well as rain, hail, lightning and thunder...Ed.). Meanwhile, LT thru-hikers reported an additional 16 blowdowns between Cooper and Pico Camp.

My gold star goes to Ira Hawley who did another section by himself from Route 4 to Pico Junction where the snow got too deep. Thanks a million, Ira!

My thanks also go to Sue Thomas and Nancy Sugarman who covered the trail into Tucker-Johnson for us.

Thanks again to everyone who supported me during the 1984 Killington Section Walk Through.

WORK PARTY

by Stephen Pulling

May 19, 1984

The scheduled work party to restore the Pico outhouse was changed by your Trails & Shelters chairman because more important projects were brought to my attention after the walk-through.

Winnie and Ted Shambo were issued the task of replacing boards that were missing from Clarendon Shelter because vandals needed that little extra firewood. With a chainsaw, nails, and a hammer they were off to Clarendon Lodge.

Sue and Rob Carey were issued a grass whip and pruning shears to clear reported heavy brush from the Upper Cold River Road, south to the Cold River.

Ray Catozzi, John Hughes, and I climbed Killington Mountain from Gov. Clement Shelter to start clearing our 66 blowdowns. We planned on clearing the first 15 blowdowns from Gov. Clement to Tamarack Shelter before we had to quit and hike back to our cars to meet other appointments. Just as we cut away the 15th blowdown at Tamarack Shelter, the heavens opened up and we got soaked. That was a nice thanks for all of the work we just did!! Fifteen down, fifty-one to go.

MYSTERY HIKE

by Ira and Irene Hawley

May 20, 1984

A mystery hike? This one was so named because your leader was not prepared to name a location when asked to lead. However, it turned out to be more of a mystery to the 15 hikers than anticipated. After leaving the park on a pleasant spring morning we next met at the Castleton Elementary School. While the group waited, Steve Pulling and your leader proceeded to Grady Bridge on Lake Bomoseen to spot a car at the destination. When we returned to join the group at the school, the hikers were thoroughly confused. We proceeded along Route 4 west to the West Castleton exit and then north to Glen Lake, and turned north again onto the Moscow Road, soon arriving at a turnout to park the cars.

Our hike first took us into a State Forest preserve. Next we came upon abandoned slate quarries and dumps. An abandoned and collapsing house was the area where we stopped for lunch. We often wonder about the families who inhabited a quiet location like this. A camera at this point recorded the group for future memories.

We proceeded on and reached a stream which drains from Half Moon Lake and flows to Lily Pond. Here there was a series of beaver dams and stumps of saplings and larger trees the beaver had used. By now our party was confused, but a sudden crossing of the beaver dam further downstream brought us again onto an old woods road. A half mile of gradual descent brought us into a clearing.

At an old cellar hole, Ray Catozzi discovered some asparagus plants, probably planted many years ago. From here it was a short distance to where we could look upon Lake Bomoseen on the west side to our waiting "spot car." When the group was finally reassembled for the return home all agreed it had been a pleasant day. Sorry more of you couldn't have joined us.

P.S.: We even signed up a new member, Richard Schmidt. Welcome!

PINE COBBLE HILL FLOWER HIKE, WILLIAMS-TOWN, MASS.

by Ray Catozzi
June 2, 1984

Eight of the faithful, Sue Thomas, Carol Chapman, Bernie Donahue, Nina La Penna, Leah Kapitan, John and Emma Hughes, and your leader, traveled out of beautiful springtime Vermont to see what summertime Massachusetts had to offer in the way of woodland flowers.

Climbing steadily up the Pine Cobble Trail we soon encountered numerous mountain azaleas (June Pinks) in full bloom. Flowering dogwood trees were also in evidence along the way as well as multitudinous pink lady slippers.

Coming out onto the rocky open summit of Pine Cobble Hill, views of Mt. Greylock to the south, Massachusetts' highest mountain, and the Taconic Range to the west, were spread out before us, as we braved a cool wind to eat lunch. Green Mountain Racetrack was in full aerial view to the northwest, and the town of Williamstown lay at the far foot of the hill.

After lunch, we headed down off the hill on the Appalachian Trail, heading for Blackinton, Mass. These two trails join on Pine Cobble Hill and go on to the Vermont border as one trail, the AT, where the Long Trail commences....

A high alpine bog was enjoyed just off the top of the high hill, and then we climbed down a short, steep, rocky stretch of trail, coming out into the gentle sloped hardwood forest again. Here again the mountain azaleas were profuse, although many of the blooms hadn't opened up yet on this high side of the hill. Further down there were many open to be seen and to smell, as well as the lady slippers, and then further down in the wet areas, a mass of blue violets colored the forest floor.

The last mile of our 4.4 mile trip followed a beautiful mountain stream, rushing noisily downhill with its extra load of rainwater. Down here, wild geraniums, cinquefoils, and starflowers were in abundance. Many of the gang stumbled off the end of the trail with armloads of June pinks and dogwood blooms to brighten their homes with. I believe it was unanimous that it was a very successful flower outing, one to repeat next year, same time, same station.

PROCTOR HIGH LEDGES

by Churchill Scott

It was a good thing that a couple of Proctor natives were along on this hike for the leader was talked into a hike to a spot where he had never been. However, in spite of a hot, humid, buggy afternoon, we found our goal and enjoyed an evening snack and visit.

In spite of poor visibility it was an enjoyable hike, and the whole group of around 20 people felt that these half-day hikes should be scheduled each quarter.

HOMER STONE MOUNTAIN

by John & Emma Hughes
June 9, 1984

On Saturday, June 9, we parked our cars at Big Branch River parking lot. From there seven hikers started bushwhacking for about two miles until we came to a forest road.

We went along this road for a short distance and followed an old logging road and a path that came to an end. From there we started to bushwhack again, this time following the flags marking the trail up to the top of Homer Stone Mountain. We had lunch on the summit with all the bugs which were thick all the way.

As we started down the other side we lost the flag trail. We kept going and came onto the Long Trail. We walked the trail back to our parked cars.

ROUTE 118 TO BARROWS CAMP

by Rob Carey
June 16-17, 1984

This turned out to be the "Road Closed" or "You can't get there from here" hike. The northern part of the state had experienced severe flooding several weeks before this hike. As a result, although we tried a half dozen different roads to get to Barrows Camp we were not able to reach it. After discussing the matter and rejecting the idea of trying a section further north, we decided to add four miles to the trip and end the hike at Vt. 15.

We had lunch just two miles into the hike at an excellent view of Ritterbush Pond. On our way in we saw the first deer I have seen on the Long Trail. We got to Parker Camp about suppertime. This shelter is in very good condition, and is located on a road that seems driveable with 4WD.

Laraway Lookout provided excellent views on Sunday morning as well as a place to eat the leftover chocolate eclairs Sue Thomas made. Crossing Coddington required getting slightly wet feet but no one minded. Barrows Camp made a good lunch spot. Prospect Rock's views were also very good, and there were several day hikers there also. It felt good to get back to the car. We did notice those extra four miles, but are glad we did them.

APPALACHIAN TRAIL, BRIDGEWATER

by Roma Pulling

One of the lesser-known duties of the Outings chairman is replacing a hike leader who can't fulfill the role or failing that, leading the hike himself/herself. So when Ray told me he would be unable to lead this hike due to a death in the family, I hoped to choose a new leader.

Came Sunday morning, and guess what? Of the 12 people who came to the park, I was the only one who had the remotest idea where to go. One thing we all did agree on was that we didn't want all the driving required by starting in Chateaugay; so we would hike as far in from Route 12 as possible and return to our cars the same way.

I got everyone headed toward Woodstock and after playing a game of leap-frog occasioned by a misunderstanding as to where we would stop for food, we arrived at our parking place, which is actually some distance off Rte. 12. We came very soon to the spur trail leading to Mauri Wintturi (formerly Gulf) Shelter but by-passed it, planning to stop there on the way back. At noon we had reached the Lookout (known as Luce's Lookout when I lived in that area) and ate lunch there. The tower is mostly disassembled and useless. It was, surprisingly, too cold to linger and enjoy the view, and no one was inspired to go further on the trail; so we started back.

I was dismayed to find how far Wintturi Shelter was relocated off the trail, definitely further than the 0.3 of a mile mentioned in the guidebook which Jake Sherman loaned me. Half of our people thought it not worth the effort and waited by the trail while the rest of us puffed and plodded uphill to the new location. I have been told eventually the AT will be relocated nearer the shelter and certainly hope this is true. There is a nice tribute to Mauri in the form of laminated copies of the LONG TRAIL NEWS story about his death and the speech delivered at the dedication.

With our group rejoined, we returned the short distance to our cars, and Killington Section luck was with us this time. We got only sprinkles until we were on our way to Rutland, when I had to run the wipers.

ICE BEDS -- WHITE ROCKS

by Ray Catozzi

June 30, 1984

A fair-sized group of twelve showed for this walk into the Ice Beds in Wallingford. Of course, we didn't see any ice in there that day. (I've never seen ice there in all the years I've visited that location!) The temperature of the air and water coming out from under the bottom boulders of the White Rocks talus slope stays at 40 degrees during the summer, and is very refreshing.

After a few of us scrambled up the boulders for a better view of the rock slope, we returned a short distance on the Ice Bed Trail but soon turned off onto a somewhat makeshift trail. This led to the rocky promontory close by and above the White Rocks picnic area. There are several open rock outlooks on this hill, and on the largest and most open of them, down a ways from the official lookout on top, we stopped for our picnic supper. Great views were to be had of the White Rocks Cliff and slope across the way and above us, as well as to the west and south up the Otter Valley. While eating, relaxing, and viewing, we spotted three or four peregrine falcons wheeling high about the cliff top. These were several of the young birds that are being raised by Cornell University and released and observed most of the summer in high cliff areas of the northeast. Their numbers had been declining over recent years, but due to man's help are now making a comeback.

With us that day were a pair of sisters, Jean Santamassino of Kearny, N.J., and Mary Hendricks of Houston, Texas, formerly of Rutland, back home visiting their mother. It was a pleasure to have them join us in our summer afternoon outing. Quite often tourists in the Rutland area see our Herald notices and join us, which is great. This hike was the second one starting at 1:00 P.M. this year and many folks like that length of outing. We will have more.

END-TO-END, RTE. 15 TO SMUGGLER'S NOTCH

by Al Pulling

July 6-8, 1984

On a beautiful Friday, July 6, we (Roma Pulling, Steve Pulling, Little Jimmy Davis -- not Little Jimmy Dickens -- and myself) left Rutland around 1:20 P.M. We had an enjoyable ride to Stowe and over to Smuggler's Notch. We did the Route 108 "road walk." Then we left Steve's car at Smuggler's Notch and all loaded into my car and went over to Route 15 and over to Johnson, where we spotted my car at a dirt road intersection.

At about 4:00 P.M. we headed for French Camp. There appeared to be a new logging road in the area which we followed for quite a spell. Noticed it was getting dark in the western sky. We continued on to French Camp, and it sure was a welcome sight. Lots of hard rains in the preceding weeks had left several washouts on the trail.

By the time we reached French Camp it looked more and more like rain. (We did have a light shower on the way in.) About half an hour after we got there, it started to come down, and I mean it came down. All night long it poured hard, accompanied by lightning and thunder. On the left side of the camp there was a leaky roof. Steve and Jim's sleeping bags got a little wet. They eventually wound up sleeping on the floor. Another hiker there also had a leaky roof where he bunked down forcing him to move to the table to keep dry.

Anyway, Saturday morning it appeared to be a fair day. We left French Camp about 8:20 A.M. Within an hour it had completely clouded over and stayed that way all day, with a few very light showers. A wide brook about 3/4 of a mile from French Camp, raised to flood stage by the heavy rains, caused us some delay, but we managed to get across. After a few rest stops we continued on our way. It was cloudy and foggy on Whiteface Mountain, so, needless to say, there were no views. We arrived on the top at about 12:15 P.M. After a cool, windy break we proceeded on to Whiteface Shelter. There were three other hikers. They did not appear to want us to stay there. It was then about 1:25 P.M. After a lunch break, we pushed on for Sterling Pond Shelter, arriving about 6:00 P.M. Steve and Jim had reached there about an hour earlier and had our supper all ready. We were tired by then.

We retired early, and at 8:05 A.M., Sunday, July 8, we were on our way to Rte. 108. Steve's car was a welcome sight when we arrived at 9:10 A.M. We all hopped into Steve's car and went to Johnson to get my car. Steve and Jim headed home, but Roma and I stopped in Morrisville to visit my cousin. We had dinner at my cousin's house -- real food!

The trail on that section needs work badly, with lots of water running down the trail. The blazing needs improving as well.

MYSTERY HIKE UP SPRUCE KNOB

by Ray Catozzi

July 15, 1984

A hazy warm day was in the offing as 13 of the faithful headed for Middletown Springs and then north up the Spruce Knob Farm road, right into the yard of Mr. & Mrs. Larry Kenney at the very dead end of the road. "Park your cars right up there on that back lawn," said Larry, "and the trail starts right up there beyond that upper meadow near the white birch tree."

Well, we found the trail, but lost it one third of the way up the mountain. Larry said it hadn't been maintained like it should be. So my moderate climb turned into a somewhat difficult one as we bushwhacked up what looked like the easiest route. Bushwhacking is bad enough on the level, but it's hard going for some while climbing.

However, we stumbled on to the trail again near the top and continued to our destination with relative ease. The remains of a fire tower and the fire watcher's shanty were looked over after which we moved out to the top of a bluff looking to the west where we settled down and lunched. The views were limited, both by the mostly wooded top and by the thick haze. To the south from the trail near the top we could look down on the Kenneys' home and property and see our five cars parked in a neat row on their lawn. The Kenneys own most, if not all, of the land this trail is on, and their gracious hospitality in allowing us to invade their domain was greatly appreciated. They even greeted us at the back door of their nearly 200 year old home with pitchers of ice water and pleasant conversation, after we had come back down the mountain. What a wonderful way to start and end an outing. Thank you very much, Mr. and Mrs. Kenney.

PANCAKE BREAKFAST

by Ted and Winnie Shambo
July 21, 1984

Right until the morning of our scheduled pancake breakfast we honestly thought it might have to be cancelled due to lack of participation. Eleven persons, however, actually took part in this early morning outing, including Ray Auger, Southern Field Assistant, who met us at Big Branch Picnic Area.

Ted got a wood fire going over which he fried the sausages. We used a two-burner camp stove with camp grill for the pancakes. It took four charred pancakes before the proper temperature was obtained. We had brought a gallon thermos of boiling water so no one had to wait for that all important first cup of coffee or cocoa.

After everyone had had their fill and we had cleaned up, we parked our cars in the parking lot at Black Branch and hiked an easy two miles into Little Rock Pond via the Long Trail where we visited with the caretaker, Chip.

Ray Auger and I went swimming and the water was really nice after we got used to it. Soon after, Ray Catozzi joined us. Some of our group returned to their cars by the same inward route while the remainder of us hiked the Green Mountain Trail. Along the way I collected at least a dozen different and beautiful mushrooms, but unfortunately, once home could not identify even one from my book.

Of the 11 persons at the breakfast, only two called our home. I believe the confusion was due to the fact that the summer schedule did not mention reservations required although the news release did. I feel that this confusion can be eliminated in the future with a simple telephone call to the leader whenever there is a fee involved with participation.

We just about broke even on expenditures for food. We hope the people who turned out for this outing enjoyed themselves and that our breakfast can become an annual event with even more participation.

BIRD MOUNTAIN

by John and Emma Hughes
July 28, 1984

It was a real nice day, but only two hikers showed up to go on this hike.

We started near the last house where an old jeep road begins and goes along the eastern base of the mountain. Then we turned and climbed up another old logging road which goes to a marked trail leading to the top.

After we had lunch we returned by a different route back to the jeep road.

DORSET PEAK

by Ray Catozzi
August 5, 1984

When you climb a mountain like Dorset, which is a steady pull all the way to its 3700 foot level, you need, or want, a nice clear, mild day with a breeze, for it is a workout. But that's not what we had this day. Temperatures were in the upper 80's to lower 90's with high humidity to smother us. Just a trace of a breeze now and then.

But the eight stalwarts, who showed for this climb, persevered, even after losing the trail for a while near the bottom of the climb. We made it to the lower peak of Dorset Mountain where there are the remains of another of the previously numerous firetowers on Vermont's mountaintops. Only two remain in use today for fire watching, and our own Churchill Scott mans one of these on Killington Peak.

At this site there are limited views to the north past Danby Four Corners, but none at all from the highest peak of Dorset, about one half mile to the east, which three of us investigated after lunch.

Originally we planned to climb Dorset from the north and go out to the southwest through Dorset Hollow, but we neither wanted to take the extra long drive to spot cars nor had enough hikers familiar with the routes to split up into two groups, each coming in a different way and going out the other. We'll save that plan for another time. We all made it back to our cars without melting, but just barely.

SUPPER HIKE

by Sue Thomas
August 7, 1984

In the absence of the Badgers, Linda Krasner and I took on the Annual Deer Leap Supper Hike this year. In spite of an impending thunderstorm, three hardy hikers turned up at the park: the leaders and Ray Catozzi. Undaunted by thunder, lightning and torrential sprinkles, we three intrepid hikers proceeded to scale the stairs of the Back Home Cafe, reaching the summit in record time. We picnicked on quiche while awaiting the spectacular sunset over K-Mart-- one of those awe-inspiring sights which make climbing worthwhile. However, since the sun steadfastly refused to set at 6:30, we decided to really rough it and hike to the parking lot to enjoy blackberries provided by Ray, before limping home to recover from our ordeal. (In other words: rained out, see you next year!)

Aug. 10-12, 1984

The only nice thing about this weekend is that it rained. I say that because the trip was cancelled due to lack of participation and I would have felt badly indeed if the weekend had been one of our rare and beautiful crispy, clear, sun-shining days.

Perhaps there was too much going on this weekend. And so, let's try again.

Ed. Note: The weekend has been rescheduled to Oct. 20-21 (see schedule).

SLIDE EVENING

by Churchill Scott
August 15, 1984

It was very good to see Fred and Helen Field at the recent slide show presentation and enjoy their movie film. There were shots of winter and summer activities of the section way back in the 1940's and 50's.

Also there were slides of the winter weekends at Tall Timbers, outings of the 1950s and 1960s and a recent trip to Mt.

Katahdin by the Shambo family.

Our meeting ended with a tasty selection of goodies that hit the spot.

Let's try to have more of this type of activity. Don't you have some interesting slides you'd like to share with our section members?

HALE HOLLOW, PLYMOUTH

by Ira Hawley
August 19, 1984

A good group of 24 hikers met at the park on a cloudy morning to proceed to Hale Hollow in Plymouth. The sun came out as we arrived at our parking area.

As we started our hike along a country road we passed a fellow comfortably seated in his folding chair in the river bed of the Broad Brook panning for gold. A group photo was taken just before we left the road to start a climb on a well-marked trail. Large boulders along the way were a topic of conversation as we climbed. Nearing the top, Steve Pulling discovered a bird's nest with three eggs on the ground near the trail, which we determined to be of the thrush family.

At midday a discussion of location of the lunch break resulted in our continuing on until 1:00 P.M. for a late rest period at the picnic area with several available tables. On our return along a little-used town road, we took a side trip to Plymouth Five Corners Cemetery where many of the grave markers were dated in the early 1800s. Plots of the Hale family (Hale Hollow) and Slack family (Slack Hill) were located. A 1½ mile walk (all downhill) brought us back to Plymouth Five Corners to our cars. Much interesting history of this area could be learned from local historians, I'm sure.

As we were saying our farewells to this congenial group, a few sprinkles fell, which developed into a heavy rain on our return trip home.

*Congratulations
Roma & Al!!!*

MYSTERY HIKE

by Ira and Irene Hawley
September 9, 1984

It was a pleasure to substitute for Steve Pulling on this hike. A "Mystery Hike" arouses the imagination. On a beautiful afternoon 32 people assembled at the park. We went to Brandon and left Route 7 on the McConnell Road to Forestdale. Then up Birch Hill past Goodnew Orchard to Sugar Hollow where we parked the cars. We went into the woods on an old woods road parallel to Sugar Hollow Brook. It was shady with a few easy ups and downs.

As there was no "Real Destination," after two miles of walking we had a discussion whether to continue further or retrace our steps. It was decided not to overdo it for some of the newcomers and we returned to our cars via the same route.

When the last of the slower walkers arrived at our cars, we discovered that John Hughes had thoughtfully procured a supply of fresh apples from the nearby sales stand. Everyone had a pleasant afternoon.

THE LAST MILE: LAKE MANSFIELD TO SMUGGLERS' NOTCH

by Roma Pulling, E.T.E.

It seemed like an occasion for fireworks, frivolity, and champagne toasts instead of the quiet conclusion of this backpack, much like any other. It wasn't like any other because my husband, Al Pulling, and I had been laboring toward this end, this moment, for six years, four months, and two days. We are now End-to-Enders!!!

At the start and for the first 130 miles or so, completing the trail seemed like an impossible dream for people in their middle years. From 130 to 200 miles I began to take it seriously, and after last summer's eight-day trek I knew I could do it. Even so, this last effort had to be postponed while Alfred recuperated from major surgery performed July 16; but on September 7, 1984, at 2:00 P.M. we were on our way from Rutland with our backpacking companions, Steve Pulling and Jim Davis. We were blessed with good weather throughout the weekend.

Spotting our car in Smugglers' Notch, we all crowded into Steve's car and headed for Lake Mansfield, parked his car in the lot there and hiked to Taylor Lodge for the night. The trail was familiar as we had used it when hiking south over Bolton Mountain last October. We had the shelter to ourselves and spent an enjoyable night, under the light of an almost full moon.

Saturday morning we discussed whether to leave by the main route or by the "much more interesting" but more difficult Clara Bow Trail. Three voices chorused, "Let's Clara Bow it" (guess who was the silent partner?), and we worked our way through Nebraska Notch. I thought it compared in wildness to Devil's Gulch further north. Arriving at Butler Lodge around noon, we ate lunch and watched members of the Burlington Section creosoting the shelter.

Here we had to decide if we could make it to Taft Lodge at a reasonable hour, and the boys decided to go for it. I puffed along at a much slower pace with Alfred acting as watch dog and arrived at Taft, with sore feet and throbbing knees, at 5:30 P.M. At the approach to the Forehead, the boys had decided on the more difficult main trail again rather than the by-pass. I found it rough but pulled through with an occasional helping hand from one of the fellows. At the Summit Station we had enjoyed the novelty of browsing among the gifts and buying cold drinks. Our stop at the summit of Mansfield was a real pleasure even though it was swarming with day hikers. After resting, taking pictures, and admiring the delicately beautiful Alpine sandwort in bloom there, we made the long descent to Taft.

Overnight at Taft was a different experience from the one at Taylor, which had been one of complete silence except for the occasional hoot of an owl. The caretaker at Taft was host to nearly 20 people. They were as quiet as 20 people can be, but outside the wind swept past while we were fanned by breezes that slipped through cracks in the log walls, and in the dead of night a large plane flew over. Sunday morning we descended to our car and on the way met a 75-year-old man working on his End-to-End alone.

For people who hike the LT in one trip, the sight of the marker at the Canadian border must be a stirring experience. For us, the opportunity to look down from the highest point on the LT was a fitting climax and one we won't forget. I remember many things about our six-year odyssey: breathtaking views, meetings with other hikers, quiet nights under the stars, other nights around the campfire.

So if you're walking through the woods and meet a spare, gray-haired hiker with a triumphant smile and sporting an End-to-End patch, followed by a husband similarly equipped, please salute. WE MADE IT!!!

Editor's Note: Congratulations, Roma and Al, from us all!

BOOK REVIEW

A study of the plants and animals living on a small private plot of land doesn't sound like a book you wouldn't want to put down, but A Natural History of Tinmouth, Vermont is just that.

Author George LeBoutillier and his wife, Miriam, moved to Tinmouth when they retired from teaching at Ohio University.

During the years that they have lived in Tinmouth, the Le Boutilliers have become well acquainted with the comings and goings of the creatures large and small that inhabit their land, the plants growing there and even its geology.

Mr. Le Boutillier's understanding and love all living things shine through his observations. In describing the parenting habits of cowbirds, he says "Avian mores are not human mores and to interpret bird behavior by human values is a mistake." And you will laugh with him at the raccoons' perspicacity in having learned the date when sweet corn will be ready for picking. "The day before will be the one on which they visit your garden to sample all the ears!"

The author's charming and humorous sketches enliven the book.

This natural history is written simply enough for a child or beginning naturalist to understand, but will also interest those well versed in the field, especially those who live in Rutland County.

A Natural History of Tinmouth, Vermont is available at Book King in Rutland.

IN SYMPATHY

Word has been received recently of the death of the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Weston.

CLIMB THE MOUNTAINS

RECIPE

Stuffed Apple - An apple stuffed with peanut butter and raisins or with cream cheese, honey and cinnamon makes a great trail snack. Just cut off the top quarter of the apple, remove the core (leaving the bottom of the apple intact to keep filling in). Stuff the opening, replace the lid, and carry in a plastic bag. ---

IMPACT OF PICO EXPANSION DISCUSSED

by Rob Carey

As you may know, Pico Ski Area is planning an expansion. As part of this they are making a major effort to inform and involve interested organizations. There have been two meetings so far and a third is planned.

At the first meeting people brought up topics such as traffic, sewage, views, and hiking trails, that the development could affect. At the second meeting the general plans which took these items into consideration were presented. Of course, not everybody present was fully satisfied with what was shown, but all were supportive of the effort to compromise and avoid confrontation.

Most of the land through which the Long Trail passes from U.S. 4 south almost to Ram's Head is owned by Pico. There are no plans for the major part of this area. Most of the envisioned development will be near the existing base area. This includes a sports complex and a possible retail center. Expansion of condominiums in existing areas is also planned. One of these areas, Brad Mead Drive, is near the Trail.

Pico recently purchased land that abuts U.S. 4 east of Sherburne Pass. There are plans to build housing units on this new section. While this would not affect the Trail, ski lifts and ski trails planned to connect with the main part of Pico would have to cross the Trail. The number and location of these crossings is unknown. We hope that they will be small and negotiable. Since this is also part of the Appalachian Trail, acquisition is involved.

At this point cautious optimism seems appropriate. Club and section officials are certainly interested in hearing from members on this issue.

WEST RUTLAND STATE FOREST

by Ray Catozzi

September 16, 1984

If you look up into the extreme upper left hand (northwest) square corner of a map of West Rutland, you will find, if you have the right map (Vermont Gazetteer), a marked off tract of land less than a mile square. This in itself is not so unusual on a map, but inside that little 1/2" square on the map are the words "West Rutland STATE Forest."

This is intriguing to a map lover, a state forest of less than a mile square! Worth investigating for a possible club hike. It was, and we did hike it, on Sunday, Sept. 16!

A private road coming off the upper Whipple Hollow Road leads into the state land, going past one beautiful camp on the way, with a lawn and rock garden. The route then becomes a wood road as it climbs and encircles a high hill in the center of the forest plot. After coming close to the crest of the hill on the west side, it then dips back down around the south side to re-join the lead-in road just above the camp.

We lunched in a semi-cleared area where some logging had been done, and then started back down, continuing our counterclockwise encirclement of the hill. We had a grand walk and many had great fun picking blackberries on the way down, some just to eat on the spot, but a few lingering behind to gather enough for a pie or two.

Only limited views of Blue Ridge and Pico were to be seen to the east, but we walked under many extremely tall oak, maple, birch and spruce trees, some easily over 100 feet tall.

If anyone has the answer to why this little, and little known, plot of land is called a state forest, we would be interested in hearing it. Maybe the Vermont Department of Forests and Parks expects it to grow like the acorns do. The only fact that seems to have a bearing on it is a sign on the gate across the lead-in road. It says "West Rutland Fire Wood Lot."

MYSTERY CANOE TRIP

by Steve Pulling
September 22, 1984

Despite the local meteorologist's forecast of a poor day, the weather proved to be quite nice and a very successful canoe trip was had this year. The recipe for the day was relaxation, exploration, fellowship, and most of all just plain old fun out in Mother Nature's vast array of beauty.

The destination this year was Camp Sunrise in Benson, Vermont, which is bordered by Sunrise Lake on the east and Sunset Lake on the west. The shores of these two lakes are mostly wooded with very few camps in comparison to most lakes in the area, which made for a peaceful setting.

Eleven people with six canoes shoved off from the waterfront at Camp Sunrise into Sunrise Lake with no real destination in mind. A couple of canoes just meandered around the middle of the lake while the remaining canoes slowly made their way around the perimeter of the lake looking at the scenery, fish, turtles and ducks.

About 11:30 A.M. everyone took a break from paddling and just lounged in the canoes soaking up some very warm sun rays. Somewhere around noon we made the very long portage of 30 feet into Sunset Lake. After 20 minutes of paddling we beached the canoes and climbed to a high point of land with nice views of Sunset Lake for lunch. The abbreviated method of starting a fire was used by the trip leader after many attempts to use the Girl Scout method had failed.

When all of the hot dogs were roasted and lunch was consumed, we couldn't make any more excuses for sitting and over-looking the lake so we boarded the canoes and paddled around Sunset Lake at a leisurely pace. The 30-foot portage was encountered on the return trip back to Camp Sunrise, and the trip leader could see everyone was ready to quit for the day. So much for the fourth annual Killington Section canoe trip.

KILLINGTON PEAK FROM THE BASE LODGE

by Harold C. Rogers
September 30, 1984

The weather was warm and quite clear as we met in the park. When we arrived at the base lodge of Killington, we waited a few minutes at the parking lot for some additional hikers we thought might show up, but they didn't.

We could see our destination at the top and were anxious to get started. As no one seemed to care about going up under the ski lift, we decided to go up the service road. On the lower slopes the leaves were green and we were sheltered and did not have a good view. But near the top we could see more and admire the color of the valley and mountains. With numerous rest stops it took us a little over two hours getting to the top.

On our arrival Churchill had coffee and snacks for us. His homestead was quite cozy for our group. After resting and visiting we looked over the gondola and summit restaurant and started down. The descent was faster but more painful. The hike was good exercise and seemed to be enjoyed by all.

MIDDLETOWN MOUNTAIN

by Ira and Irene Hawley

October 6, 1984

With consideration for the many Fall activities (foliage viewing, holiday weekend, art showings, etc.) it was nice to see 10 interested hikers gather at the park for our own foliage viewing trek.

With full sun on the mountains as we approached the Taconic Range from West Rutland to Tinmouth, the scenery was excellent. As we left Route 133 at Ira Town Hall and proceeded north, Herrick Mountain appeared high on the horizon directly ahead.

We parked the cars at the beginning of an abandoned town road and proceeded along it upgrade toward Middletown Springs. At the summit was a clearing where the sun shone in warm and made a pleasant place for our lunch stop. As we proceeded further along there were look-outs for views of Killington and Shrewsbury Peaks. Farther along we came upon seasonal camps, and on a side trip we discovered a small pond, and just beyond, open fields green with alfalfa. From here there was a nice view of the eastern slope of Spruce Knob and beyond to a settlement which I think was Poultney. We were reluctant to leave this pleasant place, but as with all hikes, we had to retrace our steps to our cars. A pleasant day was had by all participants.

GIRL SCOUT LT END-TO-END EVENT

by Janet Martin

October 13-14, 1984

This Event took place on the weekend of Oct. 13-14. The weather was beautiful throughout the state on both days. We had 50 troops on the trail with about 500 girls and 200 leaders. Harry Peet, Ray Auger, and Ben Day were very helpful to the planning committee in suggesting hikes, access, etc.

In the local area, Killington Section members Ray Catozzi, Sue Thomas, Roma Pulling, and Jan Martin accompanied troops on their hikes. Ray and Sue went on overnight hikes with Senior and Cadette troops from the Rutland area, north and south from Forest Road #10 respectively. Roma went in to Clarendon Lodge, up Beacon Hill and also a quick trip to the swinging bridge; Jan led her troop up the New Boston Trail to Mt. Carmel. Carol Chapman was consultant to a troop that hiked from the top of Killington to Governor Clement Shelter. They were given passes on the gondola by the Killington Ski Area.

Part of the troops' assignment was to report on trail and shelter conditions. In the Killington Section itself, the following was reported: Killington Peak to Governor Clement Shelter ...some blow-downs; Route 103 to Beacon Hill...well maintained, some washouts need work. They also recorded the people they met as follows: New Boston Trail, 13 with group and met 10, all from out of state (the trail marking was very confusing because of the cross-country ski trails also marked in blue); Long Trail Lodge to Gifford Woods, 18 in group, met eight in family groups (this group did not request a consultant); Killington, six in group, met three on trail; Rte. 103 to Beacon Hill, 19 in group and met eight hikers, mostly singles.

The Scouts would like to take this opportunity to thank all the above people for their help in making this Event possible. All the troops were very enthusiastic about their trips and I hope the GMC will gain some members as a result. Almost all reported they would like to go again.

BAKER PEAK

by Rob and Sue Carey

October 14, 1984

We took the easy way in, only two miles each way, by hiking in from Forest Road #30. The weather was excellent, resulting in a good turnout of over 20 hikers. The hikers' ages ranged from three to seventy, including several new people. The 10:00 A.M. starting time proved popular, as well as the easy destination.

A viewpoint about two-thirds of a mile below the summit provided an excellent lunch spot, with plenty of comfortable rocks to relax on. The views from the summit were even more extensive. The return hike was enjoyable and uneventful. Some took a short side trip to Lost Pond Shelter before driving home. We also saw several inviting campsites to keep in mind for future use.

It is unfortunate that we are unable to generate more interest in some of our "overnight outings." Fortunately, we have the stout-hearted few who do enjoy an overnight, such as our trip to Merck Forest.

Sue Thomas, Roma Pulling and I, along with Honey Bear (my pup), met at the park while Sue Carey joined us as we passed her home on Route 7. As I recall, it was a pleasant day and the ride down was uneventful except that Honey Bear turned out to be a poor rider.

There was a bit of a mix-up in our reservations, but once straightened out we proceeded on to Beebe Pond and the Upper Shelter where there is a fine view of Mt. Equinox. In the evening, lights of the building seem to twinkle as stars from atop the mountain. Beebe Pond is growing in more each year I return. A great deal of slash work and mowing had been done in the area which makes for easier access to the privy. The white birch seemed whiter, if that is possible. The pump at the pond has not been working for at least two years. Water for the two shelters at Beebe Pond is available from a brook 0.2 miles left from the Upper Shelter.

Soon after lunch and a short rest we decided to climb Mt. Antone. We followed orange markings on the trees which, at times, were difficult to find, causing the leader to sometimes miss the trail for a short bit only to cross it further on. We spent some time at the clearing, enjoying the sunshine, views, and Honey Bear's antics.

Back at the shelter another rest period ensued for all of us. Sue Thomas took the opportunity of Honey Bear's inactivity to do a beautiful sketch of her.

Supper consisted of spaghetti with meatball/Italian sausage sauce, tossed salad and Italian bread provided by the leader. Nothing says one has to do without a good meal in the woods.

The night was mild for the time of year, although Honey Bear shivered and had to be covered. During the wee hours a tremendous coughing noise was heard from the direction of the pond, followed by the sound of a large animal crashing through the woods. A bear!? My bear nearly climbed the shelter wall from fear and from that point on slept with her head propped on my neck and most of her body within my sleeping bag.

Sue Carey left us before breakfast to return to unfinished chores at home. After our breakfast the rest of us broke camp and headed out for the parking lot.

Just as a footnote regarding something I would like to see altered at Merck Forest: We came across a number of hunters during our short stay at the forest. Either the Foundation should close the Forest to hikers during hunting season or hunting should not be allowed within the Forest boundaries. I'm not aware of any "accidents" happening there but that fact does not preclude one from happening sometime in the future.

VALIQUETTE MEMORIAL HIKE

by Joe Valiquette
November 4, 1984

It was a clear November day as 35 hikers began their climb up East Mountain. East Mountain was a special place for my father, Harold Valiquette. He hunted and hiked it and in later years taught his grandchildren about the beauty of the mountain. We encountered two animal traps on the way up. I stepped on one, but no harm done. When we reached the top, the view was great. You could see Rutland, West Rutland, and off in the distance, the Adirondacks. Our descent was uneventful, but the temperature became a bit cool as we hurried down the mountain.

COVERED DISH SUPPER

by Roma Pulling
November 17, 1984

Some of the people we look forward to seeing at our annual "deer season special" couldn't make it this year, but a loyal group of 16 did manage to gather at the camp at Tamarack Notch. The food was delicious, as always.

Instead of Rotary cabin, which is crowded but warm, we were assigned to the dining hall. Even though the caretakers had had a fire in the fireplace all afternoon, it was never really warm. Of course it was our luck to be there on one of the coldest nights so far with a couple of inches of snow on the ground. Nevertheless, we are grateful to Grace Congregational Church for letting us meet at their camp for the fourth year in a row.

Sue Thomas presented the program this year -- a very interesting set of slides from her trip to Arizona. Thanks, Sue. Thanks are also due to Al Pulling for furnishing the wood for the fire and helping to set up tables in the afternoon.

SPINELESS BACKPACK

by Sue Thomas
Oct. 27-28

We five spineless backpackers tried to prove ourselves more hardy than our name by meeting at 5:30 a.m. for our hike, seeing the sunrise as we drove north. We left a car at Rte. 118, and began our hike with day packs from Hazen's Notch. We hiked about 10 miles that day; over Haystack and Tillotson, with a stop at Tillotson Camp for lunch (yes, Roma, we found the door!), then on to Belvidere. The weather was overcast, obscuring views, but the sun peeked thru occasionally, and we were all grateful for the unseasonably warm weather. After that it really got rugged -- we drove back to Hazen's Notch accompanied by an "oldies" radio station, with backseat chorus, put away our day packs and labored into Hazen's Notch Camp with our back-packs...1/2 mile!

We all suffered thru one of those tasteless trail suppers that Roma hates so much -- swordfish filets cooked in wine with hollandaise sauce, tossed salad, baked potatoes, shish kabobs, and crepes with hot blueberry sauce, then settled in for a snug warm night. (All the reports we heard about the camp are true -- hats off to the adopter.)

Sunday morning (60°!!) we trudged the one-half mile out again to switch back to our reasonable day packs (except Jim Davis, whose day pack was never reasonable -- borrowed from his son and ... sort of small!) and drove around to Rte. 242 for the last leg.

We reached the summit of Buchanan before we realized it, and played hide & seek with the sun the rest of the day, as we struggled thru one of Rob's famous "all-downhill-from-here" stretches -- you know, the kind where you'd swear you were still going up but decide to trust his judgment. When we finally did hit the downhill, it was a doozy, but we all survived with enough energy to spare for champagne, provided by Steve, to celebrate the end of Sue's first, Rob's second, and the beginning of Junior's End-to-End. Congratulations all!!!

"HORSESHOE WALK" - BELMONT

by Krissy Nadler
December 2, 1984

The "flakes" were coming down (and I don't mean those out-of-staters) occasionally as a courageous group of 12 hikers set out on a "horseshoe walk" in the quiet town of Belmont. The snow crunched comfortably under our feet as we trudged along to our destination -- lunch on Mrs. Nyiri's cottage porch! After a nice, leisurely lunch and quite a long rest, we started back to the cars. It was a nice walk back with nothing exciting happening. As we reached the cars, someone remarked about how nice the snow looked, just like....a winter wonderland.

Thanks to all who came on this hike!

MYSTERY MOONLIGHT HIKE

by Ted Shambo
December 8, 1984

There aren't that many short-distance places to choose from for an evening hike so we're sure the destination of this outing wasn't so very much a mystery after all, especially when we parked our cars at Rte. 103 and headed north on the Long Trail.

The moon was hidden by cloud cover and never showed its face as Sue Carey, wearing snowshoes, led the group into Clarendon Shelter.

Thomas Shambo and I packed dry wood in for the campfire. Once at the shelter, we had to rebuild the fire pit, then gather dry branches and twigs for kindling. Soon we had a good fire burning.

It didn't take long for the water to heat and soon we were drinking our hot beverages (some had wine) while we talked, joked and enjoyed one another's company.

Those that usually "stay-over" on the Moonlight Hikes opted not to do so this year, and so we all hiked back to the cars together.

BEDNAR CAMP

by Harold C. Rogers
December 16, 1984

This hike to an unknown area turned out well. The weather was very warm for this time of year, but not sunny. The ground was snow covered, but the walking was not difficult.

Fifteen of us left the fire station about half past nine and drove to the intersection of Rte. 103 and the Spring Lake Road. We parked the cars and started walking up the road toward Spring Lake which was quite steep. We walked about one quarter of a mile and then left the road and continued uphill in a westerly direction in open pasture. As soon as we got to the top of the hill the pasture ended and we started downhill in open hardwoods. There were quite a few logging tree tops, briars, and bushes to get through also. After we got to the bottom of the hill, the walking was more or less level, for Vermont that is. We walked about a mile to a logging road and then about three-quarters of a mile to the Bednar hunting camp.

We arrived at the camp about noon. After Steve Pulling opened the camp and we all had a good look around, we built a fire and had our usual picnic. It wasn't as cold as usual standing around the fire, but the smoke was a nuisance.

At about one o'clock we had a nice walk back to the cars. We followed a road back along Mill River which was better walking than the way we had gone in.

Although I had underestimated the mileage by about a mile, it was still a good hike.

STRATTON POND IN WINTER

by Winnie Shambo
January 6, 1985

Killington Section's first day hike of the new year was quite a chilly one as I recall and so we were pretty well bundled in layers.

The drive to where we would park the cars took just about an hour. After donning day packs we set out for the Pond via logging roads near one of the ski trails and behind some of the most beautiful homes in the area.

About 20 minutes into the hike, we came to the International Paper Company's log road which runs from the Arlington/West Wardsboro Road to Rte. 30. The paper company has gates with locks at each end to prevent public travel. Crossing this "major highway in the wilderness" diagonally, we picked up yet another logging road, this one pretty well eroded by recent logging activity in the area. Soon we came to a beaver pond where we made our way across their dam which contained some freshly gnawed branches.

Skirting a wet area we came to the Stratton Mt. Trail. Following this trail to the pond, we came to the DuFresne Job, an old logging site. This is a clearing where, now, the beaver have taken over, and to the left of the trail there is a good-sized beaver pond. There is a brook to cross just before beginning to climb the ridge separating this clearing from the pond. This whole area was ice-covered during our visit and I took a nasty fall there (and suffered whiplash for several days).

We passed one final beaver pond and after topping the ridge we began our downhill trek to the pond.

What a home-coming! This was the first time I had been there in winter. It was beautiful, a whole new perspective for me on one of the loveliest sites on the Long Trail. The only portion not ice-locked was the outlet on the west side of the pond.

The Caretaker's tent platform looked forlorn without its tent and about that time it would have offered welcome shelter. The wind was blowing strongly.

The "boy scouts" of the group made numerous attempts to get a campfire going so there could be hot water for beverages and soup. After a time they gave up and some of us took a walk around the pond. I had a few things to check out for Ray Auger, our Southern Field Assistant.

From Stratton View Shelter smoke could be seen rising from a campfire coaxed into being by our "girl-scouts." By the time we returned to the group, the water was good and hot.

When everyone was warmed by their beverages, the fire was extinguished and the ashes spread before we left the area.

It is pretty difficult going downhill when your path is ice-covered. Several of us took falls. However, Roma's was the most serious. She broke a bone in her wrist. By the time we reached the cars it was quite swollen.

I hope everyone enjoyed the pond and by now has recovered from their injuries.

Ed. Note.: After two months in a cast, Roma has progressed to a brace and is back on the hiking trail.

HALF MOON POND STATE PARK

by Sue Thomas and Linda Krasner
January 13, 1985

After some discussion as to the exact location of Half Moon Pond State Park, a group of approximately one dozen geared up to explore the park, which we were fortunate to have all to ourselves. It was a warm sunny day with a half foot of freshly fallen snow -- excellent for the first good cross-country skiing of the new year.

We skied and hiked half way around Half Moon Pond and then across it. There was some swapping of ski equipment along the way as well as discussion as to which skis were faster--wax or no-wax. There was also a lot of food swapping as we waited for the water to heat over the fire for lunch at one of the shelters.

After lunch the skiers became hikers and the group hiked to High Pond. We returned to Krasners' house for refreshments and to warm up after the day of winter activities.

BELMONT TO EAST WALLINGFORD

by Krissy Nadler
January 26, 1985

On Saturday, Jan. 26, a group of 15 eager hikers met at the fire station... ready for an outing in the quaint little village of Belmont. We went for a 45 minute ride to get there, but I didn't hear anyone complain.

When we reached Belmont, we stopped and parked in front of the general store. We started up the hill, parallel to the store. When we reached the top, we turned left. At this point a few of the more adventurous hikers put on their X-country skis. Following a twisting country road, we made our way up to the highway. John Hughes drove his waiting car back to the general store, while the rest of us walked back.

We all met back at Mrs. Nyiri's cottage porch, a welcome shelter against the piercing wind, where we dined sufficiently.

Special thanks to Mr. Al Pulling for helping me lead this hike.

BELMONT AVE. EXTENSION TO PULLINGS'HOUSE

by Ray Catozzi

February 10, 1985

Well, we finally got a hit on this outing, after striking out last year and the year before, due to extensive winter thaws. Actually, we didn't completely strike out then, as we substituted East Mountain and Bald Mountain in Mar. '83 and Feb. '84.

You see, this route through the northeastern part of Rutland City and Rutland Town goes through parts of Cedar Swamp, which is fine going when it is frozen, but rather difficult when these parts are marshy water. The thaw came again this year, but a week later, so we were finally in luck.

Twenty winter enthusiasts showed up on a fine sunny Sunday afternoon with a 30° temperature. There were 10 hiking, eight skiing and two snowshoeing, quite a mixed group. Naturally, due to the differing speeds in travelling over snow, we got scattered over quite a long distance before the end of the trip.

Through some open meadow first, then through some mixed pine and hardwood forests we went. Then down into part of the swamp where Tenney Brook flows, across the brook, following an old overgrown development road put in a few years back (no development materialized, though). Our trail on this road bed was narrowed to just a couple feet most of the way.

Then we intersected the powerline that runs from the North Rutland sub-station around east of Rutland to the South Rutland sub-station. Following this south for about ½ mile or so, we passed over another frozen part of the swamp, right under the powerline. Then we peeled off onto another old wood road that led up to some open hilltop fields just northwest of Pullings' house.

Soon we arrived, at greatly staggered times, at their kitchen door, deposited our boots in a growing pile on the kitchen floor, and then stocking-footed it to the living room for hot chocolate and cookies by the warmth of a roaring fire in the fireplace (thanks to Al Pulling, the master fire builder).

A most pleasant ending to a most pleasant and invigorating outing, thanks to Roma and Al Pulling's hospitality, and the final cooperation of the weatherman.

MERCK FOREST

by Rob Carey

March 2-3, 1985

Three overnight hikers, Rob & Sue Carey and Sue Thomas, and three day hikers, John & Emma Hughes and Nina La Penna, started out on Saturday. The ground was bare except for some north facing slopes.

After reaching Spruce Shelter we had lunch. We decided to hike up to Spruce Point which had excellent views. There was some snow on the roads and trails, making them stand out. The Masters Mountain Trail looked especially interesting. We made a loop hike stopping at the Sugar House. The sap was running and they were boiling. The sugar maker gave us a sample of first run, still warm syrup. By the time we returned to Spruce Shelter, all were ready for a rest and snack.

After the day hikers left, the over-nighters took a nap before starting supper. Sue Thomas was in charge of the main dish. She served veal Cordon Bleu with broccoli for a vegetable. It was delicious. The Careys supplied the dessert of magic bars.

The stove cooperated well this year, not roasting us out but allowing Sue to cook over it in a T-shirt.

After a leisurely breakfast, Sunday's hike out was enjoyable.

BADGER REUNION

by Roma Pulling

Most Killington Sectioners, except for those who joined very recently, recall when Rob and Carolyn Badger lived in the area. They moved to Virginia about a year and a half ago, but Rob will be remembered for his service on our Board of Directors, as Vice President, member of the Outings Committee and leader of "difficult" hikes.

We were pleased therefore to get a phone call in December from Landgrove, where Rob and Carolyn were visiting his parents with Daniel Brewster, their young son who was born in Virginia. Rob kindly invited us to get a group together and drive down for a visit. We contacted people by phone, hoping we didn't inadvertently overlook someone who would have liked to be included, and drove down on December 30. Rob's advanced study hasn't changed him, and motherhood certainly agrees with Carolyn.

A tentative plan for ice skating on the pond had to be cancelled due to melting, but Rob led us on a delightful easy hike near the West Branch of the West River (did I get that right, Rob?). As in all our outings, we carried our own lunch, but Carolyn surprised us with a pot of delicious homemade soup and other goodies. We all had a most enjoyable day, and it was great to see Rob and Carolyn again and meet Daniel Brewster.

Thank you, Badgers!!

WHITE ROCKS

by Harold C. Rogers
March 10, 1985

On this day 15 people decided they could get more exercise hiking than they could by sitting in a warm house watching TV.

As usual, it was a very nice day for hiking. The air was clear and quite cool in the morning and it warmed up in the afternoon.

The walking was quite difficult when we started. The crust on the snow wasn't hard enough for us to walk on. About 12 to 15 inches of corn snow covered the ground, so we took turns breaking the trail.

We arrived at Greenwall Shelter at about 10:30 A.M. Churchill Scott was kind enough to stay there and make the coffee while the rest of us struggled up the Keewaydin Trail to the White Rocks Lookout. We enjoyed a good view of the Otter Valley and of Rob and Sue's house. The air was clear but somewhat windy. The hikers who did not leave their lunches at the shelter stayed at the lookout to eat, while the rest of us returned to the shelter to eat and enjoy coffee.

The sun had come out so the snow had warmed up and we had better walking for the return trip.

The total walk was about three and one half miles and very enjoyable.

SPRUCE SHELTER

by Stephen Pulling
March 16, 1985

One of the many unpredictable elements of late Vermont winter is snow conditions. The outdoorsman usually has a difficult time deciding what to wear for gear including accessories such as snowshoes, skis, or waders. On Harold's hike on the previous weekend snowshoes would have been very appropriate, whereas the best gear for my hike would have been ice skates with a full set of hockey pads. One person should have worn a bathing suit for her swimming demonstration. Even with the improper gear we all survived the day's ordeal.

March 16th was a beautiful, clear, sunny day with a cool breeze, maybe a cold breeze. Fourteen people followed the leader from Route 11, south on the newly relocated section of the Long Trail heading for Spruce Shelter. There was an extremely hard covering about a foot of snow which made walking very easy on the level, but very difficult walking uphill because it was so slippery. Hockey pads would have been nice because people were falling on the slippery crust quite regularly.

A relatively easy climb to an unnamed height of land gave us nice views of the Manchester valley, Bromley Peak, and the Snow Valley Ski Resort, although the wind prohibited us from enjoying it for very long. Continuing along this lovely new section of trail, we eventually intersected with the old existing trail which took us past the Spruce Peak lookout and a short three miles from Route 11 we found the new Spruce Shelter.

This structure has to be one of the most beautiful and well constructed shelters on the Long Trail. The log cabin type shelter, with a porch, windows, sliding door, and light switch was a welcome place for a hot lunch, rest, and wet sock drying session.

On the return trip we hiked the old trail all of the way out to Route 11 for a little different scenery. The old trail is at a lower elevation which made walking on the hard crust much easier. I hope everyone who participated had as good a time as I did.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

March 24, 1985

Dear Carol,

As I said, it is difficult, perhaps impossible, to think of a new format for the sugar-on-snow report every year. You will remember that the "sugar" and the pickles, doughnuts and beverages were delicious yesterday (March 23, 1985) because you were one of the two dozen people here. I thought it was so nice of Jan Martin to boil for us again this year.

Wasn't the weather great! After suffering through snow, sleet and freezing rain to get to past parties, or failing to get here at all, everyone must really have appreciated the sunshine and reasonable temperatures.

If it wasn't for the generosity of Jan and so many others, we would never be able to put this event together. I will write to thank Ira Hawley for his gift of the syrup again. This represents a lot of work in tapping the trees, gathering the sap and simmering it on the back burner. Irene showed dedication, too, having this operation taking up space in her kitchen.

And especially, Carol, this letter is to thank you and Linda Krasner for the fine piano/viola program. I know how much effort you both put into it with planning and the two rehearsals here. It added a touch of elegance to the afternoon's events.

See you next year!

Sincerely,

Roma

TEXAS FALLS

by Rob and Sue Carey
April 14, 1985

"Cool and damp, with a chance of showers" was the weather forecast, but about a dozen hikers turned out for this two mile, easy hike. While we drove toward Middlebury, several drops of rain splattered on the windshield soon increasing to a light rain. Fortunately as we crossed Middlebury Gap it stopped.

When we got to the picnic area there was discussion as to whether to hike or eat first. Since it was almost noon, the eating faction prevailed. We had brought kindling and paper from home and had a fire going and the water hot in no time.

After a leisurely lunch most of us hiked around the loop trail that passes the falls. With the spring run-off and ice still around they were spectacular. None of us was tempted to violate the prohibition on swimming. As we continued on the Nature Trail, it was amusing to compare the stations with the copy of the key that I had. Apparently they have made changes. The water was still hot when we returned to the picnic area, so we had another cup of coffee or hot chocolate. We'll have to schedule more of these relaxing, picnic type hikes.

The Swaying trees sigh contentment to the sky;
Ceaseless flow of murmuring water soothes
The harried heart and hurried feet; soft music...
Song of the wild, peace for my soul...
This I find...

at the bend of the river.

TUCKER JOHNSON WORK PARTY

by Stephen Pulling
April 27, 1985

The first of four work parties on our spring schedule was a great success. I hope the next three come off as well. The weather held off long enough for us to make our repairs and get back to the cars.

Fourteen workers showed up for this restoration project which made work easy for everyone. Bandits (I'll use this term because Carol wouldn't print what I would like to call them) had used parts of the shelter such as supporting beams, side walls, and bunks for firewood. As you can see, we needed to carry in quite a bit of materials and tools for this project. Fourteen pairs of hands did the job nicely.

As usual we all had a pretty good time even though there was work to be done. Ira's nail puller, which saved the day, was the center of attraction because most of us had never seen one; Al's and Ray's carpentry skills were sort of humorous at times; the all-woman day-long toilet seat project, Sue's art work with the paint brush, and Churchill's smoking fire highlighted the day's events.

Thanks to you 14 people my job as Trails & Shelters Chairman is a pleasure and EASY!

DUVAL TRAIL

by Ira and Irene Hawley
May 5, 1985

At 10:00 A.M. on a cloudy morning six non-members joined nine members of the club at the park for a five mile hike on the Duval Trail in Brandon and Goshen.

Everyone got their legs limbered up with a steady half mile uphill climb. After passing three hunting camps we arrived at Duval Rock and Camp and had our lunch beside Basin Brook. We continued on upgrade through a hardwood forest with many spring flowers just emerging through the undergrowth. We finally arrived at the so-called "Middle Road," not far from Goshen Four Corners.

As we turned back to retrace our route, a light rain fell but did not dampen the spirits of those who seemed to enjoy an area somewhat unfamiliar to most of the hikers.

BOMOSEEN AREA

by Linda Krasner
May 11, 1985

Thirteen people turned out for the afternoon hike to two overlooks in the Glen Lake area on what turned out to be the hottest day of the season to date. One overlook afforded a view of both Glen Lake and Moscow Pond, as well as a beaver pond and views of the Birdseye Mountain area. Marsh marigold, fringed polygala and columbine were out in profusion along with the blackflies.

KILLINGTON SECTION WALKTHROUGH, PART I

by Stephen Pulling
May 18, 1985

The outdoorsman's second worst enemy, in my opinion, is the weatherman. The weatherman is second only to the famous, horrible, tiny black fly. In this case Enemy #2 was almost detrimental to our Killington Section Walkthrough, Part 1. Saturday, May 18, 1985, was absolutely a terrible day to be outside, especially to work on a trail, so obviously no work got done then.

Thanks to a few dedicated Killington Section members, the trail from Route 140 to Gov. Clement Shelter has been cleared and blazed. Carol Chapman and Sue Thomas covered from Route 103 to the Lower Cold River Road. A logging operation turned the trail into a brush pile on their section which was later cleaned up by Steve Pulling and his chainsaw. Al and Roma Pulling with Sitka cleared and blazed from Minerva Hinchey Shelter to Route 103 encountering no major problems.

My special thanks and a huge gold star go to the Ira Hawley family who covered from Route 140 to Minerva Hinchey and also from the Lower Cold River Road to Gov. Clement Shelter. Ira returned later to both of these areas with a chainsaw to clean out large blowdowns.

Let's hope Enemy #2 cooperates a little better on walkthrough, Part II, because I know that Enemy #1 won't!

ABANDONED DANBY MARBLE QUARRIES (AN UNSCHEDULED OUTING)

by Ray Catozzi
March 31, 1985

Asked to fill in a blank weekend (blank except for our KS annual meeting) with a short easy outing, I thought of where we could go that we hadn't been before. Then I remembered this area in Danby, where years ago I'd taken some of my own boys and their friends looking for caves to explore.

Located on Dorset Mountain, where one of the few active marble quarries, the Imperial, is still being worked for pure white marble, is a series of six to eight old abandoned quarries, all connected by a service road winding its way up the mountain. Walking up this road on a fairly pleasant spring day, a dozen of us enjoyed peering into various-sized and variously deep quarries, speculating how they must have cut the stone and removed it over the years.

We hiked under, near the bottom, and across, near the top, the old abandoned inclined railroad that was used to lower the huge blocks of marble down the mountain, by cable, to the railroad siding on Route 7. Many abandoned buildings were investigated, and then, at the next to the last quarry, a huge one, we were able to enter, over a rather precarious, icy route, into the interior. Water was still frozen at all the low points but we didn't attempt to cross any of it, considering it too dangerous this late in the year.

In this quarry, I pointed out a cave, located off the left rear wall, which I had been in years ago, but it was too treacherous to try to reach it at this time with all the slippery ice in the way.

A short walk further on we moved out onto the top of a slag pile, out in the open, where views across the valley to Baker Peak, and north to Wallingford and White Rocks could be obtained. A really lovely view. But we didn't linger long as we could see snow squalls coming down the valley. We ambled back down, taking a different route part way, in order to go by the entrance to the working quarry. The entrance to this quarry was closed off, so we rejoined our route up, and made it back to the cars just before the real snowfall hit us. And so ended our unscheduled but pleasant Sunday afternoon outing.

STRATTON MOUNTAIN

by Ray Catozzi
June 2, 1985

Winnie and Ted Shambo were to be the leaders of this mountain climb, but they fortunately had a chance on a real inexpensive tour to the resort island of Aruba off the coast of South America at this time, so I agreed to substitute for them.

They missed a very pleasant climb on a well-groomed side trail (formerly the Long Trail) on a beautifully clear sunny day. Spring wildflowers were still visible on the upper half of the mountain; purple and painted trilliums, some hobblebush, trout lilies, violets, gold thread, and a few bunchberries. Those pesky blackflies were in residence on the mountain as well, but a strong cooling breeze kept them pretty much at bay, especially on the upper stairs of the abandoned fire tower.

A long pleasant lunch hour was enjoyed with multitudinous conversations going on in the group. Many other hikers were out and up on the mountain as well, and many greetings were exchanged. A former fire watcher on Stratton years ago was revisiting his old haunt, and a few of us listened to some of his tales and philosophy. (He said he didn't know you, Churchill!).

One of our gang, young, energetic Jonathan Harrington from Granville, N.Y., opted to hike out to his car by going down to Stratton Pond, out the Long Trail south to the road, and then up the road to his car, doing a total of 11.1 miles. He went alone.

You really missed a good one, Ted and Winnie, but if I could have had my druthers I would have been in Aruba with you.

IS ROUTE 4 HIKING FOR YOU?

by Jake Sherman

Perhaps some of you will be interested in joining me on the 3rd Annual Sherburne Pass Hillwalk on the second weekend of June, 1986.

The first two of these walks have had only one participant -- myself. Of course, many hikers undoubtedly would not find a trek from one's front door in Rutland 10 miles eastward up Route 4 to the pass exactly their cup of tea. With traffic coming, sometimes careening, at you around curves, it's not exactly a woodland stroll.

Still, you do see a lot. Only a half mile from home, for example, where Moon Brook wends its way under Killington Avenue, there is a patch of a sweet-smelling phlox-like wildflower known as Dame's Rocket. A few miles further on on Town Line Road there is an old cemetery where at least one of the leaning tombstones dates from 1815 and another marks the grave of a soldier killed at the Battle of Gettysburg.

Opposite the Mendon Town Office you spot along the roadside what looks like an exotic species of wildflower until you realize it's just a daisy not yet bloomed. Further up you notice that the state or some other agency has anchored wire netting along the steep bank of Mendon Brook to stem soil erosion.

About 2½ hours into the walk the Cortina Inn provides a welcome rest stop. After that the skies on this overcast Sunday of June 9, 1985 break up a bit, wide swatches of blue appear, and the sun turns Pico from a dull to a radiant green.

Beyond Beaver Pond, where a few families are enjoying a lazy afternoon's fishing, two tiny hikers are spotted atop Deer's Leap Rock. Are those hikers real or are my eyes playing tricks? I wave my shirt in hope of a response but none comes.

Two observations: (1) This is an easier walk than it might seem since your rate of ascent is only about 160 feet a mile. There's none of the heart pounding you may experience when climbing a mountain, and (2) as you study the faces in the cars whizzing by, the drivers' eyes glazed, the passengers, as often as not, nodded off, it makes you realize anew that walking is the only way to really see things.

One of my fantasies is to hike directly from my house to the top of Pico or Killington. The perfect hike, in my view, should be a seamless web unencumbered by auto trips to starting points, cars spotted at end points, and the philosophy that only woods walking is worthwhile. I'm attracted to the idea of making it from center city to the mountaintop under my own footpower.

Of course, the above only applies to getting there, not coming home. Fortunately, my wife took my call from the Sherburne Pass pay phone in good spirits and was only a half hour in rescuing me from the blackflies inhabiting the LT parking lot. The spur-of-the-moment afternoon's walk had taken less than 3½ hours including several stops and meanderings. I'm already looking forward to next year.

A big congratulations is in order to Sue and Rob Carey on the birth of a new daughter.

Mara Lee Carey, weighing in at 7 lb., 6 oz., arrived on Thursday, June 13, at the Rutland Regional Medical Center.

Considering that the previous Saturday Sue was on the roof of Governor Clement Shelter helping to make repairs, it is not expected to be long before Mara receives her first experience of the trail.

We all wish Rob and Sue well in their latest venture.

JULY-SEPT., 1985

1985 APPALACHIAN TRAIL CLUB CONFERENCE

August 2-9, 1985

by Winnie Shambo, Co-Chair

There is so very much individual credit and praise that needs to be acknowledged to some 125 Green Mountain Club volunteers, the presentors and the panelists of the 1985 ATC Conference. You all know who you are and of your contribution to what the Conference Planning Committee has dubbed an "unparalleled success." This column is but a meager attempt at giving thanks to each of you and to report on my view of the Conference.

My first encounter with GMC "future" involvement as hosts of the '85 ATC Conference was at a GMC Annual Meeting held in Mendon a number of years ago. Even at that time, wanting to get wholly involved in Club activities, I volunteered to help in any way possible. Who would have dreamed that in 1985 Joe Cook of Brattleboro and I would become co-chairs of this gigantic undertaking by the GMC.

We replaced Neil Giroux in early March of this year, who, fortunately, had enlisted some very talented persons. If we committee members were a bit skeptical of our roles and the amount of talent we actually possessed, no one was aware of it. In fact, some of us solved our self-doubts by bravely "jumping in with both feet" in areas we had never encountered before. We had no idea of the scope our duties would eventually encompass and so we just forged ahead, gaining personal information, some self-confidence, and, believe it or not, a bit of education along the way.

Perhaps more important, we found we could work as a cohesive unit even though our committee was spread far and wide. I like to think some of us became fast friends.

The Committee sought every money-saving avenue, but by mid-June we were sure that the Conference would not be a financial success, simply because there were not enough registered Conferees. Although I do not have specific data at this date, you can well imagine our extreme joy at having registered in excess of 800 Conferees by Conference time!

It was a marvelous event! Compliments from the attendees flowed as wine during that special week in August and are still coming in. People enjoyed all we had to offer.

The General Meeting, emceed by our club president, Preston Bristow, Jr., was enthusiastically attended. Governor Kunin gave an encouraging speech as did the director of the National Park Service, William Penn Mott. We were pleased and honored to have had both (in fact all) these influential persons in our midst. (Please excuse my not mentioning every person on stage, as the meeting was well reported in news articles).

Conferees attended the lively panel discussion, "Ski Area Development and Its Effects on the Trail and Local Communities," moderated by ATC Executive Director Larry Van Meter with many notable individuals serving on the panel.

Workshops on Collecting Data for Trail Use Management, Acid Rain Effects, Shelter Construction and anything and everything remotely connected to the hiking community were offered and had to be shuffled from original rooms to rooms of larger capacity because of their popularity.

Exhibitors from up and down the Coast had space to present their wares or ideology. Of course, the ATC and GMC ran their exhibits the entire week while the others were there for the weekend only.

Hikes were offered in an abundance, variety and degree of difficulty to suit just about everyone. Excursions were planned to show off many of Vermont's historical sites. There were also excursions for just plain fun. The cruises on Lake Champlain and Lake George proved most popular. We sincerely thank all who volunteered to lead hikes and excursions.

We committee people worked diligently throughout each day. Came the evening we were more than ready to sit back and allow others to entertain us. We are very pleased to have had so much Vermont talent for these special evenings. Mary Okin. If you have not yet caught her one-woman show, do so. You will be greatly rewarded. Jon Gailmor. A far-out singer with a powerful voice. Dan O'Connell and The Wind That Shakes the Barley. If you need a square dance group, this one is #1! The Silvertones. The most alive group of senior citizen ladies I've yet to meet and very talented. You need a dance band? These ladies more than fill the bill. Bill Mares. Co-author of "Real Vermonters Don't Milk Goats." A man with a tremendous sense of humor and not bashful about sharing it. The Peppermint Pipers from Rutland, Vt. Yeah! A good-natured group enjoying themselves while entertaining others. Malcolm Moore and his fantastic slide program. People were wishing it never had to end.

In addition to our "home-grown" talent, we also had Dr. Warren Doyle of the ATC who presented a great slide program and finally, but certainly not least, we were privileged to have with us Peter Nevell from Maidenhead, England, who showed slides of his group, the East Berkshire Ramblers' Association, and told how they maintain hiking trails in England. Peter stayed with us the entire week before doing some hiking in the White Mountains. By all accounts he thoroughly enjoyed his stay in America.

All in all, we had something going on every evening, including a songfest on Wednesday evening. No one had reason to say, "There's nothing to do."

We were blessed with a week of gorgeous Vermont weather 95% of the time. Everyone took advantage of it. Some of us even tried out the local swimmin' holes. Deep and cold!

The site of this Conference, if you are unaware, was Green Mountain College in Poultney. The food served was tasty, plentiful, and varied. We appreciate the thoughtful effort provided by the food service department. The staff, under the direction of Doug Durkee, was fantastic. The staff people of the college were available to us from early morning to late at night and then some. I can not express my gratitude enough to these people who, with their dedication to our cause, enabled the 1985 ATC Conference to be as successful as it was.

I am very proud to have been a part of this Conference and am proud to be a member of the Green Mountain Club in the year of the club's 75th anniversary. The respect for the GMC generated by the hospitality and friendship we extended at this Conference will be bestowed upon us for many years to come.

Thank you, everyone, for your support of the 1985 ATC Conference and of GMC activities. It's been a REAL year.

GOVERNOR CLEMENT WORK PARTY

by Steve Pulling

June 8, 1985

As most of you Killington Sectioners know, the roof at Governor Clement Shelter has been a hurting subject for years. There were holes you could put your arm through and numerous rotten boards. Twenty-five per cent of the roof needed to be completely replaced.

On June 8th, sixteen, count them, sixteen eager, hardworking people showed up to tackle the largest project we've encountered during my tenure as Trails & Shelters Chairman. Not even one carpenter appeared on the scene to direct us, so before each move was made we had a conference to make sure all were in agreement.

After the old rotten roof was removed, new three-quarter inch plywood was cut by Ira's chainsaw and nailed to the existing rafters. New roofing paper was nailed and tarred to the complete roof and the job was finished. Sixteen pairs of hands made this project fairly easy as everyone pitched in and did a great job.

Yup, you guessed it, we finished up just in time to have our handiwork tested by a rainstorm. Yes, we did pass the test with flying colors.

We had fun, right? Where's Sitka?

KILLINGTON SECTION WALK-THROUGH, PART II

by Stephen Pulling

June 22, 1985

I thought we would be smart this year and divide the walk-through into two equal parts and do our higher elevations later in the spring to avoid the two feet of snow we usually encounter. This year we probably could have done our higher elevations in early April. That's what you get for trying to be smart.

Ten trail workers took a very rough and wild ride to the summit of Killington Peak in the back of a Toyota pickup driven by yours truly. After a short stop at the summit to check out the views, we all descended to Cooper Lodge for its annual spring cleaning.

As soon as that messy project was completed, five people headed by Al Pulling hiked down to Route 4, clearing and blazing trail while five others headed by John Hughes hiked to Governor Clement Shelter, clearing and blazing. I drove back down the mountain and cleaned up a large pile of debris left over from the Governor Clement roofing project.

No, my mathematics is not bad. Sue Thomas stayed the night at Pico Camp and met our group at the summit. Thanks all.

"LAND 'O GOSHEN"

by Ira and Irene Hawley

June 30, 1985

I know we would have enjoyed a hike with Laurie Webster to High Pond in Brandon, but occasionally the selected leader cannot go and we fall back on a substitute. Not being familiar with the High Pond area, we chose to proceed to Goshen Four Corners and hike a portion of the so-called Middle Road toward Chittenden. We took a side trip to the site of a good sized maple sugaring operation at the sugar house. It was equipped with the modern tubing system of collecting sap by gravity flow. A pleasant area on the south slope of a hill. Many very small toads were observed during our walk.

Continuing on through a pleasant wooded valley with mountains on each side, we stopped for a leisurely lunch break at a log pile in a clearing. It was early afternoon as we returned to our cars, and we decided on another short side trip for an anticipated overview of the valley toward the west, which proved to be not very rewarding. The 14 hikers enjoyed a fair weather day after several cloudy, gloomy days.

LEICESTER HOLLOW TRAIL

by Steve Pulling
July 6, 1985

"I didn't think there was this much level hiking trail in Vermont," said one hiker at the end of the Leicester Hollow Trail. That hiker was probably pretty close to being correct as the other nine hikers that went on this hike could attest. A leisurely seven mile walk would be a more accurate description of this outing than a seven mile hike.

The weather once again held out for us as we walked up the grassy footpath with high cliffs and mountains on both sides of us. A babbling brook alongside the trail topped off this very picturesque setting throughout the seven miles. Some beautiful forest land with very large pine trees lined the hollow.

Much to many of the hikers' surprise, the Leicester Hollow Trail ended up at Silver Lake. This quiet, undeveloped lake was a perfect place to sit and share our lunch with the numerous chipmunks. After an extended lunch break we hiked around the lake and back down the Leicester Hollow Trail to the cars.

If you missed this hike you really should try to find time to do it on your own.

ABORTED PANCAKE BREAKFAST

by Winnie Shambo
July 12, 1985

July 12? I realize the Herald made a mess of the press release for this outing. However Killington Section members each had schedules and were aware that reservations were expected or if confused could have called.

So, will someone please tell me why outing events are scheduled if no one, not even those of the outings committee, intends to participate? I mean, really, four people just don't qualify, in my book, for what is supposed to be an annual event sponsored by this section. I am very disappointed in the Killington Section's lack of enthusiasm for anything new, different, or challenging.

The section sure needs a "new blood" transfusion badly. I feel it would be to our advantage to have a person knowledgeable in membership recruitment speak to our next Board of Directors meeting. We need help.

Rather than lamenting the forsaken Killington Section pancake breakfast, let me tell you of the great weekend Ray Catozzi and I shared with the Brattleboro Section at their annual Family Clambake. Now there's a section that is "section-oriented," and they only have 59 members! They had people from as far away as Great Barrington, Mass. and the Bronx, N.Y. There were seven children, the youngest being 18 months old, and about twenty adults. Instead of being treated as an "outsider," I was invited to help prepare the meal of steamed clams, corn-on-the-cob and lobster. I had a chance to meet many people who had volunteered their time and effort to lead hikes and/or excursions for the 1985 ATC Conference.

Everything for this meal was packed in about two miles. Short distance, but that first mile is very steep. These people brought in two cold-pack canners in which to "steam" the three courses we were served. Packing in 30-40 lbs. of clams, three dozen ears of corn and 20 lobsters in addition to personal equipment is no small feat even with extra packs and backs helping. I have nothing but good feelings toward these people of the Brattleboro Section.

For the first time since I was nine or ten, I slept under the stars. And did they shine! A very clear night; clear enough to lay my pad and bag beneath a tree with no worry of rain. I slept soundly that night. The shelter was filled to capacity. Tents of various design and color were set up wherever a flat spot could be found, while still others did as I and just slept upon the ground.

After a leisurely breakfast and cleanup, I hiked out the new re-location to Rt. 11/30 while Ray went out the same way we had come in. He spent the remainder of the day fishing and caught his limit while Ted, Tom and I went to Jamaica State Park for fishing and hiking.

I sincerely wish the next time something "different" is suggested and planned, that the Killington Section members will feel an affinity such as I felt this past weekend with the Brattleboro Section. Anyone interested in Baxter State Park next July?

ROUTE 242 TO THE CANADIAN BORDER

by Steve Pulling
July 12-14, 1985

This backpack should have been called "Those Killer Unnamed Peaks" not Route 242 to the Canadian Border. The weather was great Friday and Saturday while the rain held off just long enough Sunday morning for us to open the car trunk and put our packs in. Then the heavens opened up and sheets of rain fell.

On Friday afternoon, July 12th, we took a leisurely ride up to Route 242 between Jay and Montgomery, Vermont. After a very short, easy walk into Jay Camp we were done for the day. While at Jay Camp the three of us, Jim Davis, Wally Rogers, and I, sat around solving all of the problems in the world today and planned our next day's events.

Early we rose and walked back to Route 242 where we left one car and drove through Jay up to Route 105. At this point we spineless backpacked north to the Canadian border where we enjoyed the sites and the mammoth swath cut through the trees. We took a nice long break there soaking up the sunshine and solving more worldwide dilemmas.

Back at Route 105 we ate lunch and then donned our backpacks hiking south for Shooting Star Shelter, our original Saturday destination. A very early arrival at Shooting Star, however, prompted our decision to move on to Laura Woodward Shelter, a short four miles away over two unnamed peaks. These two unnamed peaks proved to be the most difficult part of our weekend. But we made it to Laura Woodward in good time and we spent the evening in a nice shelter in a lovely setting with a clear view of our next day's voyage up Jay Peak.

Sunday was a cool, cloudy day for our relatively easy climb up Jay Peak. We waited for about an hour at the summit for the clouds to clear, but it gradually got worse, so we descended to Route 242 following "Downhill Davis," who left us in his downhill dust.

CANOE TRIP

by Roma Pulling
July 27, 1985

The leader of this excursion, Steve Pulling, has a work party, walk-through, hike and two backpacks to report and is suffering from writer's block, writer's cramp and whatever other ailments afflict literary geniuses. So A Boy's Best Friend came to the rescue.

Nine people registered for this trip. Two had to cancel at the last minute and three didn't show up although we waited 15 minutes past the specified hour. We left the park with Steve's two canoes, one strapped to his truck and the other to the top of the writer's Omni. Sue Thomas and Carol Chapman completed the group.

Our destination was Plymouth and what are referred to on old maps as Plymouth ponds. We put the canoes into Woodward Reservoir first and had a pleasant paddle around the perimeter. A "no motorboating" sign at the boat launch was instrumental in maintaining the quiet of this small lake and added to our enjoyment.

Loading the canoes back on to the vehicles and proceeding down Route 100, we bypassed Lake Amherst as being too small and went on to Echo Lake. Our leader was very familiar with this body of water, having spent at least five summers on the staff at the old Boy Scout camp on the eastern shore. We had lunch at the fishing access before launching the canoes. There was motorboating and water skiing here, and the resulting noise and turbulence lessened the enjoyment for the writer. It's a lovely lake just the same and made lovelier by patches of pink and white pond lilies and blue pickerel weed in several small coves.

We entertained thoughts of circling a third lake, but dark clouds moved in and it started to rain; so we left for home. But during an ice cream stop at the Plymouth General Store--you guessed it--the sun came out.

The trip home was uneventful except for a banshee wail from the general area of the roof that startled Carol and the writer as we started up the mountain. Having determined during a brief stop that the canoe was not going to take flight or launch itself into the stream of traffic on Route 4, we continued to the end of a very delightful outing.

ROUTE 118 TO ROUTE 15

by Stephen Pulling
August 2-4, 1985

I haven't hiked the complete Long Trail yet, but I'm working on it, slow but sure. In my opinion Route 118 to Route 15 has to be one of the most pleasant and beautiful sections of the trail. Views from Mansfield, Killington, and Camel's Hump are obviously breathtaking, but for a 22-mile stretch, Route 118 to Route 15 has to be on the top of my list of places to return to after I finish up the trail.

On August 2nd Jim Davis and I drove to Johnson and left Jim's car at the junction of Route 15 and the Long Trail. From there we took my car to Route 118 where we left it and hiked into Ritterbush Camp. This shelter was a welcome sight as it was getting sort of dark and I for one was tired just finishing up a thirty-three hour period with no sleep.

Early Saturday morning we swallowed breakfast, packed up, and started hiking looking forward to a long day on the trail. Soon we encountered Devil's Gulch which is a picturesque area full of large rock formations that we hiked through, leaping from rock to rock up the trail. Later in the morning we came onto a large logging operation that devastated the trail in places. We lost the trail twice in that stretch, but at 1:00 P.M. we reached Parker Camp for lunch and a welcome short nap.

Laraway Mountain Lookout was our next packs-off break. A lovely view of northern Vermont's vast farmlands with a mountain ridge in the background. It is impossible to describe this type of lookout in one sentence. Much too soon the packs went on, and we hiked down Laraway Mountain into Coddington Hollow which is a large wetland created by beaver dams. Off came the hiking boots as we waded through eight inches of water on the trail. As we sat down to put on our boots we looked up at Laraway Mountain and commented that it was almost as pretty looking up at it as it was looking off the top. Daylight was getting short so we moved on to Barrows Camp where we spent the night with four other hikers. Two of those hikers arrived at the shelter at 11:00 P.M. which is a story in itself.

Sunday was another beautiful day and we had an easy five mile walk out to the car. The trail was almost level most of the way to Prospect Rock which was about a mile from our destination. At Prospect Rock we lay in the sun for almost an hour enjoying the fantastic view of the Lamoille River and the Route 15 valley while reminiscing about the most enjoyable weekend.

MYSTERY HIKE

by Ira and Irene Hawley
August 11, 1985

Where did we go? Listed as the "Woodstock Trails" or Mount Tom. Those of you who didn't go missed a good one. Ten hikers left the park at 9:15 A.M. and headed east on Route 4. We arrived at Faulkner Park on Mountain Avenue in the village of Woodstock where we left our cars.

A pleasant walk along Mountain Avenue to River Street and east along River Street past beautiful residences with well-kept lawns and beautiful flowers; this was an unusual way to start a hike which provided a variety of scenery. We entered the cemetery and soon were in the woods on a winding climb to a cabin used by Girl Scouts and along a pleasant woods road to a clearing containing a horse barn and paddock. The woods road continued on a gentle incline about a mile to "The Pogue," a nice body of water probably larger than six acres. Here on a rustic log bench we had lunch. Many white pond lilies dotted the smooth surface of the water. We completed a circle of the pond and after a limited view to the east from a clearing returned the same way to the Girl Scout cabin. Here we entered the Precipice Trail and after less than a half mile of moderate climbing we left this trail and crossed over a short distance to the Faulkner Trail. From here along switch-backs less than a half mile to the base of Mt. Tom, A short, steep climb took us to the summit and beautiful views of the village of Woodstock and nice views to the east and west. Following a rest at this quiet spot we returned down the mountain along many switch-backs arriving at the edge of Faulkner Park in sight of our cars as a slight shower started. Our pedometer registered just under six miles.

COOKOUT, FERNWOOD COTTAGE

by Roma Pulling
September 1, 1985

The weather and the setting were both perfect as 15 people gathered at Steve's camp just after 5:00 P.M. The group ranged in age from three months to 73 years but all seemed to find their own niche. Six people took advantage of the opportunity to go canoeing, either with their own canoe or one borrowed from Steve. There was a charcoal grille for those who felt like cooking and plenty of delectable potluck for those who didn't.

You will notice no mention is made of a "slide evening" as promised on the schedule. In the first place, no one remembered to borrow a projector and only one person brought slides. Secondly, everyone seemed to be content to sit on the deck and watch dusk descend over Fern

Lake and lights from other camps reflect on the water. Sitting inside viewing slides, we agreed, is for winter evenings.

This may have been the last event held in a private home as there is a feeling that we should avoid "members only" outings and adhere to our usual policy of welcoming everyone. If this was a landmark event, it was a very delightful one.

Thanks, Steve, for your hospitality.

A NOTE OF THANKS

Roma Pulling has decided to step down from her position as Outings Chairman. Sue Thomas and Sue Carey will be sharing the duties of that job. We've enjoyed the years of scheduling meetings around Roma's cozy fireplace and want to express our appreciation for all the time and dedicated effort Roma has given to the club.

FLOWERS OF THE CLOUDS

by Carol Chapman

Those of you who know that I usually go on the "easy" hikes and avoid a backpack like the plague, will be surprised to learn that I signed up for a Church Street Center course called "Alpine Meadows Expedition" involving three days of hiking in New Hampshire's Presidential Range. The promise of learning about alpine flowers and close-up photography was too inviting to pass up. Actually, the bulletin advertising the course made no mention of the length or difficulty of the hike, so I assumed it would be a leisurely stroll.

Warned of the extreme weather conditions on Mt. Washington (world's highest wind speed), I packed plenty of warm clothes.

Our instructor was naturalist Peter Zika, an expert on alpine flora and a free lance photographer. His wide range of knowledge, humorous and enlightening explanations and realistic imitations of various bird songs helped us appreciate life in that harsh arctic-like environment.

On a sunny June day Peter drove nine eager students in the UVM van to the Mt. Washington Toll Road. Steep grades and spectacular scenery were viewed in awe as we made our ascent.

On stepping out of the van, we quickly took warm jackets and windbreakers from our packs. The 40-degree temperature and stiff winds gave us just a taste of what the weather there could be. Gusts blowing against our packs made it difficult to keep our balance as we walked over the loose rocks that covered the trail. Soon our number diminished to eight. One young woman, wearing new hiking boots, a recent arrival from Detroit, decided it would be best to retreat to Burlington.

When Peter told us to crouch down to the ground like the low-lying plants, we understood how they escape from the rages of the wind. A tiny white flower called Diapensia, one of Vermont's endangered species, dotted the Alpine Garden. Peter explained that the snow is swept from these meadows creating a tundra and exposing the plants to the coldest temperatures. Our attention was called to a plate-sized plant pressed flat against the ground. To our surprise we learned that it was a tree, the Bearberry Willow. You had to admire the adaptations of the numerous plants that permit them to survive in such severe climactic conditions where it is the survival of the shortest.

That afternoon we hiked to the Lakes of the Clouds hut, the largest of the AMC hut system in the White Mountains. The notes of a trumpet greeted us and hurried us along to dinner which was already being served. Abundant quantities of homemade soup, freshly baked bread, chicken, vegetable casserole, salad and brownies were provided to satisfy our enormous appetites. Learning that the food is packed in by college students who work in the huts made us even more appreciative. My greatest challenge of the trip came that night when I struggled out of the top of three bunks in the pitch dark to go to the bathroom trying not to awaken any of the fourteen sleeping hikers in the room.

Saturday dawned bright and clear, bringing the most sunshine that had been seen there in two weeks. It was a beautiful warm day with people hiking in shorts and topless (the men, that is). Peter pointed out many species of plants, some endemic to the area. The dwarf Cinquefoil, a tiny plant found nowhere else in the world but in a small patch near the Lakes of the Clouds hut, is being protected by signs and low walls to keep you on the trail.

A five mile hike brought us to Mizpah Springs hut where we spent the night. Snowshoe rabbits and gray jays which stay around the hut hoping for handouts were lively attractions.

On Sunday we awoke to the patter of rain. My grandmother's saying "Rain before seven, shine before eleven" held true and the sun found us in a bog photographing Sundew and Bog Laurel. It was hard to decide which made a better picture, the bog vegetation or people crouching in ungainly positions as they aimed their cameras.

At the summit of Mt. Jackson a gray jay invited himself to lunch and delighted everyone by landing on the hands which offered him treats. Our hike down the mountain led us across several brooks and through woods carpeted by species of flowers we had seen earlier in the season at home.

Down in the highway in Crawford Notch we looked back over the thirteen miles of mountain ridges we had traversed and were impressed with our accomplishment.

Anyone for a hike in the White Mountains?

MOUNT EQUINOX

by Ray Catozzi
July 21, 1985

Originally scheduled for Sept. 14, this climb of the highest mountain in the Taconic Range, was switched with the White Rocks climb & supper on July 21. The peregrine falcon program was in progress once again up on the top of the cliffs and the area was off limits until the last of September or so.

It was a very interesting climb up the mountain as I had decided to try a new route (new to me), coming up from the north out of Bear Town Notch and following a long ridge with some level trail, and coming out on the Lookout Rock Trail just a few feet from the lookout. This trail added a mile to the original 5.8, but added no time as the grade was much gentler.

Ten of the faithful made the trip and all enjoyed the different trail up, with the different views to the west as well as the east. The trail, described in the Day Hiker's Guide says it is overgrown but follows a very well defined road, which it was and did. The level piece on the ridge line, near the top, went through a beautiful open wooded area carpeted by nothing but ferns. A bonanza for fern lovers.

After lunch at the lookout, while enjoying the panoramic view of Manchester below, we walked on to the hotel and the picnic tables and TV antennas to the west. Then back to the start (or end) of the Burr and Burton Trail and down we went.

I had originally planned to surprise the hikers by leaving the B & B Trail part way down and go down the Table Rock Trail to Table Rock and on down to Equinox Pond and out, but in checking out that trail a week before, I discovered it completely obliterated from disuse from the Table Rock lookout to the Burr & Burton Trail junction. Now another one of my ambitions is to clear it for hiking, as it makes a wonderful loop hike. This overgrown trail, about 1/2 mile in length is now flagged and anyone interested in helping me open it up once again, let me know.

A TRIBUTE TO WINNIE SHAMBO

by Ray Catozzi

Some of you out there in Killington Section membership land may have known which of us from the section volunteered service to the Appalachian Trail Conference, recently hosted by the Green Mountain Club at Green Mountain College in Poultney, Vermont. What even fewer of you probably know was the role played by our own Winnie Shambo, our publicity lady.

Even after the two or three KS directors' meetings, where Winnie was forwarding her ideas about souvenirs to be made up and sold by the section at the ATC, it came as a surprise to me that she was co-chairing the conference with Joe Cook, president of the Brattleboro Section. I attended the last full ATC committee meeting held in Poultney in late July, and I was amazed at the multitudinous duties she had taken upon herself.

Among them was one very difficult job -- that of finding more volunteers to fill the vacancies that still existed on the various sub-committees, even though those chairmen were supposed to recruit their own. She organized all the excursions that graced the conference's schedule, writing to every conceivable tourist attraction in the mid-Vermont area, contracting for the various-sized groups and arranging transportation and drivers. Sandwiched between all these various jobs, she saw to it that our souvenirs were produced, put on sale alongside the GMC paraphernalia, and kept track of the money as well. She also helped the chairman of the GMC souvenir committee.

She emceed many of the slide showings and other evening entertainment features, such as square dancing, round dancing, talk shows, etc. This was in addition to arranging for most of the evening entertainment to begin with.

While the rest of us from the Killington Section, Rob & Sue Carey, Churchill & Virginia Scott, Roma Pulling, Steve Pulling plus your author, were performing our meager duties of a slot or two, here and there, on a hike or two or some other function, Winnie rarely left the Green Mountain College campus the whole week of the conference. Not a hike did she get to go on or an excursion nor could she even enjoy much of the entertainment she so ably set up for the conferees. She was nearly always off to the committee room office, checking on details, or at the excursion and hike desk, dispensing pertinent information to the many who were always there and asking.

This conference, the 25th meeting of the 35 or so trail clubs responsible for the maintenance of the 2,000 plus miles of the Appalachian Trail, has been labelled by conferees, staff of Green Mountain College, as well as the committee itself as an unparalleled success, which will set the standard for all future conferences to come, wherever they may be held.

It is my steadfast belief that the contribution that Winnie Shambo made to the success of this weeklong gathering was also unparalleled in the history of the ATC, my meager knowledge of former conferences notwithstanding. She deserves the biggest round of applause, the greatest bundle of thanks from not only all her fellow conference committee folks but from us here in Killington Section land as well. God bless you, Wink.

BECAUSE I HAVE SEEN THE MOUNTAINS

Because I have seen the mountains,
 Because I have looked so long
 Where the peaks rise on the far skies,
 And heard the sea's song—

My soul is eager for climbing,
 My spirit's wings are strong,
 Because I have strayed where the hills prayed,
 And heard the sea's song.

THE LOOKOUT TO CHATEAUGUAY

by Sue Thomas

September 8, 1985

Three of us started out early on Sept. 8 for a long drive (past children and small dumb dogs) to hike the Appalachian Trail from the Lookout to Chateaugay. Though not an inspiringly beautiful morning, the skies had cleared by the time we reached the side trail that led to the Lookout. All having been there before, and mindful of the miles we had to go yet, we considered not bothering to go up there, but we gave in to temptation and hiked up for a look. To our surprise we discovered a brand new shelter there! And what a shelter! Large glass windows, porch, stone fireplace, several bunks, and an observation platform with ladder on the roof, which we made use of immediately. Whoever is responsible did a beautiful job; I wouldn't mind moving in myself! From there we rejoined the AT and continued on uneventfully to Chateaugay, arriving in time for a late lunch, which we ate by the side of a small stream.

WHITE ROCKS TALUS SLOPE CLIMB 1:00 P.M.

WHITE ROCKS PICNIC SUPPER 6:00 P.M.

by Ray Catozzi

September 14, 1985

A beautiful summer afternoon was the prospect as six would-be boulder climbers met at Main Street Park this day. It was quite surprising to their leader when it became evident that three of our climbers were new folks, two of whom were nine-year-old girls from Brandon. Jolene Ladd (with her mother Mary) and her friend Sarah Severy were going to scale the talus slope. I guess they didn't know the extent of the task before them, but I assured the three of them that they could do it all the way to the top of the cliff, and enjoy it as well. My experience with the toughness of young boys while running a Boy Scout troop years ago taught me that boys and girls of those ages are capable of unlimited stamina, if not outright strength. And their eagerness to try anything is catching.

So off to the ice beds at the base of the slope we went, going over the low lookout to the south of the parking lot, as a short cut to the start of our climb. It was steep at first, and huge boulders, 10 to 15 feet in diameter, had to be climbed over, or around. Then the middle stretch of the slope lessened in degree, and the size of the rocks kept getting smaller, until it was just hand-sized rubble for the most part. We stopped for a breather often, and enjoyed the expanding view of the Otter Valley as we climbed higher and higher.

The upper third was steep again, and we moved to the extreme right hand edge of the slope to get into the small trees there. We needed the small trunks for hand holds as we pulled ourselves up onto the flat ground just south of the cliff top. Lingering just long enough for a snack and a drink, we then took off up the cliff trail to the Long Trail, then took the Keewaydin Trail down to the picnic area. We pulled into the picnic grounds just as the supper group of our two-part outing was arriving, adding 14 more to our six for a total of 20 at the picnic supper. In attendance was one of our faithful hikers, Nina LaPenna, out for her first outing since being injured in an auto accident this summer. This was due to the generosity of Ira Hawley who went to Proctor to pick her up and then returned her home. It was awfully good to see her out as she had been confined for several weeks.

A jolly time was had around the fireplace and heavily loaded picnic table (with food of every description). Firelight as well as lanternlight helped light the scene for us all, as we enjoyed another of our many picnic suppers in the dark of the evening. One of these was at this same picnic area in October after a heavy early snowfall.

We hated to leave the warmth of the fire and the companionship of our hiking friends, but all good things have to come to an end. I don't think that the two young girls, Jolene and Sarah, will forget their part of the outing for a long time. Come again, girls, we are waiting for you, as we need rugged hikers in our group like you two!

The other two who made the climb were Nancy Sugarman and Jonathan Harrington; and tiny Mara Carey, age then about three months, was on one of her first outings, now numbering about 5 says her mother, Sue.

CROWN POINT ROAD

by Roma Pulling
September 22, 1985

For our hike on the Crown Point Road, we joined members of the Crown Point Road Association on their scheduled hike in Shoreham. The CPRA is an enthusiastic group of people dedicated to finding and preserving information on the route of the 1759-60 road, which is considered to be Vermont's first thoroughfare.

September 22 was a warm but mostly cloudy day; so we felt good that 15 people turned out at 12:30, proving that easy afternoon hikes are still popular. We left almost immediately to join the CPRA at Larrabee's Point, where we nearly doubled their number of hikers. The leader of that group, Phyllis Humphreys, took it in her stride. She had prepared a very detailed history, with maps, of the Ticonderoga branch of the road, which was our goal that day. Mrs. Humphreys says not enough information is available on the route of the road, but to people for whom this was a new subject, she seemed very well prepared indeed.

Following the oral presentation, we spotted cars and hiked about 1 1/4 miles along a route that has been documented. Six ambitious souls then turned around and hiked back the way we came. The others waited while their drivers brought the cars around.

Those to whom the history of Vermont's first highway may be new might appreciate a short summary:

After his capture of Forts Ticonderoga and Crown Point from the French, General Jeffrey Amherst needed a way to supply both bastions. Mrs. Humphreys' research indicates that this was the purpose of the road, not movement of troops. So between August 8, 1759, and September 9 of that year Capt. John Stark and 200 rangers "marked out the road and measured it..." Subsequently between October 26 and November 16 the same year, 500 men under Major John Hawks cleared the road 20 feet wide. However, parts of it were in such deplorable condition that in 1760 Col. John Goffe and 800 men were ordered to create a better route between Fort No. 4 in present Charlestown, N.H., and the Plymouth Ponds. After the close of the French and Indian War, the road was a valuable route for settlers immigrating to this area.

The CPRA is to be commended for their effort to keep this valuable element of Vermont history alive.

MENDON PEAK

by Sue Carey
September 28, 1985

Hiking to the peak of Mendon Mountain has always intrigued me because of its conical shape dominates the eastern skyline of Rutland. Hurricane Gloria passed through Rutland the day before our hike and it rained until just before our 8:30 A.M. starting time. We didn't expect many people and we weren't wrong. Rob and I went alone. We weren't going to let a hurricane stop us.

We parked the car at Brewer's Corner and walked up the Eddy Brook Road. After crossing Eddy Brook, we took a compass bearing and headed up the mountain.

Bushwhacking is the true way to experience the forest. You start off by going through the hobble bush. As the elevation changes the trees gradually become fir and spruce. Underfoot the moss grows so thick that you sink into it like plush pile carpet. At the top the evergreens are stubby and reindeer lichen hangs from them.

When we reached the summit it was sunny. From a south-facing outcrop we saw Pico Peak, Killington, Shrewsbury, Danby Mountain and the airport. Fall foliage gave the view touches of red and gold. It was spectacular.

We returned by following our compass bearing in the opposite direction. It is a satisfying experience to be able to take a map and compass and orienteer to the top of a mountain where few others have gone.

BLACK MOUNTAIN, EAST LAKE GEORGE, N.Y.

by Ray Catozzi
October 6, 1985

This mountain climb was put on the schedule due to two events in my life as a hiker with the GMC. The first was when Craig Perkins, that veteran GMCer living in active retirement at his Tall Timbers Campground in Mendon, led the Killington Section on an outing up Buck Mountain, in the same general area on the east side of Lake George. This was about 35 years ago, and I've always wanted to go back there.

Then, at the ATC Conference at Poultney this past August, several mountain climbs were scheduled in this same low peak Adirondack area, Black Mountain included, but not Buck Mountain. I signed up and went, and was captivated and enthralled by the magnificent view we had all around us from the summit and up in its fire tower. Lake George can be viewed in almost its entire 35-mile length, as Black Mountain rises very abruptly up from the east shore of the lake, a difference in altitude of 2300 feet. It is only a 1100 foot climb up from the trail head on the east side of the mountain, as we did most of the climbing by car.

This day in October wasn't the beautiful crystal clear day I was hoping for (many of which came later in November) but many good views of the high peak region were seen to the northwest, and many of Vermont's Green Mountain peaks were picked out on the hazy eastern horizon. Blue Ridge, Pico, Killington and White Rocks mountains were located by several of the hikers, numbering 10 in all that day, including Mara Carey, that veteran hiker that just joined our club last summer.

It was a cold day on top, with a brisk northwest wind blowing steadily, so we didn't linger long after lunch. We had two options for a return trip. One was a trail about five miles in length going south off Black Mountain and going by several ponds halfway down. We voted that one down, as many had to get home early. So we branched off onto a snowmobile trail that criss-crossed the hiking trail a few times near the top, but then went off on its own completely on an old winding logging road until it joined the hiking trail near the bottom. This was a delightful change of grade and scenery on the way down. The trail past the ponds, which have two or more shelters, would make a great overnight outing to Black Mountain. Anyone concur with that?

BLUEBERRY HILL AREA IN GOSHEN

October 13, 1985

Yes, there was a foliage hike. In the afternoon on a bright fall day, 16 of the faithful assembled to enjoy the scenery of nature. The changing colors of the maples, birches, beeches, poplars, sumacs, and oaks were enjoyed as we traveled Rte. 7 north to Brandon and eventually to the Blueberry Hill area of Goshen. Other groups of people apparently had the same idea as we, as we met them on the mountain.

Extensive views to the east, south, and west challenged us as to identity. To the south the Rutland area could be seen and to the west mountains stretching north from Castleton. The Adirondacks from Whitehall toward the north rose in the distance. What appeared to be a small view of Lake Champlain could be seen with binoculars. Also the paper mills of Ticonderoga were identified.

On our return we came upon a gravel pit, the steep bank of which we ascended to a small mesa for another view of the nearby surroundings. Sweet cider and brownies were consumed before saying our goodbyes to return home. A pleasant afternoon for those who went.

MERCK FOREST WEEKEND

by Rob Carey

October 19-20, 1985

Saturday's rain reduced the overnight attendance to Sue Thomas and Rob, Sue, and Mara Carey. In spite of the rain lasting until we reached Ridge Cabin Mara stayed dry and even slept while Sue carried her in the Snuggli. Ridge Cabin made a perfect place to spend a rainy afternoon and work on the cloud's ear soup. A small fire in the stove was more than enough to warm the cabin and keep the soup simmering. After a Chinese dinner complete with chopsticks and desserts of Black Bottom Pie Tarts, we spent a relaxing evening.

Sunday's weather was better so we took a morning hike in the East Hollow and Lookout Area, part of the Forest we had not previously visited. On the return to the cabin we met Carol and her friend Doris. They joined us and when we reached the cabin for lunch, the Pullings and Hawleys were there. Everyone agreed that Ridge is a beautiful cabin in an excellent location. There is a good view from the large windows and a spring not too far away.

The hike out was pleasant and uneventful, as well as drier than the one on Saturday. Mara really seemed to enjoy her first camping trip, especially all the attention.

HOW MANY GREEN MOUNTAIN CLUB MEMBERS WILL FIT ON TOP OF MOUNT ASCUTNEY?

by Sue Thomas

October 26, 1985

Our second attempt at Mt. Ascutney proved much more successful than our first in June (possibly because we went this time!). We were fortunate to have one of those perfect fall days -- blue, blue sky, crisp but mild temperature, and lovely foliage. That combined with a trail beside a stream, a waterfall, and an overlook to spur us on toward the top combined to make it a very enjoyable, if steep hike.

Sixteen hikers started from Rutland, meeting Norm Cyrs there. Norm proved extremely helpful right from the start by directing us to the trail head, and having climbed the mountain from all sides many times, he was able to keep us on the leaf-obscured trail and tell us much about the area.

Our first stop was Gerry's Falls, a small but picturesque cascade near the trail, then we made steady progress to Halfway Springs. Our next stop was at an overlook with a wonderful view of the Connecticut River and the mountains beyond. After a short break to appreciate the scenery, we continued on to the summit, where we were pleasantly surprised to meet a large group of hikers from the Ottauquechee and Brattleboro Sections and ATC. Altogether we made quite a mob at the top, but fortunately there was plenty of sun to go around as we sat at the old stone hut site and ate our lunches.

After lunch some of us hiked on to the tower and climbed up for a spectacular view. What a shame to have to return and start the hike back. The descent was made difficult by the thick layer of fallen leaves which obscured rocks and holes, but all arrived back at the cars eventually.

EAST MOUNTAIN, MENDON

by Ira Hawley
November 3, 1985

On a typical cloudy, grey November afternoon eight people met at the park for a refreshing walk. Several historical items were pointed out. We left Route 4 and followed the now abandoned former course of the original road from Mendon to the present entrance to the Wheelerville Road.

Soon into the hike we saw the remains of an old homesite. A gradual climb of nearly a half mile leveled out to easy walking thereafter. When we reached the banks of Mendon Brook we came upon another cellar hole, probably of a former home. We then went to what is called "Mountain Cemetery," a short distance on the Wheelerville Road and saw some very old gravestones. This cemetery is still quite well maintained.

As we were about to start our return via the same route, the sun came out briefly for a while. It was late afternoon as we arrived back at the cars.

WEST RUTLAND TOWN FOREST

by Ira Hawley
November 10, 1985

Vermont natives are accustomed to the grey skies and sprinkles and short daylight hours of November. This day was typical in all these respects. These were determining factors for 16 hikers to decide if they would go or not. Michael and Peter Nadler along with Mrs. Nyiri joined us in West Rutland. These two boys are well-behaved and promise to be excellent future hikers. We all thank Lowell Day for the hospitality of allowing us to leave our cars in her yard.

A gradual uphill walk of half a mile soon leveled out to a pleasant walk through a hard wood forest along an abandoned town road. There were several old cellar holes where people resided at least 40 years ago. One had the remains of the cellar still capped over with the first floor. Here we had lunch seated on a large log long enough for all of us. The skies were threatening rain and the lunch stop was brief.

As we continued on, the wooded area gave way to a cleared pasture and meadow used for beef cattle raising. We walked among two small herds of Hereford cattle that examined us as we did them. Here we turned back along the same route. We left this town road for a short bushwhack through open woods to a large overgrown meadow and a harvested corn field. Then came a short inspection of a long-unused lime kiln and quarry.

By now the dark skies could no longer hold the rain we had been thinking about. But we were not far from our cars and no one got very wet. A flock of about 40 sheep in the farm road watched us as we left. Overall, we had a quite satisfying hike. We welcome John Caroli and William Tumielewicz as new members.

HOW TO SPEND THE EVENING IN A CARDBOARD
BOX WATCHING PEOPLE STUFF THEMSELVES AND HAVE A GOOD TIME ANYWAY: (COVERED DISH SUPPER)

by Sue Thomas
November 23, 1985

On a November night we once more gathered at Tamarack Notch for our annual pot-luck feast, and once again it was a wonderful evening of good food and good company. With 22 participants, we had the highest attendance in recent years. Despite a chilly start, once the stove was fired up Rotary Cabin began to get cozy and the smells tantalizing.

After a delicious meal, we settled down to watch Carol Chapman's slide program, which began with a 1972 raft trip down the Colorado River (any takers for a Grand Canyon hike next year?!) and ended with last summer's trip to the White Mountains to photograph wildflowers in the Presidential Range. Even if we couldn't go out in the woods during hunting season, at least we could enjoy it through Carol's beautiful slides.

Our youngest member, Mara Carey, age 5 1/2 months, got to taste more of the delicious food, sat in a cardboard box through most of the meal, and slept through the slide show, but appeared to have a good time nonetheless.

GUIDELINES FOR HIKE LEADERS

by Sue Thomas

Due to the unusually large number of cancellations lately due to bad weather, etc., this seems like a good time to establish some general rules for hike leaders. Hopefully this will be a help to all of us and make things run a little more smoothly in the future.

1. You are responsible for the safe return of every hiker. Take a head count before leaving the park, and make every effort to return with the same number. Misplacing members makes quite a dent in the treasury.

2. Always go to the park at the appointed time. What's a little rain to the hardy Killington Section member?! Never assume that no one wants to hike because of bad weather, go down to the park anyway and find out who the fanatics among us are. You can always call if off once you're there by mutual consent, or "gentle" coercion. Like all rules, there are exceptions: hikes should be assumed to be cancelled in the event of hurricane, tornado, or tidal wave.

3. A hike should never be cancelled. If you are unable to make it to your hike, please inform one of the Outings Committee chair people -- Sue Thomas or Sue Carey, so that another hike can be scheduled in its place. Who knows what kind of trouble all the frustrated hikers could get into with an empty weekend on their hands!

4. Keep the chairpeople informed of any change in plans. If you change your destination drastically, say, changing your 1/8 mile fungus walk to a weekend rock climbing in the Alps, it might affect someone's decision. People occasionally call Sue or Sue to find out what is happening, so it would be nice if they knew. (It's a dirty job, but someone's got to do it.).

5. If someone else is going to lead your hike, again, inform Sue or Sue. We'd like to know who to call in the event of a problem, and, in spite of what it seems, we do try to keep track of where the book & pot are. (I may not always bring them, but at least I know where they are!)

6. You are responsible for the pot and the log book. This is only slightly less important than keeping track of your hikers; coffee-hungry people can be dangerous. After your hike, either pass them along to the leader of the next scheduled hike, or call Sue Thomas, she is sometimes reliable.

LOOKING BACK

by Roma Pulling

As the Board of Directors considers a new form for our traditional sugar-on-snow party, perhaps opening it to the public again, it might be appropriate to look back and summarize what has happened in the past six years.

Before 1980, when the parties were held in public places, they were open to anyone, and this practice was followed for a year or two when we gathered at the Pulling home; then it was decided by the Outings Committee that it was better to welcome only members. Attendance ranged over the six years from 16 to 24.

It was the practice to collect a $3.00 contribution from each guest, which was turned over to the treasurer. From this sum he paid the expenses and had whatever was left to add to the general fund. In the six-year period a $122.20 profit was realized in this manner.

Some of the more memorable events during this period were entertaining a reporter from the Herald in 1980. The next morning Joe Diction's smiling face appeared in the paper with an account of the party.

In 1983 there was a heavy snowstorm and miserable driving conditions, and Churchill hiked in with the can of syrup in his backpack. That same year Ray Catozzi skied in.

The hostess, apparently becoming bored with plain prose, assailed us with reports in the form of poetry, a diary and a letter to the editor.

In 1983 we added entertainment to the program with Rob Badger's slide show. There was a sing-along accompanied by Sue Thomas's guitar in 1984, and a recital of classical music on piano and viola this year performed by Carol Chapman and Linda Krasner.

This transitional phase in our party history seems to have been successful. We wish the Section good luck for even better parties in the future.

MEMBERSHIP RECRUITMENT CONTINUING

by Sue Carey

While looking at the Outings Book, I found a survey from 1955 asking for names of people interested in joining our section. Thirty years later and we are still looking for and getting new members.

As of this writing the membership is at 102. During the last 10 years, the least number of members was 74 in 1981. That is about a 30% increase. There seem to be many reasons for this increase.

The Section sponsors a variety of activities. Within the past several years these activities include wild-flower walks, bicycle trips, birdwatching, orienteering, ice skating, historical hikes, caving, canoeing, trips in New York and New Hampshire, winter weekends and supper hikes. In September, 20 people attended a picnic at White Rocks. The food included hotdogs, hamburgers, corn-on-the-cob, beans and sandwiches. We don't need to offer exotic or expensive food to attract people.

The Section has several traditional outings that are very popular. Last year the Valiquette Memorial Hike attracted 35 people. This hike has been held for 14 years. The sugar-on-snow party is regularly attended by 18 to 20 people and so is our annual covered dish supper.

Of course the backbone of the Section's activities is the hikes. It is fortunate that the Section has so many hike leaders who guide us to places both old and new, near and far.

One of the outstanding features of our Section is our newsletter Smoke and Blazes. Communication in any organization is very important. Carol Chapman and Jake Sherman do an excellent job. Not every section in the Green Mountain Club has such a well presented and detailed newsletter. After seeing other sections' newsletters, I feel that the Killington Section can be very proud of Smoke and Blazes.

Another very important factor in attracting new people is publicity. Winnie Shambo does an excellent job of spreading the word through the media.

The Section started in 1912 and is always ready to welcome new members. As life's many changing situations lead us elsewhere, the membership changes but the Killington Section remains active.

MYSTERY HIKE TO SUCKER BROOK DAM

by Stephen Pulling
December 8, 1985

This hike was almost a real mystery as the trek I originally planned ended up being too difficult for most people's blood and this hike was pulled from a map on the previous weekend. Luckily your hike leader was out nosing around Sucker Brook Dam during deer hunting season and remembered it had the makings for a nice G.M.C. hike.

The hike started from a parking lot at the end of Forest Road 27 in Goshen. The 0.6 mile Goshen Trail led us to the east shore of Silver Lake where we turned north and hiked up to the picnic area on the north shore of the lake. A steady wind off the lake made fire-starting an uneasy chore, but persistence paid off and eventually lunch was cooked and consumed. An abbreviated birthday party was celebrated for Roma Pulling with a cake baked and packed in by Sue Thomas. Carol Chapman did an excellent job of fire extinguishing and we were off hiking again.

Meandering along an old service road in the lovely Goshen wilderness brought us good views of Mount Moosalamoo and Rattlesnake Cliffs before scaling up the Sucker Brook Dam. The dam really doesn't hold back any water now, but it is a beautiful clearing in the mountainous region. Some exploring was done along the shore of the old power dam and valve station, but no great treasure was found.

A leisurely walk back to Forest Road 27 via a Blueberry Hill ski trail that wound back and forth up the valley found our cars patiently waiting for the snowy trip home.

GOVERNOR CLEMENT BY MOONLIGHT

by Sue Thomas
December 21, 1985

On December 21, five of us decided to brave a snowstorm for the Killington Section's annual moonlight hike. We were a day or two too late for the full moon, but still it lighted our way to Governor Clement Shelter, and made the snow-covered landscape even more beautiful. Thanks to Steve's truck we were able to drive part way, leaving us just enough hiking to make us appreciate the stone fireplace, blackberry brandy, and Christmas cookies that brightened up the shelter. The hike back to the truck was even nicer, as the moon had risen higher and provided more light and snowy shadows -- making me at least a bit reluctant to return home to electric lights and traffic noise.

SKATING PARTY

by Sue Carey
Jan. 12, 1986

Which of the following activities was not done at the skating party: snowshoeing, sleeping, sledding, skating, fire building, tea making or skiing? The answer is skating. Due to early snow, Burr Pond was not suitable for skating, but with the mild weather and great snow cover many people turned out for the skating party anyway.

Camp Betsey Cox in Pittsford has several great trails for skiing and hills for sliding. Jean Davies was starting a fire when we arrived and she also treated us to some pine needle tea. Mara Carey spent most of the afternoon sleeping in her sled. Many of the other forlorn skaters explored the area on skis or snowshoes.

(cont.)

I want to thank Jean Davies for letting us use Camp Betsey Cox. It is a beautiful camp and I'm sure that everyone had a good time.

ABBHEY POND

by Stephen Pulling
January 18, 1986

If there is any such thing as a perfect January day for hiking we luckily found it on January 18th. Beautiful clear blue skies, bright warm sun rays, and temperatures in the upper 20s were the conditions we had to deal with on this Abbey Pond hike. The seven people who showed up for this trek were blessed with a near perfect day for their efforts.

The hike started out with a long steady $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile pull uphill gaining 1250 feet in elevation, but numerous river crossings with one lovely waterfall provided us with good excuses to take breaks to catch our breath. Walking in the newly fallen snow was not a problem as four of us carried our snowshoes. Once we were near the top of the ridge there were good views to the west of the Champlain Valley.

A short half mile of level walking brought us to Abbey Pond which has been described in one book as "an attractive wilderness pond" and as "primitive and tranquil" in another book. If you could picture the pond in the summer months it would be a haven of wildlife with fish, frogs, beaver, ducks, birds, deer, chipmunks and every conceivable animal in the Vermont forest visiting its shores. Today there is a heavy blanket of ice and snow covering the pond and the area is deathly quiet but beautiful.

A few trees felled by beavers provided us with wood for our traditional lunch fire and a John Hughes device hung our coffee pot that once again saved the day. Our lunch break was a prolonged process as no one was in a hurry to leave this alluring setting and good fellowship.

Eventually we had to move on and head down the mountain to the cars. The hike out was quite easy staring out level and then downhill for $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles. Your hike leader and friend made it down in record time, beating the rest of the gang by about 20 minutes. We slid down on red plastic toboggans, and made it in one piece I might add!

There's a little child in everyone, isn't there?

CROSS-COUNTRY SKIING IN BOMOSEEN

by Sue Thomas & Linda Krasner
February 2, 1986

In scouting out the possibilities for a route for this trip, Linda found an excellent cross-country trail on the west shore of Lake Bomoseen, beginning at the State Park, to Lily Pond, and then circling back to the park. However, because of the severe ice storm, this route was nearly impossible, so it will be saved until next year.

Meanwhile, however, several people did brave the slush storm that day. We began cross-country skiing and snowshoeing at the Castleton Elementary School and completed a three-mile circular path. We travelled through a large hemlock grove, paralleled Lake Bomoseen for a ways, and ended up at the Krasners' house for a picnic lunch. In spite of the slush, the trip was enjoyable.

BYPASS PREVIEW

by Carol Chapman
February 8, 1986

Most of our hikes do not begin on the shoulder of a well-traveled highway, but this one did. Appropriately enough, because we were on our way to hiking and skiing over another road that will soon be busy with traffic, the new bypass between West Rutland and Rutland.

Fourteen people started the hike at the West Rutland Grand Union parking lot. It was good to see Harold out after a long absence from hiking. Our first casualty of the day was Ray who split his pants leg and strained a muscle on stepping over a snowbank into deep snow. I had forgotten that we needed to stay on the west side of the barbed wire fence which goes along the bypass, so that was our next obstacle. Churchill and Virginia decided to leave us at that point, probably wondering what else this leader would get them into.

With the rest safely over the fence we skied or hiked up the long hill getting some good views of Mt. Hanley and the surrounding mountains. Snow conditions were surprisingly good for skiing and a trail had been packed by snowmobiles.

Most of the group went as far as the Quarterline Road before heading back. With the sun brightening the scene for a few moments at this point we had good views of the northwestern part of Rutland and the Green Mountain range.

Mrs. Nyiri decided to hike out Quarterline Road to Campbell Road and wait for a ride there, while the rest turned around for the return to West Rutland. The skiers didn't mind as they had a long downhill run to complete the trip. Emma and John Hughes walked back through the woods and over a snowmobile trail which they discovered, beating us back to the parking lot.

Hindsight being what it is, I realize I should have spotted a car for the hikers so they could end the hike at Quarterline Road rather than having to back-track. Our conclusion that afternoon was that the bypass makes a fine ski or hiking trail and should be left for that purpose.

GLEN DAM

by W. Churchill Scott
February 16, 1986

On Sunday February 16th twenty-two outdoor enthusiasts gathered under the bright blue sky and brilliant sun to take a short afternoon walk to Glen Dam.

It was good to see so many new faces along with the old-timers. There was a larger per cent of skiers than usual plus at least one pair of snowshoes.

Some decided they had gone far enough at the dam where during the past summer the weeds and swampy edges had been cleared away and erosion filled.

The majority kept going under the leadership of the Pullings way up to the Meadow Way Drive road. From there back, it was mostly downhill.

Finally back at Chasanna Drive, a good afternoon was topped off by hot coffee, tea, cocoa, etc.

Let's try to have some more good turnouts like this.

ATTACK OF THE CHICKADEE-PEOPLE (AT MERCK FOREST WINTER WEEKEND)

by Sue Thomas
March 1, 1986

The night was cold and dark outside Spruce Shelter on March 1st, as eight hikers cowered around the woodstove contemplating the dangers that lurked in the trees outside. At last one fearless soul arose, and, resolutely gripping cup and toothbrush, strode toward the door, and, without a backward glance, stepped outside. Breathlessly we huddled closer to the stove and waited. Soon the night was alive with shouts; "Back, back, you fiends!!" and the sounds of struggle struck terror to our hearts. It was.... The Chickadees!

Well, perhaps that's a slight exaggeration. Actually the chickadees were one of the highlights of a wonderful Winter Weekend at Merck Forest, one of the most successful in recent years because, by golly, this time there was snow! We had a large group of day hikers and eight overnights, including the intrepid Mara Carey, who spent much of her days in Daddy's backpack, no doubt coaching him, as he was the only skier to remain vertical all weekend.

During lunch at the shelter, the killer chickadees discovered us, and very patiently posed for pictures in return for handouts. From then on we were subject to dive-bombing, whenever we ventured outside.

After lunch we skied off through the blackberry bushes (you'd think people would know better than to follow me by now!) and down to the sugarhouse, and back by way of Clark's Clearing, where we said goodbye to the last of the dayhikers. Back at the shelter we found Irene Rogers, who had come to spend the night, the Martins, Vong & Lao, being greeted by the birds.

Everyone contributed to the spaghetti dinner, and Mark lugged in maple syrup, which we boiled down on the woodstove for sugar-on-snow, great idea! While it was boiling some of us walked up the hill behind the shelter to stargaze, and wow! We were mesmerized by the sight of so many stars and the snowy hillside in the dark. Linda pointed out the constellations to us, and called out a barred owl. We were so entranced we nearly missed the sugar-on-snow!

Two extra-hardy souls slept outside in a tent, and only one crept in by the stove in the early morning hours. In the morning I cooked pancakes & bacon to lighten Mark's pack of a little more syrup, and we headed out. Leaving our packs by the barn, we went for another ski trip, then returned to the barn for lunch before reluctantly leaving for home.

TREASURER'S POSITION OPEN

As stated in a recent issue of Smoke & Blazes, the treasurer feels that after 25 years it is time for a change.

Even though there a lot of odds and ends to do, it should not be too difficult a chore. During a period of transition, I would be willing to stay on and help in every way possible, with the understanding that as soon as possible I will leave the position of treasurer and also the Board of Directors for which my term runs out this year.

MYSTERY HIKE

by Ray Catozzi
Feb. 22, 1986

A beautiful, sunny windless day greeted seven hikers this day, a day after another heavy wet snowstorm. They knew not where they were going, except for their leader, but six with cross-country skis, and one with snowshoes were ready for whatever he had to offer.

What I was going to offer them was a start at the Gorham covered bridge on a back road north of Proctor, and up a winding, climbing snowmobile route called "4 West" to the top of the ridge between Proctor and Whipple Hollow north of West Rutland. (A power line coming up from West Rutland follows this ridge for a while just west of Proctor, then angles down slowly to Florence.) We would have had great views to the north and east had we made it up to this power line.

Alas, 'twas not to be had this day. The wet snow of the night before had frozen hard in the snowmobile trail, rendering it too difficult to come back down on our return trip, with cross-country skis.

So,....what should be just a few feet above our parking area west of the covered bridge but the tracks of the Vermont Railway. Eureka, a perfect solution of where to go in place of the dangerous trail. Up the railroad tracks we went, north for about 1 to 1½ miles to where the Otter Creek came over close to the tracks. We then left the very safe, flat (boring?) route of the railroad tracks, crossed over to the west bank of the meandering Otter Creek, and followed it upstream back to our cars. This route was much shorter than the one I had originally planned so we were back to our cars just at lunch time.

We enjoyed our lunches sitting on the guard rail of the west end of Gorham Bridge, as we watched the snowmobiles arrive.

We all hated to quit so soon with such a fine day, so Wally Rogers said "let's give the snowmobile trail a try." So off we went, all seven of us, climbing steeply for a while, then down a short curving run where half of the gang fell down.

We soon found another trail leading off to the north; followed it a short distance and came out on a couple of nice open hills in the middle of the woods, where most of us enjoyed practicing our downhill skiing on cross-country skis, safely.

Soon we had looped back to the railroad tracks and our cars, quite satisfied with our expedition. Not a bad one in spite of the change.

DIRECTOR RESIGNS

Winnie Shambo has submitted a letter to the directors of the Killington Section giving notice of her resignation from all her positions with the Killington Section including director in the Section, Main Club director, and publicity chairman, effective immediately. We wish to express our appreciation to Winnie for her many years of enthusiastic service to our section. Winnie: It will be hard to fill your shoes.

CLARENDON SHELTER HIKE

by Bernie Donahue
March 9, 1986

On March 9th members and others took a short hike to Clarendon Shelter. That Sunday was mild and mostly sunny. Spring seemed for a while to be in the air. Snow was melting and there were patches of earth visible.

The day was not suitable for snowshoeing. However boots and pacs were popular. The hikers enjoyed lunching and kibitzing at the shelter. A warming fire and heat for coffee and cocoa was provided.

This hike was planned at the last minute to replace the four-mile Blue Ridge trek. That area had severe road conditions at this time of year. Cancellation seemed appropriate. The replacement hike proved fun for those who made it on that day.

MYSTERY HIKE

by Sue Carey
March 15, 1986

The mystery man who was supposed to lead this hike couldn't make it, so it was left to the program directors to lead the way. During the previous week there was an article in the newspaper stating that the Country Club was thinking of selling its property in Pine Hill along Rocky Pond to condominium developers. After reading this, Sue and I decided to lead the hike to Pine Hill Park.

Several Killington Section members attended a Rutland Aldermanic committee meeting about the Rocky Pond issue. We invited the aldermen to hike with us, but none came.

The day of the hike was overcast, but many nonaldermen came to hike. We parked our cars on Evergreen Avenue and walked to Rocky Pond first. The pond was covered with unsafe ice, so we followed the path past Muddy Pond, crossed the outlet stream and went to the falls.

The falls was coated with ice. Several Killington Section members (who will go unnamed) tried to knock off the ice with snowballs so they could see the water. They did knock some holes in the ice, but when we left the falls were still mostly ice-covered.

We walked through the golf course (nobody was playing) and left the park by the ice rink (nobody was skating). It is a pleasant hike and I hope that it stays undeveloped.

SUGAR-ON-SNOW PARTY

by Sue Thomas
March 23, 1986

On March 23, 31 hungry-looking people converged on the Unitarian Universalist Church with maple syrup on their minds. (Several of the younger participants undoubtedly left with it in a few other places!) This was by far the most participation we've had for a sugar-on-snow in recent years, and we extend thanks to the church for providing us with the much needed extra space to accommodate our steadily growing group.

-We gratefully acknowledge once again the contribution of John and Janet Martin, without whom the whole affair would not be possible. Jan has a special touch for boiling the syrup to exactly the right point, and cheerfully spends the time it takes to do so before the rest of us arrive. Thanks also to John for providing slides of Killington Section outings from years past, which led to a spirited round of "Name That Shelter," occasional disagreements as to which direction the camera was facing (often ending with the loser pointing out that "the trees have grown up a lot since then"), and "Isn't that Churchill in the hat?" A good time was had by all, thanks again to the Martins, and to the "worker bees" who washed all the dishes while we drones enjoyed the slide show!

KILLINGTON SECTION ANNUAL MEETING

by Rob Carey
April 5, 1986

The Annual Meeting of the Killington Section was held at the Rutland Methodist Church on April 5. The meeting was well attended with over 30 members and guests present. The officers and committee reports were given, some of which were printed in the Jan.-March issue of Smoke & Blazes

The following officers were elected:

President: Rob Carey
Vice-President: Steve Pulling
Treasurer: Wally Rogers
Secretary: Olga Laird

Main Club Director: Ray Catozzi
Trails & Shelters: Steve Pulling
Outings Co-Chairmen: Sue Carey
Sue Thomas
Publicity: Sue Carey

Directors and year of expiration of term are as follows:

Rob Carey	1989
Ray Catozzi	1989
Churchill Scott	1989
Olga Laird	1988
Mark Luttrell	1988
Steve Pulling	1988
Sue Carey	1987
Bernie Donahue	1987
Wally Rogers	1987

After the completion of the business meeting, Middlebury College faculty member David Smith, a Proctor native, gave an enjoyable talk on Vermont humor. This included both some observations on the types of humor as well as many examples. A common feature of this is the unexpected ending. People from "down country" often figure in these stories. An example is the story of the two deer hunters who got lost and spent the night with a young, recently divorced woman. Nine months later one of them received a letter from her lawyer. She had been killed and left him everything in her will.

As usual the refreshments were delicious and enjoyed by all with a variety of cookies, brownies and other goodies.

CARVER FALLS

by Roma Pulling
April 12, 1986

A person can drive within a stone's throw of the falls, but being aware that we were members of a hiking club, we parked our cars at the West Haven School just off Route 22A. This provided an easy walk of roughly a mile down a gravel road and across a field.

Seventeen people left the park in Rutland, and two more joined us in West Haven. The falls are rather striking in appearance with 126 feet of combined cascade and falling water. Some people scrambled a steep bank for a close look, then everyone gathered in view of the falls for lunch. There we found our first hepaticas.

On our return to the cars, I announced plans to cross the Poultney River and view the falls from the New York side. Two drivers elected to return to Rutland, but John Hughes and Ira Hawley with their passengers accompanied us. Some people actually preferred the view from that side. We walked to the power station, then on rock outcroppings in the river. Lastly, we followed the river upstream for some distance, discovering old bridge abutments and an old foundation along the way. Someone suggested that this alone would have made a pleasant hike.

"HOW WE SPENT AN AFTERNOON IN SHREWSBURY WITHOUT LEAVING VERMONT": ORIENTEERING HIKE

by Sue Thomas
April 19, 1986

As most of you already know, last year the National Park Service acquired a corridor of land surrounding the Appalachian/Long Trail for the purpose of protecting it from encroachment by logging, development, dumping, etc. Last summer Ray Catozzi and I attended a workshop put on by the ATC & GMC to solicit help from the local GMC sections in monitoring this corridor. With the best of intentions I volunteered to patrol a section in Shrewsbury, but as the weeks and then the months went by I began to get less and less confident of my ability to find the right tract of land with compass and map as they had taught us at the workshop.

Fearing I would probably wind up in Pennsylvania if I tried it on my own, I decided to enlist the help of the rest of the club. Remembering the enthusiastic response to an orienteering workshop Steve Pulling had done for the section once before, I asked him for a repeat performance, and on April 19 we had a beautiful day and a good-sized group.

After spending the morning learning the basics of map and compass reading, we decided to take a lunch break on a beautiful piece of property recently acquired by the club. After lunch we chose a spot on the map from which to start, which proved to be easier than finding the actual spot! Following much discussion and pacing, we settled on a tree as The Spot, marked it with surveyors' tape, and bravely set off through the woods. Despite frequent disagreements (e.g. "a little more to the right here," "No, a little more to the left here," "Are you holding your compass upside down?"), wonder of wonders, we emerged victoriously on a dirt road almost exactly where the map said we should! Feeling quite proud of ourselves, we returned via the Long Trail. I, for one, will try not to feel too smug, since I still have a large area left to find -- might end up in Pennsylvania yet!

A NOTE OF THANKS

Speaking on behalf of the Killington Section, I would like to thank everyone who participated in the program at the Rutland Library on April 22. Special thanks are in order to Rob and Sue Carey who coordinated the program, put together the slide show, arranged the downstairs display case, and proved they were the bravest of us all by speaking at the slide presentation. Thanks also to Churchill Scott for his contribution, and to everyone who donated pictures, slides, refreshments, and bodily presence. Hike participation is high right now, but there's always room for more, and hopefully the program interested some potential hikers.

LYE BROOK FALLS

by Sue Carey

April 27, 1986

The day of the hike was perfect for walking and the event was well attended. Due to publicity in the Manchester News Guide, there were several new people from the Manchester area who hiked with us.

The trail to the falls follows old roads and old railroad beds through the woods. The railroad was used for logging. If you looked closely enough you could find some ties.

Lye Brook Falls is the highest waterfall in Vermont and during the spring it is at its fullest. I've only seen it before during the summer; however, in the spring it is especially impressive.

CAVENDISH GORGE

by Carol Chapman

May 4, 1986

After our hike of Cavendish Gorge I thought I'd do a little research on the geological history of the area, but a trip to the Rutland Free Library and a search through some volumes of the Vermont Geological Survey didn't bring any results. If any of you readers can enlighten us, please let me know.

Spectacular rock formations, potholes and a cauldron scoured out by swirling rocks impressed us all and invited us to climb and explore. All except one of us hiked along the trail at the rim through coniferous woods. Jim Griffin, however, chose to do it the hard way, scrambling over the rocks down in the river. We worried about him after we hadn't seen him in a while, but there he was at the bridge by the rapids ahead of us, apologetic for not staying with the leader.

As we left the forest and walked through field and swamp, we were rewarded by a variety of spring wildflowers, evidence of beaver gnawing and a cluster of grounded frog's eggs which Sue Thomas kindly returned to the water.

Some hot day this summery you may see some GMC members cooling off in one of the swimming holes at Cavendish Gorge.

KILLINGTON SECTION WORK PARTY

by Al Pulling

May 10, 1986

On May 10, 1986, 16 faithful and energetic volunteers offered their services for clean-up of the Killington Section's stretch of the Long Trail. We had a beautiful day in which to work. Our efforts this day were concentrated on the section from the Upper Cold River Road to Vermont 140.

As my son Steve had to be out of town, he appointed me O.I.C. (officer-in-charge). Steve had his trunk all loaded with tools which, along with Roma, I dispensed to the different crews.

I had the chain saw to use and, after helping spot cars, worked on removing some big trees, including one just north of the Upper Cold River Road and one at East Wallingford just north of Rte. 140.

Roma and I then went to clean up around Clarendon Shelter and Minerva Hinchey Shelter.

After this work was done it was time to go to the Lower Cold River Road to pick up the Ira Hawley family which had cleared the trail south of the Lower Cold River Road.

There was a report of a tree down near the "lookout" south of the bridge near Vt. 103, but we never did find it.

Thanks to everyone who did their part that day.

MOUNTAINTOP --- CHITTENDEN

by Ira Hawley
May 18, 1986

All hikes are planned for the enjoyment of participants, and it was hoped this "historical" type of exploring would be accepted.

The morning was clear and comfortable as a large group (34, I believe) gathered at the park. Very gratifying to see such a good turnout. We agreed our first item of interest was a marble marker which indicated the location of the four towns -- Rutland, Mendon, Pittsford and Chittenden meeting at one corner. This marker is located on the western side of Meadow Lake Drive just a little ways south of its intersection with the road to Chittenden.

Then, on to Mountaintop where we parked the cars for the beginning of the hike. There we were joined by two more hikers. We proceeded on to the top of a high meadow for an excellent view of Chittenden Dam and the mountains beyond. We stopped at an ancient burial place of about a dozen graves with natural stone markers with no inscriptions, probably dating to before 1800.

Then, over a low ridge along the course of a long abandoned town road to a clearing at an intersection of another long abandoned town road where we rested and lunched. There we were treated to a "mini-birthday party" for Nancy Sugarman complete with a nice birthday cake. Happy Birthday, Nancy.

We continued past more cellar holes, one of which had the remains of the base of a stone chimney with fireplaces on each of four sides still visible. Farther on we came upon the foundation of a large barn, and across the road the tumbling remains of a house. Back in the woods we had seen a peaceful porcupine trying to conceal himself in the crevice of a large rock. Many spring flowers were seen along the way.

A little used town road brought us to the end of our 4½ mile walk to our cars. The two small Scott boys seemed tired, but everyone appeared to have had an enjoyable time.

KILLINGTON SECTION WORK PARTY

by Al Pulling
May 31, 1986

On a foggy (looked like rain) day we proceeded to finish up our section of the Long Trail, working on the stretch from the Upper Cold River Road to U.S. 4.

Several of our loyal members showed up at the park that day. Steve "stowed" us away in his truck, and we proceeded up the mountain. The fog was especially thick at the higher elevation, and three attempts were made before we got on the right road.

Three crew members left us for the trail to Gov. Clement Shelter. Steve left and proceeded to Gov. Clement with his truck.

We found the usual mess at Cooper Lodge. After cleaning it up, four of us started north finding lots of clipping to do along the way.

I was in charge of the chainsaw again. It came in handy as there were several good-sized blowdowns on the stretch between Killington and Pico. When I arrived at Pico Camp, the thick fog made visibility very difficult. We had lunch there, and by then it was 12:30 or so.

When Roma and Sue arrived it was nearly 2:00 P.M. Sue had got to Pico Camp when I did, but went back to help Roma and Mark.

We completed the trail by 4:45 P.M. Again, many thanks to all of you who helped. It was much appreciated.

A NEW CHALLENGE

by Roma Pulling

Many in our hiking fraternity take to the woods to seek quiet, to appreciate nature, or to enjoy the companionship of others with similar tastes, or perhaps for all these reasons. Other people need the stimulus of a challenge to get out, and Al Pulling is one of these. For six and a half years, completing our End to End provided sufficient challenge. Some successful End to Enders turn to hiking the AT or perhaps completing the LT in one sustained effort, but we know our limitations. Then Alfred remarked one day that it would be nice to have pictures of all the shelters. Thus began our latest project.

After acquiring a large (68 in. by 42 in.) map of Vermont, we lightly sketched in spaces for 70 pictures including all of the shelters on the LT and side trails plus two no longer standing (Tamarack and Bromley) and one no longer in the LT system (Worth Mt.) but pictures of which were already in our possession. Our campaign to take the rest of the pictures had already begun and is ongoing, with a few less than half taken so far. Making this project even more of a challenge is the fact that many shelters can be photographed, at least with our inexpensive equipment, only between mid-October and mid-May when the leaves are off.

Some of our more interesting hikes so far were the following:

Lake Trail -- Starting half a mile off Route 7 in Mt. Tabor, the 3.5 mile Lake Trail follows the old stage coach road which formerly led to the Griffith Lake House. We passed the lake and continued on .7 of a mile to Peru Peak Shelter. The day of our hike (Jan. 24) there was not a great quantity of snow and the hiking was easy except when crossing McGinn Brook.

Sucker Brook Trail -- With Steve along we made two trips to Goshen, one to find the beginning of the trail and a second on March 8 to hike to Sucker Brook Shelter. You cannot drive to the trail head in the winter; so we actually hiked further than the 2 mi. round trip specified in the guide book. This required snowshoes, and it was cold and windy but otherwise easy hiking.

Pittsfield to Rolston's Rest -- March 26, the day we chose for this hike, was a beautiful early spring day with 71° temperatures in Rutland. We took snowshoes, and this was a wise decision as there were still two feet of snow at the shelter. Otherwise this could be called an easy hike along a private road.

Burnt Hill Trail -- We actually hiked the Burnt Hill Trail in Ripton twice. On an earlier trip we were unsuccessful in reaching our goal, Boyce Shelter. Alfred was vocal in his disappointment, but to me it was a delightful outing. Every tree carried a heavy burden of snow, creating a spectacular winter landscape but also causing the branches to hang low and obscure the blazes on the trees, which is why we lost the trail just short of the shelter. The ground was covered with three feet of snow. We returned on April 3 and found only two feet of snow. We were able to complete our 2.8 mile hike to the shelter, but this time the scenery was only ordinary.

Skylight Pond Trail -- This trail is located near the Burnt Hill Trail in Ripton and ascends 2.3 mi. to one of my favorite spots on the LT -- Skyline Lodge and Skylight Pond. The lodge has had some rough treatment, not only by humans but by porkies, also, but had had some remedial work done since my last trip. After photographing the lodge and being only 1.8 mi. from Emily Proctor Shelter, we decided to add that to our day's accomplishments. We found two feet of snow on the LT there, too.

You can be sure we will be back on the trail when the leaves fall in October. The trails described here would be good section hikes as well.

STACEY ANNE SHULTE MEMORIAL HIKE

From June 21st-July 7, Bill Shulte will be hiking the length of the Long Trail (275 miles) to raise money for the Leukemia Society of America. The hike is a memorial benefit to Bill's daughter, Stacey Anne, who died in 1976. His goal is to raise $10,000 to support leukemia research, and 100% of the funds he collects will go to the society. Please show your support by joining Bill as he passes thru our area on July 6 (see the hike schedule), or by donating. You can do this by pledging any amount you wish per mile, or by making a flat donation (checks made payable to Leukemia Society). I have a pledge sheet -- Sue Thomas, 773-2185 -- and would be happy to collect your pledges. I'm sure I speak for the entire Killington Section in wishing Bill a successful hike.

BRIDGEWATER GOLD MINE

by W. Churchill Scott

June 8, 1986

As always our trip to the Bridgewater gold mine was very well attended. Although the weather was not too good we managed to find the horizontal shaft which the information books say is 200 yards long. And when a person is plowing through the mud underfoot, dodging the water dripping overhead with only a candle for light, it sure does seem at least that long.

As the leader had to return early for a funeral and rain was increasing, no one attempted the side trip to a large vertical mine. Hopefully this can be done next time.

MT. TOM AT WOODSTOCK

by Ira Hawley

June 21, 1986

We are very fortunate to have access to so many beautiful places in our area to explore. We should thank those who allow us to enjoy these areas and also those who help to maintain them.

The weather person cooperated beautifully with bright blue skies to bring out a group of nearly 30 hikers for this outing. We left our meeting place at the park soon after 10 A.M. and headed for Woodstock.

There at Faulkner Park, we were joined by two more hikers. We started up the Switch Back Trail to Mt. Tom and soon picked up the Link Trail to the North Peak Trail. Here we ascended quite steeply for several yards to level out near the summit of the North Peak of Mt. Tom.

It was east from here to the South Peak to enjoy nice views to the west, south, and east, a nice lunch break and good companionship. We moved on via an easy "Carriage Road" for a half mile to The Pogue, a pretty body of water in the hills. Pond lilies and swimming trout were seen here.

From here an easy downgrade brought us to a paddock used for riding horses and eventually on to a quaint area used by Girl Scouts.

Another half mile through the woods and the Switch Back Trail brought us to our cars. Everyone agreed this was another pleasant hike and a good way to spend the day.

DEER LEAP SUPPER HIKE

by Sue Thomas

June 25, 1986

We had a really lovely evening for our annual supper hike up Deer Leap on June 25. We voted to try the short route up the rocks for the sake of time, which would have worked out much better if the leader had stayed on the trail! Instead she headed off on a new trail, apparently used by the rock-climbing class run by the Rutland Recreational Department. This led us to the base of the cliff whereupon a mutiny ensued -- it seems no one was too keen on scaling the cliff ("because it's there" somehow didn't seem like a good enough reason!")

Instead we backtracked until someone found the actual trail, and continued to the top of the rock without incident. We found the condition of the trail to have deteriorated a lot since our last trip, due to erosion and overuse, and it was a much more difficult climb than it used to be. Mara showed her usual faith in her dad though, and calmly made the ascent in her pack. Up on top we had a beautiful view to go with our suppers, and lingered on the rock a little longer than we should have.

In view of the condition of the shorter trail, we decided to go down the long way, and darkness caught up with us just as we reached the junction of the LT North and the AT East. No one had thought to bring a flashlight, so we made our way down cautiously -- I focused on a white patch on Herb's pack in front of me, Rob on my white jacket, and so on down the line, and we all made it safely. Back in the parking lot we had a little celebration with a cake sent along by Sue Carey who wasn't able to come. Thanks Sue!

THE TRAIL THAT WAS NEVER FOUND

by Steve Pulling
June 29, 1986

Many years ago when I was in college our Smoke & Blazes editor, Carol Chapman, led a hike up Old Baldy Mountain in Bridgewater. I have always wanted to do that hike again so I decided to take the club up a second time. After picking Carol's and Churchill's brains, I couldn't get any specific directions, so I headed out alone in search of Old Baldy.

My first trip to Bridgewater put me on the correct trail after many hours of looking. On my second trip over, Lynn and I found the top of Old Baldy, but the way we went was extremely difficult and not suitable for a club hike. My third trip was another solo effort trying to find an easy way up the mountain, but after many hours of searching, no "easy" way was found. My fourth and final scouting trip was a success! Much by accident I found an "easy" way up as I flagged and cut a trail to the top.

When the morning of June 29th came along I knew my four trips to Bridgewater were not in vain, as 18 people were at the park to make the trip.

Some first time senior citizens, a man from Texas, many new faces, and of course that core of old regulars all showed up ready and willing to scale Old Baldy Mountain.

An easy two mile walk on logging roads served as the prelude to a sometimes difficult uphill bushwhack through a red pine stand. The pine stand was fairly open and pretty easy walking on this beautiful sunny and clear day. Suddenly much to most people's surprise we came upon an open hilltop field which is the reason for Old Baldy's name.

While eating lunch we were marveling at the 360° panoramic views of the beautiful Vermont countryside. We could see parts of Woodstock Village, Mount Ascutney, Stratton, Bromley, Okemo, Round Top, all five mountains of the Killington Ski Area, Pico, and to the north Bridgewater's numerous mountain peaks.

For you people who missed this spectacular hike I've got just one word to say: "SORRY!"

STACEY ANNE SHULTZ MEMORIAL HIKE

by Sue Thomas
July 6, 1986

This summer Bill Shultz of Massachusetts planned to hike the length of the Long Trail to raise money for the Leukemia Society in memory of his daughter Stacey Anne, who died of the disease 10 years ago. To show our support, some Killington Section members joined him as he passed through our area. We met Bill at Sherburne Pass on July 6 as he was preparing to start out again after two days off with his family.

We had a small but enthusiastic group;

John & Emma Hughes, myself, Bill, and last but not least, his 65 lb. pack! It was unfortunately a very hot and humid day, and none of us envied him having to carry all that weight up the trail on such a day, but no complaints were heard, and we had a very enjoyable day talking about his hike -- where he had already been and where he was going. He said he'd been having a wonderful time meeting people along the way, hiking a few miles with some, and keeping track of others through the entries in the shelter log books.

He also told us a little about the progress being made by the Leukemia Society, both in research and treatment. When his daughter's illness was diagnosed, they were told she had only a 2% chance of survival; now, 10 years later, the same strain of leukemia has a 60% survival rate.

The Hugheses and I had planned only to hike as far as Tucker Johnson Shelter, but were enjoying it so much, we decided to continue, and ended up at the Elbow Road, where we finally parted company with Bill, very glad to have participated in his project. I have also collected donations from several Killington Section members.

Unfortunately, I learned recently that Bill did not complete his hike -- stopped by a broken leg on Camel's Hump! I was very sorry to hear that, after all the planning and effort that went into the trip. I'm sure the entire Killington Section joins me in wishing Bill a speedy recovery and return to the trails.

SHREWSBURY PEAK, OR THE THREE-HOUR SHOWER

by Herb Ogden, Jr.
July 12, 1986

The weather forecast merely said "showers" before noon," and the mountains were in clear view from Rutland. Off we went to Shrewsbury, figuring that, at worst, we'd encounter sprinkles and still have a good view from the peak. By the time your hike leader spotted a car at the end of the Black Swamp forest road (and inadvertently spotted his lunch and raingear there, too!), the forenoon

"shower" had gone on for some time, but our band of seven started up the Shrewsbury Peak Trail anyway. We noted with sadness the passing of the picnic pavilion, which burned down sometime between October and May. The shelter just beyond was still in good shape, however. After passing through the somewhat misnamed "swale" north of Russell Hill (low, yes; marshy, no), we found that both the grade and the "shower" were increasing steadily. Mara Carey, our youngest member, was a good sport about this until she got one wet branch too many in the face, whereupon she made some brief comments that some thought might reflect on the wisdom of the accompanying grownups' setting off up a mountain in the rain.

After a very brief stop at the South Peak, which might charitably be described as cool and very humid, we descended the Black Swamp Trail to Newfound Shelter for lunch. There, we met a gentleman from Mt. Holly who used to work for Farm & Wilderness Camps and filled us in on the history of the area's shelters and trails. Newfound Shelter was built in the CCC days and then lost. Folks knew it was up there somewhere, but not precisely where. When they finally found it some 15 years ago, the roof was in poor condition, but the walls were still sound. Farm & Wilderness re-roofed the shelter, and it looks as though it will be good for years to come. It also has a fine view, which, like all the rest of the fine views on the trip, was limited to a few hundred feet.

The stop for lunch was dry but not very warm, so we hustled down the trail to the waiting car, discussing the idea of a moonlight hike to Newfound Shelter over the wide, easy trail sometime when the weather was better. From the car, your leader tried to spy a promised attraction of the hike, a solid structure that may be Vermont's largest backwoods outhouse. Summer foliage and a disinclination to poke around in the wet woods led us to postpone rediscovery of the outhouse (Newfound Outhouse?) till another time, however. Despite the bad weather, we all arrived back at the Northam Area in good spirits.

TRAIL MAINTENANCE WORKSHOP

by Roma Pulling
July 19, 1986

Under the new GMC policy of breaking up the Trail Maintenance Workshop into eight regional ones, our section met with the O Section. Five KS members -- Steve Pulling, Sue Thomas, John and Emma Hughes and myself -- gathered in Rutland at 9:00 A.M. and were asked to meet the leaders and O Section volunteers at the Woodstock Recreation Center at 9:30. Even with Steve driving the lead car, we didn't quite make it.

Our leaders, who waited for us, were Ray Auger, GMC Southern Field Assistant, and Roger Sternberg of the Appalachian Trail Conference. The section of trail being relocated was described in LT News as being in Chateaugay and as the No Town area of Stockbridge by one of our co-workers. Either way, we drove off Route 12 in Barnard and followed steadily deteriorating gravel roads for several miles. About a mile short of our destination, John decided the road had deteriorated enough and parked his car and he and Emma rode the rest of the way with Ray.

At the beginning of our walk we were assigned tools and given printouts from trail maintenance and construction manuals of both the GMC and ATC. Our job this day was construction of new trail for an AT relocation. We started with picks and shovels on a short section which will slab across a steep slope with emphasis on methods of discouraging erosion.

For a second assignment we helped choose among three possible trail routes up a gradual slope some distance from the first, then we split into two groups. The one including the KS members worked with Roger toward where our cars were parked and did clearing of brush and small trees. When we arrived back at the cars, we were free to leave except for one detail: Steve had left early to fulfill another obligation, John's car was still a mile down the road, and the other drivers were still back in the woods. Of course this was no problem for seasoned (!!) hikers like ourselves. We hoofed it back to John's car and still had not been overtaken by drivers from the other team. John chose to take a slightly shorter route home through Pittsfield with an ice cream stop along the way.

I can't accurately compare the success of the new workshops with the old system of holding one two-day event. This method may have attracted new workers: none of the five members from our section had attended a workshop before.

"FUN DAY"

by Sue Thomas
July 20, 1986

As you all know now, our "FUN DAY" was actually a code name for a much deserved party to honor Churchill Scott, who recently retired after 25 years as treasurer of the Killington Section. We felt this was an accomplishment worth celebrating, so through a cooperative effort of many we organized the day in his honor. We thank Craig Perkins for the use of Tall Timbers, the site of many GMC functions over the years, and we were especially grateful to have the lodge available when it began to pour!

Our guest of honor brought out quite a crowd, including many people I had never met, but had heard much about since joining the club.

It really was a Fun Day. Until the rain started there was a volleyball game going, and food cooking on the grill, and inside lots of good food donated by everyone.

Rob Carey presented Churchill with a certificate recognizing his service to the club, and a scrapbook we had put together with photos of Killington Section members past and present. Everyone had fun looking through it and reminiscing about hikes and hikers, and the day was a successful tribute to a man who has contributed much to our section. Thank you, Churchill!!

NICKWACKETT CAVE TRIP

by Sue Carey
August 2, 1986

We had a hard time deciding on which cave to explore. We wanted to go to the Dorset Bat Cave, but the Nature Conservancy frowns on visitors there. Besides, we don't know where it is.

A few days before the event we decided on Nickwackett Cave. We thought that it would be drier because it is high on a mountain and with this wet summer, we didn't want to risk going to a cave that might be flooded.

The last time that the section visited this cave, there was ice blocking one of the three entrances. We didn't have that problem on this trip.

Several people were introduced to caving on this trip. Some found that they liked it while others didn't. In order to enjoy caving you have to like crawling in small dark places and you can't worry about getting your clothing dirty.

Mara didn't want to crawl around in the cave so we waited outside. Maybe she'll like it better next year.

MYSTERY HIKE

by Bernie Donahue
August 10, 1986

Success in planning a mystery hike can, at times, in itself, be a mystery. Deciding just where to go, how far to go to suit a variety of hikers is a challenge. Perhaps, in retrospect, the 25 respondents to the August 10th mystery hike liked the weather forecast for that Sunday and thus formulated plans to come out. True, some potential hikers were vacationing in the area. Two couples from India, along with their small children (one per couple) and a couple from New York happened to fill that category. A girl from France and a New Yorker, who is a part time Vermont resident, also came along.

White Rocks in Wallingford became the playground of the hikers. Climbing the huge, ancient rocks after a brief visit to the ice beds was the effort of some of the group. Others, content to visit with one another around the ice beds, completed this phase of the hike. Once together at the foot of the rocks, the entire group departed for the picnic area where lunching took place. Then, with the exception of a few who had to head back to Rutland earlier, the group ascended the knoll overlooking White Rocks for a final look. The conclusion of the hike on this beautiful day left a feeling of satisfaction that this indeed had been a pleasant experience.

CHICKEN BARBECUE

by Ira Hawley
August 16, 1986

Although dark clouds threatened all morning, no rain had fallen by noon, and 20 faithful hikers gathered at the park at 1:00 A.M. Our destination was Gifford Woods State Park. Even though this area is close to Rutland, many of the hikers were not acquainted with the facilities there.

We took a short hike along a nature trail in the park which is known as one of the few remaining virgin hard wood forests in Vermont. We then joined the Appalachian Trail which took us along the shores of Kent Pond to Mountain Meadows Ski Area. After enjoying a good look at the major part of Kent Pond we returned to the park via the same route.

Everyone helped assemble the makings of a chicken barbecue. A fire soon was burning briskly and no one had to wait long to indulge in all the goodies.

An hour of good fellowship ended with the usual "good-byes" and everyone agreed it was a pleasant afternoon.

Thanks, Bernie, for introducing us to your Bar B Q sauce.

INTERSECTIONAL

by Sue Carey
August 23-31, 1986

The Intersectional turned out to be a real success. There were 22 different Killington Section members attending various events.

Linda Krasner gave an interesting slide show and star watch on Monday. Howard Rogers led a hike into Boiling Springs on Thursday. They didn't find the spring during the hike, but several people returned the next day and found it.

On Saturday Jean Davies led a 15-mile canoe trip on Otter Creek. Dinner that evening was a lamb roast prepared by Rob and me.

In all there were around 100 people in attendance. With profits from the suppers, auction and registration, the Intersectional yielded the Club over $360.00.

THE ONE DAY WEEKEND

by Carol Chapman
September 6, 1986

Sue Thomas, who made the advance arrangements for the weekend at Merck Forest, unfortunately was laid up with a flu bug, the only bonus being that she didn't have to write this report.

Originally at least five people planned to stay at Beebe Pond Shelter for the weekend. However, when we arrived at Merck Forest we realized that Carol Hignite was the only one who had come prepared to stay and she decided it wouldn't be much fun alone.

The hikers divided into two groups, one consisting of the Carey family, their friends the Barbieris, the Hugheses, and Bernie; the other group the Krasners, Carol Hignite and myself. Our group set out for Mt. Antone and we thought the others were headed for Beebe Pond. We missed the first trail leading to the mountain and by the time we stopped at Clark's Clearing for lunch, I had run out of steam and decided to rejoin the others. Map in hand, I set out for Beebe Pond. It was peaceful and quiet with only a woodchuck to greet me on the trail. Beebe Pond is a tiny pond with open faced shelters and tent platforms surrounding it. But there was no sign of Group # 1.

After a brief rest I set out for the 1½ hour walk (I'm slow) back to the parking lot hoping I'd arrive before both groups left, each believing I was with the other. It was a pleasant hike with brief stops by Birch Pond and along the road to pick some pearly everlastings. I arrived back at the parking lot just in time to see John Hughes' red car heading down the road. With some yoo-hooing and waving, I was relieved to see his brake lights go on and to hitch a ride home.

Instead of going to Beebe Pond their group had hiked to the viewpoint below the summit of Spruce Peak and come down Gallup Road where they inspected the Barn Lean-tos and then stopped for a visit at the museum.

The mountain climbers got back to the parking lot shortly after we had left. The enjoyed the spectacular view from the top of Mt. Antone and also saw four deer in the woods.

We all enjoyed our day, but how about a two day weekend next time?

(Late note: Just learned that Mark Luttrell came in late Saturday morning and spent the night alone at Beebe Pond Shelter. Sorry we missed seeing you, Mark.)

A FEW WORDS OF THANKS

I'd like to take a few words to thank, first, everyone who helped with our tribute to Churchill Scott. From good food to old photographs, many contributed to make the day successful. Special thanks go to Craigue Perkins for the use of Tall Timbers.

Secondly, the section owes a big thank you to Rob & Sue Carey for their work at the Intersectional, both as hosts and especially for all their efforts to provide us with a lamb roast. While the rest of us were off canoeing or hiking, they spent the day working, cooking up a lamb dinner with corn on the cob, salads and cakes. It was quite an accomplishment, delicious, and very much appreciated.

Next, thanks are in order to Ira Hawley for the chicken roast he prepared for the Killington Section free of cost. Though I was not able to attend, I understand it was a very enjoyable day for everyone but the chickens. Thank you Ira & family.

THANK YOU FROM CHURCHILL

I want to thank everyone in the Killington Section for the wonderful gift of a photo album I received recently.

All of these pictures will bring back many pleasant memories of all the hikes I have had with our section.

Both Virginia and I will cherish this gift for many years to come and once again I want to thank all of you.

-- W. Churchill Scott

NEWS FROM RACHAEL

Rachael Charland writes that she has 46 miles to go to complete her End-to-End, including French Camp to Smuggler's Notch. We had hoped to see her at the Intersectional, but she didn't make it. We wish you sunny days to complete your hike of the Long Trail, Rae.

A NEW FEATURE

You probably noticed in the last issue that we are now including photographs in Smoke & Blazes. Sue Thomas uses a procedure by which they can be printed at no extra cost. If you'd like to submit a photograph, choose a color or black & white print with lots of contrast. Send or give them to Sue or the editor.

CHANGE IN PLANS

The edible wild foods course (see the last issue of Smoke & Blazes for details) that was scheduled for September now has a definite date of October 4. Please call Sue at 773-2185 for reservations.

PROGRESS (AT LAST) ON THE APPY

by Jake Sherman

My goal of doing the AT in Vt. and N.H. came a wee bit closer to reality this September with the completion of two segments of the trail east of Vt. 12.

On Sat., Sept. 13, I had perfect weather for the 7.7-mile trek from the Pomfret road to West Hartford. About this hike I'll remember encountering for the first time ever a deer on the trail (it bounded noiselessly into the woods at my approach). Also memorable: a Civil War era cemetery on a country lane; a grand panorama that included Pico, Killington and Dorset Peaks, and, after 3½ hrs. of walking, stretching out on the sun-warmed rocks along the White River for some impromptu sun-bathing.

A week earlier, on Sat., Sept. 6, I covered the 6.8 miles between the Etna-Hanover Road and downtown Hanover.

BUSHWHACKING MYSTERY HIKE

by Mark Luttrell

June 14, 1986

The day broke beautifully as five anxious explorers set out to conquer Blue Ridge Mountain via the previously uncharted western route. With maps and compasses in hand we began our journey from the end of a dirt road off Meadow Lake Drive. We took a bearing from the map and off we went into the woods.

There appeared to be an old logging road which was heading in the correct direction. We followed this for a while, until the nettles became too unbearable for those of us in shorts. We kept going up, checking our bearings as we went. Everyone had different ideas on direction, but we compromised and continued on. It was a strange feeling not hiking on a trail but instead picking our own trail as we went. I believe all hikers enjoyed this change.

We reached the ridge approximately 30 yards from the summit. Not too shabby! We enjoyed lunch along with all the bugs who had followed us up. After a short break Herb led a few of us to a nice rock outcrop with a beautiful view of Rutland and the surrounding valley.

After this we took the trail down the east side of the mountain, stopping for about 20 minutes at the waterfall. The cool air from the water spray felt great. We descended to the car and returned to Rutland. A beautiful day for a different type of hiking adventure.

WHEELERVILLE

by Ira Hawley
September 14, 1986

What a beautiful day for a hike! These afternoon hikes seem to be popular to a number of people. Various ages of GMC members and non-members enjoy these outings. This one attracted 33 to get out and stretch their legs.

We left Route 4 in Mendon on the Wheelerville Road and drove four miles past Brewers Corners.

At the entrance to a logging road, we left our cars and started along this road on a gradual incline. There was a limited view of Mendon Peak just ahead and a little later a view of Killington Peak. Just beyond a log yard was a beech tree with imprints of claws where a bear had climbed up to harvest the beechnuts (probably a couple of years previously).

At the top of a steady climb we came upon a level area where another log yard had been. Here Steve and Al Pulling built a small fire to boil water for coffee and hot chocolate. Hot dogs and rolls appeared to make a welcome snack after the climb. Fresh cut logs gave us a good place to rest.

Early foliage coloring was apparent all around. On the way back down we had limited views of Blue Ridge Mountain and Pico Peak.

This was a satisfying way to spend a late summer afternoon.

LILY POND

by Linda Krasner
September 21, 1986

The hike to Lily Pond in the Bomoseen area could easily have been renamed the Red Eft Trail. The eleven hikers who showed up on this overcast day had to dodge dozens of red efts of all sizes that were also traveling along the same route. As soon as we had lunch at Lily Pond the sun came out in full force to show off the red maples that had already turned color.

Ira knew the way from Lily Pond to the Float Bridge on Lake Bomoseen so he led the way. Since Ira had been on this trail in June, a family of beavers had dammed up a large pond which inundated a portion of the trail, making it a little more challenging. Ira's pedometer measured 12,300 steps for the trip, but none of the hikers could say exactly how that converted into miles. The trip ended at Glen Lake where we watched a scuba diving class prepare for a dive.

DID YOU EVER DRINK A PINE TREE?

by Sue Thomas
October 4, 1986

How about a birch? Well, that's what we did at Jean Davies' Edible Wild Foods workshop on Oct. 4. Jean met us at Camp Betsy Cox, and after passing out magnifiers and containers for collecting goodies, we set off to see what we could find. And we found plenty, right in the vicinity of the lodge -- as Jean pointed out, there are always interesting things to see, you just have to know how to look.

We collected Jerusalem artichokes (a common weed with an edible root), coltsfoot (used by the Indians to make cough syrup), mustard seeds in long thin pods, clippings from spruce, white pine, and birch trees, tasted the stalks of day lilies, and found the treasure of the day, several beautiful shaggy mane mushrooms. With our magnifiers we examined grasses, tiny flowers, bug galls, and the pollen sacs on a very sluggish bumble bee.

Next it was back to the lodge to sort out our harvest and learn how to turn our piles of twigs and leaves into meals. We were joined there by some college students who were spending the weekend at the camp, several of whom are visiting from foreign countries. They watched with interest as we sauteed the Jerusalem artichokes with the mushrooms over the fire, made cough lozenges from the coltsfoot leaves, and laboriously emptied the tiny mustard seeds from the pods, and ground them with a mortar & pestle to make surprisingly spicy mustard.

Their interest turned to disbelief, however, when we cut up the spruce, pine, and birch twigs and made tea. One of them, from Germany, was sure he was misunderstanding when we told him the tea was made from a tree, and asked repeatedly before he was finally convinced!

Thank you to Jean for sharing her wealth of knowledge and enthusiasm. I'm hoping to organize another session in the spring if enough people are interested -- please let me know.

NEW MEMBERS HIKE, BALD MOUNTAIN

by Sue Carey
October 5, 1986

The New Members' Hike was well attended. Not only did eight non-members attend, but many regular Killington Section people came along as well.

We were rather surprised at the number of participants. The weather was cool and cloudy. Rain threatened and this sometimes stops people from hiking. Also, this was the the third Killington Section event planned for this weekend.

We parked the cars outside of Tamarack Notch Camp and started walking the long way up the Bald Mountain Trail. There were many good views from the trail. At one viewpoint you could see Rutland City. At another you saw Brown's Bridge in Shrewsbury. The return segment was still slick, but almost everyone stayed on their own two feet.

We feel that the New Members' Hike was a success. Several of the new people have returned on other hikes. Also, with enough hike leaders we seem to be able to have two well attended hikes on one weekend.

LLAMA ON THE MOUNTAIN: UP MT. ASCUTNEY

by Sue Thomas
October 12, 1986

I enjoyed having Norm Cyr guide us up Mt. Ascutney so much last year, that I asked him to take us up again this fall via the Brownsville Trail. Norm knows the mountain from all angles, having climbed it every month for several years.

Five of us met him at the trail head, along with seven more for a total of twelve, and off we went. Or more accurately, up we went -- the Brownsville Trail sure starts out with a bang! Norm took pity on us at the top of that first pitch though, and while we caught our breath he handed out leaflets with interesting information about the trail, which passes by an old granite quarry. By climbing the pile of waste rock on the edge, you find a nice view of the farm land below, and the huge derrick booms used in the quarrying are still there. According to the leaflet, the quarry was also the site of a moonshine operation!

As we neared the site of the old stone hut, I began to hear the sound of bells in the distance. As it got closer I began to wonder if I'd been out in the woods too long, but just as we reached the clearing a llama appeared! I believe this was a Killington Section first!

After lunch at the clearing we hiked on to the summit and climbed the tower for a view of the Connecticut River to the east and Killington Peak to the west, then went out to the overlook above the ski area, and made one last stop at an overlook on the Windsor Trail before returning. All in all, it was a very nice hike, and it was great to have Norm lead us with his knowledge about the mountain.

MOON OVER SHREWSMOUTH

by Sue Thomas

October 18-19, 1986

Silly me, I promised Herb that if he'd help us find the Black Swamp Trail for an overnight expedition on Shrewsbury Peak, I'd write the hike report. I enjoyed the trip so much though, that I guess it was worth even the pain of writing a report! We had a good turnout of 20 including several new faces, and set off at dusk for Shrewsbury, arriving just in time for a spectacular sunset, a nice way to begin our hike. It's been a real challenge this year to find a break in the clouds, so I was very pleased to have such a beautiful clear night and a full moon bright enough to light our way.

After a short but steady climb we arrived at Newfound Shelter, which sits on the side of the mountain with a beautiful view. That night the full moon lit the valley and mountains making it a wonderful place to be. Which brings me to my explanation of the name "Shrewsmouth" for all those who weren't quite curious enough to climb the mountain to hear it. Earlier in the year Herb led us up Shrewsbury Peak from the other side, and we met a man at the shelter who told us that there had been plans to build condominiums up there. Since the location is between Plymouth and Shrewsbury, they had planned to call the development "Plymsbury." While everyone else said "ugh!" and other appropriate things about the name, what occurred to me was that it was sure a lot better than their other alternative, "Shrewsmouth"!

Meanwhile, back at the moonlight hike, we got a good fire going, had cocoa and goodies, and admired the view, till the non-overnighters had to head home, and the three of us remaining settled down for a rather chilly night's sleep. (This only after we convinced Linda that she could not take the campfire to bed with her!)

The only excitement during the night was a sound which we interpreted to be someone furry being eaten by someone bigger -- fortunately no one bigger than we was hungry that night.

We awoke early to watch the sunrise below us, an unbeatable start to the day. I was reluctant to leave, but we packed up and climbed on to the summit, where we sat in the sun and admired the view for as long as we could, before returning to our cars.

MYSTERY HIKE

by Churchill Scott

November 1, 1986

We had a very good turnout for this hike which was a mystery to the leader until the last minute. It depended on weather and snow underfoot, if any. Tinker Brook Shelter won out over Blueberry Ledges which is in the same area.

The cars were parked on Route 100. Then we walked about one mile uphill all the way to the shelter while avoiding an endless stream of cars going to visit the moose.

Everyone pitched in to have a perfect fire for hot drinks and to roast Jim Griffin's hot dogs. It was good to see him again.

After returning to the cars so early we said, "Let's go see the moose." So most of us took the old C.C.C. road by the burned out picnic pavilion at the trail head to Shrewsbury Peak. What a carnival atmosphere we found at the Carrera farm! People, cars, noise, banners, T-shirts, petitions to sign about Parker's Gore. But the moose was the best sight. It was the first one ever seen by the leader. Let's keep up the good attendance.

FREEDOM TRAIL -- BOSTON

by Rob Carey

November 15-16, 1986

Plans for this trip were greatly helped by Linda Pellerin. Just as we were running out of ideas for places to stay, she said her brother, Steve Lemmo, knew of a reasonably-priced motel in Framingham, a short distance from his house and the trolley line to Boston. Also he and his wife, April, would join us on Saturday for the Freedom Trail. In all there were 10 people on this trip.

Riding the subway was a new experience for many of us and it was helpful to have as guides Steve and April, who knew their way around. The wind in Boston Common was chilly so we ate lunch inside before starting out on the Freedom Trail. Most of the buildings are owned by various organizations and therefore have different hours and fees.

We spent some time looking at the stones in the Granary Burying Ground where John Hancock and others are buried. Many of the historical buildings such as King's Chapel, Old South Meeting House and the Old State House are dwarfed by their surroundings. The last attraction we toured on Saturday was the Old North Church where the lanterns were hung to signal Paul Revere.

On Sunday we got up bright and early to visit the New England Aquarium. There are about 70 small to medium-sized tanks around the sides of the main building. On the lowest level they have a penguin colony. In the center of the building is the giant ocean tank which is 40 feet wide and 23 feet deep. The many types of fish and other animals including sharks do not eat each other because they are fed five times a day. We also enjoyed the show by the trained sea lion and dolphins. After lunch on the waterfront we decided to save the Boston Tea Party ship for another time and began the trip home.

TAMARACK NOTCH COVERED DISH SUPPER

by Herb Ogden

November 22, 1986

There were three or four inches of snow at Tamarack Notch Camp in Mendon on the evening of our annual feast, and it was fairly cold out, so we decided to gather in the relatively cozy Rotary Cabin rather than in the Main Lodge, where we might well have spent the whole evening heating the great outdoors via the big fireplace, rather than heating ourselves. The cabin's cookstove responded well to Rob and Sue Carey's efforts, and soon we were all comfortable and ready to sample an amazing array of appetizing dishes.

One member did cause momentary excitement by resting a styrofoam cup of cocoa on the stove, with consequences that we heard, saw, and smelled. After the rest of us had disposed of cocoa and cups in more orthodox ways, Linda Krasner treated us to slides of wildlife and some other life on Trinidad and Tobago. Soon it was time to leave the Caribbean for the cold and starry night at Tamarack Notch, and twenty-odd Killington Section members and guests headed down the Notch Road to Rutland with a fine outing behind us.

EIGHT EQUALS TEN, OR AROUND HERRICK MOUNTAIN

by Herb Ogden

December 6, 1986

This hike almost didn't happen. The week before it was to be, your hike leader was told that his law firm needed him to go to Nevada. Even by flying all night, I wouldn't have been anywhere near Ira by the morning of the 6th. Fortunately (or maybe not, it may depend on whose feet you ask), a deposition was cancelled at the last moment, and the hike came off as scheduled.

Nine of us left Main Street Park on a crisp, beautiful morning. We picked up one more hiker at the Ira Town Hall. Another, who had looked in the other part of Main Street Park next to the Chamber of Commerce and found nobody, caught up with us near the start of the hike at an intersection about 1.3 miles northwest of Ira. (Note: our press releases should specify where in Main Street Park we meet.)

After walking about 3/4 mile up an abandoned road from Ira to Middletown Springs and negotiating a somewhat tricky crossing of a tributary of Ira Brook, we headed west up a woods road, then bushwhacked from its end to a gap in the ridge that extends south from Herrick Mountain. The bushwhack through open woods led us under some cliffs with fine icicle formations. From the gap above the cliffs, elevation about 2290', we followed a snowmobile trail north through a rocky gulch to an unnamed 2565' summit, the second highest peak in Ira. Views were fine: west to the Adirondacks, east to Pico, Killington, and Mendon from an unusual angle, and north to Bird Mt.'s great cliff, Herrick, Grandpa's Knob, and Ray Catozzi in a yellow birch tree (also at an unusual angle, taking photos of Rutland).

Back at the gap, your hike leader offered a choice between a leisurely lunch with hot drinks from the veteran coffeepot and a return via pretty much the same route we came up, or a fast lunch with no fire but a chance to complete the advertised route all the way around Herrick Mountain. The consensus was to "go for it," so we bushwhacked down the west side of the gap to a woodroad that eventually connected with the old public road from Poultney to North Ira. At the junction of Birdseye Road up from Castleton, we looked for the remains of a school shown on the 1869 atlas but found nothing. With only a few hunting camps in the area now, it was hard to imagine enough families in that high, remote area to support even a little one-room school.

Crossing back from Poultney into Ira, we passed two cellarholes. The last was in a clearing with an impressive closeup view of the Bird cliffs from the south. At the next junction, where a left turn would have led us down the Ira-Birdseye Road to Route 4, we turned right and headed southeast over a 1740' pass. Sheets of ice in places on the old highway made for slow going, and some of us likened this last steep climb to Heartbreak Hill. Also not calculated to cheer us was the prediction of an Ira camp owner that we wouldn't reach our goal by dark. Nevertheless, we successfully picked our way down the old highway to the Clark Hill Road in West Rutland and then headed south through a pretty little notch on that road, reaching Steve Pulling's truck with some daylight to spare. We all piled in for the ride about one mile southwest to our starting place, glad to rest our tired legs.

Counting the spur trail to the 2565' summit, we had covered some 10.3 miles in three towns. In the aftermath, your hike leader promises to do his oldmath more carefully when figuring distances. The spur trail to the view can't have accounted for all those extra 2.3 miles, even if the view was worth that distance and more.

ROUND HILL

by Stephen Pulling
October 11, 1986

Any hike that has a fabulous view at the destination is a worthwhile outing in my book. If that is the case, my Round Hill/East Mountain hike was a great outing. The participants on this hike saw a view that very few people in the club have seen before.

A view of Rutland from the east-southeast with Florence, West Rutland, and Tinmouth in the background was a little different than your traditional East Mountain hike. I found this rock outcrop by accident one day when I was scouting out another club hike which I have yet to find. If anyone knows where Elephant Rock is on the west side of East Mountain, please show me.

October 11th was a perfect fall day for a short afternoon hike. I led a large group of people up an old log road off the Stratton Road that was very easy walking for about a mile. Then we had a short but very difficult bushwhack up to the ledge where we found the view. Unfortunately, a few people didn't attempt the bushwhack and missed the breathtaking panorama of the Rutland valley.

After we got back to the cars your fearless leader was embarrassed to find out he wasn't on Round Hill after all which was published, but on East Mountain. But fun was had by all, which was my intention from the beginning.

CANOE TRIP

by Stephen Pulling
September 27, 1986

This year's Killington Section's annual canoe trip was probably the longest in distance that we have ever had before. The trip leader was trying to do something a little different from years past and came to find out that this trip was "different." I use the word "different" because this publication is read by young and old alike. Some of the trip participants would probably describe it with other words.

A guidebook acquired by the trip leader described their 20-mile expedition on the Connecticut River from Orford, New Hampshire, to the Wilder Dam as having Class I and Class II rapids. From experience I know that a 20-mile canoe trip with Class I and II rapids is easy, but there was only one problem. We encountered no rapids at all, only flat waters. This section of the Connecticut River was like canoeing across a twenty mile lake!

So, as you can imagine, the canoe trip was not easy. I had twelve very tired people at the end of the day. We had started canoeing at 10:30 A.M. and didn't pull out of the water until 6:30 P.M.: a long day. Next year's trip will be shorter; at least easier on the arms.

KILLINGTON SECTION DIRECTORS MEETING

December 11, 1986

Reported by Rob Carey

A letter of resignation has been submitted by KS Secretary and Director Olga Laird. She has been unable to attend recent meetings. Rob Carey, president, expressed the section's appreciation for her excellent work and dedication.

Pico Ski Area has announced a master plan for expansion which would involve many crossings of the LT between Route 4 and Pico Camp. Negotiations with the National Park Service also revealed that Pico wants to retain the option to develop the back sides of Ramshead and Snowdon Peaks, which they own. Ray Catozzi reported the Main Club response to date. A major relocation west of the present trail, crossing Route 4 near the Beaver Pond, has been strongly rejected. The Directors unanimously supported the policy of pushing for a minimal number of ski trail crossings, with the need for compromise by all parties recognized.

On a motion by Ray/Bernie Donahue the date of April 4, 1987, was approved for the Annual Meeting.

A motion by Sue Carey/Ray to donate $10 to the Stacy Anne Shultz Memorial Hike was approved.

A report by Ray regarding recent Main Club Directors and Trails & Shelters Committee made the following points:

- 1) Trail regulations have been amended to prohibit llamas and other pack animals.
- 2) The LT/AT will be relocated to go over Stratton Mountain.
- 3) There has been some conflict with snowmobiles in the Glastonbury area.
- 4) There is no truth to rumors that the Main Club is unhappy with our Trails & Shelters maintenance.

5) The Deer Leap Trail is badly eroded and there are many "bootleg" trails. Rob confirmed this from recent experience. Sue said that Ky McGrath of the Inn at Long Trail has complained. He has brought several people down. Major work is needed. Maintenance responsibility is uncertain.

6) Cooper Lodge continues to be a problem with excessive trash, both in the spring and during the hiking season due to easy access. Because of the exposed location and high eave on the front, the Main Club Trails & Shelters Committee does not support removal of the front.

Dues Increase - The Main Club assessment has been raised from $4.50 to $6.00 for adults. An increase will be proposed to the members at the Killington Section Annual Meeting. Adult dues of $14-15 will probably be proposed.

The date of the next Section Directors meeting is Thursday, March 5, 1987 at the Rutland Shopper offices.

Ed. Note: We encourage you to send letters expressing your opinion and feelings about the trail on Pico. Send letters to:

KILLINGTON SECTION DIRECTORS MEETING

March 5, 1987

Reported by Rob Carey

President Rob Carey called the meeting to order at 7:20 P.M. Directors Ray Catozzi, Bernie Donahue, Wally Rogers and Churchill Scott were present.

Rob Carey reported on the meeting that he and other Section members had just attended led by Dave Richie and others of the National Park Service regarding Pico. The western route has been dropped from further consideration. There has been little support for the eastern route, so the emphasis now is on retaining the present route with minor modification. How much ski development will be allowed is uncertain. There will be some field work done this spring to attempt to reduce impacts below that indicated by currently mapped plans.

Wally Rogers gave a Treasurer's report similar to that to be presented at the annual meeting. He also presented a summary of the Kirk Fund and asked for clarification on restrictions on use of all or part of the money.

At present there are two Kirk Funds which as of Jan. 1, 1987, contain a total of more than $10,000. For the past several years KS Trails & Shelters expenses have been paid from the original Kirk Fund.

A motion was made by Wally and seconded by Ray that Trails & Shelters expenses can continue to be paid from the Kirk Funds so long as there remains a minimum balance of $10,000. This was passed unanimously. All agreed that this is within the intent of the fund and will provide the proper guidance to the treasurer.

Wally asked why members are carried until the June issue of Smoke & Blazes if dues are payable in January. Rob stated that memberships were dropped in March when the annual meeting was in January, but now an extra issue is sent since the meeting is later.

*Motion Wally/Churchill - Beginning in 1987 the membership renewal form will be in the Oct.-Dec. issue (No.4) and the Jan.-March issue (No.1) will be the last sent to members that have not renewed. This was passed unanimously.

The proposed dues increase was discussed. The Main Club Board of Directors raised the adult section assessment last year from $4.50 to $6.00. This took place after the notice of last year's sectional annual meeting so the dues currently being collected cannot reflect the increase.

*Motion Ray/Churchill - Recommend to members at annual meeting the following dues: Adult $14; Spouse $11; Individual Junior $2.50; Family Junior $1.00; Senior $7.50. This was passed unanimously. This will just cover the increase in the main club assessment.

Rob Carey stated that contributions have met $10 of the $20 paid for the new pack basket to be used on outings and work parties.

*Motion Ray/Churchill - Pay the remaining $10 from the Kirk Fund. Passed unanimously.

Discussion - Sale of guidebooks and other items by the Section as a service to members. Wally stated that there are books almost 10 years old in stock. Unanimous consent was given to cut prices way down in hope of moving old inventory at the annual meeting and not carry as much stock in the future.

FROZEN IN THE MOONLIGHT

by Sue Thomas

December 13, 1986

In keeping with our tradition of planning hikes in inclement weather to see who's crazy enough to show up, Dec. 13 turned out to be the coldest night we'd had. And sure enough, there are a lot of crazy people out there because we had quite a turnout! I think the number was 10 to be exact, but I'll bet we were each wearing enough extra clothes for at least 20 more! In fact, Mara's circumference was so increased by extra layers that Mom and Dad had quite a job to stuff her into a backpack carrier.

We were fortunate to have a beautiful starry night and a full moon, and reached Tucker-Johnson Shelter quickly. We built a fire and in a short time had a fire going and hot drinks and Christmas cookies to warm us up. However, standing still in sub-zero weather gets stale after a while, so we retreated to the warmth of Steve's house for "peppermint patties." Thanks to Steve, and especially Bean, for your hospitality.

TRA-LA-LA-LA-LA....(CHRISTMAS CAROLING)

by Carol Chapman
December 21, 1986

We already knew we could hike, ski and paddle, but who would have guessed we'd discover another talent. We can sing too! This was revealed on the bright, starlit night of the winter solstice when more than 20 Killington Section members and friends went caroling around Rutland.

In order to make an 8 o'clock curfew at the nursing homes we left Main St. Park shortly after 7, thus missing aspiring carolers Ray Catozzi and Herb Ogden. Luckily, because they knew part of our route, they caught up with us at Eden Park and added volume to the male chorus.

Virginia Scott ably led the group as we called on friends at Pleasant Manor, Eden Park and at home. Most of those caroled were Killington Section members, some no longer active hikers. Our reception varied from an offer of money (not to send us away, but in the belief we were out collecting) to Jim Frink's spirited sing-a-long with us.

After about 10 stops around the city we headed up the mountain to Roma's for the grand finale. We sat by the crackling fire, eating Christmas confections, visiting and singing a few more Christmas songs for those who weren't sung out.

We brought good cheer not only to those we'd caroled, but also to ourselves. Next year if we go caroling again, you'd better join us or we may come knocking at your door.

HERB'S TRIP TO TEXAS FALLS WITHOUT TEXAS FALLS OR HERB

by Sue Thomas
January 3, 1987

On January 3 we were scheduled to go to Texas Falls to ski, but due to a blizzard the night before and Herb's selfish refusal to take us all to Portland with him, it was transformed into a short excursion to Patch's Pond in Rutland. The new snowfall made it very beautiful, though it failed to completely cover the swamp at the far end of the pond. But we were able to find a place to cross, and continued for a while through open fields until the cold wind drove us back to enjoy our lunches in the shelter of my apartment.

CROOKED SHELTER

by Rob Carey
January 10, 1987

The weather forecast called for snow starting in the afternoon, but it started snowing before I left home for the fire station. Eleven hikers, snowshoers, and skiers braved the storm. We parked in the snowmobilers' parking lot on Route 100A just past the summer entrance to Coolidge State Forest. There were already several inches of new snow on the base of earlier storms making excellent skiing.

It's about 1½ miles to Crooked Shelter and we reached there a little after noon. After spending a few minutes clearing snow from the fireplace, it didn't take long to get a fire burning and the water boiling. Since it was still snowing, the shelter made a dry, cheery place to eat a leisurely lunch.

On the return trip the skiers enjoyed a nice downhill run. Some even went part way back up to do it again while waiting for the walkers.

MERCK FOREST WEEKEND

by Sue Carey

January 17-18, 1987

Winter weekends at Merck Forest have become a Killington Section tradition. There were no day hikers on this trip, but Carol Chapman, Lee and Linda Pellerin, and I decided to spend the night.

The snow was deep, but because of rain the week before it was crusty and icy in spots. Because we didn't want to carry heavy packs, the three adults decided to pull in the gear on sleds. Carol and I tied the sleds to our backpacks so we could have our hands free for skiing. It worked rather well considering that the trail was icy, and we skied almost to the top of the hill by Spruce Shelter.

Along the way tragedy struck. Lee broke a ski tip, dampening any idea he had of a weekend of skiing. He was ready to turn back there, but his mother wouldn't let him.

When we arrived at the shelter, there was a dull 12-inch saw and no cut firewood. We took our sleds over to the lodge where we had gotten wood every other year. At the lodge we were accosted by two surly caretakers who told us that "this wasn't a KOA and we would have to cut our own wood." We told them we had gotten wood here every other year, it was going to be 0° tonight, and we had paid $20 for the cabin which we thought included the wood. They said that we didn't have to pay anything for the cabin, that the fee was a donation and as the Girl Scouts were able to cut their own wood we should be able to do it too. Well, they did relent and told us that we could take a load, so we loaded the three sleds and headed back. We were glad that they let us have the wood because it is very difficult to cut wood with a dull saw and no sawbuck.

We took it easy during the afternoon and only skied to Clark's Clearing Shelter. The big event for the evening was dinner starting with Carol's fish soup as an appetizer and Linda's spaghetti with homemade sauce as the entree. We discovered a new spice to add to the spaghetti. As I was draining off the spaghetti water, the lid slipped and the spaghetti fell on the ground picking up spruce needles in the process. It really didn't taste too badly. Dessert was raspberry and/or strawberry shortcake with whipped cream.

After playing cards for several hours we decided to retire. The stove was producing enough heat to keep everyone comfortable. We had to be careful that it didn't get too hot. With the sides already thin from previous overheatings and the damper held in place with a stone, the stove could be dangerous.

After breakfast we stopped at the caretakers' cabin to tell them of the stove's condition. Then we started on tree ID trail, but soon headed home when the weather got snowy.

LILY POND

by Linda Krasner

January 24, 1987

Twelve skiers and one snowshoer (Linda Pellerin) braved the cold temperatures to take advantage of the 1½ feet of new snow that had fallen the previous day. Sue Thomas used the promise of her freshly-baked brownies as a reinforcer for people who helped in breaking the trail. Several skiers risked going around the pond despite the slush. A few more cautious people remained on the wind-swept shore to make sure that no one fell through, while Dave Krasner was closely trailing Sue on the pond to stand ready to save the brownies in case she went for a swim. Several persons took a different loop trail back, and then returned to the Krasners' to warm up and swap snacks.

A MODERATE-TURNED-DIFFICULT HIKE (ROLSTON REST)

by Roma Pulling

January 31, 1987

Your leaders learned two things on this hike. First, that a hike that seemed moderate on snowshoes can be difficult on skis. Second, that snowmobiles haven't been everywhere, even though it sometimes seems that way.

In other words, our trail that was heavily traveled and easy to traverse last winter was three feet of light, powdery snow and a real challenge for six people on skis. Two gave up early on. Four skiers and the leaders on snowshoes continued until forced by time restrictions to turn around. We were puzzled on the way back to meet four skiers headed up the mountain at 2:15 P.M. with day packs. Did they actually expect to reach the shelter and return before dark?

Even though we did not reach our goal, being in the woods on such a day was pure pleasure. At the very start of our trail we happened on a deer yard, but saw no deer. We should all pool our efforts to keep large areas of Vermont unspoiled for outings like this one.

NON-ICE SKATING TRIP TO ROCKY POND

by Sue Thomas
February 8, 1987

Due to an excessive amount of white stuff that no one was inspired enough to shovel off the ice, no one skated on Rocky Pond on February 8. We did have a nice trip in to the pond though, some walking on a well-packed snowmobile trail from Evergreen Avenue, and others skiing. Once there, in addition to enjoying the beauty of the spot, we discussed the future of the ponds, now uncertain with the owners considering selling the property. Several of us from the Killington Section as well as other local groups such as the Audubon Society have become involved in trying to preserve the area, so we brought everyone up to date on the situation.

The trip down to the country club was, to say the least, rapid for those of us with skis, and an interesting variety of methods of applying the brakes was displayed, with varying results. The least successful, but probably most entertaining for the onlookers, was my attempt to steer into a snowbank -- the result being one ski lodged firmly in the bank, the other, with foot still attached, trying to continue on down the trail. Ouch!

Finally emerging from the woods, we found deeper snow on the golf course and paused while the walkers put on their snowshoes for the first time that day.

SUCKER BROOK SHELTER

by Stephen Pulling
February 14, 1987

Cold was the word for the day as it was -8°F when I left my house to lead this excursion. I didn't figure too many people would show up, but I had to be present and accounted for. One other person showed up at the park, so off to Goshen we went.

We started hiking up the Goshen Dam Road for about a half mile when we turned right onto a groomed Blueberry Hill ski trail. After about a mile or so on that trail we had to put on snowshoes and start hiking on old logging roads and side trails up to the shelter.

A washed-out bridge across Sucker Brook provided some excitement and a challenge as we had to scale down a steep bank to the brook, and back up the bank -- easier said than done.

After a quick lunch and scan of the log book huddled in a corner of the open front shelter we headed back to the car. A packed down snowshoe trail made the return trip much easier and faster. I have to admit I was hoping no one would show up for this hike because of the cold weather, but after Linda and I got started up the trail it was tons of fun as always.

BELLEVUE AVE. EXTENSION TO PULLINGS'HOME

by Ray Catozzi
February 22, 1987

What luck! After nearly two weeks of sunny but bitter cold weather, we got a perfect break for this easy, relatively flat pedestrian excursion. On a day that was 40°, sunny, and windless, it was no wonder that 18 cross-country skiers, snowshoers, and walkers enjoyed both the route and the weather.

Two longtime members whom we haven't seen much of lately were George and Diana Conlon. Welcome back. We were joined by three non-members: Judy Lashof and Mary Sidley from Rutland, and Carol Wood from Woodstock. A relatively new member, Rose Crowley, came all the way from her home in Weston for her first outing with the Killington Section. Welcome to you, too, Rose.

From five-year-old Michael Nadler (or is it 6 now, Mike?) to 89-year-old Vera Perkins, the group trekked across meadowland, down through pine woods, across Cedar Swamp and Tenney Brook to a high tension power line. We then followed the power line right of way south for about ½ mile, into the woods again, then up and out into some more open meadows, west and north of Al and Roma Pulling's home. Here we encountered our only "real" climbing along the route.

With many rest stops taken along the way, it was with regret that we had to move on each time, as the sun was so warming and comfortable as to make some of us wish to lie down for a pre-season suntan. But on we went, until the last of the long-scattered band of hikers arrived outside Pullings' back door.

Inside, with a cheerful fire blazing in the hearth, we partook of various drinks and all kinds of fattening goodies, amidst animated conversation on every imaginable subject. A great afternoon hike, in wonderful weather, and a very congenial ending in the Pullings' home. Thank you, Al and Roma.

KILLINGTON SECTION ANNUAL MEETING

from Minutes by Wally Rogers

4 April 1987

About twenty members attended an informative meeting at the Unitarian-Universalist Church in Rutland.

Treasurer Wally Rogers reported a 1986 general fund closing balance of 195.05 plus inventory, and a Kirk Fund balance of $11,038. The Kirk Fund has matured, and funds over $10,000 may be used for trails and shelters. Section income balanced expenses before the GMC dues assessment increase in 1987.

For the Trails and Shelters Committee, Steve Pulling reported on the success of last spring's two walk-throughs. Upon investigation, few of the complaints received from hikers proved to be serious. Steve will call on other members for help in checking complaints. Because relocations have not progressed as expected, we will reblaze much of our section this year.

Four relocations were announced for 1987. In addition to the Pratt House to Lower Cold River Road and the Cold River bank relocations (reported on elsewhere), relocations are planned for 2.5 miles of trail north of Route 140 and 1.5 miles north of Route 103. The Long Trail Patrol is expected to take a major part in the longer projects.

The Trails and Shelters Committee thanked shelter adopters and asked for more members to adopt a shelter.

Newsletter Editor Carol Chapman announced with regret that the June edition would be her last. Carol expressed appreciation for his excellent work to Jake Sherman who resigned as typist and to Sue Thomas as illustrator and Churchill and Virginia Scott, Irene Hawley, and Roma Pulling. Smoke & Blazes is sent to all members plus 15 landowners.

Sue Carey reported for herself and Sue Thomas on the Outings Committee. In the last year, there were 45 trips with an average of 16 members and guests on each.

In his President's Report, Rob Carey stated that field work and reviews would continue in the spring on the Pico development plans. There is continuing effort to compromise between Pico's planned ski trail and lift development and the GMC position of keeping a ridgeline trail with minimal ski exposure.

Main Club director Ray Catozzi reported on its relocation work and need for additional volunteer help along the Long Trail outside the Killington Section.

After amendment to cover life and institutional members, the Directors' dues increase proposal was passed.

Beginning in 1988, new dues are:

ADULT	$14.00	SENIOR	$ 7.50
SPOUSE	11.00	LIFE	120.00
INDIV. JR.	2.50	INSTITUTIONAL	25.00
FAMILY JR.	1.00

Elected to fill the terms of resigned directors Olga Laird and Mark Luttrell were Herb Ogden, Jr., and Sue Thomas. Their terms end at the 1988 annual meeting. Elected to terms ending in 1990 were Linda Pellerin, Bernie Donahue, and Wally Rogers. These directors then were joined by Steve Pulling (1988), Churchill Scott, Ray Catozzi, and Rob Carey (1989) to elect the following officers for 1987:

PRESIDENT	Rob Carey
VICE-PRESIDENT	Steve Pulling
SECRETARY-TREASURER	Wally Rogers
GMC DIRECTOR	Ray Catozzi
TRAILS & SHELTERS	Steve Pulling
OUTINGS	Sue Thomas, Sue Carey

GOVERNOR CLEMENT SHELTER

by Bernie Donahue

15 March 1987

Sometimes climatic conditions alter hiking plans. The writer seems to be the centerpiece of such aggravation. Nonetheless, some hardy members and others, forming a small group, trekked to Lower Cold River Road. Finding a section of the Long Trail heading north buried in deep snow, we drove to Upper Cold River Road and walked on a snowmobile packed trail to Governor Clement Shelter. Plenty of snow was still on the ground.

On arrival at the shelter we found four snowmobiles already there, having stopped for a short rest. We proceeded to eat lunch and engage in small talk with the mobile visitors.

Then back over the same route to the Upper Cold River Road entrance, on to our vehicles and homeward bound. Weather was nice for this time of year. It seemed everyone had some fun on that late winter trek.

SUGAR ON SNOW

by Sue Thomas

22 March 1987

Our annual Sugar on Snow Party was well attended this year, with 24 participants, and thanks to Ira Hawley, who kindly donated the syrup, most of the money was profit. Thanks are due also to Janet Martin, who once again this year donated her time and expertise to boil the syrup for us.

WALLINGFORD POND

by Linda Krasner

29 March 1987

The seventy degree temperatures in Rutland belied the fact that at Wallingford Pond it was still winter. Sue Carey scouted out the roads to the area for problems with mud and sand. There was still a little snow. Many people brought snowshoes, however, it was such a hot day they were all left behind in the cars. Once on the trail, we discovered there was a good three feet of snow and people were sinking through up to their hips, which gave rise to some good laughs. The group made a campfire in the snow overlooking the still-frozen Wallingford Pond.

LARRY'S CAVE

by W. Churchill Scott

5 April 1987

On a pretty wet and dark day, Linda P., Bob P. and I started for Larry's Cave, so called. But it's really only a large ledge with overhanging rocks. We looked in vain for some more fair weather hikers.

Perhaps it was just as well the group was small, for the leader took a wrong turn and wound up on the wrong side of the peak.

With increasing rain and a lost feeling we walked back to the car with the hope of trying once again in better weather.

The leader's only consolation is that two weeks later the senior citizens' group found Larry's Cave only after a long and hard effort.

BIRDSEYE MOUNTAIN

by Linda Krasner

12 April 1987

This hike could have been renamed "In Search of the Lost Monument" or "In Search of the Real Birdseye Mountain." Sixteen people gathered to hike up the west side of Bird Mountain, including two women from New Jersey, who belonged to a hiking club and who opted to hike instead of skiing at Killington.

Delight Gartlein found a copy of a 100 year old book which gave the details of a masonic monument that had been erected on top of the mountain. The structure had met its demise years ago, it was learned later. However, it was fun looking for the ruins. The book also described how bald eagles nested on the rocky cliffs one hundred years ago.

The group had lunch at the site that Linda mistakenly believed to be the summit (what do trip leaders know!). However, the rest of the group informed her there were several more peaks and valleys to go before reaching the real summit. The archaeologists bushwhacked down the mountain amidst the earliest of spring wildflowers.

BIKE HIKE

by Carol Chapman

25 April 1987

A fall outing with the Vt. Natural Resources Council on the recently completed Burlington Bike Path made me think that it would be a pleasant ride for the Killington Section. The old Rutland Railroad bed parallels the lake shore past city parks, condos and woods. It is a well-marked, nearly level five mile path to the mouth of the Winooski River.

On a bright and sunny day four of us met in Burlington at the foot of Main Street: Irene Rogers, Judy Olson, Tom Parent of Essex Jct. and I. By coincidence, the Burlington Section had also scheduled a bike or hike trip there starting two hours later, but with the large number of bikers and walkers we weren't aware of when we passed them.

Of interest along the way were early blooming shad, bloodroot, dandelions and strawberries, and a sparrow hawk perched on her telephone wire lookout.

During lunch by the Winooski Judy and Tom told of their plans to ride in the 100 mile long Vt. Lung Association Bikeathon to be held in northern Vermont.

Our return trip was made by the same route only a little easier as there is a slight downhill grade back to the city center. Irene and I detoured a bit to visit a couple of yard sales along the way.

Someday when you are coming to Burlington on a shopping spree, bring along your bike and enjoy the Bicycle Path.

RAILROAD MYSTERY HIKE

by Herb Ogden, Jr.

26 April 1987

Your hike leader discovered an unexpected benefit in announcing a mystery hike but giving some idea of the pathway. In trying to guess where the mystery hike was going, some other section members gave good tips about other possible railroad rights-of-way that would be good hiking, notably the former Delaware & Hudson line from Castleton down through Poultney, Rupert, and Pawlet.

This mystery hike took eleven members and guests north from the end of the Clarendon & Pittsford's track at the upper square at West St. in Proctor. We passed above the old stone enginehouse and soon came to the outlet of Beaver Pond. Ascending west of Beaver Pond on a fine, wide path, we saw where piles of marble blocks been dumped to make the railroad embankment. A good variety of wildflowers and interesting plants grow along the old railbed. We spotted coltsfoot, mayflower, wild ginger, violets, saxifrage, and bloodroot. Just after the height of land, fine views opened up to the east, from Mendon to Bloodroot Mountains. Soon, just west of the track, we inspected a large quarry which apparently had a rail spur running to it and to a huge grout pile beyond. This was doubtless the "L. White Marble Quarry" noted in the Beers 1869 atlas of Rutland County. Now overgrown and full of murky water, it was probably the end of the line that the Clarendon & Pittsford built north from Proctor in 1886. This line was later extended past the present huge OMYA plant to the Vermont Railway junction in Florence. We followed it downhill to where the combination of a "No Trespassing" sign, a fine view east, and lunchtime dictated a halt.

Unlike most hikes, this one was a musical event. Now we not only stalk the wild asparagus, but we play the stalk of the wild horsetail. The bamboo-like plant grew in profusion near our lunch spot. With practice, it can be played a little -- in the hike leader's case, very little -- like a flute. I don't know if there is a musical term for what is produced by 11 people all shrilling away on horsetails ("octet plus trio for mixed horsetails"?), but we had one, anyway.

Now that your hike leader has done some research in the Vermont Room of the Rutland Free Library, he can remove some of the mystery from the history of the Clarendon & Pittsford R.R. The line was a subsidiary of the Vermont Marble Company until recently. It was built north into Pittsford from its present junction with the Vermont Railway in Proctor in 1886. Next, a line was built south to Center Rutland in 1887. The next year saw a line from Center Rutland to West Rutland break the Delaware & Hudson's monopoly on the Whipple Hollow quarries. In 1891 the tracks were extended from Center Rutland to Rutland, crossing East Creek near the River Street bridge and hooking up with the present Vermont Railway to Bennington near the end of South Street. By 1895, a line from the present Vermont Railway junction in Florence had tapped quarries to the west. Finally, after 1895, came the connection from the L. White Quarry north to Florence.

The C&P from Proctor to near our lunch spot was used by the Otter Valley Railroad, a tourist operation, beginning in 1977. Now the only parts of the old marble hauler in operation are a stub in the southwest section of Rutland, a track from Center Rutland to Farrell Distributors just north of Route 4, and a track from the Vermont Railway in Florence south to OMYA. The Proctor track from the Vermont Railway to West St. was used as late as February, but parts are now torn up for sewer construction. The rest of the railroad is now used by walkers, snowmobilers, and cross country skiers, except where a few landowners have fenced it.

MOUNT MONADNOCK

by Rob Carey

3 May 1987

This is the second most climbed mountain in the world. (Mt. Fuji in Japan is first.) There was a late April snowstorm that gave Vermont's mountains a few inches of snow before the hike. As we drove by Keene, New Hampshire, and saw our goal, it looked like there was still snow on the mountain. We parked at the State Park and started up the White Dot Trail, taking the Spruce Link cutoff. This was the only part that was buggy.

Mt. Monadnock is unique because it is only about 3000 ft. high but treeless on top. There were fires about 1800 and the sod is very thin where there is any at all. This provides excellent views along the way. On a clearer day than we had, it is possible to see Boston and Killington. We could only see to Stratton.

Near the summit there were large patches of snow about 8" deep from the recent snowstorm. After a leisurely lunch on top, we returned via the White Cross Trail. It was a fairly warm day so some of us had a snack from the snack bar.

MYSTERY HIKE IN IRA

by Ray Catozzi

9 May 1987

When a leader lists a hike with the destination, hiking conditions, and a chance of getting lost as unknown factors, one wouldn't expect anyone would show up for such a challenge, would one? Yet, even on a day when the weather was another unknown factor, nine stalwart hikers showed up to solve this mystery.

I say "help solve," as three days before the hike date, I wasn't too sure how and where I was going to lead anyone brave enough to come. And on the day itself, the last third of the trip in (and up) was still new to me. Two days before, I trekked up into a saddle between two 2000' hills north of Route 4, a couple of miles west of West Rutland. I then climbed to the top of the easternmost of the two only to find that it was the one hill to the west that I had been looking at for years from old Route 4A. That hill had two or three open areas on a ridgeline leading to the top.

So, on hike day, from this saddle we climbed up a very steep and rocky slope to the west, looking for one of those clear areas. After some struggling, we came into one small one with a limited view to the east and south. It was then lunch time and with the threat of rain, we climbed no farther, looking for larger open areas. And sure enough just as we finished lunch a light rain started. That did it for any further exploring upward, so downward we all headed, only to have the rain stop as we reached the saddle. From here out to Rt. 4 was a delightful walk on an old road through old overgrown farm land, with stone walls and apple trees in full bloom. All nine made it back to the cars safely, hiking no further, I think, than three miles. All's well that ends well.

BALD MOUNTAIN, Townsend State Forest

by Ira Hawley

17 May 1987

The day started out cloudy, but twelve determined hikers insisted it was their day for an outing. A pleasant drive took us through Weston and Londonderry. The clouds parted and the sun became warm.

At the entrance to the park we drove over a modern bridge above the flood control dam at Townsend. Next we approached the Scott covered bridge, which is the longest single span covered bridge in Vermont. Here we stopped and everyone walked through the bridge, which is closed to vehicle traffic.

Then we stopped at the caretaker's office and signed the register for admittance to the park facilities. Now we were ready to tackle the mountain. It was a challenging climb of 1140 feet in one mile. The rapid walkers reached the summit about half an hour earlier than the slow ones. The sunshine made it a good place to relax and lunch. The views were good with the valley below and the mountains in the distance. As we started down on a circuitous route we came upon a vigorous orchid (Lady's Slipper) plant with beautiful pink flowers. This is a rare plant in Vermont and the first of this species I have seen in many years.

We all made it safely back to our cars, and with a little conversation decided to make a short side trip on our way home to see the Ball Mountain Dam, which is another flood control project. We said our good-byes and agreed it had been a satisfying way to spend the day.

FROM ALL OF US

It goes without saying that the entire Killington Section wishes to thank Carol Chapman for her years as editor of Smoke & Blazes. You've done a terrific job, Carol, and you'll be greatly missed, both as editor and fellow hiker. We wish you success and happiness in the future, and many visits home to Rutland.

THE ALMOST SURPRISE PARTY

by Carol Chapman

1 June 1987

When Sue Thomas called to offer me a ride to the outings scheduling meeting at the Careys on a hot, humid Monday night, I told her I'd decided not to go. She was thus forced to spill the beans and tell me I'd better be there as it wasn't a scheduling party after all. It was a goodbye party.

The Careys' yard, with the lambs looking on, was a lovely, cool spot for such a special occasion. How nice to see so many good friends there!

Sue Thomas had baked and artistically decorated a Special Edition of Smoke & Blazes chocolate cake. I was also presented with a VINS T-shirt and a certificate of a donation to the Elf program made in my name. Many thanks to you all for the party and for your kind and thoughtful gifts.

This being my last issue of Smoke & Blazes, I'd like to use the opportunity to thank all of you who have contributed reports and worked on the newsletter and say how much I've enjoyed those associations.

I'll be eagerly awaiting my copy of Smoke & Blazes to keep up-to-date on Killington Section doings.

DIRECTORS MEETING

by Rob Carey

23 April 1987

Present: Rob Carey, Steve Pulling, Bernie Donahue, Herb Ogden, Churchill Scott, Linda Pellerin, and Sue Thomas.

The Long Trail Unit Action Plan was discussed. We are in general agreement with it. We support the relocation/replacement of Minerva Hinchey Shelter in a more remote site after the trail is relocated. One reason is the marginal water source.

We oppose the relocation of Clarendon Shelter since there are no more remote sites.

Governor Clement Shelter should be continued in its present site. The road's condition is deteriorating.

A replacement is needed for Tamarack Shelter as soon as the trail is relocated.

Pico Camp should be continued in its present site.

Cooper (not our responsibility) should be fixed up. A summer/fall caretaker is not likely to help.

LONG TRAIL RELOCATIONS

by Herb Ogden, Jr.

Two of the Long Trail relocations announced at the section annual meeting are finished. A one-day work party cleared and blazed an approximately 0.3 mile relocation from the Pratt House site north to the Lower Cold River Road, eliminating a road walk. It's a pleasant stretch through evergreens and along the river. The Pratt Field was a little mushy, but the Pullings put in some steppingstones (steppingboulders is more like it!) that should do the trick.

While the rest of the party scouted out the relocation on the Cold River bank north of the Upper Road, Herb dug a ditch to dry out the "bear wallow" in the stand of evergreens just north of the Lower Road.

A later work party relocated some 300 yards of the Long Trail north of the Upper Cold River Road, where the footway had partly disappeared into the river. The Trail now takes higher ground to the east of the river.

NEW CHALLENGE, PART II

by Roma Pulling

We left you last spring with the promise to return to our project of photographing all the shelters on the Long Trail and the side trails as soon as the leaves fell in the fall. This plan was delayed a little by a family problem, but on November 7 we were off again. For this first trip we had a Three for One bargain as we took the familiar LT route to Stratton Pond and snapped pictures of Bigelow, Vondell, and Stratton View Shelters. There were two inches of snow on the ground there and just a hint of ice forming around the edges of the pond.

One of the greatest pleasures for me from this project is exploring new side trails, and during the past year we have hiked four new ones and revisited the Battell Trail, which I hadn't been on for about ten years.

Old Rootville Road After preoccupation with another family matter we struck out on January 17 for William B. Douglas Shelter. Snowmobiles had packed the road until it was like pavement and to my annoyance had also used over a mile of the LT, from Prospect Rock to the Branch Pond Trail. We carried our snowshoes but used them only the half mile of the Branch Pond Trail (it seemed longer than I remembered) and the short distance to Prospect Rock.

Cooley Glen Trail February was a cold month, but on March 5 we were off to Cooley Glen Shelter. We were afraid the side trails would be obscure, but the approaches to the ones in the national forest are very well marked. We found 40" of snow on the ground and on the roof of the shelter. How do they hold up?

Battell Trail This is the trail I had hiked once before, but so long ago it was like being there for the first time, and it was new to Alfred. Snowshoes were a necessary part of our equipment again even though it was March 24 and beginning to look like spring in Rutland. Up in Lincoln we found two feet of snow on our way to Battell Shelter. Sap lines ran all over the side of the mountain, but the sap was not running.

Jerusalem Trail Tuesday, April 14, found us on the way to Glen Ellen Lodge. We carried snowshoes but never put them on because the trail was too rough and overgrown. There was still plenty of snow, though, and we sank in to our thighs in several places. I had forgotten how beautiful the view is from Glen Ellen. What a pity they plan to move the lodge from this spot.

Beane Trail Saturday, April 25, and spring at last. I admired wild flowers along the way: round-leaved violets, wild oats, adder's tongue, and spring beauties. Especially the spring beauties. They were numerous and lovely. Birch Glen shelter, our goal this day, was only .9 from the Beane Farm, so Alfred decided to try for the next shelter, Cowles Cove, only 2.9 miles further.

We have photographed 43 of the 70 shelters we plan to do, or 61% of our goal. We'll be back next fall.

WINNERS

by Roma Pulling

It having been some time since an up-to-date list of End-to-Enders was published, we would like to take this opportunity to do so. For perhaps the first time we are including names of people who have hiked the Killington Section (Route 140 at Wallingford Gulf to Route 4 at Sherburne Pass) end to end. One asterisk and capital letters indicates that this person has also completed the whole Long Trail, and, of course, two asterisks show that this person has done the LT twice.

Several people have nearly completed a goal. Steve Pulling plans to hike the last five miles for his LT certificate this summer. Rachael Ferguson is near completion of it, and Ray Catozzi has nearly finished his second End to End. Dave and Audrey Barber are nearing the 2/3 point on the Appalachian Trail and have hiked the Horseshoe, Darlington, Loyalstock, Black Forest and Tuscarora Trails in Pennsylvania. Anne Mausolff is far along on the AT.

John and Emma Hughes deserve mention for having hiked further than most End to Enders. They have hiked the LT from the Massachusetts border to Ap Gap except for one small hiatus over Glastenbury Mountain and have done it all without help, making it necessary to backtrack to their car, so they have hiked it all twice.

If errors or omissions have crept into this report, please call 773-6997 and a correction will appear in the next Smoke & Blazes.

KILLINGTON SECTION, GREEN MOUNTAIN CLUB

JULY-SEPT. 1987

LOWLAND WALKTHROUGH

by Roma Pulling
30 May 1987

In the absence of our esteemed chairman, who was out of town, Al Pulling coordinated efforts on this first work project of 1987. Five workers had completed sections of the trail previously, and with the help of the ten people who volunteered this day, we were able to finish the segment of the Long Trail between Route 140 (the Wallingford Gulf Road) and Governor Clement Shelter. The weather was sunny and very mild.

Dividing into teams of two or three workers each, equipped with hand saws, clippers, grass whips and paint, we cleared and blazed the section and did not encounter any major problems.

Our thanks to everyone who participated in this clean-up.

WILLIAMSTOWN FLOWER HIKE

leader: Ray Catozzi
7 June 1987

The Editor contacted Ray just as Ray was trying to contact the Editor for help with the Country Music Jam-boree to benefit the Long Trail Protection Fund. Unfortunately, both of us were too busy to do what the other wanted, so what follows is a less than first hand report of the farthest-afield trip of the summer season.

Perhaps because a hike in Massachusetts sounds as if it is farther away than a hike anywhere in Vermont (it isn't -- Williamstown is only about two hours drive from Rutland, which is less than anything north of Mount Mansfield) only a small group showed up for this hike. It seems the rest of us missed a good trip.

The hikers had a pleasant walk up from Blackinton on the Appalachian Trail and down the Pine Cobble Trail to Williamstown Station, enjoying the Williams College Outing Club's reroute of the latter to avoid the infamous gravelly cliff at the shore of Lake Bascom. (If you aren't familiar with Lake Bascom, it may be because it disappeared at the end of the last ice age when the glacier receded and let its waters escape. The Editor learned about Lake Bascom in a geology course at a certain college after the water obligingly departed and let Ephriam Williams found that college on the old lake bottom.)

The flowers were early this year in Berkshire County, but lady slippers were still in evidence.

After the hike, Ray took the group up Mount Graylock by car to inspect the state-owned lodge that is now run by the Appalachian Mountain Club. No doubt they also enjoyed the view from the highest mountain in the Bay State.

HIGHLAND WALKTHROUGH

by Stephen Pulling

13 June 1987

This was the second walk-through of the year for the Killington Section, covering from Governor Clement Shelter to Sherburne Pass. We cut, sawed, chopped, clipped, whacked, pruned, tossed, pulled, tugged, blazed, and even cussed at trees and brush for 9.5 miles.

Eight hard-working people showed up at the park for this outing. Driving to the top of Killington Mountain in my truck was the first order of business for the day. This is not an easy drive, but it makes working this section much easier and faster.

We split up into equal groups. Al Pulling headed up the group trail clearing south and I was in charge of the group working north. What else can you say about trail walk-throughs except they aren't much fun and are a lot of hard, tiring work? Rain is the last thing you want to make your day, but rain we got. Al's group finished up just in time to hop into the Careys' truck at Governor Clement Shelter before the heavens opened up, but my group got soaked to the bone.

Picture yourself cold and drenched in a downpour pruning a balsam fir. Every clip you make shakes even more cold water onto your dripping wet head. Are we having fun yet, Linda P.?

PITTSBRIDGE (STOCKFIELD) MYSTERY HIKE

by Ira Hawley

21 June 1987

Mystery in this instance meant the leader was not prepared to name a location for a hike. But in the meantime I had done some scouting and was ready to take the twenty people to the Pittsfield area on Route 100. We walked up the so-called South Hill Road into the township of Stockbridge. It was a pleasant uphill, into an uninhabited rural area past a few seasonal camps. We came upon a former thick growth of forest that had been thinned by the International paper Company and a clear-cut that had been replanted with pine seedlings. Deer tracks were visible in the gravel roadway. A spruce-shaded area on the edge of a very old cemetery became our lunch stop. We had a nice view of probably thirty or forty miles into the Bethel and Rochester mountains and beyond. Our return via the same route was "all down hill," as the saying goes. Our hikers, from two to seventy-five years old, were ready for the ride back home. It had been a nice summer day.

LOST SHELTER AND MORGAN PEAK, PLYMOUTH

by W. Churchill Scott

28 June 1987

On a very pleasant early summer morning we had a hike to Lost Shelter and Morgan Peak. A good sized group, from youngsters to senior citizens, we drove north from Plymouth village past the cheese factory and then walked up the old lumber and fire-fighting road.

It is good that some of the followers were in the lead, for the leader must confess that he might have gone right past the path to the shelter. As it was, the shelter arrived just a little too late to keep us from being dampened by an unexpected shower.

The visibility improved after lunch at the shelter. We climbed to the summit of the road, where a good view was had in all directions. At a clearing on the way up, a ski area was sighted, and everyone had different ideas of where it was. At the summit, it was found to be Killington, which surprised everyone.

On the way back to the cars, a suggestion was made to extend a hike the next time to include spotting a car at Farm and Wilderness Camps and going down from the Lost Shelter Trail via a F. & W. trail west to the car. What do you think?

TINMOUTH MYSTERY HIKE

by Ira Hawley
12 July 1987

"HOT" was the word everyone was saying on this hazy morning with showers forecast. Nine of us met at the park to travel to Tinmouth, where we left our cars in Shirley Parker's dooryard. It was too warm to "HIKE," so we "STROLLED."

The tree-shaded lane took us past three abandoned farms with beautiful old houses still intact. We came upon a large turtle that objected to our presence by snapping at a stick dangled near its head. Several snails were observed in the gravel pathway. Lunch was taken in a heavily shaded area of maple and ash trees. On the return to our cars we were treated to the hospitality of Shirley Parker in her home with iced tea, very refreshing.

On our return to Rutland we stopped by a sheep farm and the attendant there said we were looking at 400 sheep.

We hoped the next hike would be a bit cooler.

MOUNT CUSHMAN, ROCHESTER

by Herb Ogden, Jr.
18 July 1987

Although this hike was billed as moderate to difficult, and although the leader had, shall we politely say, come to the attention of some members by leading an earlier hike around Her-rick Mountain that was about two miles longer than the already long distance that appeared on the outing schedule, a group of ten or so hikers showed up on a hot day to explore the northeast corner of the Town of Rochester. As it turned out, the leader did not take the group all the way to the top of Cushman, but rather just to the fire tower site, so the actual mileage was only 4.3 miles, one mile shorter than announced. If I can just give back one more mile on another hike, we'll all be even again.

After picking up more hikers in Rochester, we drove to the last house on the Randolph Gap Road. Perhaps we could have driven on to where an obscure north-south road crossed the old gap road, but from there on we were definitely in Jeepland or worse.

It has apparently been years since anyone in a normal vehicle traveled that route from Rochester to Bethel Gilead or Randolph. Parts of the old dugway looked like promising points for a stagecoach robbery, for the road has sunk so far into the landscape that one could jump from the bank onto the top of whatever passed through.

We would have stopped more often to puff and blow on the steep climb up to the gap had it not been for the insects that honed in on us whenever we stopped. After passing limited views, we reached the height of land.

From Randolph Gap, it was an easy 1.2 mile hike to the fire tower site. Or it should have been. Numerous mud-puddles that extended completely across the road slowed our progress, as we clambered along the banks to keep our feet dry. Just short of the fire tower site, we found a pleasant and relatively bug-free pine grove, with an occasional breeze to relieve the humid noontime.

Naturally, this was the place for lunch. Later, we went on to the tower site, marveled at a magnificently gnarled big old tree, gazed at a glider swishing overhead, and speculated on the mountains we would have seen if the day had not been so hazy.

Luckily, while we were lunching, a few hikers came up the trail we were to follow west from the fire tower site. It was marked only with surveyor's tape, and, especially at its junction with the tower road, it was hard to see. Had our visitors not come up that trail, it might have been a while before we found it. As it was, the footway was good and the descent pleasant although steep. We came out of the woods onto lovely pastures and walked the roads back.

OLD JOB SHELTER, MT. TABOR

by Roma Pulling

25 July 1987

Your leader apparently jumped to the wrong conclusion on this trip, but I'll get to that in a minute. The 25th was near the end of a long heat wave. Even so, eight hikers joined Alfred and me for the short, leisurely walk to the shelter and back. It may have been cooler in Mount Tabor, and Mara and two others cooled off even further by wading in Lake Brook.

We chose the Long Trail route past Big Branch Shelter, where we took a short break, and inspected the stone ruins at the site of an old water wheel. Crossing the Big Branch suspension bridge, we proceeded to a very large sawdust heap, climbed it, and took pictures. It was easy to credit S. L. Griffith with creating the pile as he operated mills and kilns in this area, but we received a letter from one of the hikers which perhaps casts new light on the subject. He had talked with a Danby resident who told him the pile had been created during World War II! The Griffith site is reportedly nearer Big Branch Brook. This subject needs further research and exploration.

After lunch at the shelter, we returned by the same route.

SOUTH POND TRAIL TO SHERBURNE PASS

by Stephen Pulling

2 August 1987

Once again there was mumbling from the middle of the pack about the rating I give the hikes I lead. I have to admit the South Pond Trail isn't easy, but it isn't difficult with only a day pack. The Long Trail from South Pond to Sherburne Pass is really very easy, hence overall the hike was averaged out to "moderate." Thank you.

The second of August was a perfect day for hiking, sunny, clear and 73 degrees. We drove to Chittenden past Lefferts Pond to the South Pond Trail and off we went. Very easy walking at first along a logging road ended when the trail turned right and up, up we climbed. The climb was worth it because at the top of the hill we found South Pond, a beautiful undeveloped pond surrounded by mountains on three sides. When we turned around to the west, we got an aerial view of Chittenden Dam.

After a short break, we hiked on to Rolston Rest Shelter for an early lunch and then off for an almost uneventful walk to Tucker Johnson Shelter, Deer Leap, and Sherburne Pass. Notice I said almost uneventful.

About half way between Rolston rest and Tucker Johnson, one hiker fell and let out a silence deadening cry. Not knowing what happened, I ran back to find Judy Garafano lying on the ground in great pain. Being only an amateur first aider, I treated for shock and wrapped her ankle as if it were sprained. At this point we limped out of the woods at a snail's pace.

When Judy got to the doctor's, she found out she had broken a bone in her foot. It was the first broken bone I've seen that wasn't accompanied by swelling and skin discoloration. We all wish Judy a speedy recovery and hope to see her out hiking again real soon.

ASSAULT ON SUNRISE SHELTER

by Sue Thomas

8-9 August 1987

At 7 o'clock on the evening of 8 August we assembled our troops at the fire station and proceeded to Brandon Gap with a force of 16 to take Sunrise Shelter. [This maneuver was cleverly disguised as a moonlight hike. --Ed.]

While I stayed back with the rear guard, the front of the column advanced to the shelter and took by surprise the lone occupant, who surrendered without a struggle. After torturing him with fudge and taco dip, we pried his name out of him -- Guy, from Burlington, but we were not able to make him divulge rank and serial number.

We started a campfire and our prisoner obligingly led us in campfire songs. He also included a solo which none present will forget! The moon was just beginning to appear over the ridge around 11 p.m. when most of the group assembled for a retreat [mostly by the light of Eveready and Ray-O-Vac, not moon --Ed.] while Steve, Herb and I settled in for the night with our captive. Sometime during the night I awoke and the full moon had finally moved directly overhead, lighting the clearing. Too bad everyone missed it.

In the morning, after a breakfast of delicious blueberry muffins Nina left for us, Steve headed back down the trail to Brandon Gap, while Herb and I prepared to journey into the "New Boston Triangle," as he aptly put it! I had been hearing reports for some time that people were getting lost in that area, so we decided to venture over there and find out why.

We made it as far as David Logan Shelter with no problems other than the extremely lush and healthy seas of nettles we had to navigate. However we did meet several other groups of people coming the other way, and all but one of them reported getting confused between Rolston Rest and David Logan. We stopped at the shelter for a while to talk to two more hikers and decided that the problem is a combination of the fact that the Long Trail is extremely grown over through there and that there is a very well-defined snowmobile trail crossing it, well marked with arrows. Apparently people are getting off the Long Trail there. I'm planning to write to the main Club to suggest some trail clearing and blazing.

While at David Logan we read the log book, which seemed to contain mostly complaints about three things: 1) getting lost between Rolston Rest and there, 2) nettles, and 3) the American flag that someone had hung on the front. Without a doubt the most interesting thing was a report that someone saw a rabbit chewing on the shelter. (??!) The porcupines must be getting more clever with their disguises.

We hiked down the New Boston Trail and on down the road to Mountain Top where we'd left a car, with only one incident. Herb heard a little scream from the side of the road, so we poked around in the weeds and found a snake slithering back into the brush with a frog in its mouth. Must have been the frog's swan song Herb heard. I'm sure the frog wouldn't agree, but it livened up the end of our hike!

DORSET BAT CAVE

by Rob Carey

15 August 1987

About 35 people attended this hike, making for the largest group we have led. In addition to a good draw from the Rutland area, there were people from Florida, Arizona, Connecticut, and Illinois, as well as Bradford, Vt. Our publicity committee is certainly doing well.

We parked on the Dorset Hill Road and followed the Mt. Aeolus Trail for about two miles to the cave. The trail is an old road. Blazes are non-existent but the trail follows the main road at each intersection with other roads.

We passed several old quarries including one with good views to the east of the Great Valley of Vermont (Route 7) and the mountains including Stratton and Bromley. There was another excellent view right near the cave.

The cave is owned by the Nature Conservancy, whom we thank for its use. It is the winter hibernation site for thousands of New England bats, including the endangered Indiana Bat. For this reason the cave is closed and gated from 1 September to 30 April. We saw quite a few bats in the cave, many hanging, sleeping, and some flying. We had a good lunch, after which we had an uneventful return.

INTERSECTIONAL

22-30 August 1987

To give something of the flavor of this year's Intersectional, here are some of the activities: an excursion to the Morgan Horse Farm, a work party, GMC narrated slide shows on above-treeline vegetation, caving at Nickwacket and the Pittsford Ice Caves, bingo, a hike from Chittenden Brook Trail to Brandon Gap (4.5 mi.), Ben Rose's program on the Catamount Trail, a hike from Sherburne Pass to Notown, a square dance called by Garland Withers, an excursion to the Billings Farm Museum in Woodstock, a hike to the new Skyline Lodge, and, of course, the Famous Intersectional Auction.

The Killington Section's own Ray Catozzi led a hike up Snake Mountain in Addison. Ray says the road was being abused by vehicles, but that the spectacular view over Addison County, Lake Champlain, and the Adirondacks made the trip a great success.

Letter to the Editor

Roma Pulling's piece, "Winners," in the April-June issue invited readers to point out omissions in the list of Killington Section end-to-enders. I thought you all might be interested to know that I am the proud holder of End-to-End certificate number 1492. I have enclosed a copy of the report I submitted to the main club committee.

I look forward to each issue of S&B and always enjoy reading it. After all these years there are only a few of you for whom I can connect a face with the name, but I can relate to almost all the outing reports. Keep up the good work.

Happy hiking,

Bob Perkins

VOL. 40, NO. 4

KILLINGTON SECTION, GREEN MT. CLUB

OCT.- DEC. 1987

EARLY WORK PARTY

by Roma Pulling
30 May 1987

[This report was submitted in time for the last issue but was mislaid in the transition from one editor to the other. Apologies to Roma! I thought it might still be interesting, and, for any hibernophobics among us, a reminder that there are other seasons besides the current cold one. --Ed.]

It was mostly sunny for the first of our Long Trail walk-throughs, which attracted ten workers. Dividing into teams of three or four, we covered the trail from Route 140 to Route 103 and the short section between the Upper and Lower Cold River Roads. Earlier, six people had completed Route 103 to Governor Clement Shelter, so that section was already in good shape.

Attached with clippers and whips (until one of the latter fell apart!), the trail was cleared and widened while other people, wielding hand saws, removed blowdowns, and still others renewed blazing. A few large trees lying on the ground which can easily be stepped over were left there, helping to discourage ATVs.

The trail between the Cold River Roads has some very wet places. Ditching and placement of rocks will be handled on a subsequent work detail. [Later in the summer, ditching was done at the worst spot, perhaps 0.2 mi. south of the Upper Cold River Road. Because the soil there does not seem to let water percolate well, more work may be needed before we can banish this particular footbath in the wilderness. --Ed.]

CLARENDON SHELTER REPAIR

by Al Pulling
6 June 1987

[This report was also submitted in time for the last issue but was mislaid in the transition from one editor to the other. Apologies to Al! It is included for the benefit of those who haven't visited Clarendon Shelter recently or considered what work was needed once the infamous squatter abandoned his suitcase there and left our shelter to its intended users. Our unwelcome tenant did some serious demolition. For photos of the work, see the Long Trail News. --Ed.]

On the sixth of June, Steve and I went down to the lumberyard to get some material for the repair job at Clarendon Shelter. After arriving at the shelter, we found we had to have more material.

Steve and I had Linda Pellerin and John and Emma Huges helping us to start with. Soon Sue Thomas showed up. The women did most of the spraying of the conservative (creosote) on the walls of the shelter. We also cleaned up the yard while Steve was in town getting more material. Sue and I tried to put the table back where it was. I had been removed from its usual place.

After our lunch break, Rob Carey arrived with some liquid refreshments. Soon after Rob arrived, we finished up our project at the Clarendon Shelter.

We then proceeded to the Lower Cold River Road and worked on some more wet spots.

Thanks to all for your wonderful help!

GLEN LAKE CANOE TRIP

by Stephen Pulling

5 September 1987

I think we had a near-record number of participants on this year's canoe trip. Glen Lake was an easy outing which might have brought out some more casual paddlers, but it is still nice to see this event growing in popularity. Last year's twenty mile trip didn't scare too many people away.

September 5th was a near-perfect day for a fall canoe trip. The leaves were just starting to turn colors, the sky was a deep dark blue, and it was seasonably warm. We had no time schedule to meet, so the atmosphere was very low key and everyone just lazily paddled around Glen Lake's surprisingly long perimeter.

Some first time canoers were heard saying "No, paddle on the other side ... why are we going in circles? ... not so hard! ... what are you doing?" etc., etc. Some of the old experts were moving along almost effortlessly. Glen Lake is a great lake for this type of outing because there are only a few camps on one corner of the lake and all of the rest of the lake is totally undeveloped.

A few hard core canoers headed up to Fern Lake after Glen Lake was completed and did some more paddling, but it finally turned into a swimming party. I am one hard core canoer who thinks September 5th is too cold for swimming. Maybe I'm just soft.

TABLED HIKE TO TABLE ROCK

by Rob and Sue Carey

20 September 1987

This hike was supposed to go to Table Rock in Manchester, but it was another rainy, wet day and we were able to convince the only other two people who showed up (Linda Pellerin and Steve Pulling) to go to Little Rock Pond instead.

We spotted one car at the end of the Homer Stone Brook Trail and drove around to the LT crossing on Forest Road 10. After we walked along the trail for a few hundred yards, Mara Carey got sick so the Careys turned back and Linda and Steve continued.

By the time we got home Mara was feeling fine. Linda and Steve completed the hike and came to our house for hot chocolate.

WRINGIN' (WET) IN THE RAIN

by Sue Thomas

26 September 1987

I thought we might get away with having one dry Saturday on this day, for the sun even came out for a while in the early morning, but by the time we were on our way to Ripton to hike the Burnt Hill Trail the clouds had rolled in and it began to spit rain. By the time we got there it was raining in earnest, but we stayed nice and dry as we drove back and forth looking for the trailhead. For once it wasn't my fault. It turned out that due to a new housing development the trail had been moved quite a distance up the road since the last time any of us had been there, and the new sign had fallen down. We never did find it. We finally just parked half the cars where we thought it ought to be and went on up to Middlebury Gap to begin the hike on the Long Trail. By then it was raining harder, but once we were in the trees it wasn't too bad. (Or could it be that once we were soaked through it didn't matter any more?!)

Once up on the ridge, we came upon several overlooks that offered particularly nice views of the insides of clouds, but nevertheless the mood was jovial, and not long after that the rain stopped and small patches of blue sky could be seen. We reached the top of the Burnt Hill trail and started down carefully, as it was pretty steep, not to mention wet and slimy. We emerged from the woods not far from where we'd parked -- good guess! We must have lingered a little too long patting ourselves on the back however, because just before we reached the cars it began to POUR. We were all soaked to the skin in no time flat and reached a unanimous decision to skip the planned cookout at Texas Falls.

Several of us drove over there to find the Careys, who had come to meet us for the cookout. They had missed the rain completely and were surprised at our sodden state. Roma offered to move the cookout to her kitchen, so a few of us had our hot dogs there, though most decided that home and dry clothes were more appealing.

Thanks to Roma for her warm dry kitchen, and also to the whole group for making the trip so much fun in spite of the ... "dampness." I heard not a single complaint, and I think it was one of the nicest groups I've led. Thanks for being good sports!

OLD ROADS IN WALLINGFORD

by Rob and Sue Carey

3 October 1987

Scouting out this hike was an adventure. We had a reproduction from Beers' Atlas (1869) and some topographic maps showing that you can get from here to there using old town roads, but were we on the right old roads?

We drove up Kent Farm Road in Wallingford as far as possible. From there we walked past Kent farm on a road that looked like a former town road. It had stone walls on both sides, but it fizzled out after half a mile. We followed another road that ended at an old cellar hole half filled with water. They obviously had problems with a wet basement.

After that false start we returned to the car and went to Greendale Road. We walked along an old road, past abandoned apple orchards. This path looked much more promising because someone had recently cleared it with a brush cutter, but we still weren't sure that we were heading in the right direction. At one junction we thought about turning back, but we decided to push on because it had to come out somewhere. We were glad that it did because it ended on Kent Farm Road.

Later we made a connection between Kent Farm Road and Greendale Road. This completed a three mile loop just as it showed on the map.

The day of the hike was rainy but it stopped raining before the hike. The Hawleys and Linda Pellerin met us in Wallingford. Along the trail we came upon piles of ground up apples. Ira said that these were made by bears gorging themselves on apples until they couldn't eat any more. Then they would vomit and gorge again.

Also along the way, Ira introduced us to spruce gum. When a branch from a spruce tree falls off, sap flows out and hardens. You pick the hard sap and chew it until it turns into gum. It has a strong sprucey flavor at first but it ends up becoming a gum with just a hint of spruce and is very good.

We ended the hike at the cars, glad that we hadn't let cloudy weather stop us.

THANKS, MR. WEATHERMAN!

by Stephen Pulling
4 October 1987

Who remembers the fourth of October, 1987? It sure was a double disaster day for the Killington Section trails and shelters. For that matter, it was disastrous for most of southern Vermont. Just ask Central Vermont Public Service and their customers how they would describe that day. When you look at it from their eyes, I guess we had only sort of a bad day on the Killington Section trails and shelters.

We had scheduled a work party at Minerva Hinchey Shelter to treat the wood with preservative on the fateful day. I spent a lot of the Section's money on the stuff and was hoping to apply it. But, as you remember, it was pouring rain that morning. Our work party was postponed until spring.

As the day grew older, we got colder. Temperatures fell and the rain turned to wet, heavy snow, seven inches of it. You can all guess what wet, heavy snow does to trees already laden with leaves. Right! We had trees and limbs down over the trail everywhere.

I pushed the panic button and got immediate results. People were coming from all over to help clear trail. Once again "Old Faithful" Ira Hawley and family did most of the work. He encountered the worst section of our trail and singlehandedly opened it up. We also had two unscheduled work parties to finish up what Ira didn't cover.

Many regular faces showed up with axes, saws and pruning shears to tackle the storm-damaged trees. We also had quite a few eager new faces come along. I'm at a loss for words here because I can't describe how much I appreciate all of you super people's support. THANKS!

NEW SKYLINE LODGE

by Roma Pulling
10 October 1987

Picture a lovely little pond surrounded by forest, miles from paved roads and the confusion of modern life. Then add a small log cabin gleaming with freshly-peeled logs on the shore of the pond, and you have the new Skyline Lodge in its idyllic setting.

Nine Killington Section members hiked up the Skylight Pond Trail to the lodge for a "celebration" hosted by the Breadloaf Section. The trail has been relocated in part since I was there, eliminating a scramble over a ledgy area. It would have been quite pleasant except that, like everything else lately, it was muddy.

At mid-day our two sections and a few Burlington Section members enjoyed pot luck with a wide variety of delectable foods. Sue Thomas toted the Killington Section coffee pot in, and it was a big hit with the Breadloaf and Burlington people. Of course it's always a big hit with us. Thanks, Sue.

Several people helped add a few finishing touches to the construction, after which we returned to our cars at Steam Mill Clearing.

This was a very delightful outing and one I had been looking forward to ever since I was discouraged from taking part in a similar hike at the Intersection because of rain.

COLUMBUS DAY IN CANOES

by Carol Chapman
10-12 October 1987

After the early October snowstorm, I guess the rest of you Killington Section members decided that canoe camping on Columbus Day weekend wasn't your cup of tea. Now living in subtropical northern Vermont, where we missed the storm, I decided to risk it.

Six of us from the Burlington and Killington Sections and the Northern Vermont Canoe Cruisers headed out for Lake George on a cold but sunny October 10th. The foliage was beautiful as we paddled about nine miles to our campsite on one of the Mother Bunch islands. Numerous flocks of Canada geese honked their greetings as they passed high overhead on their journey south.

Settled in at camp, we put a large tarp over a tent platform just in case it should rain. A pair of rather tame mallards dropped by for afternoon tea. A raccoon print on the tent platform forewarned us that we should hang all our food, which we did conscientiously. The raccoon never did put in an appearance, but an impish chipmunk raided us whenever we weren't looking.

Sunday morning's cold drizzle made us thankful the tarp was up. After a breakfast of hot pancakes we were fortified and ready to paddle across to Tongue Mountain. It had snowed on the mountains surrounding the lake and we headed up a snow covered trail with brightly-colored leaves above. After a couple hours of climbing, the consensus was we were too wet and cold to really care about making it to the summit, so we headed back to the canoes for a stiff paddle back across the lake.

We escaped hypothermia by climbing into our sleeping bags with a cup of hot soup. By evening it had stopped raining and we enjoyed a fine meal and the warmth of a blazing campfire.

Columbus Day dawned bright and sunny with a mist rising from the lake. Even the wind cooperated on our paddle north to The Hague where we had left our cars.

My only regret was that no other Killington Section members had been along to share in the beauty and fun of the weekend.

NORTH POND, CHITTENDEN (WITHOUT GETTING LOST)

by Sue Thomas
18 October 1987

Five of us started off for Chittenden for a long hike to North Pond via a route I had discovered earlier in the year. We parked at Mountain Top Inn and hiked up to the end of the logging road, where we stopped for a short rest on a pile of logs thoughtfully left for us by the loggers.

While we were there, a man drove up and asked where we were headed. When I told him, he seemed surprised and said "Wow, you've got an awfully long hike ahead of you!" which didn't cheer up the troops any, since we had already come several miles. I applied candy corn to relieve everyone, and we set off again, through the inevitable muddy mess that logging creates. Soon we began to climb steeply but were rewarded with views of the Chittenden Reservoir. After climbing up through a clearcut area (ugly, but it did provide better views of the reservoir and our distant starting point), we headed into the woods and continued to climb along a stream.

We passed an intersection with the Long Trail, which had been so obscured by leaves when I was there in the summer that I hadn't even seen it.

We took a late lunch and didn't linger long since it looked like rain. The group elected not to repeat my earlier hike by going on to Pittsfield (I had been looking for a shortcut back -- oops!) so we headed back the way we had come. The sun came out as we were making our way back, and by the time we reached the Inn it had become a nice sunny afternoon, so we sat on the curb to watch a roller-skiing demonstration, which was an unusual but interesting end to a long hike.

HIGH POND, BRANDON

by Ira Hawley
25 October 1987

Perhaps some of you remember the poem "October's Bright Blue Weather" we used to read in grade school. If so, the bright blue sky today was a reminder of that poem. The varying ages of the 32 hikers is proof of the popularity of these afternoon fall hikes. The good group that assembled at the park was joined by two additional hikers in Brandon. Nice to see you again, Carol and Rachel.

After we left Brandon our vehicles made plenty of noise as we rumbled across the temporary Dean Bridge. The double waterfall on the Bresse Mill brook was observed as we proceeded to the High Pond Farm to start our walk. We want to thank John and Coliene Landrigan for providing parking space.

It was a pretty walk across the large green field past Walker Pond into the wooded area. Ash, maple, oak, cherry, and large white pine trees were seen. High Pond is a clean, serene, nearly weedless body of water situated in a pocket-like setting with three major hills surrounding it.

Seems good to see no man-made structures on the shoreline. A sharp cool breeze discouraged our group from staying. We returned to our cars by the same pretty route.

BLUEBERRY LEDGES, PLYMOUTH

by W. Churchill Scott
31 October 1987

For many years while traveling Route 100-A, I noticed a series of ledges stand out among the evergreens. So a mystery hike was planned there this fall. But when Sue called to ask if I could fill in a vacant spot, this had to be changed to a non-mystery outing.

A good day saw about eight of us ready to go. Thank goodness we found a bridge over Pinney Hollow Brook. Then, climbing up a lumber road steeply in spots, we came to the end.

It was good to have Olga with us, for leaning a bit closer to the ledges she found an easy opening for us to climb to the summit.

Raymond found at least three look-off points for good views to the west, north, and south along Route 100-A. A long strand of TV cable was found, the remains of a TV antenna system spotted over twelve years ago when the leader first climbed up the Blueberry Ledges.

After lunch and the usual discussion of which ski trail was which and likewise mountains, we headed for home talking all the way about walking an alternate route via the Coolidge State Park next time.

KILLINGTON CARRIAGE ROAD

by Herb Ogden, Jr.
7 November 1987

This hike had to be rerouted because of early snow. Not on the trail, on the road. Three Killington Section members and an intrepid guest from Hampton, N.Y. met early, but not all that bright (the weather seemed unsettled) for what was billed as a difficult Parker's Gore hike. We meant to go from the Northam picnic area over the Shrewsbury Peaks on the Shrewsbury Peak Trail, north on the Long Trail to Cooper Lodge, and then west on the Bucklin Trail to Brewers Corners on the Wheelerville Road. Despite a little snow in Rutland and reports of more in the mountains, and despite news that blowdowns made the Shrewsbury Peak Trail slow going from the South Peak to the Long Trail, we were ready to press on through Parker's Gore, and more. After spotting a car at Brewers Corners, we drove on to the start of the hike, encouraged by the clearing weather.

The road from Route 100 to Northam was our downfall -- or, more precisely, our downslide. Even a Saab with snow tires couldn't make it up the grade with some 4" of snow and a little sleet underneath that. After backing down about 1/4 mile to Route 100, we headed back to Brewers Corners. So far, the only exercise on this "difficult" outing had been of the leader/driver's neck muscles, craning around for a view out the rear window of his car.

To gain some variety, we decided to ascend Killington via the 19th century carriage road that once led to a hotel below Cooper Lodge. We remembered to bear left where the more-traveled road leads right to Stovepipe City and the flank of Mendon Peak, and took some good photos from the clearing there. But logging in the last two years obscured a later left turn, and only several hundred feet of bushwhacking brought us back onto the old road at the crest of the ridge.

While on our detour, we passed a hunter cradling a chipmunk he had found dead in the snow. It seemed the little fellow hadn't been able to find his burrow before he froze to death. Farther up, small animal tracks actually grew more numerous (or were they just slow to get up on a cold morning?), and we also saw tracks of deer and possibly other large animals.

Although the old carriage road is not maintained as a hiking trail, it was very easy going for most of the way, thanks to someone who recently chainsawed many new and old blowdowns out of the way. Unfortunately, our unknown benefactor seems to have run out of gas about 1/3 mile short of Cooper Lodge. This has been the worst section for at least the last twenty years, anyway. Squeezing between snow-laden evergreens, scrunching under mammoth blowdowns, and slithering over fallen tree trunks, we all attracted quite a lot of snow to ourselves by the time we broke out onto the Bucklin Trail some 150' south of the Cooper Lodge spring.

The view of the Adirondacks from Cooper was unusually clear, but we did not tarry long over lunch. The screens on Cooper's windows did little to keep out a brisk west wind, and, with our pants wet and icy, we decided to get moving again soon.

The Bucklin Trail was a visual treat with snow on the ground and leaves off the trees. Views of Pico were superb, and, lower down, Brewers Brook made a scenic companion for us. To be sure, the brook crossings were tricky. Going a little upstream at the upper crossing helped. Despite fairly high water, nobody got wet feet. The two other hikers that we met also avoided slipping in, at least on their way up. As for other trail conditions, my robin's egg blue blazes really are becoming, don't you have to admit, Sue? Besides, they're a darn sight easier to find than a dark blue blaze on a black cherry tree.

Our entire loop trip plus lunch took only about 4 1/2 hours. If the old carriage road were cleared the rest of the way to the top, our route would make a nice loop for even a fairly sedate day hiker in summer.

As for the originally-planned Parker's Gore route, we'll try a summer rescheduling. A number of people have expressed interest in touring the seldom-used link from Shrewsbury South Peak to the Long Trail.

HIKING WITH THE DINOSAURS

by Sue Thomas

14 November 1987

Deciding that we were probably safer with stomping, roaring twenty foot tall dinosaurs than out in the woods during hunting season, I planned a trip to the New York State Museum in Albany for 14 November.

Fifteen people gathered at the park, which surprised me, what with my reputation for getting lost, but we all managed to find Albany, and better yet, the museum. We were met inside by the roars of the dinosaurs, which could be heard throughout the building, and most of us decided to start with them. There were six, most half or three-quarters actual size, made of a pliable plastic or rubber and computer-operated to move and sound the way scientists think they moved and sounded -- I'll take their word for it! By the time I left that exhibit I had lost everyone and didn't see a familiar face till we all assembled for lunch at the cafeteria.

In addition to the dinosaur exhibit, which is temporary, the museum had an extensive bird collection, an Adirondack exhibit, gems and minerals, Indian artifacts, fire engines, and a large exhibit on New York City which includes reconstructions of the colonial waterfront, a fancy Victorian-era restaurant, a sweatshop, lots of information on immigrants, early settlements, and a real subway car. I heard someone say when they came out of the car that the smell was duplicated, but I have as much experience with New York subways as I have with dinosaurs, so I couldn't say.

The most surprising thing I saw, however, was my grandmother. No, she's not quite a museum piece yet, but my uncle was visiting from California and they decided to surprise me. It worked. She turned 87 the next day, and was not any more enthusiastic about the dinosaurs than Mara, who elected not to go any further than the first stegosaurus.

Everyone assembled at 3:00, some headed home, and the rest of us went across the street to the observation deck in the tower. Despite our mountain-climbing prowess we decided to take the elevator to the 22nd floor, where they have thoughtfully provided coin-operated magnifying viewers so that you can look in the windows of the Governor's Mansion below. Instead, we watched the Careys packing their car on one side, and ice skaters on the mall on the other. I think everyone found something to interest than and had a good time, but I'm sure we were all glad to leave the city traffic, screaming dinosaurs and billboards behind and return to Vermont.

COVERED DISH SUPPER

by Roma Pulling

21 November 1987

Some Killington Section members with Scottish ancestry raised an objection to renting space for the covered dish supper if it could be obtained free, and that resulted in the switch to this reporter's home. We sincerely hope it wasn't an inconvenience to anyone. All 27 diners had a chance to sit down, the variety of hot dishes was astounding, and it was W-A-R-M! The significance of that will be lost on people who haven't attended out suppers in the past where the temperature ranged from freezing to absolute zero.

Supper was followed by color slides on hiking in Germany, shared with us by Herb Ogden. We found the contrast with our own hiking trails to be interesting. Many of the German trails, and many of the hikers, seemed better groomed than ours. In one slide a fellow was out for a five mile hike in a topcoat and tie. The huts appeared to be larger and provided snacks for hikers.

We are now looking for a hall, free of charge if possible, for next year's supper. Anyone with suggestions is asked to call either Sue Thomas at 773-2185 or Sue Carey at 446-2830.

FOUND AFTER THE COVERED DISH SUPPER:

An aluminum lid that may fit a bun warmer, a stainless steel teaspoon, and a black button were left at the writer's house after the supper. To claim, call Roma Pulling at 773-6997.

MOONLIGHT HIKE TO GREENWALL SHELTER

by Sue Carey

5 December 1987

The moon on the breast of the new fallen snow gave a luster of midday to objects below.

Clement C. Moore

To add a little variety to our moonlight hikes, we started at 3:30 and had a potluck supper. We began hiking from the end of the Butterworth Road in Wallingford. Following the LT south for about a mile, we arrived at the well-maintained Greenwall Shelter.

After starting a fire, we ate supper. The picnic table was coated with ice and anything put on it would slide away. That was fine if you sat at the right place, because all the food would come to you.

The Careys left right after dinner, but the rest stayed to socialize around the fire. When I mentioned to some people that we had a picnic on December 5, they thought I was nuts, but they didn't know what they were missing.

MYSTERY HIKE

by W. Churchill Scott

13 December 1987

In the middle of December a small group of Killington Section members began another mystery hike. The leader was concerned that one hiker wore low cut pacs in spite of the snow and sloppy going. Fortunately not once did she go over her shoes.

Our walk started up the trail north from Route 103, visiting the original cellar hole of Jonathan and Mary Bullard from the early 1800's, located just off the Crown Point Military Road. Continuing on the Ezra Oliver Road, we passed Clarendon Shelter, finally arriving at the Bullard family second home. This large farm had a good sized cellar hole, two barn foundations, a mill site, and two millpond dams. The property was later purchased by the Adams family, the ancestors of Ruth Fastman, Martha Adams, and Ellen Russell, all long-time members of the Killington Section.

We had to bushwhack past a sugar house road to a family cemetery plot where Mr. and Mrs. Bullard are buried. Folklore has it that, as the coffin of Mrs. Bullard was being carried over the small brook, it slipped off the wagon right into the stream.

Returning, we took a small detour to the top of a knoll where good views were had of the airport, Otter Creek valley, and the Taconics. Next stop was Clarendon Shelter, which seemed to be in good shape for next summer.

CHRISTMAS CAROLING

by Roma Pulling

18 December 1988

Seventeen members and friends turned out for our second annual Christmas caroling evening, with acceptable weather. We made visits to three nursing homes at the start, as bedtime comes early there, and proceeded to seven private homes. With a few exceptions, we sang for hikers who are no longer active. After our last stop on Woodstock Avenue, the group gathered at the reporter's home for hot drinks in front of the fireplace.

All but one of those to whom we caroled were happy to see us. This event gives us an opportunity to contact people who are unable to hike with us and let them know we are thinking of them.

TAMARACK NOTCH TO GOVERNOR CLEMENT

by Steve Pulling

20 December 1987

The weatherman didn't cooperate with us on December 20th. Four hikers, Carol, Bernie, Peter and I, had great intentions but fog, rain, and wet snow dampened our enthusiasm. Hiking in that kind of weather just isn't fun.

We started hiking at the Rousseau Camp and continued in a southeasterly direction following logging and woods roads. About two-thirds of the way to Gov. Clement Shelter the fog set in. Just past the tin shanty it started to rain and snow lightly. We stopped and had a unanimous vote to head back instead of getting wet and cold.

The weatherman was playing games with us because about halfway back to Rousseau Camp it stopped raining and snowing. We took the opportunity to start a fire and eat lunch, later to be joined by some fourwheelers. For you that missed this attempt of a hike, it has been added to the Spring-Summer schedule by popular demand.

LILY POND, BOMOSEEN

by Linda Krasner

10 January 1988

The zero degree weather did not deter the dozen die-hards who decided to come on the Lily Pond cross-country trip despite the cold temperature. Carol Chapman drove down from Burlington to join us, and it was Peter's first time on snowshoes. As most of the group cooked lunch below the frozen beaver dam, Sue Thomas skied her usual quick run around the pond before the snow turned to slush.

We took a loop trail on the return trip which gave us the benefit of a long downhill run in a meadow. But this year there was a surprise: four electric fences which Jim Griffin, with his vast knowledge of electricity, helped us maneuver around. After not losing anyone to the fences, we next encountered the last pasture, containing a curious bull that obviously enjoyed watching skiers. After successfully skirting the bull, the skiers went back via the frozen Lake Bomoseen.

TEXAS GAP, GRANVILLE

by Herb Ogden, Jr.

16 January 1988

A fine, clear winter morning enticed a dozen GMCers and guests out for a hike/ski/snowshoe trip to one of Vermont's more obscure gaps. Although it is 2159 feet up, Texas Gap is not a break in the main chain of the Green Mountains but rather a low place in a side chain that extends eastward from Battell Mountain north of Middlebury Gap. Long ago a public highway led from the Middlebury Gap Road in Hancock north over Texas Gap into Granville, and this was our outing route.

Leaving our cars at the U. S. Forest Service parking lot north of Texas Falls, we were joined by Helen Pearson, the adopter of Sunrise Shelter. She told us we were lucky that there was no logging on the gap road this winter. Previous winters had seen the road scraped almost bare during logging, and your leader had an alternate route, the Hancock Branch trail, in mind if the main route were no good. A group from Rochester was already enjoying the Hancock Branch trail when we arrived, in fact.

Climbing up the Forest Service road along Texas Brook, we soon reached an almost level stretch where the main Texas settlement used to be, just above the school site. We lunched in a field just off the road with a good view to the south. Sitting back to back in a long line on the snow, we looked like the crew of a large traverse sled. Some of us felt as if we would slide downhill if we all picked up our feet!

From our lunch stop to the top, the hikers had an easier time of it than the skiers. The wide USFS road soon ended, and huge waterbars followed. All enjoyed the climb up past an abandoned orchard, however.

Finding no view at Texas Gap itself, two enterprising guests from Fair Haven followed a logging road a short way to the west and came upon a fine panorama from Mt. Boyce past Battell to Breadloaf. As the logging road was neither tracked nor snowmobiled, our lone snowshoer finally could wear rather than carry his footgear, while the hikers plowed through the deep snow and the skiers did their best to avoid a maze of brush.

On the way down, the four skiers were a little faster, though getting down to our lunch spot was tricky. As we arrived at the bottom again, most of us walked over to Texas Falls to enjoy the spectacle of icy giant potholes at the end of a good day.

PROSPECT ROCK

by Roma Pulling

23 January 1988

The eight people who went on this hike had good weather but icy trail conditions. We had no difficulty deciding on hiking instead of skiing or snowshoeing. Three wore ice creepers, and others probably wished they had.

After picking up the Old Rootville Road outside Manchester Depot, we drove the mile or so that was plowed, and parked by a huge storage tank. Walking to the point where the road joins the Long Trail was risky, but no one fell. Walking down was the exciting part, but that was after lunch at the overlook with a view of Manchester and Mt. Equinox. We had no water for coffee, but the men built a fire for warmth and cheer.

As we started back, people began to fall. Then someone had a great idea. Why not slide down? Those of us still on our feet had to keep looking over our shoulders to see if we were about to be mowed down by a hurtling body. Al found he could gain good momentum sliding on the seat of his pants but regretted it later. Bernie had great luck sitting on a plastic bag. John had no luck with a palette found beside the road but upstaged Bernie by cutting spruce boughs and using them as toboggans. Peter enjoyed this method, too.

The fun came to an end when partway down we met a pickup truck going up the hill with tire chains that roughed up the ice and made further sliding impossible. Of course it did improve the walking, but we were puzzled about what the truck was doing there. The road dead ends where it joins the LT.

We rounded out the day with a stop at Friendly's for refreshments.

GLEN DAM

by W. Churchill Scott
20 February 1988

Peter and the leader waited until 9:10 a.m. for all the other fair weather hikers on a rather cloudy, showery day. At last we drove to Chasanna Drive, parked, and began our hike to Glen Dam.

For lack of snow and because of mostly road walking, we thought it best to leave our cross-country skis behind. As we were going up the pipeline, the sprinkles soon stopped and the clouds broke away. After reaching the dam, we continued on a snowmobile path to the spot where a suspension bridge was located before the 1947 flood.

On the way back we cut cross-lots by the road to the town ball field and the Drinkwaters' horse corral. Soon the sun and blue sky made the trip enjoyable.

Back at the house we had a good hot cup of coffee, passed the time of day and had a pleasant afternoon. We were small in number but enthusiastic about our next hike.

BRANDON MOUNTAIN MYSTERY HIKE

by Steve Pulling
31 January 1988

Yes folks, it's true, I actually led a hike on Super Bowl Sunday! If you can remember correctly, January 31st was a beautiful, warm, clear, sunny day perfect for a short afternoon hike. Most of the twelve hikers were seen taking off layers of clothing and tying them around their waists instead of adding layers as usually seen in January.

Starting near the old grain mill in Leicester, we hiked south across about a mile of barren cornfields along Otter Creek. For a brief few hundred yards we walked through a corner of the Brandon Swamp Wildlife Preserve although no wildlife was spotted. After leaving the swamp we found a woods road that meandered through some beautiful forest that you could see was once open fields because of the picket fences and young trees.

After taking a left turn by the third young cedar and a second left by the big bull pine, we started the short, easy ascent of Brandon Mountain. From the summit we could see to the south and east: Leicester, Brandon, Florence, Pittsford, Killington Mountain, Pico Peak, and Brandon Gap, along with many other physical features that weren't identified but were discussed in great depth.

We stayed at the summit for about an hour because of the perfect weather and spectacular views. After leaving the summit we hiked south for a very short distance to Route 73, where we had cars spotted. Great timing: I didn't miss even one second of the Super Bowl!

MYSTERY HIKE IN DANBY

by Rob Carey
6 February 1988

Where's a good place for a short afternoon winter hike? One answer is the Old County Road in Danby. Four skiers and four hikers started at the end of the plowed road in Danby. This spot is below the Imperial Marble Quarry. Years ago there was an inclined railroad running from the quarry to the valley. It crossed the County Road here on an overpass, the abutments of which are still standing. The lower end is clearly visible near the Bradford Inn on Route 7.

After a short, steep ascent the road leveled off to a moderate climb. As the sun dipped behind the hill a cool wind picked up, so I announced our hoped-for goal of the Natural Bridge. The skiers decided to continue on a few minutes more, but turned around also when we reached the height of land with no sign of the spur trail to the Bridge. We had reached an old power line mentioned in the guidebook, so we must have been close to the Natural Bridge.

The return trip was fast for the skiers, who could have used a little more snow for control and to cover the rocks better. Perhaps we'll schedule a summer hike to find the Natural Bridge and find out how close we were.

SLEDDING PARTY

by Sue Carey
14 February 1988

Several years ago we had a sledding party scheduled that turned out to be a slider's nightmare. It was 65 degrees, rainy, with no snow on the ground. No one came to the party.

February 14, 1988 had to be the complete opposite type of day. It was the best sliding day of the year! It was cool but not extremely cold, and the snow was gorgeous. Twelve people attended.

The first few sled runs were slow, but as the course got packed the speed picked up. Several people had snowshoes and used them to explore the wilds of West Wallingford.

After sliding, we stood around outside eating cookies and drinking hot chocolate until someone suggested that it might be more comfortable inside. So we ended the event sitting around a stove warming our toes.

CONGRATULATIONS

to the Carey family on the addition of a new hiker, Seth Alexander, born January 4. We understand that his Killington Section dues have already been submitted, and that he has attended a scheduling meeting, the sledding party, and a weekend trip to the Adirondacks. Good start!

SOUTH GOSHEN

by Herb Ogden, Jr.
28 February 1988

Your leader didn't expect a horde of hikers out for a winter trip that was billed as "8 mi. difficult," and his expectation was fully realized. Our group numbered only three. Still, we had enough fun to go around for at least a half-dozen people on this perfect, sunny winter ski tour.

The route to our trailhead was scenic. On the Furnace Brook Road north of Holden, a weird rock pinnacle rears up beside the road at one point in the narrow valley. We left our cars at the very end of the plowed road, near a house whose remoteness brought to mind the old saying "They live so far back, they've got to keep their own tomcat." (If you aren't sure of the meaning, write a Letter to the Editor, preferably including your best guess at it.)

We skied north on a former public road along Steam Mill Brook but didn't attempt to find the old steam sawmill site on a branch. Soon we left the main road that leads to the base of the Lookoff Mountain cliff and headed northwest past a camp with a great view down the valley. Following a snowmobile trail and an old road uphill, and carrying our skis most of the way, we reached the Middle Road just south of its highest point in Chittenden.

Putting our skis back on after a very short walk to end end of the plowed road, we headed north through a beautiful, long notch. Where Lookoff Mountain towered over small ponds in the bottom of the notch, we lunched. Perhaps because we ate so much, the log we were sitting on readjusted itself downward, much to our amusement.

After skiing past a few old cellar-holes in Goshen, we reached plowed road and walked steeply down it to Goshen Four Corners. A short walk up the Brandon Gap Road took us to the Puss and Kill Road. The Catamount Ski Trail follows this road steeply up to the east of Lookoff Mountain, and so, perforce, did we. Even Ben Florczak, who could do wonders with his stubby, wide Trak Bushwhacker skis, thought skiing down that trail would be hard work. Our guest Peter Cheng, who was on only his second ski tour, didn't seem to want to even think about skiing down that. Nor did I!

Passing a picturesque swamp at the crest, we skied (and occasionally walked) a sinuous, undulating trail through open woods. At that point, one of Peter's skis decided to go exploring on its own, but we caught it. Finally the Forest Service road, a ski and snowmobile superhighway, provided a fast, easy glide back to our cars for the end of a beautiful day in the wilds of north Chittenden and south Goshen.

Our trip was enhanced by sighting numerous animal tracks. We think we spotted mice, partridge, rabbit, and bobcat, to name a few.

THEY ATE TREES;

WE PREFERRED LASAGNA & CHOCOLATE CAKE

by Sue Thomas

5-6 March 1988

When it came time to plan our winter weekend this year, everyone seemed ready for a change. So when my friend Jean kindly offered the use of her 100 year old farmhouse in the Adirondacks, I decided to teach her a lesson and accepted!

We set off Saturday morning with eight Killington Section members, including our two youngest, Mara and Seth Carey, ages 2 1/2 years and 3 months respectively. We were greeted at the farmhouse by Jean and her dog Rusty at around noontime, so after unpacking we polished off Jean's homemade soup for lunch and hurried outside to enjoy the beautiful day. We couldn't have been luckier with the weather. Both days were sunny and fairly warm, with loads of snow for skiing and snowshoeing. We went off in various directions. Jean and I skied across a beaver pond and circled around, noting lots of deer tracks. We saw several places where they had bounded what seemed like impossible distances, and also found lots of snowshoe hare tracks and those of various miscellaneous little critters.

As we headed back to the house, we ran into Rob and Sue, taking advantage of Seth's nap and willing babysitters to sneak off for a short ski. When we finally all got back to the house, it still seemed much too nice to sit indoors, so some of us set off through the woods on skis and snowshoes to visit Uncle Clarence, who at 94 has just published his first book and loves to tell stories about the area and its inhabitants of past and present. He and his daughter entertained us in the kitchen til we had just enough daylight left for the trek home.

Jean has a brand new Irish woodstove with an oven, which came in very handy for warming up our potluck feast -- meatballs and sauce from Linda, lasagna and garlic bread made by me, Jean's carrot salad, and a wonderful chocolate cake from Roma. Which brings me back to the title in case you are wondering about it. The word "Adirondacks" derives from the Iroquois word "Ratirontacks," a slur aimed at their neighbors the Algonquins, literally meaning "those who eat bark" and intended as an insult to their hunting ability! No one could fault our hunting ability that weekend. The meals were so satisfactory that I didn't catch anyone nibbling on the trees.

We spent a cozy evening around the woodstove in the lantern light, then settled in for the night, interrupted a couple times by an unhappy camper, but otherwise peaceful. Everyone was up early and ready for a hearty breakfast of pancakes with maple syrup and the Careys' home-grown mutton sausage. After Jean and I took a quick spin on our skis, we all set out for a walk up the ridge on a logging road. We came back in time to inspect a neighboring sugarhouse being readied for the boiling season. Back at the house, while the others had lunch and packed, Jean and I enjoyed the sunshine and the birds lunching at the feeders from the porch swing, unwilling to go inside til the final packing and sweeping was necessary. When it couldn't be put off any longer, we said goodbye and thanked Jean and Rusty for their hospitality. She has written to me to tell everyone how much she enjoyed having us, and I'm sure I speak for all when I return the compliment.

In Memoriam:
DOROTHY WYMAN KIRK
by Janet P. Martin

Many of us who knew Dorothy learned to appreciate her knowledge and interest in a wide variety of subjects. I first met her through her husband, George Kirk, a very long time member of the Killington Section. She shared with him an interest in the natural world. Her yard was full of plants they had rescued from road construction projects. She loved to give plants to her friends. I have a solomon seal and a small mountain ash from her yard. I'm sure others of you also have their living memories from Dorothy.

Dorothy started the George Kirk Trails and Shelters Fund in memory of her husband when I was president of the section. It was a well thought-out gift that challenged us to add to it until it became large enough to produce a useful yearly return for the maintenance of our section, which they both had enjoyed so much.

PUBLICITY COMMITTEE REPORT, 1987
by Roma Pulling, Chair

The same media have received our news items as the year before. The newspapers, with the exception of the Shopper, receive a complete description of each event, but they do not always give it equal treatment.

Mountain Times: very reliable coverage
Sherburne Valley Voice: reliable
Rutland Herald: spotty, items often cut

A shortened version of each item is received by the three radio stations: WHWB, WSYB/WRUT, WJJR. The item for WJJR is delivered by hand to save postage. As I never listen to the radio, I can't comment on the success of this effort. (Others' comments are welcome. --Ed.)

When I'm in the vicinity of Rutland Cable, I give them a dispatch to display on Channel 15. Few people seem to watch this channel, so it hasn't seemed worth 14 cents to have regular coverage.

Other ideas have been tried, like posting schedules in public places, but the results haven't warranted a continuation of this practice.

Suggestions are always welcome and can be made by calling 773-6997.

CORRIDOR MONITORS NEEDED!

by Ray Auger, GMC Field Supervisor

Volunteers are needed to make periodic visits to National Park Service Appalachian Trail Protection Corridor lands between Route 140 and Route 4. Volunteer monitors note and report any illegal cutting of firewood, encroachment by adjoining landowners, dumping, poaching, operation of trail bikes or other off road vehicles, and other offenses.

For those who enjoy hiking off the beaten path, Corridor Monitoring is an ideal volunteer position. Non-hiking volunteers are also needed to monitor priority areas along roads and at trailheads.

COMMENTS FROM COOPER

By Herb Ogden, Jr.
6 June - 2 November 1987

A surprising find on the section's November hike to Cooper Lodge was the lodge register, which had survived the entire summer and fall hiking season, losing only its front cover. Evidently, the many hikers who commented on how cold it was on Killington without much of anything in Cooper Lodge's windows withstood the temptation to use the register for tinder.

The register yielded a wide variety of comments. Some were in French and Dutch. Many consisted mostly of nicknames with no addresses or sang the praises of alcohol, but many had either useful observations or literary merit, or both. Some damned our section's trails and shelters; others praised them. Many mentioned going to the gondola upper station to snack or clean up, some with the rueful observation that it closed at 4 p.m. Many praised Mountain Meadows Inn as a good respite from nights on the trail. It seems especially popular with the Appalachian Trail End-to-Enders, of whom quite a horde registered.

Following is a verbatim selection of the comments I found most interesting, but no statistics. Perhaps when I send the register on to the shelter adopters, Ray and Barbara Jenness, of 31 Green St., Brattleboro VT 05301 --who I think can be proud there are as many positive comments as there are -- they will care to sum it all up.

Nice. Nice mountain. Very nice mountain. See, we don't have any mountains back where I come from. Just deserts. But very clean deserts. Keep up the good mountain. No sir, just deserts.

My last night (of three) on the LT. This is a beautiful shelter at a beautiful site. Bopped up to the summit to watch the golden orb drop behind Lake Champlain and the Adirondacks after dinner. In 48 hrs. I'll be a cleaned and tuxed usher at my brother's wedding - not the smelly hiker that I am now! But ahh... the green mountains, blue & white sky, a footpath through the wilderness ... it bodes true civility to me.

Thank you Barbara and Ray!!!

Southbounders: If you're searching for one more excuse to laze the afternoon away instead of pushing on to Gov. Clement Shelter, here it is: Gov. Clement is a yucky party hole that it directly accessible to the road.

I think [my wife]'s still a little delirious after yesterday's hike through the Appalachian mud bogs and this morning's up from Gov. Clement's party hole. (The two locals are still living there; they drove in at 10:00 p.m., got their clothes off the roof and slept in their truck.) Nice trail up from Gov. Beautiful scenes in the trees, streams and ski slopes with the fog starting to come back in. This place does look good. There are a number of other shelters that need thoughtful adopting parents like you guys. Keep it up!

I lost a small brown stuffed bear somewhere between Minerva Hinchey & Gov. Clement Shelters. Would pay postage and more to see him again. If found, send to Karen O'Neil, 13 Fox Hollow Ln., Sandy Hook CT 06482. By the way -- i've only met 2 "locals" and both were very friendly and very helpful. So, to quote another famous person (my mother), "A few rotten apples does not a rotten barrel make" or something like that anyway.

Looks like I'm a few days late to see anybody on this trail. I've only seen two people in two days. Oh well on to Manchester.

Just stopped to rest after spending a night at the so-called "Tamarack Campsite." Now I've seen bugs before but I've never seen them swarm like that. My tent was literally covered with flies but [they] moved over so that some slugs could get some room. The gnats took over this morning. I left on the run and put in the quickest mile of my life. So southbounders, don't stop unless you're packing a flamethrower. I've got to quit stopping at these exotic locations.

Like the mythical Ed Garvey, I, too, am a little disturbed at the conditons I've seen lately. Minerva Hinchey Shelter was depressing, The Clarendon Gorge was full of trash and the Clarendon shelter smelled like the locker room did when I played hockey. It's really been a change from the rest of the Long Trail and the worst I've seen since I started at the N.Y. - Conn. border. It's too bad. The morning is kind of foggy and I can't see much. Less than a week and I'll be spending a few days in an inn in Hanover. I can't wait to see the desk clerk's face.

HOWDY (HOW-DEE?) Nice morning atop Killington ... peaceful, sunny (haze in the valley, though) ... then ... it dawned on me ...ITS SUNDAY!!

"Say, honey? Whadda say we head up to Killington?"

"What, you mean climb all that way?"

"No need to, dearest, the Gondola's running!"

AAAGH!!!

No sooner had this tidbit of information dawned on me when my morning senses were bombarded by a middle-aged man with the usual accessories -- a baseball hat, mis-matching plaids, chewing tobacco and a belly that held the majority stock in America's leading beer producers AND his wife whom I need not describe. Then came the usual bevy of favorites -- the punk/heavy metal/roller-disco queen w/ white sunglasses and spandex tights, several farmers (w/ several oxen), and the perfect jewish couple.

Acutally, all this didn't bother me that much (I'm sure that I am quite a sight, as well). I managed to keep a good sense of humor about it -- this was aided by a somewhat hard to get to perch that grandted me some visual solitude (although I could still hear the slap! of tobacco juice hitting the rocks.) Now on to the Inn and Long Trail then shelter-hopping to Hanover (the end of my first backpacking excursion). Bennington - Hanover

The upward trip to summit is worth the climb. Going down seems scarier while going up but it isn't so bad. We especially liked the field on the way down. At the top, we couldn't think of anything that could make our trip to Mt. Killington more exciting. But we thought of something at the field

Long Trail Guidebook says it's a "footpath through the wilderness." Well the first half of the distance between Clarendon and Governor Clement Shelters it was a "Cowpath through the wilderness." It also states that you can just follow the well worn trail. But if you follow the trail too far you'll end up in some farmer's milking parlor!! Only kidding.

JULY, 1988

SNAKE MOUNTAIN, ADDISON

19 March 1988

by Steve Pulling

We had a perfect spring day for an easy hike. It started out cool and grew warmer as the afternoon sun rose. Ten people left the cars in Addison and started up a muddy logging road on the edge of a cornfield. We found out the cornfield was also muddy.

As sometimes happens, the leader hadn't scouted out his hike and as soon as we hit the woods a decision had to be made. Do we take the more heavily traveled road to the right or go straight through ankle deep mud? I had a hunch we should wade through the mud. Lucky for me, I was right and the nine other hikers didn't have to carry out their threat to my body!

Soon after the mud, we started climbing upward and then I was positive I made the right decision. After a short but steep ascent we ended up on top of the ridge and just meandered along easily until we came to the lookout.

What a beautiful view! The Adirondacks as a backdrop, Lake Champlain on center stage, and the Champlain Valley running north and south as far as the eye could see. One eagle-eye hiker even spotted a herd of five deer in a field below the cliffs.

This was my first trip up Snake Mountain, but it hopefully won't be my last. If you ever get a chance to take this easy hike, do so. You won't be sorry.

DID THEY MEAN NOT TO RENEW?

Are people you know listed as ex-members on the list at the end of this issue? Call them! Urge them to renew!

SUGAR ON SNOW

27 March 1988

by Roma Pulling

Rob and Sue Carey did all the preliminary work for this party but weren't able to attend as they were out of town, so you are stuck with a substitute reporter. Rob even brought in all the snow, filled containers and had it stored before he left.

Twenty-three partiers enjoyed the sweets of the season at the Unitarian Church on West Street. We are grateful to Janet Martin for taking charge in the kitchen and turning out her usual delicious product, to Ira Hawley for donating the syrup prepared in his own evaporator from sap from his own trees, and to Churchill Scott for donating discount coupons for the doughnuts.

There were several new faces this year along with the familiar ones, and we hope to see them all back in the spring of 1989. Does anyone know how many years this event has been held?

KILLINGTON SECTION ANNUAL MEETING

9 April 1988

from minutes by Wally Rogers

President Rob Carey presided at a moderately well-attended meeting at CVPS on Grove Street in Rutland.

Rob summarized Steve Pulling's Trails & Shelters report:

Monitors for the newly-acquired trail corridors are needed. Spring Lake Clearing will be opened, probably with a controlled burn this year. Trail work will be more intense this year. Tamarack Shelter materials need to be moved.

Ray Catozzi reported on main club activities. The Long Trail Protection Fund is one-third of the way toward its goal. Killington-Pico discussions with the U.S. Forest Service and G.M.C. are stalled.

In his President's Report, Rob Carey emphasized the need for corridor monitors and urged participation in the Intersectional.

We received a $1000 bequest from Dorothy Wyman Kirk in memory of George L. Kirk. After discussion, we passed a motion that the section use the bequest to match Long Trail Protection Fund donations. (See following report of the Directors' implementation.)

Herb Ogden, reporting on Smoke & Blazes, thanked the many for their good cooperation. He noted increased postage and printing costs.

Incumbent directors Herb Ogden, Sue Thomas, and Steve Pulling were re-elected. They elected the following for 1988: Rob Carey as President, Steve Pulling as Vice-President, Wally Rogers as Secretary-Treasurer, and Ray Catozzi as main club director.

A slide-tape on Mount Mansfield was presented, followed by refreshments.

ROCKY POND, RUTLAND

24 April 1988

by Ira Hawley

The hikers (who are usually ready to enjoy the outdoors in all weather), such as Linda Pellerin, Ray Catozzi, and Churchill Scott, were ready for this one on a foggy, drizzly morning. Pine Hill was completely fogged in with no chance of a view. The arbutus were in full bloom as were the coltsfoot. BUT -- we didn't go. It rained. Let's do it next spring.

BRISTOL NOTCH

30 April 1988

by Jerry Parker

Got several calls before the hike date, expected a good turnout. Due to rain only two other members went. Terry, from Middlebury, who works in Rutland for the Forestry Department, met us in Bristol.

Started up the trail at 10:15, still overcast. Further up we went, the thicker the fog got. Followed the trail to Gilmore Pond. We couldn't see twenty yards in front of us. We walked past the camp and never saw it.

On the way back, we located the camp which we missed by fifty yards before. It is always open so we lunched there. John suggested a winter hike, as it is equipped with a stove and an outhouse. The outhouse door had been left open and a porcupine dragged out the hardwood toilet seat and made it his meal. (Porcupines will eat anything, won't they?)

Continued walking in the dense fog, not finding the 1944 airplane wreckage. We did see a lot of moose sign. John and I would walk ahead fifty yards and would hear Ray and Terry call to establish our location. I was lucky more hikers didn't show. We probably would have lost a few!

At 2:30 we took a compass reading and decided to start back shortly after we came out on the back side of the pond without finding the wreckage. Followed the trail and headed down to our cars.

The hike was enjoyed by all despite the rain and fog. Hope to try again next spring.

MINERVA HINCHEY WORK PARTY

7 May 1988

by Steve Pulling

This was our first work party of the season, and by far the most productive. Only six GMCers reported for duty, but, much to our surprise, so did nine members of the Boy Scout Troop 105 of Rutland.

We got much more done than I ever expected. Minerva Hinchey got a complete face-lift. We cleaned up her yard, rebuilt her fire pit, spruced up the outhouse, and put two new coats of stain inside and out.

In the meantime, three people cleared trail from Route 140 north to Minerva Hinchey Shelter. The big surprise of the day was when Troop 105 hiked into camp, announcing they had cleared trail from Route 103 south to Minerva Hinchey.

Many thanks go to the other five

GMCers who worked extra hard to make Minerva Hinchey a nice neat-looking shelter again. And of course a real special thanks to Troop 105 for their hard work trail clearing.

WEST PAWLET - D & H RAILBED

15 May 1988

by Ira Hawley

What a beautiful morning for a leisurely outing. It was good to leave the street construction in Rutland behind us as we proceeded to Castleton and a brief stop to regroup our passengers. In Poultney six more hikers joined us. As we left Lake St. Catherine a short ascent brought us to the crest of a hill with a panoramic view to the south. We nearly missed an additional hiker who joined us beyond Wells village as we were about to temporarily leave the group to spot cars at the terminus of the hike.

In West Pawlet village we left the cars for a short walk to a shady area by the Indian River for lunch. Now hiking north along the railbed of the former Delaware & Hudson Railroad, we observed the engineering that had occurred to build the roadbed. Several cuts in the slate ledges showed the marks left by the hand drilling to obtain material to make the several fills for levelling.

Wild strawberry blossoms and blue violets were numerous. Orioles greeted us from the treetops and a scarlet tanager was seen. Various shades of green of tree leaves and well-kept farm fields in the distance were pleasant. Granite markers showing Vermont - New York state boundaries were seen as we returned to our cars.

We had played the role of hobos for a day. We had a good view of the countryside that had been traversed and defended by Ethan Allen and the Green Mountain Boys.

LOWLAND WALK-THROUGH

21 May 1988

by Alfred L. Pulling

On the 21 May work party, Churchill Scott cleaned up from the Lottery Road to Clarendon Shelter. Churchill went alone. Two other people besides me showed up at South Main Street Park.

As I had the tools, chainsaw, etc., Jerry Parker, Bernie Donahue and I took off for Pico Camp. We found several blowdowns and got those out of the way. (Jerry, you are a good man with a chainsaw.) The one that gave us the trouble (?) has been taken off the trail. Steve Pulling went up on 29 May and took care of that one. After all that water we encountered on the trail, Steve says it is not too bad now.

Thank you very much everyone, for your help!

(For comment on this spring's work party attendance, see article on p. 4. --Editor)

CALLING ALL KILLINGTON SECTIONEERS!

We have a problem.

Have you ever shopped for a birthday card for a friend, but he owns the only card shop in town? Or tried to organize a party for someone but you can't use the phone because he is the other party on your party line?

This is really serious.

Of course, when all else fails, there is the straightforward approach. But if we hand this scrap of tomfoolery to the editor and he decides it isn't appropriate for printing in this scholarly journal, what then? I guess if he has read this far, it has achieved its purpose.

So, Herb and Cathy, our most sincere congratulations on your recent marriage. May all your dreams come true, and all your hikes be happy ones.

Editor's Note: Many thanks to the esteemed Article Solicitor for her comment on the event of 7 May. After getting my bride-to-be soaked and chilled on her first-ever GMC hike to a fogged-in Shrewsbury Peak two years ago, and topping it off by forgetting my lunch and sweater so that I had to mooch from her, I'm still a little surprised at where we've arrived. By the way, ask us about the original Pico peak that we saw on our honeymoon in the Azores Islands!

HAMILTON FALLS

4 June 1988

by Sue Thomas

After a long spell of wet weather it looked at first as if we'd have a nice day for our cookout and hike to Hamilton Falls, but no such luck. By the time our caravan reached Jamaica State Park and we began building fires for lunch, most of the blue sky had disappeared and we tried our best to ignore light sprinkles of rain.

We enjoyed our hot dogs and hamburgers just the same, then set off down the old bed of the West River Railroad, which follows the river for two miles to the base of the Hamilton Falls Trail. Almost all of the twenty hikers decided to head up to the falls, in spite of dire warnings in the guidebook and State Park pamphlet.

The Hamilton Falls Trail itself is steep but not too difficult, and we reached the top of the falls quickly, where there are large potholes hollowed out of the rock by the swirling water, along with signs listing how many people had been killed trying to get a closer look, so we admired the scenery cautiously! From there, some of us scrambled down the rocks to the lower falls while the rest of the group went back the way we had come. From the lower falls you can see more of the 125 foot cascade ending in pools and more hollowed out rock.

We all returned to the state park with two temporarily misplaced hikers but no casualties, and with no rain -- even occasional sunshine.

WALK-THROUGH II

11 June 1988

by Stephen Pulling

I'm sorry to report this year's attendance at walk-throughs was sub-par for the Killington Section. We eventually walked our twenty-two miles of trail, but it was a long grind. A grand total of nine people showed up for the two walk-throughs. If it weren't for the old faithful work horses, we would still be out there. Ira Hawley and family once again did way more than their share of work, including our hardest hit section in Shrewsbury. Al Pulling also did more than his share, showing up at both walk-throughs plus helping me with most of the trouble spots.

On 11 June we cleared from Route 4 to Gov. Clement Shelter. This section wasn't as bad as I was expecting, considering all of the hard winds and heavy snow we had last fall and winter. The worst section was from Cooper Lodge to Tamarack Clearing [Shrewsbury Peak Jct.], which took Al and Carol over three and a half hours to open up.

I sincerely hope to see more of you come out next year and pitch in. There is a lot of hard work to be done each spring and I don't want to put the burden on a certain few. They might get disgusted and not come out next year. [Emphasis added by Editor.]

BLUE RIDGE CAVE

19 June 1988

by W. Churchill Scott

Eight determined hikers started to climb Blue Ridge from the west. Turning east off Meadow Lake Drive, we covered a quarter mile on a new housing development road, then parked. Walking up an old road, we passed a number of cellar holes, Jerry Young's camp, Virginia's family's camp, an old mill site, and, at last, the final cellar hole, climbing all the way. Soon Larry, Virginia's son, caught up to us and acted as our guide the rest of the way. Bearing right, the grade lessened and at least we reached the "Upper Camp." Originally an open clearing that supported a flock of sheep, this area is completely reforested and no longer visible from the summit of Blue Ridge.

Here we picked up a snowmobile trail taking a circular route up to the northwest approximate ridge. As the trail leveled out, on the left we came to Robert "Dead Eye" Senecal's three mile tree with a number of dates and initials carved on it. At once, leading right, we found some flagging which helped us go approximately south southwest. There was little suggestion of a footpath. A short quarter mile farther, our guide stopped and pointed ahead. There in the side of the mountain was a cave.

Jerry Parker and Doug Thorn were scrambling down the steep sides with Sue Thomas just standing there wishing to go. The fellows reported ice, cold air, and a goodly number of animal tracks in spite of the steep sides.

History has it that this cave was found by Glen Senecal while hunting in his teens. After many years of searching, he relocated it in 1986, when he was in his late 50's.

During and after lunch a discussion was had about the summit. Everything was so indefinite that our guide suggested we return with the idea that later this season he would cut a better trail to the cave, and, with help this fall, continue a path to the summit of Blue Ridge and connect with the Cauty Trail.

If some folks want to visit this cave we can plan a special trip soon. Think I can find it again!

BEACON HILL - LOTTERY LOOP

26 June 1988

by Herb Ogden, Jr.

To judge from the number of phone inquiries your leader received about this modest little excursion, one would have thought he was leading a trip to the lost gold of the Incas. Or was it the bit about a Lottery that drew the attention? Even when showers hit while we were assembling for the hike, eleven members and guests were still game for the trip.

Our hike began where the Long Trail crosses the Lottery Road, which runs west from Shrewsbury village. Churchill Scott told us that, twenty years ago or so, the road, although little more than a trace, could be followed around the hill and north to the Cold River Road.

After picking our way over slippery stones and around cowflops on a misty afternoon, we ascended Beacon Hill, paused for a bit to gather flowers, and then headed down the steep grade to Clarendon Shelter, our snack stop.

The shelter was in good shape, though the register told of hikers who had found it a mess.

From the shelter, we walked up a long-abandoned public road that has been moonlighting as a brook. Once the road and the brook got themselves sorted out and the former crossed the latter on a snowmobile bridge, we soon came to the big barn foundation and the cellarhole of the old Adams place. Churchill filled us in on its history, which can be found in the Smoke & Blazes for March, 1988. Across the road, to the east, we could still see rotting boards from another barn or shed.

Soon we came out onto the Lottery Road and strolled back down it to our cars, passing beautiful views to the east and south as far as Okemo and Equinox. Off we drove, fairly dry and quite contented with our bucolic hike.

PARKER'S GORE, BUT NOT MUCH MORE

9 July 1988

by Herb Ogden, Jr.

This was our second attempt to hike from the Northam - Plymouth road over the Shrewsbury Peaks to Cooper Lodge and then down the Bucklin Trail to Brewers Corners in Mendon. Our first attempt, last fall, failed because snow prevented the car from ascending the Northam CCC road, and we climbed to Cooper Lodge from Brewers Corners. This time, it was suggested to your leader that the trip would make a good overnight hike, and it was scheduled as "Parker's Gore and More," a 8.3 mi. overnight with an optional 3.8 mi. day trip up and down Shrewsbury Peak via the Peak and Black Swamp Trails. What happened was neither, but it was fun anyway.

By the time for meeting in Rutland, it was 85 out, with 95 predicted, and hazy. Still, seven members (no guests) showed up. Nobody wanted to go overnight, though, so your leader left in his car the overnight pack he'd prepared in case anyone wanted to take the full hike as advertised.

All seven of us walked to Newfound Shelter, 0.9 mi. up the Black Swamp Trail. The old CCC shelter was in good shape except for weak support under some of the floor and a missing hinge on the privy door. Nobody wanted to try out the stagnant-looking spring water, though. Churchill told us he'd heard that the Black Swamp Trail was a CCC bridle path, and that there once was a mule shed near the shelter. Does anyone know more about when the trail was built, and why? Write the Editor if you do!

Five of us climbed the additional 0.3 mi to Shrewsbury South Peak. Up there, we enjoyed the breeze and the good Mendon Peak lookout at the end of a 150' blue-blazed spur trail.

Two of us hiked another two miles through Parker's Gore, over Shrewsbury North Peak, across the Shrewsbury-Killington gap, across a ski trail, and up to the Long Trail. There were a number of recent-looking bad blowdowns. We sawed away some of them. The rest could be avoided fairly easily, at least since we didn't have full packs on. Although grown-in in spots and poorly marked at the ski trail crossing, the trail was generally in good shape. We saw no sign of the Tamarack Shelter lumber pile between Shrewsbury Peak Jct. and the former shelter spring, but lush undergrowth could have hidden it.

None of us went north on the LT. Parker's Gore was as far as we got.

Wildlife sighted included partridge with chicks, woodcock, and an enormous garter snake swallowing a toad. Jerry's attempt to photograph the snake and its dinner caused the snake to drop the dinner, probably, as Jerry said, because the snake thought it would become someone else's dinner if carrying its own dinner would slow its escape. We also saw where a partridge had taken a dust bath in the path.

When we returned, it was 100 degrees in Rutland.

DIRECTORS BEGIN TRAIL PROTECTION FUND CAMPAIGN, FOCUS ON TRAILS, SHELTERS

3 May 1988

from minutes by Wally Rogers

Killington Section directors Ray Catozzi, Herb Ogden, Sue Thomas, Linda Pellerin, Wally Rogers, and Rob Carey followed up the membership's vote at the KS Annual Meeting to use Dorothy Kirk's bequest in memory of her husband George to protect our trail.

The directors voted unanimously to initiate a campaign in memory of George and Dorothy Kirk to solicit funds from our members and our community for the Long Trail Protection Fund. From the Kirk bequest, the Section will add one dollar for every two dollars contributed in this campaign. Checks made out to the Long Trail Protection Fund should be sent to Wally Rogers for matching and forwarding to the main club.

Ray Catozzi agreed to develop a press release and announce the campaign to the main club board, Rob Carey agreed to announce our effort at the main club annual meeting, Wally Rogers agreed to contact R. Lincoln for information on past fund raising from Rutland County businesses, and Sue Carey heads plans for a section rummage sale at the Careys' home in Wallingford. [See outing schedule for 24 September.]

Directors discussed a number of trail and shelters issues. An inventory of signs is needed, along with a program to improve or replace them with consideration for current club standards. Herb Ogden reported that the Bucklin Trail, one of our responsibilities, needed a work party. The new trail from Route 103 to Clarendon Shelter will be part Long Trail Patrol and part KS responsibility. [See Outing Schedule for 13 August work party.] It was suggested that a trail building workshop be held in the fall. Moving the Tamarack Shelter materials will be a main club project after the annual meeting. Ray Catozzi recommended that the section consider resuming caretaking work at Cooper Lodge and Clarendon Suspension Bridge.

NEW CHALLENGE III

by Roma Pulling

When we reported a year ago, we were 61% of the way to our goal of photographing all the shelters on the Long Trail and side trails. We have now moved further toward our goal, and our project is 78% completed. Most of the shelters visited recently were approached via the Long Trail and were notable only in the case of Buchanan Shelter, which replaces the old Bolton Lodge, no longer on the Trail.

Buchanan is named for Prof. Roy Buchanan, founder of the Long Trail Patrol, and was constructed in 1984, the year after we backpacked through that area. It is a striking structure, made of matching lumber and stained black. The dining area is separated from the bunk room by a sliding door. A rank of five windows provides a view from the front of the shelter at the level of the upper bunks.

I was able to add two more side trails to my list:

Branch Pond Trail: South Bourn Shelter was our goal on our first hike of the new season on 9 October. The hike would have been a pleasant one, but the mud was deep and the streams were high as a result of recent storms. We found two inches of snow on the ground. The shelter needs repair, but, being in a wilderness area, it may not get it. Bob Poole of the Connecticut Section was hiking in the area of Branch Pond.

Forest City Trail: People who have hiked with me know my dread of crossing any stream larger than a trickle. After all, I can't swim, and it's a well-known fact that if you fall into one of these things you can get WET! This trail boasted an abundance of brooks that resembled Otter Creek, but I made it over them and reached Montclair Glen Lodge, which was our goal this day, 23 October. I looked for "Forest City," an old CCC camp, but found only a sort of incinerator.

With fifteen shelters left to visit, we have our work waiting for us in the fall.

NEWS FROM FAR-FLUNG FRIENDS

A member of the S&B staff recently visited Rob, Carolyn and Daniel Badger at their home in Blacksburg, Virginia. KS members of a few years' standing will remember Rob and Carolyn as vigorous and contributing KS members during their Rutland years. Rob was a board member and hike leader.

At present Rob is working on his doctorate in geology at Virginia Polytechnic Institute, and Carolyn is nursing. They look great, and Daniel is growing fast.

We hope a return to Vermont is in their future.

KILLINGTON SECTION BOOSTS LONG TRAIL PROTECTION FUND by Ray Catozzi

The Killington Section has voted to substantially aid the parent Club in its campaign to raise $1.4 million to buy northern Vermont land where the Long Trail passes. Land covering 34 miles of the LT is up for sale, and the Club urgently needs to permanently protect this unique natural Vermont resource.

The late Dorothy Kirk, a member of the Killington Section, bequeathed $1000 to help preserve the Long Trail, America's oldest long-distance hiking trail and inspiration for the 2100 mile Appalachian Trail from Maine to Georgia.

Killington Section directors have voted that Mrs. Kirk's $1000 bequest be donated to the Long Trail Protection Fund in care of the main Club in Montpelier. This amount is to be matched two to one, by combined effort of the Killington Section's own fund raising campaign and funds from the Killington Section's Trails and Shelters budget.

The Section urgently requests donations from all sources -- members, non-members, corporations, groups -- to help meet the local goal of raising $2000 to match Mrs. Kirk's bequest two to one. The Section recently held a lawn sale that netted about $500.

Anyone wishing to contribute toward the preservation of our Long Trail up north should make checks or money orders payable to the LONG TRAIL PROTECTION FUND and send them to Wally Rogers, Treasurer, Killington Section, RFD 1, Box 363, Castleton VT 05735. All donations to this worthy cause are tax deductible.

To date, the Green Mountain Club has raised approximately $650,000 through donations, grants, and pledges. It has already acquired title to two parcels of land, covering several of the 34 miles in need of protection. Included in this figure is a $150,000 technical assistance grant from the U. S. Park Service to aid in mapping and surveying the land in question, and a $50,000 challenge grant from the State of Vermont that must be matched three to one by the Club and the public.

CHITTENDEN BROOK TRAIL

16 July 1988

by Roma Pulling

It was our luck to have our hike fall in the midst of a prolonged heat wave. Considering that fact, we reversed our original plan and started where the Long Trail crosses Route 73 in Brandon Gap, hiked south to the junction with the Chittenden Brook Trail, and walked downhill to the Chittenden Brook Campground. The higher elevations of the Long Trail were actually cool. The heat didn't hit us until we stopped for lunch near the end of the hike.

It was surprising that this side trail was cleared better many sections of the Long Trail (not including the Killington Section, of course). Someone had been there recently and cut weeds and brush, making a swath at least three feet wide.

Eight people hiked this day. We all got into Jerry Parker's truck, which we had spotted at the Chittenden Brook Campground, and headed back to our cars at Brandon Gap. We made one stop on the way -- at a pull-out east of the Gap where there are exhibits relating to the Mount Horrid Cliffs and a nearby beaver dam.

Al and I hope to see you out again in cooler weather.

WALLINGFORD POND

24 July 1988

by Rob Carey

About a dozen members and guests enjoyed this afternoon hike. Instead of following the old road, we started from Kent Farm Road. From here we followed an old road up a moderate grade for about a mile until we reached the height of land and an important junction. To the left the road goes to Mt. Holly. To the right or straight, the road reaches the Pond in about a quarter of a mile.

We had listed swimming as a possible activity on this trip, but this was one of the few cool weekends of the summer so there were no takers. It was a beautiful day to view the pond and be outside. We saw ashes of small forest fires near the pond. As we left, we met three people fishing. Their luck hadn't been too good.

The return trip was quick, easy, and almost all downhill. While driving back, several hikers stopped to look at the stones in the graveyard on Sugar Hill Road.

TAMARACK NOTCH TO GOVERNOR CLEMENT SHELTER

30 July 1988

by Stephen Pulling

I first decided to lead this hike because it would be a perfect winter hike along old logging roads through some beautiful territory. So we scheduled the hike on December 20th. But the weather turned against us about halfway to Governor Clement Shelter as some low flying clouds with rain set in and we retreated to the cars. Popular demand had us reschedule the hike for the summer, so we made it a cookout hike.

July 30th was one of those extra warm days, but the heat didn't affect us too much because we were in a pretty thick forest and shaded from the sun most of the time. A new logging road had been built since my original hike scouting trip, which threw me a bit, but I got oriented quickly and off we went.

Eleven hikers started out from the Rousseau Camp in Tamarack Notch and followed old and new logging roads up over Stone Hill, eventually getting to Bove Camp. At this point Jerry Parker led us along a newly cut snowmobile trail to the Poczobut Camp, which is just up the hill from our destination, Governor Clement Shelter.

Our meals on wheels driver got distracted in Rutland and was quite late arriving with our lunch for the planned cookout. Thanks to the Carey family, who met us at the shelter, no one starved waiting for Al to show up ninety minutes late.

Half of us hiked back to Tamarack Notch after lunch, while the other half of our group rode back to Rutland with Al. I think the cookout hike idea was a good one, and I think we should plan more in the future. The only thing I would do differently is to hire a different driver if one is needed to meet the group!

[Editor's Note: See Vol. 41, No. 1 for a chilling account of the first attempt at this hike.]

G.G.G. WORK PARTY
13 August 1988
by Stephen Pulling

As most active members know, the AMC and GMC are trying to buy the land along the LT for a corridor where development will be prohibited, to protect our hiking trail. Some landowners along the trail are not willing to sell their land so we sometimes move the trail onto lands that can be bought more easily.

The trail between Route 103 and Clarendon Shelter is one of those that had to be moved. We had to move the trail a few hundred yards west of the old location. If you can't picture the new terrain in your mind, let me tell you it's nothing like the old. There is a climb on that new section that is the steepest on our 22-mile stretch of LT including on Killington.

Ray Catozzi named the area "The Great Gorge Gulch" [G.G.G. for short --Ed.] which is very appropriate. The steep climb is worth the effort, as there is a beautiful lookout on top. Views to the southwest include Clarendon Gorge and the Rutland Airport.

We picked the hottest day of the year but much to my surprise a crew organized by the main club did all of the rock step work up the gulch. Our Killington section crew did open up all the rest of the new trail with saws, axes, clippers, and strong muscles. [It was a jungle --Ed.]

My special thanks go to the following members for their hard, unselfish work: Jerry Parker, Churchill Scott, Roma and Al Pulling, Herb Ogden, Sue Thomas, Rob Carey, and Ray Catozzi.

MYSTERY HIKE IN MT. HOLLY
7 August 1988
by Ira Hawley

We left the park at the usual time minus some of the usual hikers that join us there, but three new hikers did go.

We gained three more hikers at the Long Trail crossing at Route 103. Then on to Mt. Holly and the hamlet of Hortonville and the base of Salt Ash Mountain. We left the cars at a small cemetery in the corner of the town of Shrewsbury.

As we started walking into the town of Mt. Holly, we were joined by a friendly dog, possibly a stray, as it had no collar, although we first assumed it belonged to a family of a house that we passed. As we continued along easy walking on a long-discontinued town road, we passed by an unmaintained and ancient cemetery with most of the headstones pushed over flat on the ground by cattle using this area as pasture. Our lunch spot was an active log loading area and our chairs were log piles. Our new friend (the Dog) had her lunch on everyone's handouts. A ten minute walk took us to Lake Ninevah, a pretty piece of water. Other people were enjoying a cooling dip on this very warm day. Also our friend (the Dog) took her dip to cool off.

We retraced our path for about a mile to an intersection of this old road and followed a different route past a cellarhole which must have gone with a large house. Then we went on down grade to a large farm in a quiet setting by itself surrounded by hills and forest. About 100 yards off the road and on a knoll we explored the very old Martin family cemetery.

My pickup truck was waiting to take us back to the beginning of our trek. The thermos jug of cold water was welcome and refreshing. Our new friend (the Dog) was glad to ride with us back to our cars. We hope her home was in this vicinity.

BATTENKILL CANOE TRIP

2-4 September 1988

by Stephen Pulling

There are so many things about the canoe trip that I promised the participants I wouldn't report, that there isn't much to summarize! To say the least, it was a very fun trip with a perfect mix of calm and white water. The weather was perfect on Friday and Saturday, but we got kind of damp on Sunday.

Friday night we pitched our tents in an overflow area for Labor Day Weekend at an Arlington campground. One of the highlights of the weekend was watching a group of flatlanders pitch their tents late Friday. It was a real comedy show for us to watch as we sat around our picnic table making snide remarks.

Our flatland friends kept us awake half the night partying, but we had a long day ahead of us Saturday, so we got up early, broke camp, spotted cars (I won't say where), had breakfast provided by Jerry and Sue, and drove to Manchester, where our trip began.

The Battenkill is a very calm river in Manchester, similar to Otter Creek, with numerous log crossings. Just north of Arlington is a bad set of rapids that Doug and I negotiated but the remaining canoeists walked around not wanting to take a chance.

The remainder of Saturday was spent playing around in the Class I and II rapids. I think everyone had fun enjoying the beautiful scenery, passing people in tubes, and testing their canoeing skills on the tougher turns.

About 6 p.m. we beached our canoes at our "primitive" campsite on the Vermont-New York border. We built a fire, cooked supper, and sat around late into the night shooting the breeze, reminiscing, and giving marshmallows cooking lessons.

Sunday morning came early and with rain in the forecast we hurriedly had breakfast, broke camp, packed our gear away, and took off paddling. The water was faster than Saturday so we made good time. With the exception of one bad strainer that we carried around, the river was fun and challenging.

The rains came upon us about 10 a.m., just hard enough for us to put on our raincoats. Canoeing in the rain isn't bad if you know the cars aren't too far away. About 11 a.m. we got to East Greenwich, N.Y., where our pick up vehicles were waiting for us just where we spotted them Saturday. All seven of us had a great time and I had four requests for the Battenkill next year!

SWASHING BUCKLIN

10 September 1988

by Herb Ogden

Accompanied by fully half the people who volunteered to work on the Bucklin Trail in response to my notice in the last S&B, I set out from Brewers Corners on the Wheelerville Road on a gorgeous early fall morning. Jerry Parker drove almost to the upper Brewers Brook crossing, using the logging road that branches from the old Coach Road up Killington, and the two of us spent the entire day on the upper 2.2 miles of the Killington Section's longest side trail.

The uppermost half mile needed the most work. We pruned back a lot of brush, dug long ditches to drain the trail, and put in waterbars. The rest of the trail needed less clearing, but drainage was a problem there, too. Jerry moved so many rocks putting in waterbars that his shovel blade finally broke. But, after a long day's work, we left the trail with a good sense of accomplishment at having restored a neglected stretch of trail.

DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO WITH OLD S&B'S?

To recycle a Smoke & Blazes, leave it in the waiting room of an office, where it will introduce others to us.

TAG SALE

24 September 1988

by Sue Carey

What a great success! It was a beautiful sunny day and with all the support we received from our members we raised $500. It was great to see so many Section members pitching in to help. Sue Thomas made some nice posters and Roma worked on the written advertizing. Rob and Herb solicited donations. Wally took care of the change. Linda Pellerin and I marked the items the night before, and on Saturday Linda, Rob, Roma, and Sue set up and worked during the sale. Thanks to all the helpers and donors. A special thanks to Mountain Travelers on Woodstock Avenue and the Army-Navy Store on Center Street in Rutland for their donations to the sale.

CANTY TRAIL WORK PARTY

25 September 1988

by Herb Ogden, Jr.

Since I still had half my volunteers for the Bucklin Trail work party but hardly any more Bucklin Trail to work on, I persuaded the entire remaining volunteers to take on the Canty Trail up Blue Ridge Mountain. The Perkinses, from Tall Timbers, used to maintain this trail for the GMC, but they said they couldn't keep it up any more and welcomed a Killington Section work party. So Ben Florczak (the other half of the Bucklin Volunteers) and I spent a very pleasant day putting the upper two-thirds of this pretty trail back into shape.

Our biggest project was just below the summit, where we cleared out the badly overgrown short side trail to the west vista, and some of the vista, too. Our reward was a beautiful view from Rutland City to the Adirondacks. Just a few hours earlier, we'd met descending hikers who complained about all that climb for so little view. It's too bad we hadn't told them which branches to scramble through so that they could have enjoyed the view that we later opened up, rather than the much poorer southerly view from the actual summit.

We also dug or redug some ten water-bars, in the process persuading a small brook to get out of our trail and go back where it belonged.

Once the bottom third of the Canty Trail is cleared and the whole thing is reblazed, we'll have a trail to be proud of. Any volunteers for 1989?

MOOSALAMOO (AND LANA FALLS TOO)

1 October 1988

by Sue Thomas

When we assembled at the Falls of Lana parking lot to begin our hike up Mt. Moosalamoo, I gave the group a choice. We could hike up the boring old road the the Falls, or take a new and more ... interesting route. Obviously they haven't learned yet not to follow me because they opted for the new way, and we set off up the north side of the falls -- straight up the rocks, that is! We were rewarded with a different view of the falls, and, a little further along, another rock outcropping that looked out on Lake Dunmore. That's about all we saw though, due to the haziness of the day. As we left the Falls of Lana picnic grounds and started to climb the mountain, October began to feel more like July, and people shed layers of jackets and sweaters.

Because the haze obscured the views and because we had a lot of miles ahead of us, we decided not to take a side trail to Rattlesnake Cliffs, but continued on to the top of Moosalamoo for a well-deserved lunch break, where we were treated to yet another view of the haze while we rested and ate. Someone with sharp, haze-piercing eyes spotted what we thought were cows in a pasture below, but, when they hadn't moved at all by the time we left, we determined that they were rocks, not cows. For wildlife, we had to settle for a fuzzy caterpillar who tried to share Roma's lunch.

We descended from the summit and crossed over to the North Branch Trail which led us along a brook back to the picnic area, where we found the Hawleys waiting for us. That was a pleasant surprise, and a nice ending to a long and enjoyable hike.

HERRICK MOUNTAIN

29 October 1988

by Herb Ogden, Jr.

Nine hikers turned out in rather raw weather for what was billed as a ten mile difficult hike with some bushwhackking. Actually, it was more like six miles than ten, but there was a little rugged going, and we did have to bushwhack for a mile or so at the top. As far as anyone knew, this was the first Killington Section trip up Herrick Mountain, so we were not sure what to expect. Now that we know, we'll go again!

We drove from West Rutland up the Clark Hill Road. Rather than decorate the road with various undercarriage parts of Sandy Partridge's sedan, we left the cars not far beyond the end of the maintained road, near the height of land. Enjoying nice views from the old road, we descended to the southwest corner of West Rutland, then ascended to the northwest on a long-abandoned Ira town road, retracing in reverse a little of the 1986 Around Herrick Mountain hike.

Branching south on a well-defined woodroad, we ascended the east flank of the 2401' knob north of Herrick Mountain that is known for Ben's Slide on its north face. At this point, the leader had a little fun exploiting his friends' topographic befuddlement, leading them west into the saddle between the Ben's Slide knob and Herrick itself while they thought they were going east and were sure they ought to be going west -- which they were! In the saddle, we left the last woodroad and simply climbed south along a ridge of fairly open hardwood forest, mostly avoiding a lot of raspberry bushes. Maybe 0.2 miles north of the summit, we found a beautiful view of the Birdseye cliff. It's probably also a beautiful view of the Adirondacks, but we couldn't see much farther than Bomoseen through clouds and an occasional snow shower.

The 2726' summit of Herrick Mountain gave us a fair view to the south and a sheltered (?) place for lunch. We puzzled over the remains of what seemed to be a very small aluminum tower before heading back north along the ridge.

On the way back, we followed the well-defined woodroad around the south side of a 2185' knob, passing an old foundation where even the 1869 Beers Atlas shows no road. We entered the Clark Hill Road south of the torn-up bridge near what the Beers Atlas shows as the J. Mundy place, now only a cellarhole. After locating the J. Mumford cellarhole north of the brook, we headed back up Clark Hill to the cars.

Sandy Partridge graciously invited us to his home in Proctor for refreshment and slides of a hike along the Milford Track on the south island of New Zealand. Perhaps it wasn't quite as out of the way as Herrick Mountain, but the Milford Track was very interesting to see, and Sandy's photography was outstanding. We encouraged him to show his New Zealand slides at a future Killington Section gathering.

MYSTERY HIKE IN CHITTENDEN

30 October 1988

by Ira Hawley

The morning had been a succession of snow flurries and blue sky with bright sunshine and when we assembled at the park more clouds threatened what looked like snow. As this was to be an afternoon hike, we planned a short drive to Chittenden to Casey Road, and were fortunate to have plentiful parking space for the eleven cars.

We proceeded into the woods via a discontinued town road on a moderate downgrade. We came upon a huge boulder at the side of which was a long-abandoned family sedan. Farther along was a cellar hole as evidence of the site of dwellers many years ago. We now came out of the woods to the traveled part of Dugway Road. Our return was by the same route but now it was all uphill.

It did not storm after all, and on arriving back at the start, everyone enjoyed refreshment in the sweet cider awaiting us. The short afternoon had provided some invigorating exercise.

HAPPY ANNIVERSARY!

The hurricane of 21 September 1938 wreaked havoc over a wide area, destroying timber, homes, and means of transportation. One thing that has survived this shocker, several wars, and personal loss, has been the 18 September 1938 marriage of Ira Hawley and Irene Wilder.

Ira and Irene had a family of four children. Lorraine lives with her parents, Lucinda passed away in 1961, Norman works in the graphics department at the Rutland Herald, and Sharon is married to a local excavator.

Ira is one of our hike leaders and has furnished the maple syrup for our sugar-on-snow parties for several years.

We hope your 50th anniversary was a happy one and that there will be many more golden years.

ENVIRONMENTAL WEEKEND AT SEYON RANCH IN GROTON

by Sue Carey

The weekend of 25-26 February 1989 has been reserved for an environmental learning program at Seyon Ranch. Last year several people I know went and enjoyed it so much that I thought the Killington Section would be interested. The lodge is heated with a furnace so you don't have to worry about getting cold at night. We haven't finalized the program yet, but it could include winter tracking, bird banding, star identification, or Vermont mammals. If you have a preference, let me know.

The cost includes the program, four meals, and a heated lodge. You should bring a sleeping bag and skis. Snowshoes are available at the ranch. Prices are $45 per adult, $27 per child under 12, and $10 per preschooler.

It sounds like a great way to spend an winter weekend. Please let me know at least two weeks in advance if you want to go. Sue Carey 446-2830.

Ray Catozzi spotted the following article in the October, 1988 Berkshire Exchange (Berkshire Chapter, Appalachian Mountain Club), which had reprinted it from the AMC Worcester Chapter's Wachusett Views. Do you suppose what goes on in the White Mountains just might have a parallel over here in the Green Mountains?

WHO GOES TO THE MOUNTAINS?

by Mike Makynen

Who goes to the mountains? Well, if the crowds we saw one recent Columbus Day are any indication, then the answer must be that everybody goes to the mountains.

We saw upwards of a hundred people of all shapes, sizes, and levels of experience. In keeping with this newsletter's recent interest in publishing lists, I offer the following observations on the type of hikers to be found in the mountains.

A. The Veteran. The veteran has been there before, usually more than once, probably even in winter. Still wishes it was possible to get to the mountains more often. Carries quality equipment, most of it well worn. Can always be counted on for good advice and for a good story.

B. The Family. A young couple with young kids. Often seen struggling to make it to the summit -- in fact, maybe they don't always get there. Everyone pitches in to carry gear and lunch. Kids: "Are we almost there?" Parents: Just over the next rise."

C. The Family 15 Years Later. Kids are young adults and look more like their parents than before. Often accompanied by date or spouse. Parents are in even better shape than when in Group B. Whole family is now in Group A and got there without even realizing it. Very comfortable together.

D. Couples. We saw couples from three generations. A good opportunity to get to know each other. The special thrill of the mountains is better when there is someone to share it with.

E. Outing Club. Always interesting to see. Wide variety of equipment and experience. A safe chance to learn from a friendly teacher. Includes AMC, school clubs, church groups, scouts.... The way many of got started.

F. Rambo. Apparently this is an exclusive male group. Carries a "climbing" rope on a ridge hike. Not to be confused with a rock climber, except by another Rambo. Carries very large belt knife. Wears a lot of camouflage. Struts.

G. High Climber. Thinks the mountains are not high enough. Smokes marijuana on the top of Mt. Lincoln.

H. The Indiscriminate Climber. Disregards signs saying no camping within 200 feet of trail or water. Makes large wood fire. Makes large noise. Makes large mess. Excuse: "Other people have camped here before us, and besides, we can carry all this beer only so far."

I. The Refrigerator. Has different thermostat from the rest of us. Wears shorts on Lafayette even though temperature is in the thirties with strong winds. Doesn't wear long pants until snowshoe season.

J. The Backpacker. Strong hiker. Carries pack, tent, food, overnight gear. Cruises over trails where many of us have trouble carrying a sweatshirt.

K. The Model Hiker. Don't get me wrong. I have nothing against fashion. There's no reason why a person's entire outfit, including boots, pack, raingear, socks, underwear (?), and hiking companions shouldn't all be new, clean, expensive, and color coordinated. After all, I get those catalogs too. Maybe it's just envy.

L. The Earnest Talker. Two or more hikers who like and respect each other and who don't get together as much as they'd like. Linked together by non-stop, wide ranging conversation, they talk up one mountain and down the next, for hours on end, but somehow never seem to finish what they have to say.

M. The Rookie. Keeps looking at the last mountain and saying, "I can't believe we hiked all that way." Looks in the hut for a wastebasket to deposit trash. Wonders how they get all that food up there.

Of course there are other categories that are not included here. For example, there are the hikers who always use a walking stick, and there are the hikers who always bring their dog, and there are photographers, and there are guidebook addicts. In fact, believe it or not, there are even people who make up lists as they trudge along.

APPALACHIAN TRAIL, POMFRET

15 October 1988

by Roma Pulling

There were so many dark days this fall that we felt very fortunate to have a partly sunny one, and the temperature was ideal. Nine people met at the park in Rutland, and a tenth hiker met us at the trailhead on Route 12.

With so much driving necessary to get to the section of the AT that we were interested in, we didn't want to plan a long hike and decided on the roughly four miles starting on the Pomfret Road 1.6 miles north of the store in South Pomfret. I grew up not far away but had never hiked this trail. Much of it had been relocated since our guidebook was printed.

Our route led us across Pomfret Brook on rocks, and across Bartlett Brook Road and Barnard Stage Road to Route 12. We crossed at least two hills with sometimes steep ascents. To our surprise the trail was barred in several places by barbed wire and electric fence. In a yard between a dilapidated house and barn we had to clamber over an old wooden gate. And we had what was for most of us a first encounter with a stile. This led up and over a stone wall into a pasture which we shared with a herd of Black Angus cattle while we enjoyed the perfectly gorgeous view. At this point we weren't far from Route 12 and the end of our hike.

On our way back to Rutland we had one more chance to appreciate the fall foliage.

HUNTING THROUGH HISTORY

12 November 1988

by Roma Pulling

Twenty people gathered on a crisp but sunny opening day of deer season. While three hunters checked in at the fire station with their kill, a hostess in pseudo-colonial costume greeted participants in our first-ever historical field trip.

We visited the Fort Rutland marker in front of the Armory and talked about the location and dimensions of the fort and then headed west and south in our cars. At Evergreen Cemetery it was noted that the gravestones of our first settlers, James and Mercy Mead, do not seem to be as old as their death dates would indicate. At Center Rutland Falls we inspected the abutments of former bridges and discussed the location of Fort Ranger. On to the West Proctor Road and the site of James Mead's home and then to the grave of a member of Rogers' Rangers off the Middle Road in Clarendon. (continued, p.2)

As it was nearly noon by this time, we stopped beside the road (??!) for lunch and directed our attention north. We were fortunate to have an electrical engineer with us who could add to my limited information on Davenport's invention of the electric motor. The work shop where the motor was built is in Forest Dale. It is commemorated by a granite marker. I was indebted to this same engineer for help at the two iron furnaces we visited in Pittsford and Forest Dale as his study had been extensive.

Other afternoon stops were at Fort Vengeance in Pittsford, the Stephen Douglas birthplace in Brandon, and the restoration of Ann Story's cabin in Salisbury.

This seemed to be a pleasant interlude while we waited for a safe date to enter the woods.

COVERED DISH SUPPER, RUTLAND

19 November 1988

by Sue Thomas

GMC events involving food are traditionally well attended, but this year we had a record number of participants. Perhaps it was because the setting was a bit more civilized than in years past, when we crammed ourselves in among the stored bunks at Rotary Cabin and attempted to eat our dinners with mittens on until the temperamental stove heated up.

In any case, the turnout at the Unitarian Church in Rutland this year was large, which is always a good thing at a pot luck because it means MORE FOOD. If this trend continues, perhaps we'll have to start planning a rigorous moonlight hike after the meal to atone!

Instead, after a wonderful feast, Sandy Partridge took us all to New Zealand, via slides of his recent three day hike on the Milford Track. I'm sure he could have sold plane tickets immediately after the show because his excellent slides of the spectacular scenery made many of us anxious to head down under. His slides showed a wide variety of climates, from rain forests and spectacular waterfalls to snow covered glaciers and mountain lakes. He even found a Sutherland Falls there, which ironically was the original name of Proctor, Vermont.

All in all it was a great evening of food, new and old friends, and beautiful scenery, thanks to everyone who contributed goodies and especially to Sandy for sharing his New Zealand adventure with all of us.

NICKWACKETT MOUNTAIN, CHITTENDEN

4 December 1988

by Stephen Pulling

I had never been to the top of Nickwackett when I agreed to lead a club hike there. Being the conscientious type, I went to scout out the mountain, but not knowing where I was going, it took me a while to find the top. When I finally got to the summit it was cold, pouring rain, and foggy, but I could clearly see there was no lookout or even a place for a view. Later, my coach in the endeavor, Jerry Parker, informed me the lookout wasn't on the summit but on the west ridge. My second scouting trip was much more successful and after seeing the spectacular views I couldn't wait to lead the club up Nickwackett.

December fourth was a cold, partly sunny morning. perfect for winter hiking. We drove up the Middle Road in Chittenden, left half the cars at the intersection of the snowmobile trail and spotted the rest about four miles away.

We climbed immediately, up an old logging road. I gave everyone the option of climbing to the uneventful summit, but I had no takers, thank goodness. We hiked up and over the south knee of Nickwackett and bushwhacked to a nice lookout just above Rowe's development off the West Road. Beautiful views of the Rutland valley from the north were displayed there.

We then bushwhacked back to the logging road and followed it for about a mile where we bushwhacked again up to an area called White Pastures. From there, you get the most spectacular views of the valley south to Danby, west to Bird Mountain and Grandpa's Knob, and, believe it or not, north to Brandon. We could have stopped for lunch while taking in the sights but a frigid wind drove us to a more protected spot to start a fire and cook lunch.

After lunch we hiked due north in the general direction of our spotted cars. One more bushwhack to a lookout with views of Brandon, and it was a short quarter mile downhill to the vehicles. If you like easy, short hikes with marvelous views, Nickwackett Mountain - White Pastures is a must.

TO THE DORSET NATURAL BRIDGE IN UNNATURAL TEMPERATURES

11 December 1988

by Sue Thomas

When I saw the thermometer barely reading 0° on the morning of my hike, I doubted that anyone would want to go. This, however, was not the first time the foolishness... er, hardness of the Killington Section has surprised me. Eight people braved the cold to accompany me to the Natural Bridge near Emerald Lake. We parked the cars at the State Park and set out wondering why we were there, where the strong wind made it feel well below zero, and I for one was not sure I'd be able to coax my car to start again when we returned. Once we got into the woods, though, we were sheltered from the wind, bringing the temperature back up to the balmy 0° we expected. Oh boy.

The trail begins easily, but soon starts climbing steeply, and I chose to ignore complaints about the steepness since at least it warmed us up. Fast!

When complaints got more frequent, I had to resort to the old "just around the next bend" and "it's all level from here" trick, which must have worked because everyone made it to the natural bridge, which is small but spans an impressive gorge. We didn't linger long, and voted unanimously not to have a fire because it was just too darned cold to stand around unless actually in the fire.

The return trip was faster but chilly, and after a quick cookie break at the cars we fired up the heaters and went home to warm up.

CAROLING

17 December 1988
by Virginia Scott

We met at the City Park for our caroling on a beautiful clear but cold night. We were happy to have quite a few men with us. In fact, it was the best turnout for caroling in a while, with 13 or 14 in all.

In three cars, we went to sing to Vera Perkins, who graciously asked us in and joined us in singing the old favorites. Then to Beverly Manor to sing to Doris Phillips. On to Mrs. Al-lard, then on to Mr. and Mrs. Nyiri. We checked at Jim Frink's but they weren't home. Our last place was Thelma Valiquette's.

We closed the evening at my house with cocoa, coffee, tea and munchies. I think everyone enjoyed themselves all evening.

Even though we had no snow I think we had the Christmas spirit.

MOONLIGHT HIKE, PROCTOR

23 December 1988
by Stephen Pulling

I was a little concerned that, so close to Christmas, the turnout on this hike wouldn't be all that great. Much to my surprise fourteen hearty souls [28 hearty soles --Ed.] showed up on what started out to be a cloudy night. All weather forecasts predicted a cloudy night but just as we left the cars the clouds cleared and the most beautiful full moon appeared.

This year's winter moonlight hike was to a place I call Proctor Highledge. It is a cleared area on top of a ledge, high above the village of Proctor west of town. There is a road all the way to the top used by jeeps and ATVs. From the top you can see the villages of Proctor and Pittsford, parts of Rutland and West Rutland, and in the moonlight you could see the summits of Pico Peak, Mendon Mt., and Killington Peak.

It was fun looking off in the distance and discussing where we thought lights were located. We started a fire to boil water for hot chocolate and ate Christmas cookies. This was one of the first moonlight hikes I've been on that wasn't to one of our shelters on the Long Trail, but I think this was a nice change.

HANCOCK BRANCH TRAIL

7 January 1989
by Herb Ogden, Jr.

Despite only an inch of snow in Rutland and not much more in the nearby hills, everyone showed up with skis or snowshoes as ordered. The 7 skiers were not disappointed; the 3 snowshoers just walked through the half foot of snow that we happily found up in Hancock. Our goal was the logging road that leaves the Texas Gap Road and continues to follow the Hancock Branch of the White River some 2 miles northwesterly.

Exbridge was what some of us decided to call the neighborhood we visited. A ski touring guide had listed five bridges on Forest Service Road 212, but the second was missing and the fourth no longer reached all the way across. Luckily, the Hancock Branch was frozen solidly enough that we could cross on the ice. A half-dozen gullies, where culverts had evidently been removed, also presented challenges, but one diehard even made it past the fifth bridge without removing his skis. (This is all by way of explanation why the walkers made it back before the skiers even though they had only 10 minutes head start on the downhill trip.)

A cloudy day with gently falling snow limited our views to a few glimpses toward Kirby Peak, some 1200 feet above us. Nearby views included the track of a turkey that had taken much the same route as we, and a few deer tracks.

After the fifth bridge, which was well on its way to joining the ranks of the ex-bridges, the road pitched uphill to slab along the east side of the narrowing valley, and became overgrown with saplings. In response, the skiers became walkers too, and we made an exception to the rule that walkers should stay out of ski tracks. As even the walking wasn't good, we soon contented ourselves with a view down the valley and turned around. Lunch soon followed, with hot drinks from the soot-blackened denizen of the Section's pack basket and a few hot dogs roasted over the fire.

On the downhill trip, one of our number unintentionally changed the shape of his ski and went the final half mile tipless. Of course, nobody skied down to Texas Falls, the wonderfully frozen final stop of the trip.

ENVIRONMENTAL WEEKEND AT SEYON RANCH IN GROTON

by Sue Carey

The weekend of 25-26 February 1989 has been reserved for an environmental learning program at Seyon Ranch. Last year several people I know went and enjoyed it so much that I thought the Killington Section would be interested. The lodge is heated with a furnace so you don't have to worry about getting cold at night. We haven't finalized the program yet, but it could include winter tracking, bird banding, star identification, or Vermont mammals. If you have a preference, let me know.

The cost includes the program, four meals, and a heated lodge. You should bring a sleeping bag and skis. Snowshoes are available at the ranch.

Prices are $45 per adult, $27 per child under 12, and $10 per preschooler.

It sounds like a great way to spend a winter weekend. Please let me know by 17 February if you want to go. Phone Sue Carey at 446-2830.

DECISION ON LONG TRAIL RELOCATION AT WALLINGFORD GULF EXPECTED SOON

by Herb Ogden, Jr.

At a 2 December 1988 meeting for landowners, hikers, and other interested parties, the U.S. Forest Service and the National Park Service announced that their combined decision on relocating the Long Trail / Appalachian Trail at Wallingford Gulf would be made in early 1989. According to a 6 December 1988 letter from the U.S. Forest Service, the Environmental Assessment recommendation was to be made later in December.

At the meeting at the Wallingford School, where the Killington Section was represented by President Rob Carey and a half-dozen other members, discussion centered on the best route for the Trail from the Wallingford Gulf Road (Vt. 140) to the top of the Keewaydin Trail on White Rocks Mountain. This segment, within the Green Mountain National Forest purchase boundary, is the responsibility of the Forest Service. The planned relocation north of the Gulf Road, over Bear Mountain, is the responsibility of the National Park Service, which has bought a large tract where the northerly part of the relocation is planned.

The fifty-odd people present proposed a number of alternatives including (described northbound)

1. rerouting the Trail onto or near the Keewaydin Trail to the White Rocks Picnic Area, then generally north, crossing the Gulf Road not far east of the Sugar Hill Road;

2. rerouting the Trail onto the upper part of the Keewaydin Trail, then east along Bully Brook and then through the Wilson property (west of the present LT) to Sugar Hill Road, then along an existing 200' wide easement (just west of the present LT) through the Bluhm property, then west along the Abatiell property line to a Gulf Road crossing at an old dam substantially west of the present crossing;

3. rerouting the Trail from east of Greenwall Shelter onto the McClure property, then onto the 200' easement;

4. keeping the Trail where it is south of Sugar Hill Road, then using the 200' easement.

Some of the problems presented were:

1. the present location is bad because it entails using a public road north of the Gulf Road;

2. the present location is bad because, from the Butterworths' to Sugar Hill Road, the easement is only the width of the Butterworth private road, along which there might be development (McClures and Butterworths say at most two lots could be made from the McClure property facing the Butterworth Road, and the best building sites would be away from the road; the Forest Service seems less sure);

3. as Rob Carey and Herb Ogden pointed out, relocation on the Keewaydin Trail is bad because the steep grade promotes erosion and discourages casual day hikers, and because the Trail then passes nowhere near Greenwall Shelter;

4. Abatiell will not sell a mere easement across his crucially important property but insists the government buy the entire property south of the Gulf Road (the U.S.F.S. said Abatiell had been "intransigent, to a certain degree"; it prefers not to exercise its power to condemn property like this);

5. Some Wallingford taxpayers want to minimize the government's outright purchase of land because that land is then removed from the town's tax rolls;

6. Some people don't realize that the Trail easement need not be the full 1000' wide that is authorized.

Although those present were reluctant to speak up at first, they soon found their voices and a lively discussion ensued. Some had very different views, but they were generally courteous to one another and attempted to understand others' views.

Congratulations to the Forest Service, to the Park Service, and to those present for a productive evening.

MAIN CLUB PROJECTS IN OUR AREA

FOR 1989

from a letter by Ray Auger,
G.M.C. Field Supervisor

Early Spring: Spring Lake Clearing Prescribed Burn. Joint project with the G.M.C., A.T.C., U.S. Forest Service, and National Park Service. Volunteers are needed to assist, but the burn depends on the weather, so a firm date cannot be set.

Spring (date to be set): Clarendon Gorge area cleanup, bank stabilization, etc., with volunteers from the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. "Pioneers."

6 May: Ray Auger and the A.T.C.'s Kevin Peterson will hold a trail scouting and corridor monitor workshop in the Sherburne River Road (Quimby Mountain) area. Details in February Long Trail News.

29 June - 3 July and 6 - 10 July: Route 103 to Clarendon Shelter reroute. G.M.C./A.T.C. volunteer crew will complete major construction begun last summer and open the reroute. This is a priority, so the crew will stay as long as it takes. The Main Club would like the Section to finish any brushing, blazing, etc., and to build two fence stiles just north of Route 103.

Mid to late summer: Scouting potential LT reroute from Route 140 in Wallingford Gulf to Minerva Hinchey Shelter over Bear Mountain. Construction may begin in 1990.

Volunteers should call Steve Pulling, Killington Section Trails & Shelters Chairman, at 773-6997.

MOUNTAIN TOP HIKE

29 January 1989

by Bernie Donahue

We went from the Stuart Reynolds property to the Chittenden - Mountain Top Road. Six made the hike, circling around the east side of the Chittenden Reservoir by Lefferts Pond and then back to the Reynolds property. It was a warm and sunny day, unlike most late January days in this locality. Boots were the footwear of the day.

Jerry Parker persuaded some of the group to leave the trail to observe trees clawed by bear. Then back to the trail to meet up with the rest. About five miles were covered in this delightful hike on such a splendid Sunday in mid-winter.

WHEELERVILLE ROAD AND EAST

4 February 1989

by Herb Ogden, Jr.

My luck in scheduling ski tours on the few weekends of this year when we had skiable snow continued to hold, though the cover was a mite thin in places where sun or wind had gotten at the snow. And my skis are a little thinner in places as a result, probably.

Our party drove in about a mile on the Wheelerville Road from Route 4, parking just short of a bridge. We skied northeasterly up a well-defined woodroad through nice evergreens, eventually reaching some ski touring trails maintained (at least formerly) by the Cortina Inn. We then encountered a welter of dog tracks and finally the dog, a very happy little beagle, and its master, apparently hunting rabbits.

We next encountered some abandoned machinery and realized our sylvan sojourn was at an end when we wound up behind the state highway garage on Route 4. At least that gave Sue Thomas the chance to photograph some old cars for a photography class scavenger hunt. Heading more to the south, we followed another woodroad across a brook and up onto a shoulder with a few views of Blue Ridge to the north for our lunch spot.

Retracing our route a good deal faster on the downhill, we recrossed what seems to be the old ski trail from the Wheelerville Road to Sherburne Pass, slid through the evergreens, explored a side road that ended at the brook, where the bridge was long gone, and finally came out on the Wheelerville Road safe, sound, and invigorated.

"SLIDING" (?) PARTY

11 February 1989

by Steve Pulling

This year's sliding party was quite different, to say the least. As in most winter activities this year, we had to change our plans a bit. We tried sliding down a hill on the Miner Farm in Brandon, but a lack of good snow cover caused us to lose interest very fast. We stood around talking more than sliding, so I talked people into taking a hike around Fern Lake and Lake Dunmore. For some reason, hiking on lakes is almost fun as hiking around them.

We found more snow on the lakes than we did on the sliding hill, which surprised most of us. We stopped and talked to some ice fisherman, and Mara Carey saw her first fish caught through the ice on Fern Lake. A leisurely walk across Fern Lake among the fishing shanties and up over the hill to Lake Dunmore and back completed our sliding party day.

MEETINGHOUSE ROCK

4 March 1989

by Roma Pulling

Morning brought some unpleasant, sleety weather, and late afternoon brought rain. But for several hours between storms we enjoyed fine weather for our hike.

Eight people gathered at the park for the ride to Shrewsbury. We drove the North Shrewsbury - West Bridgewater Road as far as it was plowed and parked there. There was enough snow for skiing, and two people did.

At the rock, we briefly reviewed the history of the place. Two of the men obligingly climbed to the top of the rock so we could see what it was like in 1818, when Elder Abiatha Knapp stood on the rock and conducted church meetings in good weather. It is reported that baptisms and even a wedding were performed there.

After our short history lesson, Jerry Parker showed us another route back to our cars which was much more interesting than retracing our steps would have been. Near the end of the hike, we found an ice sculpture which provided a photo opportunity. An overflowing well had frozen into an interesting formation at least ten feet high.

At the conclusion everyone seemed to have enjoyed our trip back in time.

SUGAR ON SNOW

12 March 1989

by Sue Thomas

After several years of writing up the Sugar on Snow party for Smoke & Blazes, it's hard to find anything new to say. We came, we ate, we went home vowing to do 300 situps before bedtime. But year after year the sugar on snow party continues to be a popular event, drawing a good crowd including several participants who attend no other club activities.

Once again this year we all owe thanks to Jan and John Martin. Jan does such a good job of boiling down the sap every year that I'm afraid there's no escape for her! We're all very grateful for her continued dedication and for all of John's help with the setting up and dismantling.

MOUNT TABOR TOUR

19 March 1989

by Jerry Parker

Rain was the forecast for Saturday and Sunday, which was more or less what I expected, since everyone knows it always rains when Jerry leads a hike, but the last day of winter turned out to be a beautiful day for a hike. Eight of us arrived at the Mt. Holly - East Wallingford section of the Green Mt. National Forest Mount Tabor Area, where we parked.

We were headed to a small log cabin with a peculiar reputation. The first time I saw this cabin was on a snowmobile ride. I was told that an escaped convict had built it and lived there for over a year before he was captured.

In early February I decided to find the direct trail to the cabin. I met some snowmobilers who gave me directions. I was cross country skiing, so it seemed like a nice easy hike. There were a few more snowmobiles at the cabin. I mentioned the story of the convict. They told me "someone was pulling my chain," then they told me their version. A young carpenter from Weston decided to give up working for a living, so he built this cabin and lived off the land for over a year, until word got around. The state found out and made him move. He then pitched a tent in a different area. He was then caught burglarizing homes. With winter coming on, he asked to be put in jail. If he wasn't a convict, he is now!

We got on our way and met the snowmobiler who gave me directions in February. He was giving his dog a ride in a home-made trailer, a plastic barrel mounted on skis. [Jerry has a great photo of this. --Ed.]

The trail was icy. Roma put on creepers that she brought. The rest of us wished we had some too. We arrived at the cabin, which has a sign "Out Law Camp," about 1 p.m. I started a fire which went out because of wet wood. It was restarted by Helen, a new hiker claiming she was a "Girl Scout." With five packs of matches, a Swiss Army knife, and food enough for a week in her pack, I think she was a survivalist. We ate lunch and enjoyed our hot drink.

On our way back, on the first small hill we came to, Bernie had a board he took from the cabin. (Doesn't this make him an outlaw, too?) He used it as a sled and beat us down the hill. We called it a "Bernie Board," and other hikers young at heart used it until they found pieces of plywood, their own "Bernie Boards." Roma and I were busy trying to get pictures of them whizzing by.

We did make it back all in one piece. The hikers all agreed that it was a great hike. Hope my luck continues with good weather on any future hikes I lead.

JARVIS SNODGRASS MEMORIAL EXCURSION

1 April 1989

by Herb Ogden, Jr.

At 11:11 a.m. on the first day of April, a drizzly-looking morning, almost twenty hikers gathered for what may become an April Fool's tradition honoring one of the less-known names in the pantheon of Vermont political luminaries.

Leaving our cars on the Upper Cold River Road in Shrewsbury, we hiked up the old public road to the Percival W. Clement Memorial Shelter. We could have skied, as a few inches of very dense snow covered the ground up there. Luckily, the snow was not sloppy, and even the out-of-state guest with the low sneakers, whom I had warned to expect soggy socks, had no trouble on the road.

On the way up, the Excursion Executive (known as Hike Leader except on April Fool's) pointed out the remains of a house where Jarvis Snodgrass did not sleep, as well as a ditch that was probably the millrace for a sawmill that shows on the 1869 Beers Atlas map..

Somebody nice, perhaps the shade of Snodgrass himself, had left a fire burning merrily on the hearth, cheering up the inside of the cavernous shelter and letting us have our hot chocolate and soup much faster than usual.

The group then gathered around the Lieutenant Governor Jarvis Snodgrass Memorial Gazebo to pay its respects. Just then, the sun came out for the only time on the trip, providing a fine photo opportunity at this unusual monument.

The venerable outhouse seems in good shape. My father, Herbert Ogden of Hartland, bought it from an elderly Shrewsbury lady around 1966 for $5.00, or $2.50 per hole. We hauled it up to the shelter on the bed of a Volkswagen pickup, no easy task -- it's hardwood.

The Excursion Executive illuminated the obscurity of Snodgrass's life by passing out this article:

SNODGRASS, JARVIS EZEKIEL

Born in Avery's Gore, Vermont, on 29 February 1840; died in Mendon, Vermont, on 13 July 1919.

Lieutenant Governor of Vermont, 1919.

Snodgrass's early life is obscure. His parents were Gideon Uriah Snodgrass and Belinda U. Snarkhunter Snodgrass. They earned a meager living by travelling around northern New England digging ramps (wild onions), which they sold to Millerites, misanthropes, and others who wanted to avoid wordly society.

The place of Snodgrass's birth is unknown. While the family bible records that he was born in Avery's Gore, there were at the time of his birth Avery's Gores in Addison, Washington, Franklin, and Essex Counties, the result of the General Assembly's attempt to compensate a certain Avery for its failure to find a whole town to grant him. It is not known which of these Avery's Gores was Snodgrass's natal non-town. Because his parents' odiferous occupation kept them constantly on the move, they were in later years unable to remember in which gore they made their abode when their second son, Jarvis Ezekiel, first saw the light of day. Unfortunately, no one else was ever located who could state where Snodgrass was born, as the Snodgrasses' vile-smelling vocation encouraged few people to make their lasting acquaintance.

Snodgrass's youth and schooling were largely unremarkable insofar as they are known at all. His only youthful accomplishments of note were his ability to play the left-handed ocarina and his second prize in the South Northfield, Vermont, grammar school's annual declamation contest. Snodgrass won this prize for his stirring recitation of President William Henry Harrison's inaugural address. Critics later alleged that he won the prize only because none of the judges wanted to sit through Harrison's inaugural, which was then the longest presidential inaugural on record. It is said the judges fled the hall after declaring young Snodgrass the winner for second place and reminding the aspiring orator of the fate that befell President Harrrrison after he delivered that inaugural, namely death. It is also said that, in their haste, the judges not only forewent hearing the other speakers who were to follow Snodgrass and thus awarded no first prize, but even forewent the refreshments that were to follow the declamations. The truth of this charge cannot be verified. The record reveals only that no first prize was awarded that year.

Keen ambition, and a keen sense of smell, led Snodgrass to leave the family business after finishing school. He became a clerk, then a partner, and finally sole owner of a haberdashery in the village of Wilder, catering to the dashing Dartmouth students of the post-Civil War era. The business, Wilder Fashions, failed soon after he assumed sole control, reputedly because Snodgrass, who was extremely bowlegged, stocked only those pants and breeches that fitted himself.

Soon, however, Snodgrass moved to Corinth and established a successful printing business, securing the exclusive franchise to print posters for Colonel Frump's Gargling Oil for Horses and other popular patent medicines of the day. Snodgrass also printed a newspaper, the Orange County Oracle, with its main office in Goose Green.

Snodgrass soon became active in politics. He was elected to the Corinth School Board after a campaign in which he pledged to save voters' money by demolishing the old Corinth Free Academy by using materials from the old Academy to build its replacement, and by building the new Academy before tearing down the old one. In succeeding years, he was elected Fence Viewer, Weigher of Bark, Justice of the Peace, and, finally, State Representative (1887-1919). As State Representative, he almost singlehandedly defeated a vicious bill in the General Assembly that would have made all privies comply with a strict building code calling for, among other things, separate compartments for each sex. Snodgrass's campaign against separate but equal (and equally cold) accommodations and his championing of traditional unisex outhouses led his admirers to call him "the Privy Counselor"; his detractors preferred to deride him as "Old One-Holer."

Privy politics had brought Snodgrass statewide prominence by 1918. In that year, Percival W. Clement, the Republican candidate for governor, who was from western Vermont, sought a running mate from the eastern part of the state. As the Orange County Oracle (now dubbed the "Outhouse Oracle" by Snodgrass's admirers) pointed out, Snodgrass was the natural candidate for lieutenant governor.

As Lieutenant Governor, Snodgrass had the briefest tenure in Vermont history. On the day he took the oath of office, those whom he had employed in the election campaign discovered (from bitter personal experience with their bankers) that Snodgrass's chief source of funds had been five and ten dollar bills produced in his print shop. Snodgrass protested that this had been done by employees without his knowledge. Few believed his assertion of innocence, however, for he was the sole employee.

Snodgrass nevertheless refused to resign. With his presence in the State House a growing embarrassment to the Grand Old Party, Republican leaders soon found a way to remove him from office. Noting that, because he had been born on 29 February, he had had only 19 birthdays when elected to the lieutenant governorship and was thus two years short of the age of majority, required for officeholding, the Republican leaders asked the General Assembly to nullify his election. Snodgrass protested that he was in fact 78 years old. That claim rang hollow, however, when, charged with counterfeiting the five and ten dollar bills with which he had remunerated his election staff, he asserted that he could not be prosecuted as an adult felon because he had not passed his twenty-first birthday. Charges were, in fact, dismissed.

Relieved of his office and of prosecution, and feeling young at heart, Snodgrass decided to use his involuntary retirement to make a hiking tour of the recently-begun Long Trail along the Green Mountains. Tragedy struck, however, as Snodgrass ascended the south slope of Little Killington. Finding a large crop of ramps near the path, and apparently reliving his childhood, he feasted on the plants to such an extent that he succumbed to what was later diagnosed as the first case of terminal aromatititis. The place of his passing was for years thereafter known as Consultation Point, so called because his physicians consulted there regarding the best treatment for this novel malady.

Snodgrass is memorialized today only by the Lieutenant Governor Jarvis Snodgrass Memorial Gazebo, a sanitary annex to the Governor Percival W. Clement Memorial Shelter in Shrewsbury, Vermont, a short distance down the Long Trail from where Snodgrass breathed his last. A scentful sentry, Snodgrass's memorial stands beside the memorial to the governor beside whom Snodgrass briefly served, white, majestic, and, fittingly, somewhat odiferous.

MAIN CLUB PLANS AREA PROJECTS

from letters by Ray Auger,
G. M. C. Field Supervisor

1. Spring Lake Clearing Prescribed Burn

This is a joint project with the Appalachian Trail Conference, the U. S. Forest Service, and the National Park Service. Volunteers are needed, but the burn depends on the weather, so no firm date can be set. To volunteer, please call Killington Section Trails & Shelters Chairman Steve Pulling or the G.M.C. office at (802) 223-3463.

2. Clarendon Gorge

American Tel. & Tel. Pioneers may return in May to plant trees and control erosion. The Pioneers would like to find a Killington Section member to volunteer as bridge and gorge area adopter. [Just who is responsible here? --Ed.]

3. Little Killington Reroute

The Long Trail must be moved off the land of Killington, Ltd. by 1 July 1989, according to National Park Service's agreement with Killington, Ltd.! The G.M.C. will probably do this unplanned major project. Consequently, all other planned crew projects may have to change. Kevin Peterson and Ray Auger will lay out a reroute as weather permits. [Killington Section input? --Ed.]

4. Route 103 - Clarendon Shelter - Beacon Hill Reroute

Long Trail Patrol crew will complete this project at least as far as Clarendon Shelter between 29 June and 10 July. Killington Section participation is invited, especially on the two weekends. Killington Section is to build two stiles as well as brush and blaze the reroute.

The National Park Service has bought Beacon Hill, so the reroute may be extended north from Clarendon Shelter to the top of the hill this summer. Killington Section is invited to participate in planning, cutting, and blazing the reroute.

5. Wallingford Gulf (Route 140) to Minerva Hinchey Reroute

Scouting may begin in mid to late summer. Construction may begin in 1990. [From Ray's March update of his January letter, status is not clear. --Ed.]

SMOKE & BLAZES EDITOR'S REPORT

9 April 1989

by Herb Ogden, Jr, Editor

Because my wife Cathy Thomas and I will be in Germany -- maybe even hiking in Germany -- on the day of the Annual Meeting, I submit this report to apologize for my absence and explain what I've been up to since 1987.

First, I want to thank my predecessor, Carol Chapman, for developing a good format for Smoke & Blazes, for handing over the files in apple-pie order, and, above all, for all the work she put in. Until becoming editor, I had only a vague idea of the hours that this little publication demands. I also want to thank Jake Sherman, past Assistant Editor - Typist, for the time and care he put into this publication. Even with a word processor, it's a lot.

Second, I want to thank the volunteers who pretty much take over when the word processing is done. Sue Thomas, our very talented and seemingly tireless illustrator, puts little miracles in the blank places that I leave in the text. She then takes the copy to the printer. After I get it back from the printer, I turn it over to four or five volunteers, most of whom are listed in this edition, and they collate the bulletin, stick on the address labels supplied by Secretary-Treasurer Wally Rogers, stamp the bulletins, and take them to the post office. Then we all have tea, coffee, and snacks at my house. Many hands really do make light work.

Third, I want to thank the hike leaders and others who write the articles. Thanks also to Roma Pulling, who reminds those who are inclined to keep their doings a secret. I know many of the hike leaders don't have little time to write up their hikes, but that's the only way we know what happened. When I rearrange your articles, please understand that the reason is usually either too little or too much space on a page. And when I join Roma in remind you to get your copy in -- only I don't remind, I nag --remember that I need at least a week to edit the bulletin once I have all the reports. As a lawyer, I have to work my schedule around court appearances and deadlines, and S&B can't come first. So please, please, pay attention to copy deadlines!

WET WALK TO NOWHERE

16 April 1989

by Sue Thomas

My hike to White Rocks in Wallingford was meant to be a quick jaunt out to the cliffs to enjoy the view before the trail was closed for the season. Every year young peregrine falcons are raised on the cliffs in an effort to reestablish the species in Vermont, and the trail is closed so that they won't be disturbed. The falcons had nothing to worry about that day -- my merry band never got near enough to disturb them!

We started out in the rain up a trail marked 1.6 miles. As we climbed, the rain gradually turned to sleet and the mud underfoot to ice, then snow. We passed the 1.6 mile point on Jim's trusty pedometer with still no sign of the Long Trail junction, the hikers getting wetter, and the falcons no doubt getting amused.

By the time we reached the Long Trail, the pedometer read 3.2 miles and my soggy group revolted. We decided it wasn't worth continuing on to the cliffs to look at the insides of clouds, so we slogged back down and had a wet lunch at the picnic area, while the peregrines had a good laugh.

P.S. - I reported the discrepancy in mileage to the Forest Service, who maintain the Keewaydin Trail. Haven't been back to see if they've changed the sign.

ROCKY POND, PINE HILL

22 April 1989

By Ira Hawley

The destination was familiar to many hikers, but the route to get there this time was different for most. One does not at first think of starting a hike through a cemetery, but we did this time. We passed through one of the older sections of Evergreen Cemetery and continued on through the western portions of Rutland City. The wind was strong and with an air temperature of 35 there was a wind chill factor 15 which is uncomfortable for late April.

On a gradual upgrade we crossed a power line and then went into a pleasant wooded area, continuing upgrade easily. At a half mile more, we crossed a second power line with a nice view to the west, of a portion of Route 4B and Hanley and Herrick Mountains. The trailing arbutus along the way was admired and carefully protected by everyone. It was too early for many wildflowers to appear but we came across a good display of coltsfoot in the early bloom stage.

A cold breeze coming across Rocky Pond was certainly no invitation for an early swim. We continued on to Muddy Pond and a short bushwhack to another power line, which was to be our lunch stop. As we approached this area a sudden snow squall caused an almost white-out which lasted about twenty minutes, and the ground was white. As we were finishing lunch in the protection of a small spruce thicket the snow stopped and the sun came out to dry our clothing and provided us with a good view to the east and west.

We returned via the same route and were overtaken again by several small snow showers. Sorry, Emma, for the wet feet, but it is still too early for wading in the brook.

SECTION ANNUAL MEETING

29 April 1989

Because your editor lacks the minutes of the meeting and was in Germany at the time himself, the President's Annual Report will have to suffice, along with the news that Directors Rob Carey, Ray Catozzi, and W. Churchill Scott were reelected. The S&B Editor's Report appeared in the last issue of S&B.

ANNUAL REPORT 1988

The Killington Section completed another successful year. Under Steve Pulling's leadership, our Walk-Throughs and other work parties got the Trail in shape for the hiking season. Also we were able to help with the relocation north of Route 103 and at Kieffer Road in Shrewsbury.

The Kirk Fund continues to provide money for Trails and Shelters expenses, allowing the Section to finish the year with a surplus. Treasurer Wally Rogers suggested retaining the present dues structure. The Yard Sale profited $500 for the Long Trail Protection Fund, which was matched. Also matched was a donation by Central Vermont Public Service Corp. through their Employee Service Fund.

Our outings are well attended, about 10 - 12 people per trip. We schedule a variety of activities, one almost every week, including hikes, work parties, canoe trips, ski and snowshoe hikes.

This year an overnight canoe trip on the Battenkill was a highlight for many members.

Roma Pulling retired as Publicity Chairman after several years of excellent service in that function. That task is now ably being done by Olga Laird. Our newsletter, Smoke & Blazes, edited and word-processed by Herb Ogden, Jr., keeps all Section members well informed about upcoming events and past activities.

Looking ahead, perhaps this year or next we'll have a final agreement on Killington and Pico that we can all be content with.

BRISTOL NOTCH

13 May 1989

by Jerry Parker

After some confusion because of a flower walk scheduled to meet at the same location, ten hikers left South Main Street Park in Rutland and we picked up two more in Middlebury. We parked one half mile up the Bristol Notch Road. We decided to take the hard way up and go down the easy way. We had to walk 1/4 mile down the road to an overgrown logging road. One of the new hikers seemed tired out after the first incline, but she assured us she would make it all the way.

As we were slowly treading our way up, we heard a terrible scream from behind. Roma was startled by a garter snake and screamed, and the new hiker ran past everyone.

We had our own flower walk. Several kinds were in full bloom. Red and painted trillium, hobblebush and spring beauties were abundant.

Shortly we crossed the boundary marker of the Federal Wilderness at a lookout. There, the haze was lifting and the Middlebury hiker pointed out several landmarks. We ate lunch at the site of an abandoned loggers' camp that operated from the late 1800s to the early 1900s. Jim started a fire to roast hot dogs next to the old cookstove from the camp kitchen.

We continued on to the site of the 1944 airplane crash. We walked around the site, which covers 100 yards, checking the different parts. One can detect the path of the plane. One old tree was sheared off 25-30 feet and had a growth of new limbs. Behind this tree all the growth was much younger.

Next stop was a cave used by surveyors five years ago with bunks and an installed door. We then proceeded to a huge boulder that has an overhang. I managed to do some videotaping with my camcorder. Jim suggested that I should be in it too, so I climbed the rock for my debut.

We then stopped at a beaver dam that had signs of activity. We came across fresh moose tracks too. We noticed where they chewed bark off trees. Next to Gilman Pond; it was getting late. We came to the camp, which was occupied for the weekend by a father and two children. He let us have a look inside. He told us they saw a moose earlier. On our way out we came across tracks of a running moose. It probably stopped and watched us trudging by. Jim's odometer registered 6.6 miles when we got to the cars.

WORK PARTY: CROSSED-UP CROSSING

20 May 1989

by Jerry Parker

The Sunday of the special work party turned out to be a very hot day. I was a few minutes late and found John and Emma waiting by their car. We were discussing whether just the three of us should attempt installing the stiles when Al pulled in. We then left and parked across from the site near Clarendon Gorge. I drove my loaded truck to the field so the tools and lumber would be handy.

Since much of the work was done during the week, we only had to do some chiseling out of the tread mortise on the stringers. The pre-cut pieces fit perfectly, like a puzzle.

We had the four stringer sections partly assembled when the landowner came over. I told him who we were and what we were doing. He asked us to clean the area before we left. At 3:30 we had the first stile almost completed and figured the second one would go faster, as we were experienced. The landowner came back with his wife and son. They asked if we had a map marking the spot and so on. The wife even tried the steps and commented that they were nice but were in the wrong place and had to be taken down. The son found a survey pin about 25' from where we were and said another should be 200' up the fence. The space between was the right-of-way, and we were slightly off the site. We had to dismantle the stile and packed everything back in my truck.

On the Fourth of July I checked to see whether the crossing was marked. The markers were there, 25' from our original site.

The main club should have sent a map or information about the survey pins. If it had, we would have completed the stiles that day.

After Ray Auger called Steve Pulling, people from the main club and I put up both stiles on 9 July.

NOTE OF THANKS

by Steve Pulling, Trails & Shelters

The Killington Section has a new job designation -- Builder of Stiles -- and it has been awarded to Jerry Parker.

When the Park Service acquired a mere right of way across land just north of Route 103 instead of buying it outright and the owner chose to continue to use the land as pasture, the Killington Section had the task of finding someone capable of building two stiles to get hikers over the fences. Whereas most people had never even seen a stile, Jerry Parker was our man on the spot. He not only did an expert job of construction but endured considerable aggravation in the process.

GREEN MOUNTAIN AND LITTLE ROCK POND

10 June 1989

by John & Emma Hughes

The weather was cloudy and showers were forecasted when the group of seven hikers met at Main Street Park. We drove to the parking lot picnic area on U. S. Forest Service Road 10 in Mount Tabor and headed north.

A moderate climb to Green Mountain starts here and one reaches the top overlooking Little Rock Pond in about 4 miles. Along the way we saw views of Danby, Dorset Mountain, and the Great Valley of Vermont. The lower part of the trail was in hardwoods and as we reached the top it was thick softwood trees.

We reached a clearing which would normally have good long distance views, but they were limited because of overcast and fog. We went to another lookout where we had lunch. It was on some large rock ledges and we could see Little Rock Pond.

After lunch we had to descend along large rocks and ledges which were wet, so it took a little longer than usual. The lower end of these rocks has a detour which we all used. A book, Fifty Hikes in Vermont, by Ruth and Paul Sadlier describes this part as follows: "The way passes over a long rocky spine of ledge at 2.4 miles. To those who share our habits of imagination, this ledge resembles the back of some fairy tale monster. You'll have to hoist yourself up, using both arms and legs, over the continuing series of ledges. There are intermittent views to the east from open ledged areas as the trail twists through thick evergreen scrub growth."

The book described the trail up, while we were descending and now getting near the pond. The pond trail crosses a dam at its outlet and then joins the Long Trail.

At the Pond we saw a fisherman getting ready to use waders with a small raft. We visited Eric, the caretaker, at his campsite and watched a rabbit. After this we returned to the parking lot via the much used Long Trail, which was muddy from recent rainy weather.

While driving home on Route 7, we could look up and see the mountain we hiked on. I hope all enjoyed the hike.

WHIPPLE HOLLOW TO HUBBARDTON

18 June 1989

by Herb Ogden, Jr.

On a humid and not very promising-looking day, some ten hikers entrusted their fates and their dry clothes to me. I guess they returned with their fates in reasonably good shape, but not their dry clothes.

Our caravan passed through West Rutland and turned north on the westernmost road up Whipple Hollow. After what seemed like a long drive to those who hadn't been there before, we finally turned left from the main road to Florence, crested a hill, turned left again at a four corners, and parked near a house where the Town of Pittsford road maintenance ends. Our parking spot had a fine view east to the Green Mountains.

We ascended steeply out of Whipple Hollow on the old public road to Hubbardton, apparently long-disused by all but jeeps and trail bikes. Leading just south of a large camp, it took us past huge old trees and up a dugway to a dogleg. At a smaller camp next to a brook, the road became even less passable. The grade lessened, however, before we reached the crest of the Taconic Range.

Right about there, the rains came. We nevertheless plodded along the muddy road to the head of a pasture with what I described as a fine view west to the Adirondacks. The view had to be taken on faith, however. We then descended into Hubbardton, passing where the 1869 Beers Atlas shows a house. Dripping wet underbrush dissuaded us from trying to find it. Where Hubbardton starts to maintain the road (called Pittsford Road there) at a house, we said hello to the lady of the house, who was trying to persuade the rainwater to run somewhere else besides down the middle of the road that connected her with the rest of the world. She wasn't having great success.

Turning our backs on Hubbardton, we ascended back over the Taconic Range. The climb was enlivened by the passage of a jeep. Maybe it didn't deserve to make it all the way over, but apparently it did! Too bad about the ruts it left.

We didn't see much fauna. By way of flora, however, we found quantities of berry bushes, which would be very tempting on a drier day later in the season.

MYSTERY HIKE IN PLYMOUTH

25 June 1989

by Ira Hawley

Having become familiar with some of the trails in the Coolidge State Park in Plymouth, I became inquisitive about another trail I had seen on the map that became the "mystery" to me. I took a "look-see" myself and thought more people would enjoy what I found. Of the eleven hikers who met at the park, about half were my immediate family.

We passed through the north section of the park, which is north of Slack Hill. The terrain was mostly easy and the shady forest was most welcome on a warm, sunny day. Lunch spot was in nice quiet open woods. We soon came to an interesting trail that led us back down to the Bradley Hill Road, which we crossed into the open shelter area. We went on to another intersecting trail that took us on downhill to a ravine which some thought would be difficult. But with relative ease we went down, crossed a pretty brook, and mounted the other side.

Most spring flowers had blossomed earlier and were gone by now. The various ferns were in their prime with abundant growth and shades of green. An easy down hill walk on a clear trail returned us to our cars to complete a pleasant loop. The refreshing ice water from the thermos jug was welcome. We had a good time.

BURNT HILL AND SKYLINE LODGE:

THEY WERE THE SIZE OF CROWS, I SWEAR IT!

1 July 1989

by Sue Thomas

The Burnt Hill to Skyline Lodge hike started out benignly enough -- we dawdled at the trailhead picking strawberries, then set off merrily through the woods, little knowing that THEY were out there, watching and waiting for their chance. The trail began a gradual ascent, and we began to slow our pace -- just what THEY were waiting for to make their move. Out of nowhere they struck: the SHARKS OF THE AIR!! We were surrounded in seconds and it was all over in no time. We admitted defeat, and, having heard that they take no prisoners, we decided that the wisest course of action was a dignified retreat.

It was the first time I can recall a hike being called on account of bugs, but we decided we really weren't having fun. At least I think that's what we decided. It's a little hard to understand people with their mouths full of mosquitos.

Back down we went and three people went home to nurse their bites, but the rest of us decided to take a shot at the Skylight Pond Trail. Amazingly, the bugs weren't as bad there. (Not amazing actually; I think every mosquito in the state was on the Burnt Hill Trail!) We startled John and Emma Hughes by coming up behind them; they were on their way up to meet us at the lodge. We had a nice hike up, enjoyed supper on the porch of the lodge, and were just starting back down when the Careys arrived -- Mara climbed all the way up in a pink dress and an Indian Princess crown.

Smoke & Blazes

VOL. 42, NO. 3

KILLINGTON SECTION, GREEN MT. CLUB

OCTOBER, 1989

KILLINGTON SECTION ANNUAL MEETING

29 April 1989

Minutes by Wally Rogers, Secretary

The meeting was called to order at 7:15 p.m. by the president, Rob Carey. Twenty members were present. The minutes of the last annual meeting and a directors meeting were read and approved. The treasurer's report for the Killington Section and the Kirk Trails and Shelters Fund were approved.

Steve Pulling reported that the prescribed burn of Spring Lake Clearing occurred last week. Trail relocation work for the Section and the Long Trail Patrol is planned for the Route 140 to Minerva Hinchey and Route 103 to Clarendon Shelter stretches. More work is also necessary at the Clarendon Gorge Bridge. Plans for the spring 1989 walk-through were announced. Shelter caretakers-adopters are needed at Tucker-Johnson, Governor Clement, and Minerva Hinchey Shelters. Cooper Lodge and Clarendon Shelter are presently cared for.

Smoke & Blazes: Herb Ogden was absent [on a long-planned trip to Germany and submitted his report in the previous Smoke & Blazes. --Ed.]

Outings: Sue Thomas reported the need for the regular transfer of basket and supplies between leaders without her involvement. Plans will be made.

Main Club: Director Ray Catozzi was absent. Brian Fitzgerald, main club president, gave a report. The main club annual meeting is Memorial Day weekend at Johnson. New guide books and maps are out. The trail coordinator for the USFS is changing. Clarendon Shelter will probably be moved closer to the relocated trail. Action against the announced Killington relocation will continue on three fronts -- public information, legislator contact, and Freedom of Information Act requests.

The Section President's report was made by Rob Carey. [See last Smoke & Blazes. --Ed.] Jean Davies announced the intersectional was to be August 19-27 at the Betsy Cox Camp in Pittsford.

Nominated and elected unanimously for three year terms as directors were Rob Carey, Churchill Scott and Ray Catozzi.

The directors met and re-elected officers: Rob Carey - President, Steve Pulling - Vice-President, and Wally Rogers - Secretary-Treasurer. All other positions remain the same except that Roma Pulling asked to be relived of the publicity job. Persons will be sought for this position [and Olga Laird was found. --Ed.]

Refreshments were served, followed by a Gartlein/Rogers program of their recent Arizona trip.

BUCKLIN TRAIL TO KILLINGTON PEAK

9 July 1989

by Bernie Donahus

The two brook crossings on the Bucklin Trail were less of a challenge than expected. No one experienced wet feet. [Jerry Parker has since bridged the lower Brewers Brook crossing. --Ed.]

This particular Sunday was bright and calm. The view along the trail was obscured by heavy foliage until the last stretch. Thereafter, the members enjoyed the usual exciting views closer to the Killington pinnacle.

Once at the top, the usual groups and couples from other states were found. Leisurely eating lunch and visiting with first time Killington hikers passed 45 minutes or so. On return, the group stopped at the Cooper Lodge. Several out of state hikers were there. A short visit, and then back on the trail to Brewer's Corners. It was a delightful day.

GOLD MINES, BRIDGEWATER

30 July 1989

by Herb Ogden, Jr.

On a fine summer day, Churchill Scott led a caravan of some thirty hikers through Bridgewater Center and up the dirt road that heads west up a brook from there, to the main Bridgewater Gold Mines area. Many of these mines appear in the 1869 Beers Atlas of Windsor County. They were a by-product of the 1849 California Gold Rush. People in Bridgewater and Plymouth, including some who had returned from California, found gold in local streams. With visions of bazillions in bullion bubbling in their brains, they began to dig. They didn't find much gold, but they did leave some pretty impressive holes, and Churchill took us to what may be the best of them.

We puffed uphill on a well-engineered but now abandoned road, which merged in from the right. We bore left at a junction and right at another, passed a decaying shed, and soon found ourselves in the huge three-quarters stone foundation of a building that reportedly once housed animals and equipment for the mines. A few hundred feet east of there, Churchill led us to a horizontal mineshaft extending a couple hundred feet into the hillside.

Most of us explored the shaft to its end. It was damp and a little muddy in places, but the footing was pretty good and there was plenty of headroom. A few of the small fry were apprehensive about the big dark hole in the earth, but they, too couldn't resist following the flashlight beams into the mine.

After lunch in the huge old foundation, most of us backtracked a few feet to the road and then continued uphill to a height of land with several more mines on both sides of the road. The most impressive, west of the old road, was a wide vertical shaft with water in the bottom. A very rickety primitive ladder led from the rim down into the murky water. Nobody tried it out, thank goodness! At least three other mines lay at or just down (south) from the height of land. One, just east of the road, appeared to be a large, shallow pit, but maybe a submerged shaft opened off it.

We had a pleasant hike back down to the traveled road, grateful to Churchill for a day of unusual adventure.

THE HIKE THAT SORT OF WASN'T

1 August 1989

by Sue Thomas

The Killington Section Covert Operations Division staged a drill on August 1, cleverly disguised as a "supper hike." The purpose of the drill was to have a hike without telling anyone, then compile a list of all those inexplicably absent. I am able to report that the operation was a resounding success. [Only one person besides the Leader failed to be absent for the trip to a wonderful lookout over Chittenden Reservoir, which appeared in the Outing Schedule only after the hike took place, thanks to my slowness in finishing the S&B. --Ed.] A large list of names was compiled. Be advised everyone (and you know who you are) that this will be entered into your permanent record, which of course means that each and every one of you will be expected to take turns writing my hike reports from now on. Thank you.

SHREWSBURY

13 August 1989

by Jerry Parker

My hike was scheduled the same day as "Arts in the Park," so finding a spot to park near the fire station was almost impossible.

It rained all day Saturday. Finally it started clearing Sunday morning around 11 a.m. I decided to change my original route because we would have had to walk through a meadow of long grass. We went to a fire road off the CCC road which turned out to be perfect for a children's hike. I scheduled this easy hike especially for my niece Andrea, who at four loves the outdoors. Her brother Ross fell asleep on the way so my sister stayed in the car with him. Andrea and Mara lagged behind, busy exploring everything. Andrea caught a toad that she let go because, she said, "It was getting mad at me." Both sides of the road had plenty of raspberries so we made frequent stops to sample them.

We walked to the end of the road. It started to rain so we headed back. Luckily, it lasted only a few minutes. We met Andrea and Mara, who seemed to be best of friends.

John's odometer registered 3.4 miles when we got back to our cars.

INMAN POND, FAIR HAVEN

3 September 1989

by Ira Hawley

If, in fact, we really did miss the young lady who called and wanted to join this hike, we now offer an apology. We thought we had a good understanding about the meeting place in Fair Haven. We are real sorry we missed you.

Due to the Bicycle Race in Rutland City our escape route got fouled up and some of us got separated. However, everything came together at Fair Haven and we proceeded to Inman Pond. At once we got a good view of the Pond and traveled along the shore for a distance and then into the open along a service road. There were many mullion plants along the road that anyone might be able to imagine as cactus plants.

We had lunch in a shady area near the outlet of the pond. After this, we traveled through a pleasant area of open woodlands, then through an overgrown meadow taken up with goldenrod being enjoyed by numerous honeybees. There were also several trees with had been felled by beavers, as we were now near a large marsh. We came onto a woodland road being developed by the state and saw several Cardinal Flowers (somewhat rare, also a good display of a flower the flower guides named pale corydelis, which I had never heard of previously. This somewhat resembled a miniature columbine with pale pink flowers rather than the red as seen in the columbine. Along the roadside as we returned to our cars, we were treated to generous samples of delicious ripe blackberries. The weather had once again been a beautiful late summer day.

BATTENKILL CANOE TRIP

9 - 10 September 1989

by Stephen Pulling

Every once in a while in this hectic world we live in, you just have to let loose and let the kid in you shine through. If you could have seen the eight "adults" on the canoe trip having water fights you might have questioned their sanity. We all had lots of laughs and most of us got real wet.

The weather was just perfect both Saturday and Sunday, which helped make this year's Battenkill Canoe Trip a great success. Six people canoed the distance while we had one day apssenger on Saturday and four Careys joined us for the Sunday trip.

We started out trip just south of Manchester and we had to fight a flock of geese for water space as we put in. A very leisurely ride from Manchester through Sunderland to Arlington was enjoyed by everyone as the weather was just perfect. West of Arlington our pace was picked up a bit as the river flows a bit faster there.

We found our campsite at the Vermont - New York border about 4:30 p.m, set up camp, cooked supper, and sat around the campfire roasting marshmallows late into the night. Al Pulling stoped in for supper and picked up our day passenger Roma. The Careys also met us at the campsite and spent all day Sunday with us.

After numerous water fights and several swim stops we found our vehicles just south of Salem, New York, at a fishing access. I hope everyone on the trip had a great time and didn't get too wet.

BIRD MOUNTAIN, CASTLETON

16 September 1989

by John and Emma Hughes

Even though it was a sunny day, the weather forecasts were for showers late in the day, but it stayed clear most of the time and we finished by 2:30 p.m.

Eleven hikers met in the park and three more met us at the turn to the gravel road at Route 4A near the mountain. We drove as far as we could on this road and parked.

We started hiking on a jeep road which climbs gradually for about 1.5 miles. Then we made some turns on logging roads that got steeper, leading to the base of the mountain. At this point you leave the road and go a short distance in the woods to a short, steep climb to a low spot along the ridge of the mountain. From this low area, we hiked along a trail which climbs to the high point at the south end of Bird Mountain, which has good views.

After lunch we went back along the trail to the low area and then hiked to the north end along a trail where everybody was helping me find the markers along the way. The lookout point at this end is lower, but we could look down and see our cars. From this lookout another logging road descends back to the jeep road we started on, and along the way you could see where logging had been done recently.

We hope everyone enjoyed the hike as much as we did and thank you for coming.

MENDON PEAK

30 September 1989

by Herb Ogden, Jr.

Rob Carey led us on the real bushwhack of the season to a peak that many of us see every day but few visit. The Appalachian Mt. Club "New England Hundred Highest" register at the westernmost peak of Mendon (the true summit) shows only a trickle of visitors to this trailless peak.

A baker's half-dozen of us (I pick that expression because I'm not sure how many there were) left our cars at Brewers Corners, on the Wheelerville Road, and walked up the old Killington Carriage Road past a camp and the road that branches over to the Bucklin Trail. We then left the Carriage Road, keeping to the more traveled woodroad that drops down to cross Eddy Brook on a bridge and goes on up to Stovepipe City. Just after crossing Eddy Brook, we turned left on the well-traveled woodroad and then right on a less-traveled one that headed uphill on more or less the southerly compass bearing that Rob knew would take us partway up the mountain. When that road decided to follow a different bearing, we did not, and the bushwhack began.

After crossing a fairly well-traveled woodroad, we pushed uphill through fairly open hardwoods and then skirted the east edge of a former clearing now grown up to a thicket of saplings. Changing course where both Rob's memory and Herb's altimeter said we should, we headed southeast up the peak, still in open hardwoods with occasional boulders.

The final steep ascent was through a tangle of mossy evergreens, or, as one member put it, "carniverous trees." They didn't eat us, but they did slow us down. Some of us found a faint trail marked by red surveyor's tape, which led over the treetrunks and boulders to near the westernmost peak of Mendon, then over to the middle peak.

From the middle peak, only slightly lower than the westernmost peak, the view was spectacular on this warm, clear day. We could see beyond Mansfield to the north and all the way to Wachusett, in Massachusetts, to the south. To the west, East Mountain appeared to be a mere plateau, and the parallel ridges of the Taconics were beautiful. To the east, we had a whole new perspective on Pico, Killington, Little Killington, and Shrewsbury. All agreed that the view was well worth the bushwhack.

There was some talk of the group splitting so the more adventurous of us could hike over the easternmost peak into the Little Killington saddle and descend to Stovepipe City, high in the Eddy Brook valley. But we spent so much time soaking up the view and the sun from the south-facing summit rocks, and Rob spoke so persuasively of the evergreen thicket that lay between us and the Stovepipe City road -- maybe those trees really were carniverous -- that the secessionists succumbed. We may try the other route in the future.

ARRIVALS

by Sue Thomas

Rob and Carolyn Badger, wandering Killington Section members, have sent word of the birth of their second son, Dylan Christopher, in September. Along with big brother Daniel, the newest Badger is residing in Potsdam, N. Y., where his dad accepted a teaching position at the State University. We hope to plan some Adirondack hikes in the future. Maybe we can meet halfway!

Once again the Killington Section is faced with the problem of how to slip a congratulatory note past our editor. If he doesn't stop having "significant events," we'll have to request that he type Smoke & Blazes blindfolded. [From some of the typos Sue finds, one might think I already do that. --Ed.] Anyway, we'd all like to congratulate Herb Ogden and Cathy Thomas on the birth of their daughter, Hannah Ruth Ogden, on 14 August. Best wishes to you all, which are sincere even if lacking the element of surprise!

The Editor and wife wish to report that, at the tender age of 1½ months, their daughter Hannah had her first Long Trail trip, over the relocation north of Route 103, with a nursing stop at the splendid view above Great Gorge Gulch. Maybe Hannah is the youngest person to pass over Jerry Parker's fine new stiles, though doubtless not for long.

COME BACK SOON!

The entire Killington Section wishes a speedy recovery to long-time member W. Churchill Scott, who recently had surgery. We miss you, and we look forward to seeing you back on the trails as soon as possible.

FROM THE PAGES OF OLD VERMONTERS

On the next page is a 1928 article printed in The Vermonter, the privately published former "State Magazine." Our copy came from W. Churchill Scott's collection and was selected by Ray Catozzi. Ray also found several other articles from The Vermonter of the 1930's, dealing with topics like the Long Trail Lodge, an end-to-end in the mid-1930's, flora and fauna along the trail, and one entitled "Long Trail Safe for Women Hikers." There is also a multi-page poem that seems almost as long as the entire Long Trail from Massachusetts to Canada, all about a hiking experience.

If you enjoy the following selection, let the Editor know, and he will print some more of these. In fact, the Editor quite fancies them and will probably print more unless readers object anyway.

WHITE RIVER JUNCTION, VERMONT

No. 10

The Vermont Trail

By RACHEL V. CONNAL

I have often wondered how much Vermonters enthused about their own state, if at all, when in the west and south. I have known resident Vermonters who, while among us, steadily depleted our population by flagrantly advancing the claims of other states, in which, for similar zeal, offenders are severely chastized. But now comes a worthy emissary, Rachel Connal, 14, born in Vermont, who published the following in the high school paper of Aberdeen, Washington, after residing on the Pacific Coast five years. Few of her age know our state's history, legends and wood lore as well. She is an omniverous reader, a splendid little housekeeper and a good cook. She has been from Vermont to the Pacific Coast five times—the last time going alone from Montreal.

HERE'S a long, long trail awinding into the land of my dreams. This becomes a fact and not poetical fancy if you happen to be dreaming of old Vermont, for in that state the Long Trail runs the entire length of the Green Mountains to Canada. Vermont is only about 160 miles long in an air-line, but the trail climbs and twists in and out, along the ridges, up and down until it measures 250 miles.

Because of its combination of wilderness and accessibility, you may spend a day or a month on the trail without covering any ground more than once. No tent will be needed, as there are shelters every six or eight miles. There are caretakers at only three of these shelters and at the others the law of the woods prevails: To leave as much dry wood as you find, keep the frying pan clean and to be more than careful about fire. Do these things and you are welcome.

Occasionally there are hotels. At the top of the highest peak, Mt. Mansfield, you come abruptly out of wilderness to a place of electric lights, hot and cold baths, and automobiles.

But the trail itself—nothing so well describes it as the official designation, "a foot-path in the wilderness." Leave the highway and turn into any trail and you will find your guide post. You hear an automobile pass, turn your back and in five minutes the walls of the great trees shut out the sounds of the world. To all appearances there might be Indians in the forest and the Green Mountain Boys might well be merry making in their caves.

At Griffith Lake which is on a mountain top, there once was a man who had the means and fancy to collect almost every wild flower which would survive. His home has fallen into decay, but the woods about it, through which the trail winds, are still a vast garden.

Every part of the trail has its picture. "A long aisle carpeted with moss and lined with columns of dark pines, gray beech, and shining yellow birch, through which floats the voice of a hermit thrush like the song of a nun in a cathedral; a turn and you pause on a granite step to hold your breath and look down upon a little wild meadow of asteris, a tiny blue sea close-rimmed by whispering green cliffs." Thus has it been described by one author.

For a hundred miles in every direction the cup of beauty is full to the brim. Yes, "There's a long, long trail a winding into the land of my dreams."

DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO WITH OLD S&B'S?

To recycle a Smoke & Blazes, leave it in the waiting room of an office, where it will introduce others to us.

Whether you hunt or not --
Best wishes for a safe hunting season.
Wear safety colors and avoid the woods when visibility is poor. We want you with us after Thanksgiving!

HALFMOON POND TO GLEN LAKE, HUBBARDTON

8 October 1988

by Sue Thomas

Our hike to Glen Lake didn't get off to a very good start. Sasha the dog looked over the situation at the park and decided she wanted nothing to do with this expedition. So, while we waited for late arrivals, Sasha took action and locked herself into a van. Thus she and her owner had to skip the hike, while the rest of us set off for Half Moon State Park, where several hikers were waiting for us. Also waiting for us was a park ranger who refused to let us into the park! At this point I began to wonder if maybe Sasha was right! I managed to convince the ranger that we wouldn't vandalize their newly-painted leantos or sue them if hanging limbs fell on us, so despite our disreputable appearance he let us through.

The trail we took from there to Glen Lake was built by the Vermont Youth Conservation Corps in 1987, and though not consistently blazed it's a very pretty hike. We took a lunch break on some ledges overlooking Moscow Pond, then descended to the pond and continued on toward Glen Lake. Ira took us on a short side trip to a ledge with a beautiful view, from which we could see black clouds rolling in, so we didn't linger.

Further along we came to another trail marked "Crown Point Road," which presents a mystery. Several in our group are familiar with the old military road and all agreed that it couldn't possibly be there!

From another rock ledge we watched several fishermen below on Glen Lake, then followed the prettiest part of the trail as it wound its way down to the lake and followed the shoreline. We finished the hike at the ruins of what looked to have been a large building, of which only the fireplace and the dock remain. Despite a few hitches, somewhat moody weather, and one of those dad-blasted pedometers that always read twice the mileage I put in the schedule, Sasha missed a nice hike!

BLACK MOUNTAIN, NEW YORK

15 October 1989

by Bernie Donahue

No better time to view the Green Mountain skyline than in mid-October! Black Mountain, north of Whitehall, offers a grandstand seat to this beautiful opportunity. A panoramic view of Lake George, Fort Ticonderoga and the southern tip of Lake Champlain is a colorful bonus.

The fall was again the season selected to experience this, as a small group of Killington Section hikers climbed to the top. On arrival, a thick fog greeted our group. Visibility had been reduced to perhaps one hundred feet or less. No one climbed to the top of the abandoned but accessible fire tower. After a leisurely lunch, part of the group, upon descending the trail, rode over to Hulett's Landing on Lake George for more pleasant viewing from the shore. By mid-afternoon the fog lifted. We felt it was too late then to ascend the mountain once more.

We look forward to making this hike a reality next October. Barring a return to a spell of inclement weather, it would offer the great viewing we missed this time.

GLASTENBURY BACKPACK

26-27 October 1989

by Roma Pulling

Talk about not being able to get it together! When we weren't foiled by discouraging weather forecasts, we had conflicts with other activities (in Sue's case one of them was called "work") but the last week in October we realized that if we didn't go before the time change and early darkness, the trip would have to be postponed until spring. Fortunately this realization coincided with a spell of fair and unseasonably warm weather, and we were off.

Sue Thomas accompanied us because she needed this section of the Long Trail for her End to End. We left Rutland at 6:30 a.m. At Route 9 in Woodford we parted company for the day, and while Sue labored up the Long Trail we hiked the Bald Mountain and West Ridge Trails to Goddard Shelter. We had a good climb up to the summit of Bald Mountain and found the West Ridge Trail virtually level, but I couldn't seem to make any time on it. Sue arrived at the shelter several hours before us. Some might say it's because I'm no longer 32!

When we hiked this section of the Long Trail in 1982, we stayed in the old Glastenbury Shelter. Goddard was new to us, and we enjoyed our stay a lot. Sue liked sitting in a lounge chair with which the shelter was provided, but when I sat down it was hard to get up again. It's a log leanto with the front raised above the ground, perhaps to discourage porcupines, which were a nuisance at the old shelter. We did hear piercing screams from some animal after dark, and Alfred and Sue got up in the night to chase mice out of their packs. The clever little beasts had gotten in even though we hung our packs before retiring.

Friday I made a little better time. The three of us took the Long Trail as far as Story Spring Shelter, stopping at Kid Gore and Caughnawaga Shelters to take pictures. We met the only two hikers we saw in two days of hiking, just north of Caughnawaga Shelter and heading south. When Alfred and I stopped for lunch near the summit of the "Unnamed Peak," he pointed out the sound of a grouse drumming on a distant log. I was thrilled as I had heard it before only on TV. At Story Spring Shelter Sue took the Long Trail to the road while Alfred and I took the shorter Branch Pond Trail.

Sue took us to Woodford to pick up our car, and we stopped in Bennington for supper at Papa Gino's. Fast food never tasted so good. We have only twelve more shelters to photograph, all in the northern part of the state.

LAKE TRAIL TO GRIFFITH LAKE

28 October 1989

by Roma Pulling

Leading a seven mile hike the day after returning from a twenty mile backpack might not be good judgment, but the morning of the 28th we appeared at the park with aching bodies and, in my case, sore feet. The fog was so thick it was eerie but it burned off later for a beautiful, warm day.

Seven people accompanied us up the Lake Trail, which is the carriage road, badly eroded now, that led to the former Griffith Lake House. With three major crossings of McGinn Brook and several minor stream crossings plus areas of black ooze, it seemed as though we waded to the lake and back.

Everyone agreed the lake was worth the effort. We ate lunch at the tent area and relaxed before retracing our steps. We met several other hikers enjoying the summerlike weather.

FAIRBANKS MUSEUM & PLANETARIUM

11 November 1989

by Sue Thomas

During hunting season this year we went to St. Johnsbury to visit the planetarium at the Fairbanks Museum. After a chilly lunch on the porch, we had some time to tour the museum before the show started. It's a fascinating place with a wide variety of exhibits from an extensive collection of animals and birds (they claim to have every species that has ever lived in Vermont), artifacts from around the world, and a room devoted to the Fairbanks Scale Co. Downstairs is the Vermont Weather Station where forecasting and recordkeeping are done for the state. Broadcasts heard on Vermont Public Radio originate from there. I tagged along with a bunch of Cub Scouts who were getting a guided tour of the weather station, so I heard all about it.

The Planetarium was packed for the afternoon show, where we saw the planets and stars that were visible at that time of year and heard the myths associated with some of the constellations. Too bad that I'll have forgotten it all by the time we have a moonlight hike!

POT LUCK SUPPER

18 November 1989

by Roma Pulling

This year's hunting season supper was one of the better ones in recent years, with approximately 30 people in attendance in the basement of the Unitarian Church. And the food! Our Killington Section cooks are the greatest. With hot dishes ranging from macaroni and cheese to Spanish rice and delicious salads, and topped off with pie, cake, cookies, and ice cream, everyone was stuffed to capacity.

One thing this writer liked to see was that we had people in every age bracket.

Following this repast, John Martin showed slides of a trip he and Jan took in June up the Inside Passage to Alaska and through Yellowstone National Park. We all thank John for providing this excellent entertainment.

If there has to be a deer season, this is the way to spend it!

SHERBURNE PASS TO OLD TURNPIKE ROAD

2 December 1989

by Herb Ogden, Jr.

This could have been a snowshoe hike. While there was only a thick dusting of snow down in the city, the Green Mountain spine north of Sherburne Pass had six to eight inches of snow. This slowed us down a little, not so much because of poor footing, but more because the lack of recent blazes from Tucker-Johnson Shelter to a point just south of The Elbow made the leader stop rather often, bobbing his head around like a flamingo trying to spot the next faded patch of white. After a while, spotting the Forest Service's antique and misshapen blazes turned into a bit of a game: we would come up to a tree which looked like it might once have been blazed and scrutinize the bark closely, occasionally triumphing in the discovery of a few flakes of white paint. USFS, please note!

We cheated a little at the start. To avoid possibly slippery going on the Long Trail just north of Sherburne Pass, we left our cars at the north end of the Robinwood development, near the site of Tucker Lodge, and took the former Long Trail north to Willard Gap.

At Tucker-Johnson Shelter, we surprised John and Emma Hughes, who were just starting a fire for lunch. They had come in the same way as we, but of course expected us to come in by the longer and slower Long Trail and arrive long after them. Instead, we were nearly on their heels.

South of The Elbow, we puzzled over a (presumably) animal track which looked as if someone had dragged a beaver downhill. The track was simply a groove in the snow, about eight inches wide.

At The Elbow, where the old turnpike from North Sherburne to Mendon and Chittenden crosses the ridge, we found a well-snowmobiled track leading from North Sherburne and turning north on the LT. It was our first sign of recent human travel since leaving Tucker-Johnson.

Crossing the former bridge on the little causeway over an arm of the big beaver pond, we had one small casualty. Sue Thomas got a very wet foot when some snow and ice gave way and she went in over her boot top. Rather surprisingly, the rest of us made it through the marshy part of the old turnpike dryshod. We lunched overlooking the big beaver pond, near where the turnpike divided. Leaving the Chittenden branch behind, we climbed up the Mendon branch past a few very solid looking seasonal dwellings.

The leader apologizes for advertising the final point on the hike as a "mystery." Had he looked very carefully in the Beers 1869 atlas of Rutland County, he would have seen that the puzzling square mass of rock drymasonry just south of the old turnpike near the height of land was once a lime kiln.

MOONLIGHT HIKE TO PINE HILL

10 December 1989

by Steve Pulling

Seven hearty souls showed up for our annual December moonlight hike. It was a cold night, as was much of the month of December, which probably scared away some potential hikers on this traditionally popular event. The full moon was also a no-show as the clouds won the battle of the skies.

Our destination this evening was Pine Hill Park, in particular Rocky Pond. We hiked up the road which is the extension of Evergreen Avenue. There was only six inches of fresh powder snow on the ground, which made walking fairly easy. In no time we were at the picnic area at Rocky Pond.

Here we built a fire, drank hot beverages, and ate delicious sweets made by some of the ladies of the group. Each chef promised that all calories were removed! After an easy downhill walk back to the cars, I got home and missed only one quarter of the late game.

CHRISTMAS CAROLING

16 December 1989

Leader: Bernie Donahue

Editor's Note: In January, around the time excursion reports were due, Bernie was involved in a serious car accident on Route 7 south of Rutland, suffering a concussion, breaking several ribs, and enduring other unpleasantness. Fortunately, Bernie is recovering well and should be back on the trails in several months. Despite being laid up, Bernie was conscientious about getting in his Black Mountain hike report, printed on p. 2. As for the caroling, I understand it was poorly attended, probably because of the extreme cold.

LONG TRAIL SOUTH OF WALLINGFORD GULF TO RUN ALONG TOP PART OF KEEWAYDIN TRAIL

by Herb Ogden, Jr.

On 10 January 1990, the United States Forest Service and the National Park Service issued their long-promised decision on the fate of the Long Trail / Appalachian Trail between White Rocks and Route 140 in Wallingford Gulf. After a public meeting in Wallingford on 2 December 1988, six alternatives were considered, including leaving the trail in its present narrow corridor.

The Forest Service's choice, Alternative B, is shown on the map on page 6 of this issue. The Forest Service says this alternative "would relocate the trail partially onto the Keewaydin Trail crossing 3 private parcels (Bruneau, Butterworth, and Persse), as well as Green Mountain National Forest, and then continue north over the Allen property, until reaching an old skid road on the Roberts property. Following this abandoned road east-northeasterly, the trail would cross Rt. 140 at a point with safe sight distances and easy grades. Portions of the Keewaydin Trail would be redesigned and reconstructed (due to excessive grades and inadequate drainage, and to bring the trail up to standard for the higher use level), and a side trail linking the White Rocks parking area would be constructed." From this last comment, it appears the lower part of the Keewaydin Trail might be abandoned, as it is the present link to the White Rocks parking area.

There is no mention of retaining the present Long Trail as a side trail at least as far east as Greenwall Shelter. There is also no mention of relocating or replacing Greenwall Shelter, however.

Rejected alternatives included using existing narrow rights of way just west of the present LT between Sugar Hill Road and Wallingford Gulf, swinging west through the White Rocks parking area to the Hartsboro Road, following Bully Brook east after descending part of the Keewaydin Trail, and leaving the LT/AT where it is.

The Forest Service says that further information is available from Bob Pramuk or Ann Mates at P. O. Box 519, Rutland VT 05702, telephone (802) 773-0300, or Michael Schrotz, Manchester District Ranger, RFD 1, Box 1940, Manchester Center VT 05255, telephone (802) 362-1251.

The decision may be appealed administratively through the Forest Service within 45 days of its issuance. Smoke & Blazes has heard of no plans to appeal.

BOILING SPRING, CHITTENDEN

4 November 1989

by John & Emma Hughes, Leaders

We were fortunate when Sue Carey came with her truck and offered to give us a ride from the parking lot at Mountain Top Inn to the beginning of the old New Boston Trail. This road is quite rough and we thought we would be walking the extra distance because it is not good for cars. Thank you, Sue!

We started walking on an old road which then became log and jeep trails. It was cold enough so that some of the wet areas were frozen. We had to cross several small brooks.

The spring is about twelve feet in diameter and has about one or two feet of clear water. It feeds an outlet which is one of the sources of Kiln Brook, which flows into Furnace Brook. The spring moves the sand in the bottom and makes it look like boiling water. The silt has been washed out of the sand so the water above it stays clear and the sand just moves around. We took a long stick and were able to shove it down into the spring about six feet.

After returning to the truck by the same way we had lunch.

RAILROAD BEDS, PAWLET:

THE FORLORN SKIING TRIP

6 January 1990

by Sue Carey, Leader

There was snow during the month of December and I was optimistic that this year we'd be able to ski on the railroad beds. Alas, the snow melted the week before, and we had to walk.

Of course we enjoyed the hike anyway. We spotted cars at the old train station in Granville and started hiking in West Pawlet. There were many icy spots along the way but they were easily avoided by walking in the snow along the edge. The level bed made for fast and easy hiking.

When we got to Granville we had to make a detour at the telescope furniture factory: down a side track through another factory's parking lot, along a residential street until we picked the bed up at Agway.

For some people the scariest part of the trip was crossing an old train trestle. You could look down through the ties to the roaring stream twenty feet below. Others thought that was fun.

There was an old caboose at the Granville station and you could climb up the back porch. Two year old Seth found it delightful to climb up on a real train and he didn't want to leave.

Next year maybe we'll try skiing (hiking) from Granville to Poultney. One of these years we should have some snow.

SLIDING DOWN MT. TOM
14 January 1990
by Sue Thomas, Leader

As everyone knows, I have a tendency to lead hikes into unexplored territory, so it probably came as no surprise to anyone that we ended up by sliding down a practically vertical cliff on the ice. I was ready to apologize for not having scouted the route ahead of time, but as it turned out we were on the right trail all along, it was just a tad steeper than the map in the guidebook indicated!

Since we had no casualties on the cliff, I can report that it was a very nice hike. [New success criterion? -- Ed.] Mt. Tom is a great place to be on a beautiful winter day, with views of the surrounding mountains and valleys, white snow and blue skies. We treated ourselves to ice cream on the way home, always a fine ending for any hike!

FIFIELD POND AND WILDER MOUNTAIN
20 January 1990
by John & Emma Hughes, Leaders

After having several days of warm and rainy weather during the week before the hike, the snow was packed down and you could walk easily around the woods.

We parked our cars on a gravel road off Route 155 and walked uphill, entering the Green Mt. National Forest. It didn't take long to get to the pond, which was frozen. After walking on the ice we went on trails toward Wilder Mountain. Along the way we passed a beaver dam which is filling in the old log road with water. This area is a mixture of evergreen and deciduous trees and as you gain in elevation it becomes clear hardwoods. We passed several cellrholes and stone walls along the trail.

We left the trail at about its highest poing in elevation and "winter bushwhacked" to the top of the mountain. It was cold enough so the snow supported your weight and was easy walking.

At the top Jerry built a fire and we had lunch. We were able to see surrounding mountains and a ski area toward the south. We reutrned about the same way except for using some other trails which lead back to Fifield Pond.

SKI HILDENE IN SHREWSBURY, OR DID LINCOLN EVER MAKE IT TO NORTHAM?
28 January 1990
by Ray Catozzi, Leader

Karen only went a short way with us, then returned to her home, where we were graciously allowed to park our car. The four remaining had a delightful 3 + mi. ski-hike-talk in Shrewsbury.

KILLINGTON SECTION DIRECTORS MEETING
3 April 1990, Sue Thomas's home from minutes by Wally Rogers, Secretary

Meeting began at 6:30 p.m. All nine directors were eventually present, and several guests attended.

We discussed the main club membership assessment increase for 1991 and its effect on our dues. We plan no KS dues increase in 1990.

We discussed KS life memberships. We recommended for Section approval an immediate KS Life Membership dues increase to $200, to cover provision of all services for life.

We decided to allow main club life members (not necessarily the same people as KS life members) a discount on their KS dues equal to the avoided cost of the main club assessment.

We instructed our director on the main club board to work toward holding the line on assessment increases and eliminate fees for attending annual meetings of the main club.

We instructed the Secretary to write the main club Trails and Shelters Committee that (1) we urge signs be placed to close or warn of the danger on the Deer Leap Trail from Sherburne Pass and (2) we have adopted the Cauty Trail up Blue Ridge Mountain.

Meeting adjourned at 7:30 p.m.

LAST CHANCE TO USE OUR SECTION'S KIRK MATCHING FUNDS FOR LONG TRAIL PROTECTION

PINE BROOK TRAIL, ROCHESTER - HANCOCK

3 February 1990

by Herb Ogden, Jr., Leader

February did have a few proper winter days, and four of us took advantage of one of them to make a nice 4.3 mile circuit in snowy woodlands. Our starting point was the last house on the Bingo Road, which keeps going straight in the hamlet of Robinson where Route 73 turns sharp left to head up Brandon Gap.

Crossing Bingo Brook -- BINGO, you got it: yes, the area is called Bingo; there's a Bingo School and a Bingo Cemetery too -- on an unplowed public road, we quickly left the improved road, which doglegged back to a camp, and slabbed along easterly on the old road. Next, a sharp left turn in National Forest land sent us steep uphill and occasioned some binding-tightening among the snowshoers while the two skiers herringboned up. After following Pine Brook uphill for some distance and crossing several gigantic waterbars, we turned left at a clearing and began a series of tricky, unbridged brook crossings. Although the Forest Service advertises this trail as a ski touring trail and has marked it well with blue lozenges, its bridging leaves something to be desired. Some of us thought that something was dry feet. One snowshoer decided to turn around and meet the rest back at Bingo Brook.

Crossing Pine Brook on a bridge (the only one, and very necessary this time of year), we soon came to a clearing below an old foundation. We had climbed 400 feet from Bingo Brook. Maps from the last century show houses even higher up than this 1600 foot elevation.

Following a broad, well-graded Forest Service road, we soon came to some areas of experimental forestry that afforded a view west toward Romance Mountain, good views to something that looked like Pico in the south, but probably wasn't, and a place for a quick lunch. Not far from there, Jerry Parker pointed out old moose tracks. Soon, with the two skiers gliding along comfortably and Jerry doing a snowshoe sprint, we returned to the Bingo Brook valley and entered another good Forest Service road. This, the Bingo Brook Road, dead-ends several miles west up toward Romance Gap. We followed it east downhill to the car.

BALD MOUNTAIN WITHOUT BERNIE

11 February 1990

by Sue Thomas, Substitute Leader

Since Bernie Donahue was still recuperating from an accident, we headed up Bald Mountain in Mendon without him. I climb the mountain often in the summer and fall, but this was the first time I'd done it in winter. It was well worth it, too, because in winter it seems like a completely different place. I usually run up and down pretty quickly in the summer, trying to make the whole loop between the time I get off work and sundown. In winter, however, views that are obscured by summer leaves tempt you to stop more often, as do animal tracks in the snow and that fact that most of us move a little more slowly in February.

We enjoyed lunch with a view overlooking Rutland, then when the rocks we sat on began to seem a bit cold we went on to the airport lookout and completed the loop.

Everyone wishes Bernie a speedy recovery -- hope to see him back on the trails soon!

SLEDDING PARTY

17 February 1990

by Roma Pulling, Leader

Ira warned us. And if that wasn't enough proof, the fact that we could hardly stand on the thick, icy crust should have indicated that sliding was hazardous. But seven of us assembled in Ira Hawley's field just the same, prepared to make the most of it. (cont.)

Almost the first thing that happened was that Emma Hughes fell off her sled and hurt her ankle. We learned later that she had broken it! She will be in a cast until about the end of March. The rest of us slid for a while and then headed back for hot chocolate and cookies.

Ira had built a fire in one of his outbuildings -- for this occasion known as the "warming hut" -- where we enjoyed the warmth and refreshment. Here we were joined by three other club members who dropped in to say "hi."

We all felt badly about Emma's accident and wish her a problem-free recovery. And many thanks to Ira and Irene for their generous hospitality.

GLEN DAM, RUTLAND

25 February 1990

by W. Churchill Scott, Leader

On a cold and wintry February day a small group took the annual winter walk to Glen Dam.

There were the usual tales of how the northern slope of the area was bare with sand banks and enjoyable swimming.

On the way back we took a short trip to view a section of the original penstock which the 1947 flood had destroyed and thrown into the middle of the woods. Virginia, who lived nearby at that time, told about the pipes floating around like matchsticks.

Back at the house the pot was hot and we all enjoyed our lunch as we sat around to talk about many things.

It was very good to see Bernie Donahue with us again and to see Al's hands finally warm up from the bitter wind.

MERCK FOREST WINTER WEEKEND, RUPERT

3 - 4 March 1990

Sue Thomas, Leader

Reports out of the murk of Merck suggest that most had a good time, except for Mara Carey, scalded by an overturning pot. At least before that happened, there were nine overnights and three day hikers. Mara has recovered well.

SUGAR ON SNOW

11 March 1990

by Sue Carey, Leader

The annual sugar on snow party was held at the Unitarian Church and was attended by 32 people. We dined on the traditional feast of maple syrup on snow, pickles (to take away the sweetness) and donuts.

Jerry Parker provided the afternoon entertainment with a videotape of various Killington Section outings. We were able to relive several hikes and a canoe trip. Jerry captured on film different styles for crossing logs that had fallen across the trail. Also, he recorded different techniques for starting and putting out campfires. The scenes were very nice and we all enjoyed the tape.

Thanks go to Jack and Janet Martin for preparing the syrup and Jerry Parker for sharing his video.

SUNRISE SHELTER, CHITTENDEN

17 March 1990

by Roma Pulling, Leader

March 17 is memorable as the day when we honor the patron saint of Ireland and this year as the day we led a hike to Sunrise Shelter and one other thing. It was the day a fellow named Sean Allain reportedly murdered two people in Bondville. This wouldn't be worth mentioning here if it weren't for the fact that we drove past the spot where Allain was apprehended a short time later and while the badly battered car was still being guarded by the state police. Fortunately we didn't know what we had seen until the next day.

Six people besides my husband and me turned out for this hike, which wasn't bad for a showery day. But the luck of the Irish must have been with us, even though there probably wasn't a drop of Irish blood in the group, because despite the fact it rained before we met and on our way home, we had no rain during the hike. The sun even came out for a while.

After an easy mile-long walk to the shelter, we lunched there and returned over a trail that was muddy and icy in spots. We noted that it needs blazing. And yes, we did celebrate St. Patrick's Day. A hiker well-known for her delicious home-baked cookies brought sham-rock cookies for this occasion.

Sunrise Shelter was constructed in 1964 by the Long Trail Patrol using funds contributed by Mortimer Proctor. It replaced the old Sunrise Camp, one of only a few steel structures on the Trail, built in 1925.

BLUE RIDGE MOUNTAIN

by Stephen Pulling, Leader

Our illustrious outings committee picked yet another perfect day for hiking. Clear, sunny skies and temperatures around 45°F at the base of the mountain and 35° at the summit made for a nice early spring hike. Knowing what to wear for a coat is always a guessing game this time of year especially when climbing a mountain. Wearing a light layer and carrying a couple of extra layers on your pack is the only answer for this type of hike.

Eight hearty soles [or eight souls with sixteen soles? --Ed.] showed up for this moderate ascent up Blue Ridge Mountain. The lower part of the trail was covered with large blowdowns although the higher we we climbed the fewer there were. But the higher we climbed, the deeper the snow became. There was almost a foot of snow at the summit.

The views off the summit were spectacular! We could see the whole Rutland valley from Clarendon to Pittsford and as far west as the Adirondacks with a clear view of Bird Mountain. A beautiful view of Pico Peak with all of the snow-covered ski trails is unequalled anywhere. We could also see Killington, Little Killington, Mendon Mountain, Shrewsbury Peak, Bromley, Stratton Mountain, Magic Mountain, and Dorset Peak.

The descent was much faster than the ascent because the wet, heavy snow was well-packed on the trail, much easier than breaking trail on the way up. In some places on the way down we could see skiers way off in the distance on Pico's trails.

SECOND ANNUAL JARVIS SNODGRASS MEMORIAL EXCURSION, HARTSBORO ROAD, WALLINGFORD

1 April 1990

by Herb Ogden, Jr.

A good crowd assembled at Main Street Park, doubtless drawn by the grandiloquence of this excursion's name and the vernal auspiciousness of its date.

Under not altogether promising skies, we drove to Wallingford Gulf and headed west on foot to Hartsboro. That vicinity's only previously known connection with this hike's namesake was the presence of feral onions around the damper parts of some of the abandoned farmsteads there. The Careys were really stretching it, some thought, to merge this excursion with the Snodgrass moniker. Little did those critics know!

The mystery cleared only when we came to an old cellarhole marked with a stone on which an inscription read:

DISCOVERY OF FEBRUARY 29TH

In this house, in the year 1816, February 29th was discovered by Abigail Wood in a pile of old newspapers.

(cont. on p. 6)

APRIL FOOL! Now for the real story:

Maybe it was the zany date, maybe it was the promise of an easy mystery hike, or maybe it was the relatively balmy weather -- something brought out a big crowd just like last year. After two mysterious regroupings, we left our cars at the entrance to White Rocks and headed secretively southwest.

When we left the Forest Service road and headed up the abandoned Hartsboro Road, some of us decided the Careys' destination was the White Rocks ice caves. As Rob was mum about the goal, Mara very mum, and Seth even mummer, nobody was sure, though. We navigated (many places were wet) the road in suspense. The small fry, and one small dog, were indeed occasionally suspended over the wettest places and generally stayed in good humor. Our smallest fry, Hannah Ruth Ogden, age 7½ months, was permanently suspended in a pack and stayed in very good humor on her first Killington Section hike.

Eventually we passed the blue-blazed trail to the ice beds and realized that was not our destination. After a tricky brook crossing, some began to feel uneasy about having to return the way we came. Only then was the mystery solved: the Careys had secretly spotted a truck at the last house off the Hartsboro Road with just enough space to take all the drivers back to the start.

ANNUAL KILLINGTON SECTION MEETING

7 April 1990, Unitarian Church

from minutes by Wally Rogers, Secretary

The meeting began with a potluck supper attended by 34 members and guests.

President Rob Carey called the meeting to order at 6:45 p.m. The minutes and financial reports by Secretary-Treasurer Rogers were approved.

Trails and Shelters Chair Steve Pulling reported that the Section has 22 miles of Long Trail and 6 shelters to care for from Vt. 140 to U.S. 4. Projects completed in 1989 were listed, including several relocations of trail and construction of stiles by Jerry Parker. 1990 projects include relocating an outhouse at Clarendon Shelter, two walk-through hikes, a bridge to build near Gov. Clement Shelter, trail work south of Pico Camp, work on Pico Camp, work on the newly adopted Canty Trail up Blue Ridge Mountain, and a possible bridge over Sargent Brook between the Upper and Lower Cold River Roads. Shelter adopters are needed. The relocation south of Vt. 140 needs to be decided on [see article elsewhere] and the LT north of 140 adjusted to fit.

For the Outings Committee, Sue Carey reported on many successful hikes.

Smoke & Blazes Editor Herb Ogden reported that the newsletter will use white recycled paper in the future. He asked for comments on letters to the editor, reprints of historical articles, and inclusion of information sent by the main club.

Green Mt. Club Director Ray Catozzi reported on main club activities. The Long Trail Protection Fund is doing well in raising money to buy and protect 67 miles of LT presently privately owned in northern Vermont. The Intersectional campout will begin August 18 at Camp Thorpe in Goshen. Many hikes and evening activities are planned, in which the Killington Section is very involved.

Rob Carey made a brief President's Report. The need to change dues was discussed. [See report on Section Directors' Meeting elsewhere.] A motion was made to approve increasing the fee for KS life membership to $200 effective immediately. It was mentioned that a delay would be appropriate to allow members to join at the present lower rate, but also that the KS would lose money on each such member. The motion passed.

Directors Linda Pellerin, Bernie Donahue and Wally Rogers had reached the end of their terms. They were elected to new three-year terms.

The Directors met and elected Rob Carey president, Steve Pulling vice-president, Wally Rogers secretary and treasurer, Sue Thomas and Sue Carey Outings Committee co-chairs, Steve Pulling Trails and Shelters chair, Herb Ogden, Jr. Smoke & Blazes editor and main club director, and Ray Catozzi alternate main club director. A Publicity chair was not selected; volunteers are welcomed and should contact an officer. The Directors decided to donate the balance of our Long Trail Protection Fund matching money to the main club as of 1 June.

Meeting was adjourned at 8:30 p.m.

TALC MINE RAILROAD, ROCHESTER

22 April 1990

by Herb Ogden, Jr., Leader

This was billed as a "railroad bed mystery hike." Once we parked our cars near the Rogers Brook bridge on Route 100 south of Talcville and almost immediately began a steep climb up a woodroad, obviously no railbed, some may have thought it was a mystery how I could have ever called this hike what I did. So I had to break the secret: this railroad never did reach the valley floor. Instead, it brought talc ore from the mines (mostly north of the Bethel Mountain Road) down over five switchbacks to a transfer point at the 1140' elevation on the west side of Rogers Peak halfway between Emerson and Talcville. There, the ore was loaded into the little cars of a funicular that brought it down about 300' in about 800', mostly at about a 45° angle. The ore was processed at a mill which stood in the field between the Rogers Brook bridge and the foot of the funicular. It was then loaded onto railroad cars again and shipped out via the White River Valley Railroad. This railroad had a double track siding running from near its Rogers Brook bridge southeasterly across the field, toward a boxy house with an overhanging roof, which used to be the talc company's office. On it, six to eight talc cars could be loaded. The talc company was owned by two Bostonians who sold it in the mid-1920s to a company which owned mines in East Granville and was trying to get a talc monopoly. That company favored the East Granville mines over its newly-acquired Rochester mines even though the product was not the same and some customers did not like it. The Rochester mines closed in 1927, the year of the great flood. All the above information is courtesy of the gentleman who lives just north of the Rogers Brook bridge and kindly let us park next to his barn.

The White River Valley Railroad, the talc mine railroad's link to the outside, opened around 1900. Its track from Bethel to Rochester was so crooked that it was called the "Peavine." The 1927 flood shut down the White River R.R., which had some seven bridges over its namesake. After some time the White River Valley R.R. was rebuilt with state aid, but it did not survive the Great Depression of the 1930s.

After the steep climb up the woodroad, we welcomed the easy grade of the old railroad, climbing eastward high above Rogers Brook. Where the woodroad joined the talc mine railbed, a pile of railroad spikes and a few tie plates showed what used to be. No rails remain, but, farther up, one can still see indentations where the ties were.

Shortcutting the first switchback, we came out at the second. We crossed several little brooks, some of which still ran through old railroad culverts. At one crossing, we found a square catchbasin which might have been used to water the locomotives. We then entered a sort of plateau and stopped at the third switchback. Beyond it, the railbed is full of scrub and blowdowns until one reaches the fourth switchback. From there, it is good going over embankments and through cuts to the Bethel Mountain Road. Most of the mines are on overgrown spurs north of the Bethel Mountain Road. Maybe we'll visit them another year.

After some frog eggs were collected for Heather Moore, our youngest hiker, we lunched in the warm sun, with a view of Corporation Mountain in Chittenden. On the way down, we also saw Philadelphia Peak and possibly Burnt Rock Mountain, over which the Long Trail runs.

Partway down, ten of the thirteen hikers explored a very overgrown spur track which must have crossed Rogers Brook on a long-vanished trestle. It ended at a large mineshaft shown on both the 1915 and 1970 U.S.G.S. quadrangles. Apparently a short horizontal shaft joined a longer vertical shaft. There was ice in both, and neither seemed suitable for exploration. Nearby, we found talc ore, very pleasing to touch, and concentrated on that instead.

While most of the group waited at the woodroad junction, I took a contingent farther down the railbed to the top station of the funicular. On the way, Jerry Parker pointed out old moose droppings. All that remains of the funicular are two concrete piers, some thick steel cable which probably went around a bull wheel at the top, an inclined plane wide enough for the double track of the funicular, and some scraps of metal.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

PEDOMETER VERSUS GUIDEBOOK

I would like to make a couple of comments (constructive, I hope) to you as editor concerning items appearing in recent issues of Smoke & Blazes.

The first concerns the membership application form. In the January, 1990, issue, the form is printed on the last page. This puts it on the reverse side of the paper from the schedule. Thus if you use the form to renew your membership, you lose half the schedule. If you retain the schedule, the printing of the form is a waste of space.

The second item concerns the continual mention of pedometers in the trip writeups and the implication that since pedometer readings do not agree with listed trail mileages, the listed mileages are incorrect.

However, listed trail mileages are usually established by a measuring wheel which someone has laboriously pushed the entire length of the trail. Despite rocks, roots, etc., I have found measuring wheel readings to be very accurate when compared with distances established by surveyors with chains.

The problem is not with the ... listed mileages, but with the pedometer. What is not obvious is that a pedometer does not measure distance, it counts steps. However, since no one would buy a device that reported how many steps one took, a pedometer requires one to input a conversion factor (length of pace) and the pedometer then displays an output in "distance" (miles).

The pedometer is accurate in its counting of steps, but the problem occurs in the conversion to miles. Normally, the owner measures his pace and sets that into the pedometer. If he then walks around the neighborhood on nice roads to compare the setting to a known or measurable distance all seems to be well. But when you enter the woods, a problem occurs. Namely, one's pace changes.

If you think about it, in our New England woods, the steeper the trail becomes the more rocks, roots, and other obstacles are encountered. Even a smooth uphill trail requires closer steps. Many times on a rough footway several steps may be required to advance one normal pace.

The pedometer faithfully counts each of these extra steps and multiplies them by the preset (but now inaccurate) conversion factor and displays an output that says it is distance. But since the conversion factor has become inaccurate, so has the output. The incorrect output does, however, match out normal feeling that steep hills are endless.

So please stop trying to tell all that trail mileages are inaccurate because pedometers say so.

For my pace, I find a watch to be a better indicator of progress allowing an hour for every two miles and an added hour for every 1000 geet of elevation gain. Of course this has to be adjusted for roughness of footway, pack load, weather, and general condition.

ADD RECOGNITION

I would like to make a suggestion to you, as Editor of S&B, to further our cause of publicity for the Killington Section, G.M.C.

At the bottom of our hike schedule are listed the officers of the Section and their addresses and phone numbers, for those interested in inquiring about more hike and/or Club information.

The section's director is just as much an officer as are the President, Vice President, and Secretary-Treasurer, not because I'm the director, but because the director is bound, I think, to also have pertinent information to impart to new hikers and potential club members.

And, even though he holds no office at the present time, his longevity with the club and all the work he has done for the club and the public in general would seem to me to be sufficient reason to add to that list, also, the name of W. Churchill Scott. I will leave it to your exemplary editorial skills to come up with a suitable title for him (ex-officio ... perhaps?).

BEAR MOUNTAIN, CLARENDON

29 April 1990

by Jerry Parker, Leader

Six hikers arrived at the Spencer farm in Clarendon at 9:35. It was a perfect hiking day, cool and windy. Rain was forecasted but never came.

We started up a farm road and along a cornfield, then entered the woods. We followed a snowmobile trail. Ray pointed out several wildflowers. One hiker wondered if there were any leeks so she could make some soup. The wind worked to our advantage, keeping our noise down. I stopped to point out a turkey that flew up at less than 25 feet. I checked for a nest but found none. Sue and I watched the others dig leeks.

Sometimes it pays to be up front. Sue and I got a fleeting glimpse of a deer and then saw a pileated woodpecker.

Bear Mountain seemed a lot steeper walking than by snowmobile. The one steep spot mentioned in the schedule was more straight up, but we took it easy and everyone kept their nasty remarks to themselves. We stopped and ate lunch and continued to the top.

As we continued, we came to a beaver dam. Bernie suggested walking around it. On the south side of the pond we saw about 15 pair of newts (salamanders) mating. Newts lay their eggs in water. They look like polliwogs when they hatch, then transform themselves into efts and live on land for 2½ to 3½ years. (That would explain so many on our hikes.) They then return to water as adults and never leave the water.

We continued on a logging road until we came to the Long Trail and stopped at Minerva Hinchey Shelter. Ray filled a bag with garbage and Sue swept out the shelter. We hiked back to the power lines. The view was beautiful from this point.

When we got back to the farm I had a surprise for everyone. We toured Herb Spencer's Antique Car Museum, about 12 cars ranging from a Model A to a 1965 Mustang Convertible. Some of the group remembered when they or their parents owned cars like those. Most of the cars were built before Sue and I were born.

Since the hike, the State has picked this farm as a possible site for the future Rutland Solid Waste District Landfill.

BRIDGE BUILDING, SHREWSBURY

6 May 1990

by Stephen Pulling, Leader

For you people who can't remember what the old bridge just south of Governor Clement Shelter looked like, you're lucky, but let me refresh your memory. It was a makeshift affair built by Dad and me. We cut a couple of hemlocks down and laid pallets across the top for decking. We figured it would last for a year until we got time to build a new bridge. Well, five years later we finally got it together and built a real bridge.

My special thanks again go to Jerry Parker, who engineered the project. Without Jerry's guidance we wouldn't have gotten the professional looking job we did. Thanks to Jerry we now have a sturdy, massive treated bridge with handrails, supported by three steel I-beams. This bridge had better last longer than five years!

Participating in this project were section members Jerry "Project Engineer" Parker, Al Pulling, Churchill Scott, and myself, and non-members Jim and Matt Dans and Matt Pitts. The last two names listed are members of Scout Troop 105 of Rutland, who were working to achieve service hours for their next rank.

CEDAR SWAMP WASHOUT

13 May 1990

by Ira Hawley, Leader

We didn't go -- we got (washed) out. Four people were thinking positively in the morning, to the point of inquiring by phone. I was there at the appointed meeting place and time and had no difficulty finding parking space to await arrivals. I knew that (even) those (regular) dedicated hikers were (also) sensible people about starting a hike in the rain. I did not need to put my car through the car wash that day. I hope all MOMS enjoyed Mothers Day despite the weather.

GROUT POND, STRATTON

20 May 1990

by Sue Thomas, Leader

It was a bit of a challenge on 20 May to tell which was the pond and which was the trail. Our rainfall that month exceeded the yearly maximum for some western states, and almost all of it was sitting on the trails at Grout Pond. Hip waders were the proper attire for the hike but none of us had the foresight to bring any, so we waded along in our usual footgear, which may possible never dry out.

Just to be absolutely sure that we were wet enough, it began to rain shortly after we arrived. We put on an assortment of ponchos and the ever popular garbage bag, but, bombarded with water from above and below, I think we were all equally waterlogged by the time we stopped for lunch at a leanto overlooking the pond. It really is a beautiful sight. We saw a heron and lots of moose signs -- no actual moose; they all had the brains to stay home and read a good book on such a day! We retreated to Friendly's for hot soup instead. Maybe we'll try it again sometime and hope for better weather.

DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO WITH OLD S&BS?

To recycle a Smoke & Blazes, leave it in the waiting room of an office, where it will introduce others to our section.

SPRING WALK-THROUGHS SOUTH AND NORTH

26 May and 9 June 1990

by Stephen Pulling, Leader

Normally I write a report on each segment of our spring walk-through but this year it will be condensed into one report.

The lack of Killington Section participation in this year's walk-throughs prompts me to copy a paragraph from the book Green Mountain Adventure: Vermont's Long Trail:

The Long Trail continues to delight hikers who love the woods, streams and mountain peaks of Vermont, and the Green Mountain Club will see that this unique resource will remain, as it has from its beginning, "a Foot-path in the Wilderness."

If it weren't for some very dedicated section members our trail still wouldn't be open. I don't think anyone can say they really enjoy cutting and hauling trees and brush off the trail but it is one of those dirty jobs that has to be done. I am one of those trail workers that doesn't really enjoy it, but I do like to hike on cleared trails so I feel I'm paying my dues by participating in work parties.

Enough bitching! I would like to thank Ira Hawley and Ray Catozzi for doing way, way more than their share of work again this year, Roma and Al Pulling and Jerry Parker for participating in both walk-throughs, and Wally Rogers for his much-needed help on Pico and Killington Mountains.

The next work party is 28 July at Pico Camp. The place needs lots of T.L.C. so I hope to see you there. Remember, many hands make light work!

GREEN MOUNTAIN CLUB ANNUAL MEETING

26 May 1990

by Herb Ogden, Jr., Director

I was the only Killington Section member I saw at the main club's annual meeting, so I don't know what excuses the remaining approximately 120 of you had for not helping out at the walk-through held the same day.

About seventy people attended the general membership meeting on Saturday morning, including five staff. From reading the handouts, I was amazed to see that the Killington Section had 152 voting members and 161 members total, more than I could remember for many years. GMC total voting membership was shown as 5,331 and total membership as 5,534, of whom 2,790 and 2,979 respectively were at-large. In voting membership, the fourteen sections in order of size were Burlington (475), New York (382), Ottauquechee (239), Montpelier (240), Worcester (168), Killington (152), Connecticut (145), Bennington (128), Bread Loaf (124), Brattleboro (128), Pioneer Valley (92), Manchester (72), Laraway (60), and Sterling (58). Using these statistics, our section has a little under 3% of the voting membership.

The formula for allotting section directors is one director per hundred voting section members, rounded to the nearest hundred. Because we were shown with over 150 voting members, we were supposedly entitled to two directors rather than the one elected at our own Annual Meeting, namely me. Nevertheless, my familiarity with our mailing list made me sure the GMC's figures (for us, anyway) were too high, and I reluctantly told the meeting that we were entitled to only one director. Perhaps the error crept in because different sections have different membership years and the GMC office may be misled into counting lapsed members from a past year in the current year's total.

The morning membership meeting included these items of special interest to our section: The U. S. Forest Service plans to "rehabilitate" the Long Trail from Sherburne Pass to Lincoln Gap. Purchases around Deer Leap may be in the offing and might allow us to substitute an easterly approach to the peak for the present dangerous southern one. South of Wallingford Gulf, Route B has been chosen for the LT/AT relocation. This was the Forest Service's proposal. The main Club wants to improve coordination of signage. Finally, the Vermont Dept. of Forests, Parks & Recreation, under Paul Hannon, is willing to help Killington, Ltd. grow if it doesn't step on our toes in the process. He may not outlast the change of administration in January, 1991, however.

The afternoon Directors Meeting produced one large item of local concern. Killington, Ltd. mediation regarding an Environmental Impact Statement was to begin 6 June. The Killington Section should probably step up its maintenance to forestall any claim by Killington, Ltd. that the Long Trail is unimportant because it is not well-maintained, even though the Montpelier office has had no complaints from Killington, Ltd. regarding the Killington Section yet. The main Club would prefer not to add a chair to the talks for our Section but will keep us posted on the talks and seek our advice. (It did.)

Doggone it, I know Roma gave me the report, but I've searched the files several times and can't find it. So I'll have to go from memory and relay that the hike was a success but the party never did reach the Chateaugay Road over the relocation.

OKEMO MOUNTAIN

by Sue Thomas, Leader

I've found that although we're a club full of rugged, outdoorsy folk, it's usually best not to mention the fact that our destination could be reached by car until everyone has hiked up there. That way mutiny is avoided and the hike leader has an actual hike to write about for the newsletter. We had a hot and sticky day for our Okemo hike, and longing glances were cast at the cars parked at the top, but by then of course it was too late and I had them committed to hiking all the way.

If you can disregard the ski tows (the chair lift makes a dandy seat for lunch), the top of Okemo is well worth the climb. Views from all sides are spectacular, especially from the top of the old firetower. They've enclosed it with chicken wire and removed the bottom steps to keep people off, so of course we law-abiding hikers wouldn't think of climbing it . . . er, anyway, the view is spectacular!

The trail is very overgrown, obviously hasn't been used recently, so I was very glad I'd done something uncharacteristic and scouted it out the week before. Should I say I'm turning over a new leaf and will never lead the club somewhere I've never been? Did I tell you the one about the fire tower ...?

TACONIC CREST TRAIL

23 June 1990

by Ray Catozzi, Leader

We should have been prudent enough to cancel this hike down in Massachusetts - New York - Vermont border country, with the forecast for thundershowers over northern New England that day. But eight of us were adventuresome enough to ignore the forecast and hope for the best, so off we went to Petersburg Pass on Massachusetts Route 2.

The best was a dry drive on Route 7 (except for one short hard warning shower), then arriving at our starting point with the weather dry again. It looked like a go for the whole 7½ miles worth, so off we went, over a well-used (and also motorbike-abused) trail.

The best ended about two miles north, with darkening skies and thunder to the west. In very short order the rain was upon us, and soon it was pouring. Most of us had raingear, but even so we took refuge under some trees that proved to be more leaky than leafy. I went on ahead but soon came back saying the trail was a rushing brook and almost impassable. That did it, along with the danger of lightning crackling around us, so unanimously we voted to return to our cars in Petersburg Pass.

Needless to say, the rain had mostly stopped by the time the cars were in sight, but because it continued to rain on and off all the way home we were glad we had aborted this one. We'll try again some other time, to view those mountain laurel flowering shrubs on the last mile north into North Pownal.

BOILING SPRING, ALIAS MT. HANLEY

1 July 1990

by Walter Churchill Scott, Leader

A day before the scheduled hike to Boiling Spring in Chittenden, the leader took a quick trip to see if it could be located. In 15 minutes I was soaked to the skin from mud, water, wet knee-high grass and nettles. Plus black flies and mosquitos. The spring was found but the outlet looked as if dug away, allowing the spring to be less than half the former depth. Conditions were so poor that on the day of the hike the group agreed to go to Mt. Hanley instead.

The locked gate at the parking area just beyond the railroad crossing in West Rutland forced us to leave our cars on the Whipple Hollow Road. Where we formerly began to switch back after a spell of level walking, by a small stream, we now continued straight a short distance where we came to the cable television road. Plodding up this road, we had a few good views to the east as we went under the wires.

When we got near the ridge we could see the television road switch back one more time and the hang glider road go south to the takeoff spot.

The view was very good under the Below is a 1929 article printed in Vol. 34, No. 5 of The Vermonter, the privately published former "State Magazine." Our copy came from W. Churchill Scott's collection and was selected by Ray Catozzi. Ray also found several other articles from The Vermonter of the 1930's, dealing with topics like the Long Trail Lodge, an end-to-end in the mid-1930's, flora and fauna along the trail, and a multi-page poem that seems almost as long as the entire Long Trail.

The Long Trail Safe for Women Hikers

By EDITH M. ESTERBROOK

STRIKING feature of the development of outdoor recreation, in the form of hiking and climbing trails, is the way women and girls are taking to them. It is a common thing nowadays to meet along the paths above timber line on Mount Washington in New Hampshire or on Mansfield and Camel's Hump in Vermont, groups of girls from some summer camp in the foothills who are taking a mountain hike of a few days or a week in the higher altitudes. The extension of the recreation service of these trails by the construction by private and public agencies of numerous shelters of varying degrees of comfort, even of luxury, relatively speaking, has brought out yearly more of these feminine groups to share with menfolk the thrill and uplift of the skyline ridges.

The Long Trail of the Green Mountain Club of Vermont, extending two hundred and fifty miles over the highest ridges of the state from the Massachusetts line to within a few miles of the Canadian border, is especially well suited for women's hiking groups, because it is so thoroughly provided with conveniently placed shelters, inns and boarding houses, on the trail or close by it. More than forty shelters are directly on the footpath, some in the valleys, others high up on the ridges, above three thousand feet, some still higher, and on Killington and Mansfield, above four thousand. They are spaced so that hikers of every degree of experience and endurance and every capacity for pack weights, can find a temporary home in the forest or near the mountain top along in the afternoon about the time one begins to think of supper and a fire and a bed in the fir boughs.

The initiation of three women into the joys of the Long Trail has been told with enthusiastic appreciation of this exceptional recreational feature of the Green Mountain State, by Miss Edith M. Esterbrook of Boston, a member of the board of trustees of the Green Mountain Club. It was a bold undertaking, she admits, to venture into the wilds with untried trail trampers, "but they were known to be good walkers, 'good sports' and in good health; add to these characteristics, boundless enthusiasm, and all other qualities necessary can pretty safely be counted on."

"Three of us," says Miss Esterbrook, "carried rucksacks and were provided with light weight rubberized grey mohair fishing shirts which go over the head and snap together on the under side of the arms and down the sides, thus making a garment much like a butcher's smock, whole in front, and with a collar which snaps closely about the neck, thus keeping one absolutely dry from chin to below the knee. This with a duxbak hat afforded complete protection against rain. The fourth member used a canvas coat with ample pockets which accommodated a large part of her effects so that her pack was a small one."

The party started at the Massachusetts-Vermont line, spent the first night in Bennington, and the second on the Trail at Hell Hollow Camp. "After a refreshing dip in two fine pools in the stream below, we ate our supper on the piazza, looking at the sunset-sky back of the Bald Mountain, and having at one side a vista through a notch, while the ovenbird sang his flight song very close to us and the hermit and Wilson thrush added their beautiful melodies to the woodland choir."

Next morning, the trail led up Hell Hollow Brook, to Little Pond, where "two great blue herons flapped silently away at our approach and left the spot entirely to us. We took our way across a 'beach' of sawdust left by some bygone sawmill, and up through deep woods, over the mountain to camp 11.

We saw several spikes of the lovely white orchis, Habenaria dilatata, frequently found on boggy parts of the Trail.

Toward the end of the day we emerged at Somerset Bridge, a wild little glen, with its encircling hills; just one house visible around a corner.

There were three families in Somerset, six voters, and we were fortunate in being entertained by one of them. Our host and hostess were selectman and selectwoman, and held other town offices besides."

The next day included Somerset dam, the second largest earth dam in the world, and in the evening to the Trail camp at the "Grout Job," abandoned lumber settlement. They spent the night in a large barn, in the loft, defended by a trapdoor.

In the morning the four women climbed Stratton mountain, meeting all along the Trail anxious mother partridges with half grown young. Usually the parent birds dragged slowly along the ground, whining and crying, while the young flew off.

On the way down the other side of the mountain, to Manchester, they passed two other abandoned lumber camps, the "Du-Fresne Job" and the "Buck Job," and followed the old Rootville Road for the view in Downer Glen. Evening brought them to Manchester, after 53 miles on the Trail.

Another trip on the long Trail related by Miss Estabrook covers a more northern section, from Emily Proctor Lodge to Camel's Hump.

Emily Proctor lodge had its usual effect, and all who know it will join her saying "A more romantic spot it would be hard to imagine, than this wild little glen, the New Haven River tumbling through it, in a series of beautiful falls and pools, two falls uniting above the camp, so that we had the murmur of the rushing waters in our ears all night as we lay snugly rolled in our blankets on the soft straw-strewn bunks at the rear of the camp."

"But the night was not to pass without its thrills, for about midnight an ominous gnawing sound was heard, and the flash revealed a large fat porcupine chewing the doorstep where some salt had been spilled.

A few stout blows with a stick soon put a quietus on Mr. Hedgepig, and the end of him was—that we ate him for breakfast. And very good he tasted after he had been boiled for an hour and then fried, and his liver resembled the nicest calf's liver."

Beane Farm, was another stop, for this was a "de luxe" tramp, the party spending alternate nights at farmhouses and having blankets and supplies carried to the open camps for the other nights.

On the last evening they reached Camel's Hump and found a hospitable caretaker, with stores for sale to climbers. "Next morning," says the writer, "we ascended the Hump and in reminiscent mood I searched out the high ledge whence I had years before watched a sunrise, and there found my old friend, the Labrador Tea, in full bloom, such great fluffy white balls of pungent aromatic scent that at first I didn't recognize them for the flower I was seeking, which I had before seen only when past its glory and with only a few of the flowerets remaining on each spike."

Descending the Trail in the morning "emerging from the dim woods, at the clearing our eyes were dazzled by a radiant mass of color rivalling the carnation fields of Southern France.

Great waves of orange hawkweed rippled over the hillsides, varied by masses of white daisies and oceans of buttercups. Sometimes the three were blended, and sometimes two of them mingled their bright colors, while the hot sun sent waves of the fragrant heliotrope-like perfume of the hawk-weed. It was a rare sight to look back and have in the foreground a round hill red and yellow with blossoms, and directly behind it the summit of the grand old mountain we had left."

MT. HANLEY (continued from p. 4)

The view was very good under the overcast sky, but Black Mt. was not visible. After lunch we explored around a newly constructed wooden building, about 20 by 20 feet with loft and one big southern window there. We all figured it was an overnight place for weekend hang gliders. At the same time a truck, men, and hang gliders arrived.

Returning to the cars, some of the hikers made the cardinal mistake of walking a different path without notifying others, which resulted in one hiker having to locate them.

FUTURE OF LONG TRAIL OVER KILLINGTON AND PICO IS TOPIC OF NOVEMBER MEETINGS IN RUTLAND

KILLINGTON SECTION MEMBERS SHOULD ATTEND ON 8 AND 12 NOVEMBER

The future of the Long Trail/Appalachian Trail from near Shrewsbury Peak Junction in Mendon north over Killington and Pico Peaks to Sherburne Pass (U.S. 4) may well be shaped by meetings to be held in Rutland in the next few weeks.

NATIONAL PARK SERVICE MEETING ON LT/AT CORRIDOR ACQUISITION

On Thursday 8 November from 7 - 10 p.m. in the Ballroom of the Holiday Inn on Route 7 south in Rutland, the National Park Service (NPS) will meet with the public to receive comments on the NPS's acquisition of a corridor for the Appalachian National Scenic Trail (here, the AT/LT) through the Killington and Pico Ski Areas. The Park Service wants public comment "concerning the level of ski area development, if any, that would be appropriate within and adjacent to the Appalachian Trail Corridor, and what mitigating measures should be included in that ski area development," according to the NPS's news release. The NPS goes on to say that "public comment on the potential environmental impacts of the federal action to acquire the Appalachian Trail corridor is specifically requested. A presentation of preliminary alternatives developed to date will be made."

The Park Service invites individuals to sign up at the lobby of the Holiday Inn Ballroom "in order to present their views orally at the meeting. Written comments are also welcome." For more information, contact Pamela Underhill, Appalachian National Scenic Trail, at (304) 535-2346.

VERMONT ACT 250 PUBLIC HEARING ON KILLINGTON-PICO PLANS

On Monday 12 November at 7 p.m., also at the Holiday Inn on Route 7 south, Rutland, the District Act 250 Commission will hold an unusual hearing on the ski area expansion plans filed by Killington and Pico in connection with their proposed merger. This meeting is broader in scope than the NPS meeting in that the Act 250 permit process more clearly involves the impact on the whole area, not just on the trail corridor, and therefore includes such items as ski area parking and water use. At the same time, it is narrower in that the Commission typically does no studies of its own but instead only weighs whatever the parties to the permit process submit to it.

This meeting is a rare opportunity for people who are not parties to participate. Parties are typically the landowners involved. While the Green Mountain Club and the Appalachian Trail Conference anticipate being parties to the Act 250 process on the Killington-Pico applications, neither individual sections of the GMC nor individual hikers will be.

KILLINGTON SECTION STAND; MAIN CLUB POSITION

This summer, section directors voted 7-1 to ask the GMC to refuse any ski area plan that essentially would relocate most of the LT/AT north of Pico Jct. (where the trail presently touches the ski trail) or have over a tenth of a mile of the LT/AT run under ski lifts.

Accordingly, at the next GMC directors meeting, the Killington Section's director moved that the GMC's negotiator be instructed not to sign any such agreement. Although many GMC directors favored our stand, the motion failed by about 15-8. Instead, the directors left the decision up to the president after consultation with a group of a half-dozen GMC members specifically formed to deal with the plans of Killington and Pico and the NPS mediation process that has continued since the spring. Central club director Herb Ogden, Jr., is a member, and former director Ray Catozzi has also attended one meeting. Herb has also attended two of the many NPS mediation sessions, assisting new GMC Executive Director Fred Preston.

MEDIATION ENDS

The position that the central GMC took in the mediation sessions must remain secret under the terms of the mediation, signed by all of the over 40 parties involved. Mediation has ceased because the mediator and the parties have concluded that, at least at present, they cannot come up with an agreement acceptable to trail, conservation, ski area, and other landowner interests. The preliminary agreement announced in August was as far as the process got.

Now that mediation has ended, possibilities include hotly contested and costly Act 250 hearings involving not only trail issues but also animal habitat (especially bear in Parker's Gore), ski area water taking, parking at the new base area apparently planned between Sherburne Pass and the Killington Access Road to serve the lifts to be built from there to near Pico Junction, traffic, and the economic viability of the Pico ski area.

At the federal level, possibilities also include a full-blown Environmental Impact Study (EIS), maybe required before Killington-Pico can begin to build the new trails and lifts even if they get all the state Act 250 permits they want. The EIS may be required not only under an act of Congress that specifically addressed Killington's old bargain with the NPS, but also under general federal law requiring an EIS when a federal project will have substantial environmental impact. Here, the federal project is acquisition or nonacquisition of various possible corridors. Reportedly, Sen. Jeffords favors a less stringent Environmental Assessment (EA) involving less public input, and Sen. Leahy stands by the special statute requiring the broader EIS.

YOUR ATTENDANCE IS VITAL

Green Mountain Club President Brian Fitzgerald and Killington Section President Rob Carey urge all Killington Section

members to attend both the 8 November National Park Service meeting and the 12 November Act 250 meeting. If you know non-members who are interested in the future of the Long Trail in this area, bring them! The ski interests are expected to be out in force at both meetings, saying that their plans will have little impact on what hikers really need, and that disapproval or even delay of the ski areas' plans means economic trouble not only for them but also for the region. --HGO, Jr.

MYSTERY HIKE IN SHREWSBURY

8 July 1990

by Jerry Parker, Leader

We usually have a very good turnout on easy Sunday afternoon hikes. This one was no exception, with 21 hikers. (Actually there were 20 on foot; Nancy's ten week old baby Noah came along for the ride.)

We parked at a sandpit on the Upper Cold River Road and then walked back a short distance to an old road with stone walls bordered by overgrown fields and pastures, which was the Balch farm.

My nieces and nephew were happy with all the frogs and toads we saw. We took a break at a spot with a 10-12 sided foundation. We thought it would prove to be a round barn. Since the hike I found out it was built in the late 60s by a girl who spent the summer there. This land is owned by her father.

After that, we headed up a logging road to a small cellarhole. It must have been a very old one as it had trees growing in it that were at least 50 to 75 years old.

We then headed back to the cars, where I had a watermelon on ice which was a perfect end to the hike and enjoyed by all.

DIFFERENT PATHS TO LITTLE ROCK POND

14 July 1990

by Rob & Sue Carey, Leaders

We have hiked in to Little Rock Pond from Forest Road 10 via the Long Trail and we've hiked in along the Homer Stone Brook Trail but today we took a different path. We parked our cars at the end of the Wallingford Pond Road. Instead of walking to Wallingford Pond, we then took another Forest Service road.

The road was weedy and overgrown. We received complaints about this from two hikers who were less than four feet tall. They solved their problem by insisting on being carried.

We used a map so we knew which way to turn. The trail was not well marked and other roads branched off from it. We met the Long Trail where the Homer Stone Road intersects it. During the 1800s this road connected South Wallingford with East Wallingford but it has since been abandoned.

We continued along the Long Trail until we got to Little Rock Pond, where we had lunch. After lunch Jerry Parker, Rob Carey and I went swimming. The water was so clear you could see the bottom clearly through eight feet of water.

On the way back we descended along the Homer Stone Brook Trail to the Little Red Schoolhouse, where we had a truck parked. Everyone squeezed inside the truck and we headed back to the cars.

MOUNT EQUINOX, MANCHESTER
22 July 1990
by Herb Ogden, Jr., Leader

This highest peak of the Taconic Range had one advantage on this hot day: once we reached about the halfway point, the air cooled delightfully, almost making us forget how we'd sweated and puffed up the lower steep portions of the Burr & Burton Trail. Unfortunatley, on the way down, the heat returned at about the same elevation. I've seldom experienced such a sudden temperature shift within so few feet.

The first half mile or so of the Burr & Burton Trail is a little hard to follow. As always, the beginning is elusive, even once one finds the playing field mentioned in the Day Hiker's Guide to Vermont. Then logging has created some confusion and possibly obscured the spur trail to Equinox Spring. (At least that's the Leader's excuse for not taking the group to the spring.)

Beyond the logging area, the trail was brushy but well-used. Once the grade lessened near the top, we enjoyed the spectacle of a forest floor covered with ferns and wood sorrel. Nearer the top, we encountered a swath of fairly recently downed trees. Apparently a gust of wind hit the mountain just right (or wrong).

After lunch and views at the top on marble benches apparently provided by the summit hotel, we headed for Lookout Rock. We noticed that the top of the Burr & Burton Trail would be hard to find if one hadn't come up it. From Lookout Rock with its good view of Manchester, we backtracked a few feet to head down the Beartown Gap Trail, the old carriage road to the summit. Unfortunately, a motorbike had just traversed it, but it was still a pleasant ramble down to Beartown Gap on the old public road from Manchester to Sandgate. This is now passable only by four wheel drive vehicles, it appears.

On the Beartown Gap Road, some of us feasted on blackcaps and raspberries, and we were all entertained by partridge flushing.

So that we wouldn't have to make a trip back to the Beartown Gap trailhead after retrieving the car we'd spotted at Burr & Burton Seminary, Bernie Donahue invented a new part of a Saab 900 3-door: the rear solarium. This let us fit all six adult hikers in one car.

WORK PARTY TO PICO SHELTER

28 July 1990
Steve Pulling, Leader
by Herb Ogden, Jr.

This work party finally drew a bigger group than the ones earlier this year. Many hands indeed made light work, too.

While one truckload (precisely) of us bounced up the Pico Peak service road to the summit, the rest walked up the Long Trail from Sherburne Pass. The truckload group carried preservative, spray guns, chickenwire, and plexiglass down the Pico Peak Trail (ex-Pico Loop Trail), and the hiker group cleared trail and improved some confusing spots where travelers had left the trail regularly. By the time we met north of Pico Camp, the first group had sprayed the camp and the privy with preservative, replaced broken windows in the camp, and renewed the chickenwire at both to keep out the gnawing beasties. The second group had done a first-rate job of clearing and marking the trail.

With some ten people working, the whole thing took only about four hours from the time we got to the trail. Let's hope future work parties follow this pattern!

DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO WITH OLD S&BS?

SUPPER HIKE

1 August 1990
Ray Catozzi, Leader

Rumor has it this hike had great weather but poor attendance. Maybe folks guessed Ray was going up Deer Leap and overestimated the difficulty of the trail. Since it was a mystery, I won't say where it actually went. --Ed.

SHREWSBURY AIRPORT LOOKOUT

12 August 1990

by Jerry Parker, Leader

We parked at the end of Lottery Road. Nine hikers headed up a snowmobile trail. It was nice to see familiar faces which I haven't seen on recent hikes.

This hike should be called the Fern Hike, as we were knee high in them most of the way. There were at least five different kinds and they were covered with dew, so we got a little wet.

Halfway up we came across a spiderweb that was spun between two tree branches with a large spot of air in the center. It was also covered with dew. With the sun shining, it made a beautiful picture. I hope mine came out as good.

We got to the lookout about 10:45. It was a little early but we sat down to rest and eat our lunch. We watched a plane take off at the airport.

Two large hawks flew overhead doing some fancy acrobatics. They flew off after a few minutes, but it was a good show.

On the way down we took a shortcut and got back to our cars at noon. I should have scheduled this hike an hour or so later. Maybe it would have been a little drier.

HUBBARDTON AREA

1 September 1990

Kit Davidson, Leader

I've heard this was a good outing, but the promised report from one participant didn't reach me in time for this issue. --Ed.

APPALACHIAN TRAIL OVERNIGHT

8 - 9 September

Ray Catozzi, Leader

A combination of low interest in an overnight and the Leader's business obligations canceled this hike. How about a few letters to the editor on whether we should schedule overnights, and, if so, where, when, and how frequently? --Ed.

MOUNT ASCUTNEY

15 September 1990

by Herb Ogden, Jr., Leader

Several people phoned hopefully to inquire about this hike on the new Weathersfield Trail up Vermont's premier monadnock, but the morning of the hike was so damp and cold that I canceled it. Naturally, the weather was pretty nice by afternoon. I have rescheduled this for December. We'll see what happens then. Probably it will be an ice storm.

HIKEATHON

The Green Mountain Club is planning a Hike-A-Thon, organized by Kate Donaghue, to raise money for the Long Trail Protection Fund (LTPF) in August and September 1991. Section presidents are being asked to help, and the Killington Section is urged to sponsor two hikes. Two leaders and co-leaders are needed.

Any hike can be chosen. There is no attempt to cover the whole Long Trail, although at least part of each hike should be on the Long Trail.

The hikeaton gives people who have not yet participated in the Long Trail Protection Fund several ways to get involved. Besides leaders and co-leaders, hikers and sponsors are needed.

GMCers should not underestimate the importance of the educational aspect of sponsor recruitment. This past summer Jan Edwards raised money for the LTPF by finding sponsors for a hike. She says people listened when she explained the need to protect the Long Trail. For more details on her hike, see the August Long Trail News.

The hikeathon will be a very positive and unifying force for the GMC and may very well result in raising the funds to protect a seriously endangered stretch over Laraway Mountain.

Interested hikers should contact Sue or Rob Carey at 446-2830.

LONG TRAIL PROTECTION FUND NEEDS SUPPORT AT PUBLIC HEARING ON 29 OCTOBER

On Monday 29 October from 7 to 9 p.m. the Vermont Department of Forests, Parks and Recreation and the Green Mountain Club will hold a public hearing at City Hall, Montpelier, on the expenditure of the $450,000 appropriation for acquisition of Long Trail properties. These funds will significantly increase the Green Mountain Club's ability to protect land along the LT in northern Vermont. Title to these lands will be held by the State of Vermont.

Please come to the public hearing and voice your support for the Fund. A background report is available from the GMC office. For further information, please call Susan Shea at 223-3463.

HIKING TRAILS IN TOWN PLANS?

by Herb Ogden, Jr.

If your town contains hiking trails, shouldn't they be in your town plan? In fact, if your town contains old public roads that may soon be "thrown up" or abandoned, shouldn't they be in the plan, too, to keep them open as trails? Maybe your town plan should also consider potential future trails, bike paths, or scenic waterways. You live in your town, so if anything is to be done, you may have to do it. Don't expect someone else to, especially if that someone else is from out of town.

This issue emerged recently when the Rutland County Solid Waste District considered a farm on East Road in Clarendon a site for its new landfill. This farm could be seen from Spring Lake Clearing, and, indeed, part of the site is National Park Service property, acquired to protect the LT/AT.

It turned out that the solid waste district siting criteria included resources that were identified in the town plan, and that the LT/AT were not in the town plan.

KILLINGTON SECTION HAS VOICE ON GMC EXECUTIVE ADVISORY COUNCIL

The Killington Section's member of the central GMC Board of Directors has been appointed to the GMC Executive Advisory Council. Former GMC board member Ray Catozzi says the Killington Section has never before been represented on this council.

The GMC Bylaws provide for an Executive Advisory Council to advise the GMC president. It has not more than nine members, including the president and secretary of the central club. Two-thirds of the members must be present or former directors.

The Executive Advisory Council meets in those eight months when there is no general directors meeting. (The full board of directors usually meets quarterly.) Meetings are in Montpelier.

The Killington Section's member on the Executive Advisory Council for 1990-91 is Herbert Ogden, Jr. Rumor is that he is busier than he wants to be.

GREEN MOUNTAIN BOYS' CAVE

20 October 1990

by Roma Pulling, Co-Leader

The weather man favored us with perfect hiking conditions and a good turnout -- 19 people of all ages.

In eight cars, we drive to Salisbury and parked off Rt. 53 across from Brantbury Beach, from which point it is only a short hike to Ethan Allen's Cave. Near the cave the trail is poorly marked, and we bushwhacked for a short distance. The DAR in 1906 had an inscription cut into the stone above the entrance to the cave, indicating that this was one used by the Green Mountain Boys. I read a quotation from Daniel Thompson's historical novel, The Green Mountain Boys, which described the cave, and in some respects it seemed different. It told of "recesses that appeared to extend far into the rocks," which our cave doesn't have. We decided to trust the DAR.

For those not native to Vermont, the Green Mt. Boys fought for the property rights of early settlers in Vermont as well as capturing Fort Ticonderoga from the British. They are said to have hid in the cave from the British and hostile Indians.

After everyone had inspected the interior of the cave, a majority seemed to be in favor of hiking to Lana Falls. As the trail connecting our location with the falls is narrow and treacherous and there were several children with us, we drove south on Rt. 53 to another parking lot, from which point it is only about half a mile to the falls. This is a picturesque area with a lovely cascade, a bridge over Sucker Brook, and a picnic area.

As the sun was sinking toward the horizon at this point, we decided against further exploration and returned to the cars.

POTLUCK SUPPER

17 November 1990

Linda Pellerin, Organizer

by Herb Ogden, Jr., Eater

Once again, the pre-Thanksgiving season saw the Killington Section pouring out its culinary corucopia at the Unitarian-Universalist Church basement in Rutland City. It's a good thing we're walkers as well as eaters, otherwise our own good cooking might be too much for us. We all enjoyed renewing old acquaintances or making new ones, sitting around the tables -- and we used up all the tables and almost had standing room only!

After the meal, Herb Ogden, Jr., showed slides of a three-day climb up Mt. Whitney, in the southern Sierra Nevada in California. Before Alaska joined the Union, this was the tallest mountain in the United States.

MOUNT PEG, WOODSTOCK

8 December 1990

by Roma Pulling

The weather for the 8th was better than predicted, with partly sunny skies and 40° temperatures.

Five hikers left Rutland, where the ground was bare, and were surprised to find about four inches of crusty snow on the east side of the mountains. En route to Woodstock from Bridgewater, we had a thrilling sight. A flock of about 14 wild turkeys were feeding in a field south of the Ottauquechee River.

Mt. Peg, in the southeastern part of Woodstock Village, was a new area for a Killington Section hike. We followed switchbacks to the summit at 1040 feet with a picnic table in place. As it wasn't yet lunchtime, we continued through the woods to an open area, where we climbed to a ridge with an L-shaped bench. From this point we had extensive views over a wide area with Mt. Tom, the Rockefeller mansion, and Billings Farm Museum visible. This viewpoint warranted a stop of several minutes while we took turns with a pair of binoculars. Among other things we saw horses and a conveyance ferrying passengers to the museum during Woodstock's wassail celebration.

After leaving the lookout, we followed cross country ski trails for a while, emerging from the woods in back of the golf course, where we ate lunch near another bench in view of Kedron Brook.

We finished lunch at an early hour, so I proposed another short hike -- an access road to The Pogue from the west, a route not taken by the Killington Section before to my knowledge. This was an old carriage road, part of a system built by Frederick Billings in the 19th century on Mt. Tom and now integrated into a network of cross country ski trails. We met no skiers but did meet a woman walking four Samoyeds, which we all admired.

The Pogue, on the lower slopes of Mt. Tom, has been dammed and appeared to have been drained recently to allow work to be done on the dam. It was partially full. We circled it and then headed for the car and home, after a satisfying day of outdoor activity.

SKATING

6 January 1991

by Sue Carey, co-Leader

The only people who showed up for the skating hike were the Careys so instead of going to Elfin Lake we went to RAHA (nicely heated changing rooms). It was Seth's first time on skates and he did really well until he tried to jump with them on. He fell. Mara has been taking skating lessons so she showed the rest of us how to skate.

We had a very good time. Maybe next year the skating on the lake will be better.

CLUB NEEDS PICO AND KILLINGTON PHOTOS

In order to moderate Killington and Pico's plans to build ski lifts and trails from Pico Peak northeasterly to Route 4 just east of Sherburne Pass, the GMC needs to make a good Act 250 presentation. Slides of Pico and Killington are needed, especially views of the Long Trail in that area, the general terrain near the trail, and Pico from the northeast. The Club needs photos from all four seasons, and it may need some photos from years ago as well.

If you can lend some photos for GMC President Brian Fitzgerald to show at Act 250 hearings, please leave him a message at GMC headquarters in Montpelier, 223-3463.

NEW CHALLENGE - 1990

by Roma Pulling

Last year we couldn't find two sunny days when we could drive north to further our hobby of photographing Long Trail shelters. So this fall Alfred and I started as soon as conditions seemed favorable. Fortunately, Alfred has a cousin living in Morrisville, and we made his house our base.

Having driven north Monday afternoon, 29 October, we were ready to hit the trail early on the 30th. Our first goal was Tillotson Camp, which we reached via the 2-mile Frank Post Trail in Lowell.

We were accompanied by a friendly dog from a nearby house, who acted as though he had made the trip many times. The upper reaches of this trail gave us a chance to really stretch our legs but was worth the effort. I had forgotten how lovely the view is from the camp. We found about two inches of snow on the ground there.

To photograph Ritterbush Camp we drive to Ritterbush Pond, and we ate our lunch there. The camp is a short bushwhack uphill from the pond, and before leaving I seized the opportunity to hike into Devil's Gulch, one of my favorite places on the Long Trail. We hiked to French Camp that afternoon by following the Long Trail south from Rt. 15 in Johnson.

Our plan for 31 October was to follow the Beaver Meadow Trail in Morristown to Beaver Meadow Lodge, the Whiteface Trail to Whiteface Shelter, and return the same way. Finding the trailhead, off a narrow dirt road, was itself a challenge, but we were successful after asking directions several times. Only an avid trail bagger would follow the Beaver Meadow Trail. A logging operation using heavy equipment had whipped a naturally wet logging road into the consistency of chocolate pudding. Where the road wasn't muddy, it was under water. But I was really thrilled to see the Lodge, which we had never seen as it is a mile off the Long Trail. It is a comfortable log cabin with four bunks in a pleasant location about 0.4 mile away from the muddy lane.

The Whiteface Trail from the Lodge to Whiteface Shelter was rocky, precipitous, and somewhat treacherous with snow on the ground. Exercising my usual caution, I arrived safely; we ate our lunch at the shelter enjoying the fine view of Madonna Peak.

On this trip we photographed five shelters, and I hiked three new side trails to promote a hobby of mine. There are seven more shelters we would like to visit, not including Corliss, which was built this year.

Several hikes from the last schedule were canceled because of bad weather.

HIKEATHON

The Green Mountain Club is planning a Hike-A-Thon, organized by Kate Donaghue, to raise money for the Long Trail Protection Fund (LTPF) in August and September 1991. Section presidents are being asked to help, and the Killington Section is urged to sponsor two hikes. Two leaders and co-leaders are needed.

Any hike can be chosen. There is no attempt to cover the whole Long Trail, although at least part of each hike should be on the Long Trail.

The hikeathon gives people who have not yet participated in the Long Trail Protection Fund several ways to get involved. Besides leaders and co-leaders, hikers and sponsors are needed.

GMCers should not underestimate the importance of the educational aspect of sponsor recruitment. This past summer Jan Edwards raised money for the LTPF by finding sponsors for a hike. She says people listened when she explained the need to protect the Long Trail. For more details on her hike, see the August Long Trail News.

The hikeathon will be a very positive and unifying force for the GMC and may very well result in raising the funds to protect a seriously endangered stretch over Laraway Mountain.

Interested hikers should contact Sue or Rob Carey at 446-2830.

Majority favors shared use of trail

By John P. MacHardy

Should the Appalachian Trail be for the select few? This is the big question that remains unanswered for the U.S. Forest and Park Service. On Thursday evening, November 8, an open forum was held at the Holiday Inn in Rutland, by the Forest and Park Service, to allow public opinion into their deliberation on how to proceed with requests by the Killington Ski Resort and the Pico Ski Resort to cross the Trail. This is the first step for fact finding/information gathering by the Service. The single use of the trail is the only issue. Fifty-five citizens were allowed to speak their minds at the forum, so, for three hours, all interested parties listened to the reasons for, and against, the intervention of alpine skiing facilities at one or more points of the Appalachian Trail.

90% of the speakers were for the co-existence of the hiking trail and the ski trails; and 10% were against any intervention along the "green tunnel". A young spokesman for the Farm and Wilderness Camp described how his organization depends totally on offering children a unique outdoor experience, and that the section of the Appalachian Trail in question was an integral part of that experience. He felt that it was a natural growth area for the ski area, and that the development that takes place must be sensitive to that wilderness. He suggested alternative three would be more than adequate to retain that sensitivity.

Jay Kenlan, local attorney speaking for Rutland Region Coalition for Responsible Development, contended that neither hiker nor skier has the right to use the land for his exclusive enjoyment. Historically, all public recreational lands have been open to a mixed use. It has been recorded in legislature that two industries will be compatible with the Appalachian Trail, skiing and lumbering. In 1967, Senator Aiken was quoted in legislature as warning "... carefully consider skiing as a major economic base. Legislative history protects ski areas and development of such."

Long time skier and hiker, Charlie Wise, described the trail crossings as a positive experience for the hiker, whereby the sensitive cutting of trees "would open up vistas to offer a high mountain experience". Lynn Gallipo stated that it was her experience that the majority of hikers preferred open areas such as ski trails for the views and fresh air. In response to the opening of vistas, Mr. Gibson, of the Sierra Club, questioned, "Why don't we clear cut the trail from Maine to Georgia?" For him, the establishment of the trail was to create a communion with nature, and offer a separation from human activity. Secondly, the Service should study the economic impact that the merger would have on the region. And, thirdly, find the most harmonizing alternative.

The spokesman for the V.N.R. took the hard line. It was recommended that the secondary impact be studied, statewide growth would be affected. "Please consider the No Development Alternative ... Killington touts itself as having the largest snowmaking capabilities in the world, what would happen if the merger went through?" Still, the majority who attended the meeting were in favor of the shorter environmental impact process, because of time constraints and because of a duplication of some of the other work.

COME TO THE SECTION ANNUAL MEETING SATURDAY G.M.C. PRESIDENT TO REPORT ON PICO, KILLINGTON

By-Laws, Section Autonomy and Dues Are Other Topics for Membership Discussion

by the Editor

Our Section's Annual Meeting at 6:15 p.m. on Saturday, April 13 at the Unitarian-Universalist Church Basement, 117 West Street, Rutland, should be unusually eventful. All members are urged to attend. (Any waverers might note the potluck before the meeting, starting at 5:30 p.m., and recall the scrumptiousness of the food at earlier potlucks, in deciding whether to attend.)

Green Mountain Club President Brian Fitzgerald has been invited to attend our meeting and plans to update the Killington Section on the G.M.C.'s role in protecting our section of the Long Trail, especially that part from Killington to Sherburne Pass, in view of the merger and expansion plans of the Killington and Pico ski areas. He can not only supply more detail on the now-completed mediation regarding the National Park Service's possible routes through the ski areas, but he can also report on the ongoing Act 250 proceedings that may determine whether ski lifts and trails will be built over the Long Trail between Pico Junction and Sherburne Pass.

The Green Mountain Club has run a deficit and incurred about $10,000 in legal and other fees in trying to scale back the ski areas' expansion plans and eliminate the lifts and trails between Pico Junction and Sherburne Pass. This effort especially benefits our Section. Therefore, a motion for us to give the G.M.C. special financial aid this year is expected.

By-Laws changes, sent to all members a few weeks ago, will be voted on. Some of these changes are very important.

Another topic will be the role of the Sections, especially the Killington Section, in light of efforts by some of the G.M.C. directors and others to centralize the club, eliminate the Sections' dues autonomy, and make all members, whether Section or At-Large, pay the same total dues. Herb Ogden, Jr., the Killington Sections's representative on the Board of Directors, will report on this. A possible response is that our Section members, at least, deserve the dues break they now receive because our Section does a good job maintaining our part of the Long Trail and its shelters. But this response is becoming harder to make, as fewer members attend work parties and the Section has trouble finding volunteers for even such light duties as publicizing our excursions so that people can read about them in the newspapers.

Finally, the meeting will probably hear a recommendation from Treasurer Wally Rogers regarding the amount of dues.

BARN DANCE WITH BREADLOAF SECTION TO FOLLOW KILLINGTON SECTION ANNUAL MEETING

All Killington Section members are invited to a Barn Dance put on by the Breadloaf Section on Saturday evening, April 13, at the Congregational Church in Middlebury. (That's the large white church near the Middlebury Inn, at the head of Middlebury's main street.) By the time our Annual Meeting ends, the Breadloaf Section's Barn Dance should be in full swing -- and an opportunity to work off the pounds we Killington Section folk may have gained by indulging in our own pre-meeting potluck.

For information, call Kelly Beach, Breadloaf Section Outings Co-Chair, at 388-6544.

SECTION DIRECTORS OPPOSE G.M.C. CENTRALIZATION, SUPPORT SPENDING CUTS from minutes by Secretary Wally Rogers

Killington Section Directors Rob Carey, Linda Pellerin, Ray Catozzi, W. Churchill Scott, Bernie Donahue, Wally Rogers, and Herb Ogden, Jr., met on 7 March at the home of Linda Pellerin. (Director Steve Pulling was away on business; resigned Director Sue Thomas's seat has not been filled.)

The By-Laws Committee, composed of Herb Ogden, Jr., Delight Gartlein, Rob Carey, Sue Thomas, and Wally Rogers, presented its suggested revisions. After discussion of each article and some amendment, the Directors unanimously proposed the revision that has now been mailed to all members.

G.M.C. Director Herb Ogden, Jr., reported that the G.M.C. as a whole expects to end this fiscal year with a deficit of about $10,000, mostly because of the cost of monitoring and opposing the expansion plans of Killington and Pico. The Long Trail Patrol was canceled for this summer, although the field personnel based in Montpelier will remain active and the club will continue to employ camp caretakers and a few ranger-naturalists on Mts. Mansfield, Camel's Hump, and Stratton.

Killington Section directors generally preferred that the club cut expenses rather than raise dues for us.

Herb reported that the G.M.C. directors would probably be asked to increase the section assessment to $12 per individual and $18 per family for 1992. He also anticipated a move to have all members, section and at-large, pay the same total dues, with the G.M.C. Directors then voting on how much to return to Sections to support their activities. Some At-Large directors and others feel that the present dues and section assessment structure gives section members undeservedly low dues.

The Section Directors unanimously voted to (1) instruct Herb to oppose the centralized dues proposal strongly, (2) instruct Herb to oppose any assessment increase over $10 per individual for 1992, (3) instruct Herb to oppose by-law changes that would accelerate or ease changes in the dues structure, and (4) communicate with other Sections regarding these matters.

GREEN MOUNTAIN CLUB INCREASES SECTION DUES ASSESSMENT, ACCEPTS NO MORE "THIRTY YEAR LIFE MEMBERS" AFTER 1 MAY

by Herb Ogden, Jr., G.M.C. Director

At its 16 March meeting, the Board of Directors of the G.M.C. voted to increase the sections' assessment from $7.50 to $12 for individuals and from $15 to $18 for families, effective with the January, 1993 payments from sections. The Board also voted to increase At-Large dues from $22 to $24 per individual and from $30 to $32 per family, effective 1 May 1992. A motion to abolish the requirement that a dues change be published in the Long Trail News before the fiscal year in which it could take effect was defeated by my one vote. It was a by-laws change, and by-laws changes by the Board of Directors must be unanimous.

I joined other directors in voting to get rid of a curiosity that has been around since 1977. In that year, the board voted to exempt from dues payment anyone who had paid adult dues continuously for thirty years. This rule made no financial sense and ends 1 May. No one who becomes a thirty year continuous adult member before then need pay main club dues, however.

MYSTERY POND HIKE

by Sue Thomas, Leader

A common theme of recent hike reports has been weather that can best be described as ..., well, weird! A few days before my hike, I went to scout out the route and had a very enjoyable day skiing across Glen Lake on 8" of fresh powder. By the day of the trip, however, every bit of snow was gone from the lake. We looked the situation over and decided that if the ice fishermen were able to stay afloat with their shanties, snowmobiles, and coolers of beer, we'd probably be able to make it across, so we set off gingerly at first, skateless ice skating. We slithered and slid all the way, talked to some fishermen, and enjoyed the company of our youngest member Noah, who was along for his first winter hike. He enjoyed our company too, as long as one of us kept his sled moving. A man of action, he had little patience with rest stops or overly long inspections of animal tracks.

After crossing the lake, we climbed briefly up a road then set off through the woods where we found lots more animal tracks to bore Noah: turkey, deer, and raccoon. We had lunch by a small beaver pond, which I suspect is Moscow Pond, but no one else seemed sure either so it will remain a mystery.

By the time we returned, the sun had melted a layer of slush on the lake, which made the walking much easier. Nice hike, and was good to have former member Carol Chapman back for a visit.

FIREPLACE PARTY / HIKE

2 February 1991
by Roma Pulling, Co-Leader

A friend of ours once said the way to beat winter was to party it to death. I'm not a party animal but decided to try a small dose of his prescription to see if it worked.

On a lovely, sunny day, Alfred and I met 14 hikers at the park at 2 p.m. We drove to the end of Bellevue Avenue Extension and parked the cars, then followed cross country ski trails and power line rights of way over mostly easy grades to our back porch. One person was on skis. This route led through a swamp, so we were lucky that there had been freezing temperatures for several nights. Ray Catozzi remembers two attempts to lead this hike that had to be canceled because of a thaw. A layer of snow covered the ice which had made walking tricky when Ray led us on a dry run the previous week.

Everyone was invited in to sit by the fire and enjoy hot beverages, popcorn and cookies.

WALLINGFORD POND TO LITTLE ROCK POND

17 February 1991

by Sue Thomas

Since I was the only Killington Section member to take advantage of this joint outing with the Ottauquechee Section, I guess I got the honor of writing the hike report. I also get to gloat about what a great trip everyone else missed, so it's an even trade!

I went prepared to walk. We had no snow in Rutland so I expected to find it sparse at best there. What a pleasant surprise to find 5" of powder covering the crust -- easily the best conditions I've skied on in the last couple years.

Gary Wheelock, from the Ottauquechee Section, was our leader. He led us down a logging road, then onto a shortcut through the woods to the Long Trail, which we followed with pleasant ups and downs to Little Rock Pond. I think this was my first winter visit to the pond, a spot I like to hike to often in the summer and fall. We expected to have it to ourselves, but were surprised to find a large group of Boy Scouts from New York City camped for the weekend. They seemed to be having an amazingly good time considering what a cold night they'd had, though we did notice as we were leaving that all the boys elected to stay at the campsite while the leaders hiked up Green Mountain!

We had lunch at Lula Tye Shelter (obviously a winter home for porcupines; shelter maintenance will require a shovel this spring) then started back, detouring round to the top of a hill for a beautiful downhill run to the cars. All in all it was a great trip, and nice to meet some members of another section. Let's do it more often!

MERCK FOREST

23 - 24 February 1991

by Sue Carey, Co-Leader

The weekend started off cold (10°) and it didn't get any warmer, but that didn't stop us from enjoying the weekend. There were four day hikers (Linda, Tim, Jim and Olga) and four overnight campers (Rob, Sue, Mara and Seth along with their faithful dog Lady).

We stayed at the supper barn shelter.

This year it had a good stove with two dampers; however, it was so full of ashes that you could only get about three pieces of wood in at a time. There weren't any metal tools for cleaning it. It was nice to see a shelter that was swept clean and had very little graffiti.

During Saturday afternoon we had visitors from a southern New Jersey outing club. Also, our day hikers stopped by to warm up.

We did some sliding on some very fast trails. The children called it a roller coaster trip. After being bumped around on the sled we visited the barn where we met two American Belgian horses, Molly and Charlie. The children were thrilled to feed the horses carrots.

We returned to the shelter for a dinner of hotdogs and broccoli. We decided to skip spaghetti this year.

After supper we went on a moonlight hike. We tried to call an owl but it ignored us. However, Molly and Charlie came to the fence to greet us..

The stove had to be fed several times during the night. At the 4:30 feeding I had the brilliant idea of stirring the ashes with a coat hanger so we could get more wood inside. Coat hangers get hot very quickly and it burned a hole in my mitten. Fortunately this was the only casualty of the trip.

Sunday was very windy and cold. While crossing a meadow our plastic sled almost blew away, but we managed to retrieve it and retreat to the car.

PINE'S POND

9 March 1991

Charlie Hanley, Leader

by Sue Thomas

Not wanting to scare him off, when I asked my friend Charlie to take us to his property in Castleton I didn't tell him about hike reports. Therefore I guess it's up to me.

I've been anxious to see Charlie's "piece of paradise" and it's every bit as wonderful as he said it was. The pond sits in the middle of 372 acres of undeveloped land and is named for a man named Pine who operated a mill there. The foundations and some of the piping are still visible downstream of the dam.

We crossed a small bridge out to an island which we decided would be an ideal lunch spot, so we unloaded our packs and continued hiking the perimeter of the pond. On the far side we climbed to an overlook, then wound back down to the shore and crossed the ice to what Charlie believes is an old military road.

We returned to the island for lunch and a fire. We shared our coffee with a couple from the Civil Air Patrol who were there to dismantle a log structure they'd built in a training exercise. They entertained us with stories of hiker rescues and the search for the plane that crashed on Killington a couple months back till they were called away on an emergency.

Thanks to Charlie for sharing his very special place with us.

OUR FORMER SHELTERS

by Roma Pulling

Articles have been published in Smoke & Blazes highlighting my interest in Long Trail shelters, and while reading about them I have become fascinated with information about former shelters. Perhaps readers would like to know more about those in the Killington Section.

While far more than a shelter, the old Long Trail Lodge, through which the trail ran, was the property of the Green Mountain Club, given to the organization in 1923 by Mortimer Proctor, a president of the club. It was a rustic building that blended into the wooded setting south of Route 4 and one I longed to see from the inside. This step was postponed too long. In 1968 the lodge, which has been described as the enchanted lodge, burned to the ground.

Pico Camp was preceded on the same site by an open-front shelter built in 1924.
